NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 71—No. 1. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3543.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE ADVOCATE IN 1924.

On Wednesday, July 10, 1850, there was issued in the city of New Orleaus, under the direction of a committee representing the Louisiana, the Mississippi, the Alabama, and the Arkansas Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a "Specimen Number of The New Orleans Christian Advocate," the committee consisting of Elisha Callaway, W. Murrah, G. Garrett, A. H. Mitchell, J. Hamilton, T. W. Dorman, William P. Ratcliff, William Moores, J. F. Truslow, William Winans, John Lane, B. M. Drake, L. Campbell, G. M. Rogers, W. E. Doty, S. W. Speer, R. Randle, J. N. Hamil.

In that exceedingly interesting "Specimen Number" we find the following

"PROSPECTUS
THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE,"

from which we quote:

"The above is the title of a paper soon to be issued in New Orleans by the permission of the General Conference, under the patronage and direction of the Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, and Arkansas Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The paper will be about the size of the Southern Christian Advocate. The first and second pages will be printed with type of the size used in that; the third and fourth, with smaller; which will furnish our readers with an amount of matter equal to about five pages of that paper.* * *

"The paper will be the property of the Conferences sustaining it, and any profits that may arise from its publication will be divided among them. The subscription price will be TWO DOLLARS in advance; but THREE DOLLARS will be charged if payment is delayed six months."

In another column of the "Specimen Number," we find "A Plan to Obtain 10,000 Subscribers," in which the statement is made that a large number of subscribers is requisite to sustain a New Orleans weekly paper, and that fewer than 10,000 should not be calculated upon. The preachers of the patronizing Conferences are requested to act as agents for the paper, and they are urged to begin the work of securing subscriptions immediately.

The plan to publish a paper was evidently easier to formulate than to carry out, for Volume I, Number 1, of the proposed publication did not appear until Saturday, February 8, 1851. In the meantime, the subscription price of the paper had been fixed at $2.50 a year, strictly in advance. Announcement was made that Rev. H. N. McTyeire had been appointed editor of the Advocate. In that first issue, there appeared, as might be expected, the "Editorial Address," an "Apology" for the shortcomings of the initial issue, an urgent invitation to those who could do so to write for the paper, a discussion of the subscription price to show that it was reasonable, and an address and tribute to the agents—Methodist preachers—of the paper.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate thus auspiciously begun has continued to this good day, with the exception of a period during the Civil War, when suspension for a time became necessary. The present issue is Number 1 of Volume 71. Through all these years it has been what its name implies, a "Christian Advocate," and its history reflects honor upon those who have supported it and enabled it to serve the church so long and so loyally.

The purpose of the Advocate for the year 1924 will be what it has been throughout its history—to serve the church in every possible way and to advance its interests to the extent of its ability. Its present editorial policy is fundamentally that expressed in the declaration of principles contained in the "Specimen Number" issued in 1850, from which we quote:

"We most unhesitatingly, then, declare our loyalty to Methodism; to all its Scriptural doctrines and institutions, legitimate usages, and constitutional decisions and operations. And though some of these decisions might bear hard upon us, and seem to be partial; yet if legitimately made by constitutional majorities, they shall be respected, and such majorities shall not be treated as contemptible things. * * * We occupy no antagonistic position, and shall try to be friendly with all, especially with our brethren of the press. For, while we feel great solicitude for the interest of the section of the vineyard for which we have commenced this enterprise, we do not intend that our interest for one region shall make us forget that others have interests, or that we belong to the whole Methodist Episcopal Church, South. And, while we labor more immediately for the good of a particular section, we shall give our feeble influence to strengthen our connectional bonds. * * *

"It is our intention not to overlook or neglect any department of our duty as a church. The great interests of education, as connected with our church, will receive the attention which their importance demands. The increase of deep-toned and intelligent piety, in both ministry and membership; and especially, a clearer and more impressive view on the part of the ministry of the nature and importance of pastoral duties are objects for which we shall especially labor."

We conceive the mission of the Advocate to be, as we have already said, to serve the church in every possible way and to advance its interests to the extent of its ability. In order to do this, it must be circulated and read, and we earnestly call upon all those who are interested in the welfare of the church to co-operate with us faithfully and diligently in putting the Advocate into the homes of all our people during this year. The month of January has been specially designated as Christian Literature Month, and Sunday, January, 27, has been designated as Christian Literature Sunday, during which time and upon which day, or as near thereto as practicable, all our preachers are asked to present the claims of the General organ and the Conference organ to their congregations and take subscriptions for them. This is a church-wide movement, heartily en-

The Church-wide Good Literature Program, January, 1924.

This is a day of the printed page, of books and reading. All who have anything to sell or a thought to put forth are generous users of printer's ink.

God himself gave his law to men in writing.

The church, the mother of learning, the teacher of morals and the inspiration of all good works from Moses to Paul, has put life's most important teachings in a Book.

Jesus, the world's greatest teacher and only Savior, gave inspiration to men by the Holy Spirit to record his sayings in a Book.

The church fathers recorded their instructions to their converts in books. Every great church leader has set forth his ideals and programs for his followers in books.

Martin Luther and John Wesley, the greatest Christian leaders and reformers of modern times, gave much time to the preparation of Bibles and a Christian literature for their converts and coworkers.

As the Christian receives his life by inspiration of the Holy Spirit through faith in Jesus Christ, so he maintains his life and faith by the cultural influences of religious literature and service.

Methodist leaders have always been publishers. The Methodists of all lands have the greatest and most extensive publishing business of all the churches.

The publication of the best books and papers has always been the first business of the Methodists. The reading of these books and papers should be the first duty of the members of all Methodist churches.

In compliance with these conditions and directions of our General Conferences, books and papers are published for every department of the church adaptable to every member.

The General and Conference organs, the Advocates as they are usually called, take first place among all our periodical literature.

These papers are owned and controlled by the Conferences and the general church.

The month of January has been appointed as Good Literature Month.

Sunday, January 27, 1924, a special sermon or presentation of the importance of the publication and reading of these papers should be given in every church.

The General Conference, the official leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Southern Methodist Press Association are responsible for this movement.

All pastors will co-operate and are agents for their Conference papers.

Mount Vernon Place Church. The young people are so well cared for in a social way that they have but little time to seek social life elsewhere.

The Daily Vacation Bible School.

This is also conducted by the Sunday school as a regular department. It has a regular superintendent appointed by the superintendent of the Sunday school and confirmed by the quarterly conference. This school meets five days each week during the month of July. The following is a daily program: Worship period for all, 10 minutes; story telling (missionary stories), 10 minutes; calisthenics, 5 minutes; graded Bible instruction, 35 minutes; music period, 30 minutes; handcraft work, consisting of carpentry, sewing, hammock making, crocheting, knitting, rug weaving, and basketry, this being followed by health and habit talks, closing with a short worship period. This work is also done by volunteer workers. Last summer 21 teachers gave three hours each day for twenty days without one cent of pay. These workers were trained for the Daily Vacation Bible School work by the church, classes being conducted for them previous to the opening of the school. The entire expense of the school amounted to less than $100.

The Epworth Leagues.

The Epworth Leagues of the church are doing a wonderful work. The League programs are well planned and carried out, the purpose being training and worship. Every member of the League is expected to take part on the program during the year, in fact, at least three times during the year. The roll is divided into sections, and each section has charge at regular intervals. There is no such thing as a faithful few taking up all the time. It is wonderful to see what progress many of the young people have made in their ability to do things, as well as in their Christian experience.

A Great Campaign.

There is still an indebtedness on the church. With this burden and the great need for larger quarters, the church and Sunday school could progress but very little. It was decided to put on a campaign to raise $40,000 to pay on this indebtedness, hoping that if this was accomplished a sufficient amount would come in from the Conferences that have not paid their pledges to the enterprise and from other sources to pay off the whole indebtedness. Very few believed that such a thing could be accomplished. It looked impossible. The members of the church were giving as liberally as it seemed they could. No one had become rich so as to help us. But it was a necessity.

The official board undertook the matter in a spirit of prayer. At several Board meetings the entire Board stayed on their knees and prayed for faith, for courage, and for victory. This spirit soon pervaded the church. The entire membership was asked to make it a matter of prayer, to pray, and then pledge. The Official Board headed the matter up by 25 of the Board members serving as team captains. It was doubted that enough workers could be secured to go out and solicit money. In one week 185 workers had been secured to do the work. These met for a great prayer meeting, and the Lord was present. They went out one Sunday afternoon and called on practically the entire membership of the church, securing in pledges and cash $32,000. That was on Sunday before Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving morning the balance was reported as being raised. Such a campaign no one ever saw before. It was like a great revival sweeping the church. Every one seemed happy and joyous. God had given the victory.

Missionary Societies.

The Missionary Societies are functioning as they do in every place. There are three of them, looking after the people of different ages in the church. The mission study class, supply and social service work is carried on with great success, the reading circles also meeting with success.

The biggest feature of the Woman's Missionary work is the meeting that is held at 11 o'clock each third Wednesday morning. After a good devotional service, the ladies are served lunch; then, after a social half hour, they sew, making clothes for the orphanages of the church. This meeting gives the women of the church an opportuity to come together in a social way and also to do some definite work. It has proved a great success.

Southern Methodism in the Capital.

Eight years ago Southern Methodism had but a very small place in the National Capital. We had seven churches, it is true, but not one of them was an outstanding church in numbers, strength or influence. Old Mount Vernon, with its faithful membership, met in an old red brick church just across on the opposite corner from where the Representative Church now stands. It did a wonderful work, hut it could not do under the circumstances what it should do. Epworth Church had a small building in the northeast section. Emory had a very small building out in the extreme northwest section. Mount Pleasant was about completed. Calvary, Marvin, and St. Paul were existing.

But what is the condition to-day? Mount Vernon Place Church is the strongest Protestant church in Washington so far as influence is concerned. It is next to the strongest in number of members and amount of yearly budget. Epworth Church has a wonderful new building just completed. The membership has increased from about 300 to more than 900 in the past three years. Emory has a fine building located in one of the best residential sections of the city. Mount Pleasant is a strong uptown church. Marvin, St. Paul, and Calvary have increased in membership, and are strong, though small, churches in their sections.

Southern Methodism is now a recognized force in the Capital. It is conceded by every one, even other denominations, that the enterprise of the Representative Church has done more to strengthen Protestantism in the Capital than any other thing that has happened in years.

The Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, Christian or Disciples, Episcopal, Unitarian, and Catholic Churches are engaged this very moment in building their Representative Churches in the Capital.

Southern Methodism has led the way in a city that has persecuted it for many years. The opportunity is ours if we will only take advantage of it. As stated before, the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an opportunity of becoming in every sense of the word The Representative Church, not alone of our denomination, but of Protestantism. If the church at large will help in this matter as it should, this can be accomplished. The people want to come, but there is no room for them. If adequate room could be provided for both church and Sunday school, it is an assured fact that the church would have several thousand members and one of the largest Sunday schools in the world in a few years. The local church has the necessary leadership and workers to accomplish this task, but it does not have the money or any way of getting it. What shall the church do? Will it take advantage of its great opportunity or turn aside from it?

THE CONSECRATED GLOBE TROTTER OF EARLY METHODISM.

By Dr. R. H. Bennett.

"Globe trotter" is coming to have rather an inferior flavor as one who gads about the world to satisfy an idle curiosity or to relieve a selfish boredom. It is here used in its original sense simply as one whose travels cover the earth.

Have you ever been mystified about that first bishop of the Methodist Church in America? Have you wondered how a man could be appointed a Methodist bishop instead of being elected, or how a bishop in charge of American Methodist Conferences could live in England, or why he repeatedly appeared on our shores and as speedily disappeared, seeming almost a sort of commuter between America and Europe at a time when the voyage meant months of privation and danger, a sort of ecclesiastical transatlantic shuttle-cock? Was he fickle in his purposes? Did he really make a contribution to his times?

You will find these puzzles cleared up in Bishop Candler's Life of Thomas Coke, recently off the press. It is one of the best pieces of work that have come from the Bishop's facile and potent pen, and it marks one more large and useful achievement of its author for the church and the Kingdom.

You will find as you read the book that Bishop Coke led one of the greatest of lives. As John Wesley's leading associate and trusted helper, he was superior in some respects to even the great Wesley himself. Bishop Coke was far more than a mere collector of missionary mites, and as he went about from house to house doing this "vile drudgery," as he called it, the facetious and profane naval commander utterly underestimated him when he said, "He (Coke) seems to be a sort of heavenly-minded little devil. He coaxed me out of five pounds to-day for his missionary work." Bishop Coke not only gave his strength and time without stint, but also consecrated his own rather large personal fortune to the cause of missions, and became what Bishop Candler calls "Methodism's Foreign Secretary."

The book must have cost much laborious toil. It gives much new light on Methodist history. It is the only life of Bishop Coke that does him justice, and it alone adequately sets before us the true facts of his relation to the history of our American Methodism.

It is written in Bishop Candler's easy, attractive and incisive style—"the Macaulay of Southern Methodism." The method of grouping the facts in the life of the subject is a novel one. And one of the most interesting features of the book is the pointing of chapters and paragraphs at their conclusion in Bishop Candler's sententious and pithy sentences.

To what fitter grave could the mortal remains of this Greatheart have been committed than the sunny bosom of the Indian Ocean whose limpid waves sing his requiem as they lap on many a distant crystal beach—fit type of his great life and heart that reached so many lands to bless and cheer? And his influence goes ever on like the ceaseless tides and currents that touch those many shores.

With his well-known generosity, Bishop Candler has declined to accept any financial interest in the book. The profits go to our Publishing House and the surplus to our superannuated preachers. Every Methodist, therefore, who buys the book, and we all should, will help those two great causes of our Methodism. No really intelligent Methodist can afford to be without this volume. Its reading will not only inform his mind, but also refresh his spirit and enrich his heart.

KWANSEI AND THE CENTENARY.

No institution in the Orient has reaped greater benefit from the Centenary than Kwansei Gakuin, jointly owned, maintained and controlled by the Methodist Church, Canada, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This school was founded in 1889 by Bishop Walter R. Lambuth when there was not a dollar in hand or in sight. Now it is one of the greatest schools in the empire, with each department recognized by the government as up to required standards.

The Centenary has provided four new buildings: the Auditorium, the Literary College building, the Commercial building and a college dormitory. A building for the library must be forthcoming before all the building needs of the institution are met and the future properly taken care of.

At the thirty-third annual commencement last March, 255 students graduated from Kwansei. Of these, 119 were from the high school, 119 from the college of commerce, 15 from the college of literature, and 2 from the theological department. Although it has been in existence only a little over three decades, this institution has done much for the cause of Christian education in Japan. During these years it has graduated 1714 students, of whom 117 have gone into the ministry.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY.

(A paper by T. R. Wiggins, Circulation Manager of the Methodist Publishing House, read at the recent meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association.)

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Southern Methodist Press Association: It is indeed a very great pleasure to again meet with you and take a part in the discussion of the many questions in which all of us are interested and upon which the enlarging of the scope of usefulness of the papers which we represent depends.

At the last meeting of the Association held at Columbia, S. C., Feb. 21 and 22, 1922, you discussed the advisability of all the Conference organs and the general organ of our church making a joint effort to increase substantially their circulation. As a result of this discussion you decided upon Good Literature Sunday and appointed a committee to arrange plans and fix a date for its observance. The date fixed was Jan. 27, 1924, or some date as near thereto as possible, the local pastor being the best judge as to the exact time suitable to him and his congregation.

Our College of Bishops, realizing the importance of the work which we will undertake to do by the observance of Good Literature Sunday, gave the movement their full indorsement. Our bishops appreciate the value of the church press to the growth and progress of Methodism.

Bishop Denny says: "My experience has been that I could not do my work intelligently, that I could not appreciate the work of the church with its privileges and duties aside from the information and stimulus I receive from our church papers."

Relative to the value of the church paper to the layman, Bishop Candler says: "Every church member ought to take his church paper and read it with care. Otherwise he will lack the information and instruction required for the highest Christian living and most successful Christian activity."

In this connection we have from Bishop Boaz: "All good Methodists should be greatly interested in the affairs of the church. The only possible way to be interested is to know as much as possible about the church. The church organs carry this information. Thus they furnish the channel through which our interest in our own church may be created and increased."

Bishop Beauchamp says: "In every local church there ought to be a committee interested and enthusiastic soliciting subscriptions to the periodicals. Any well-thought-out, definite plans worked in the local church will get the desired results."

The above is an indication of the importance attached by our bishops to the necessity of more Methodists reading Methodist church papers.

In addition to the above, the leaders in three of the greatest movements put forth by our church give our undertaking their support and best wishes for its full success.

Indorsement by Educational Secretary.

January 27, 1924, has been set apart throughout the entire connection of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as "Good Literature Sunday." The presiding elders and pastors have been requested to prepare suitable programs for that day. The program will aim to promote the circulation of and general interest in the Conference and connectional organs of the church.

This program for the entire church meets my most hearty approval, and I am in every way practicably ready to promote its observance. These church papers have no interests of their own. They exist to promote the great causes of the church.

My experience with the Christian Education Movement enhanced greatly my appreciation of the church paper, both local and connectional. That movement could not have been carried on as successfully as it was without the hearty cooperation and continuous efforts of the church papers. I sincerely hope that Good Literature Sunday will increase many times the subscriptions to our church papers and multiply their readers.

STONEWALL ANDERSON.

What the Church Press Means to the Centenary Movement.

I have always considered the church press as one of the idispensable agencies which made the Centenary a success and is making possible collection on Centenary pledges. This is due to the facts: First, the whole-hearted and loyal support of the editors in this great missionary movement of the church; second, because of their willingness at all times to give editorial indorsement and approval of the Centenary plans; third, because without them we could not have reached the intelligent leaders of our church.

Throughout the remaining months of the Centenary period we expect to use this strong arm to the fullest extent. It is worth thousands of dollars to us.

W. G. CRAM,
Directing Secretary.

Dr. Luther E. Todd, Secretry of the Board of Finance, tells us he is in hearty sympathy with Good Literature Sunday, and wishes us success.

We enter into this work without fear of encroaching upon the time allotted to the other interests of the church In fact, the success made thus far by the recent great movements put forth by our church and their successful completion have depended and will cotinue to depend largely upon the hearty co-operation of our church press and its unstinted use of space to tell our Methodist people of these worthy and necessary enterprises.

Two things are dependent upon the increased circulation of our papers: First, the widening of the scope of their influence; and, secondly, the financial success of the papers. We believe that the best means of getting this needful and necessary increase in circulation is by the concerted action of all our Conference organs and our general organ in setting aside this definite date and calling upon our constituency to lend us its aid in this work.

From observations I have made at the various Annual Conferences attended this fall, we will have our pastors' full co-operation, for they realize that the benefits derived from this undertaking will be mutual. A new name added to a subscription list of a church paper means one or more new readers who will have a more sympathetic understanding of the program and policy of the church which he as pastor is directing in his community. In fact, the paper is the equivalent of a very aggressive and efficient asistant pastor. So let us, through the columns of our papers, keep this important matter of Good Literature Sunday before our preachers and the laity each week by the use not only of articles and editorials of an inspirational nature, but let us offer practical plans and suggestions as well. Every editor and business manager present has likely had at some time a letter from a successful pastor telling just how he puts the church paper into the homes of his people. Pass the plan along to the other pastors by publishing this letter of plans in your paper. Keep before the pastor the fact that in increasing the mailing lists of his Conference organ and the general organ he not only helps the papers, but first of all he helps his own work by putting accurate church news and inspirational reading into the hands of his membership.

Proper publicity is necessary for successfully carring out a program as extensive as ours.

Working with your committee appointed at the last meeting, the Circulation Department of your Publishing House is preparing as its part in this work certain literature which will be mailed to every pastor in our church shortly after Jan. 1, 1924. This material consists of (1) a letter briefly explaining the plan for the observance of the day and urging the pastors' co-operation, and (2) a four-page folder, size about 8½ and 11 inches, giving complete plans, suggestions, talking points, etc., for the observance of the day At this point I wish to thank the editors and business managers who furnished such valuable material and suggestions for uso in this folder. Whatever sucess we have through its uso will be due largely to these contributions. We aro inclosing with this two order blanks with spaces for twenty-five names each, one for the Nashville Christian Advocate, and the other for the local Conference organ. These are sent for the convenience of the pastor in making his reports to the papers. He is instructed to send these blanks, properly filled out, to the papers intercsted. In addition to this, we are inclosing a small advertising folder of the Christian Advocate, also an Advocate order book. * * *

It is a regrettable fact that a large percentage of our laity has not informed itself as to the workings of our great church and the things for which it stands. However, these same laymen studiously and carefully read many trade journals relating to their particular professions and trades, in additlon to one or two daily papers. The reading of these trade journals and dailies is essential in these days of strict efficiency and keen competition in order that a man may rank high in his work. It is necessary for a man to move ahead or else drop behind. Danger lurks in standing still. It brings on stagnation. This holds just as true in church life as it does in commercial and professional life.

Are our laymen unconcerned as to the program and policy of our church? Do the members of the official boards, who bear the same relation to the church that a board of directors does to a business institution, hold their dutics so lightly that they are unwilling to keep themselves properly informed concerning their work as church officials? Are they not vitally concerned in the welfare of the church to which they pledged their allegiance? We believe they are; and when this important matter of the necessity of reading the Conference organ and general organ is brought to their attention by the pastor, January 27, 1924, they will see the need of these papers, subscribe for them, and read them.

Regarding date of observance, we are asking pastors to use January 27, 1924, or the date nearest thereto that suits their convenience. Pastors on circuits will necessarily have to take two or more Sundays to complete the work. The matter should be presented to each congregation, and an effort should be made to secure the largest possible list of subscriptions to both papers.

The pastor should enlist the aid of the laymen and have at least two of them speak briefly on the importance of the church papers to them and their homes. Many boys and girls have profited by the wholesome influence of the church paper in the home, and it doubtless has been of great aid to Christian parents in directing their children toward Christianity.

After the pastor's sermon and talks by the laymen, we suggest that subscriptions be taken at once. So far as possible, put both the Conference organ and the general organ in each home. This especially applies to the officials. The pastor should not be satisfied until he has succeeded in placing at least one of these papers in each home represented in his congregation. He should appoint a committee to call on all families not represented at the service and upon those who do not definitely decide upon subscribing for one of these papers during the service. Where the pastor has a bulletin, this should be used. In fact, every possible means should be used in making this day a real success, for this success will mean more consecrated, earnest, and effective workers for the kingdom. * * *

The New York Christian Advocate and other regional organs of the Methodist Episcopal Church have just completed a very successful campaign through the agency of Good Literature Sunday. The results have been gratifying.

I believe that by vigorously pushing the campaign which we have set in motion we will reap excellent results not only in larger subscription lists, but the final results which the church will obtain will be of untold value.

The worst evil of any community is unenforced law.—Theodore Roosevelt.

"MODERNISTS" MUDDLED.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Rev. William E. Clark, Unitarian preacher of Memphis, in a sermon on Sunday, Dec. 23, said:

"During my own life time the Bible has been revised a number of times, and each time there have been many changes in thought and words. That very fact proves the Bible to be a work of man."

I had supposed that Unitarian preachers were educated men; but I cannot imagine any intelligent man saying this. The Bible has never been "revised." It has been translated; and some of the translations have been revised: hence we have a Revised Version, or a revision made in 1881 of a translation made in 1611. A translation, however perfect or imperfect, is only a translation, and not in the remotest sense a "revision" of the original. Mr. Clark adds:

"I repeat, had the Bible been the literal, infallible word of God, there had been no need, or possibility of revision."

No, it has never been revised. No man of intelligence would attempt such a task. No man of intelligence would recognize such an attempt as a revision, if some man void of intelligence had attempted it. We have Cicero's Latin Orations; and we have translations of them into English, some claiming to be literal; but none that claim to be revisions of Cicero's works. If some illiterate, but good rustic preacher had said this, we would have been saddened or, maybe amused; but to have them from a pastor of a city church, supposed to be an educated man, amazes us. But the gentleman is a "Modernist," and the Modernists are getting mightily muddled. He might have said with just as much reason—and no more—that in his time hundreds of revisions of the Bible had been made; for hundreds of translations of it into the hundreds of tongues of the earth have been made in his time, and any one translation is as much a revision of the Bible as another. Alas, how muddled is Mr. Clark!

Another muddled Modernist, a Dr. Parks, rector of an Episcopal church in New York, has recently said:

"The doctrine of the virgin birth was clamped upon the church during the Middle Ages on the basis of the doctrine of original sin. It was the conviction among those who did the clamping that virginity was a higher state than marriage, and hence the story that Christ's mother was a virgin."

This doctrine of the Virgin Birth of Christ is clearly and strongly stated in the oldest form of the Apostles' Creed, current and in use by the church as early as A. D. 175. This is clearly proved by Dr. Arthur Cushman McGiffert, of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, in his book on "The Apostles' Creed," pp. 6-9. It is also unequivocally taught in detail by Matthew i:18-23, and Luke i:26-38; ii:1-20. John indicates it when he wrote: "The Word (Christ) became flesh and dwelt among us." "The Word was God." John i:14 and 1. "The Middle Ages" began, according to the histories, in A. D. 476 and ended A. D. 1453. Three hundred years before "the Middle Ages" began, the whole Christian church was declaring its faith in the Virgin Birth of Christ. Matthew, one of Christ's Apostolic Twelve, wrote his Gospel at least 200 years—more likely 250—before "the Middle Ages" began. Luke and John wrote less than a century later. Now unless these evangelists and others—Paul included—and the historians of all the centuries far away are false witnesses, this thing that Dr. Parks says has not even the shadow of truth in it. This Modernist is badly muddled.

The Modernists are always muddled. They were muddled in the naming. Why are they called "Modernists?" There is not a distinguishing item in their creed that is much less than 2,000 years old. They would have been called Ebionites or Gnostics in the apostolic time—the former, if they were Jews, the latter, if they were Greeks. Paul and John opposed them, as witness their epistles—the latter very fiercely. These Jewish deniers of the Virgin Birth of the Christ gave great concern to Justin Martyr in the second century after Christ, as they had done to St. John in the first; and in both centuries they, under various names, were as contradictory to the basic truths of our blessed Christianity as are now these miscalled "Modernists." Oh, how they are muddled! Their little pet infidelity is nearly as old as our grand world-conquering Christianity; but, oh, how weak is the little old thing! The sect that champions it, the Unitarian Church, has no foreign missions (I learn), and practically no increase in numbers.

TO THE PASTORS IN MISSISSIPPI.

At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, I was appointed as Conference evangelist, with headquarters in this city. I am now arranging my engagements for the next year, and should like to hear from any one who may desire my services, as soon as possible. My experience has taught me as an evangelist that many pastors wait until late in the year, and then write the different evangelists, and then wonder why they are not able to secure the services of any of the men appointed to that work. Personally, I should like to get in touch with every pastor who should care to use me at any time in the year at once. In that way, it is far easier to arrange the work.

I go to Stonewall, Miss., to open a meeting there Dec. 30, and any one who desires can write me there or at my permanent address, Box 308, Meridian, Miss.

"Close to Your Door"

The Centenary sweeps 'round the world, but its service begins at home. It has achieved large results in every Annual Conference. In your District—perhaps in your community—its accomplishments are evident.

The Centenary has placed the vast sum of $1,646,067.97 in the hands of the various Conference authorities to be used as they see fit in supporting underpaid preachers and developing mission charges.

It maintains fifty preachers and workers at hard tasks in sixteen of our largest cities.

It supports 12 summer schools for the training of rural pastors, Conference undergraduates and others, and these schools enrolled 2000 preachers last year.

It has reopened scores of abandoned country churches in all sections of our territory.

It maintains full-time evangelists in nearly all our Annual Conferences and places their services at the disposal of all the churches.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

A WAY CAN BE FOUND TO DO ANYTHING WHICH OUGHT TO BE DONE.

It is impossible for me to get the viewpoint of the man who says "I can't." Determined men do not think in such terms. I like the man who thinks he can and who never lets up trying until he accomplishes his task. For such a one no obstacle is too great to be overcome; he just keeps on going on until his objective is reached.

"Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied
That 'maybe it couldn't,' but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

"Somebody scoffed: 'O, you'll never do that;
At least, no one ever has done it.'
But he took off his coat, and he took off his hat,
And the first thing he knew he'd begun it.
With the lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
If any doubt rose, he forbid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

"There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done;
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you one by one
The dangers that wait to assail you;
But just buckle right in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it.
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That cannot be done, and you'll do it."

The Spirit of the Special Effort.

Every preacher in the church should have the spirit and purpose of the foregoing in the special effort for superannuate endowment. This is not a time to doubt; it is a time to do. Another such chance to do something worth while for this needy cause will not come in this generation. We must do the thing now, or we will not be able to do it at all. In the light of this fact, how can any preacher go about looking for excuses why it cannot be done? Every one of us should rather set his jaws, roll up his sleeves, take up the tools, and say: "It can be done, and I will do it." The timid preacher who is frightened every time he hears a screech owl is to be pitied. And the preacher who sits down and twirls his thumbs during the special effort for superannuate endowment, saying it cannot be done in this place, should be ashamed ever again to look his preacher-brother in the face. I would rather die and be decently buried right now than to live in such manner that I may be justly accused of laying down on the special effort in behalf of the "forgotten man."

What About That Pink Leaf Report?

At this writing, December 8, approximately 1000 charges have sent in the pink leaf report. This means that 5400 charges are yet to be heard from on this important matter. Is your charge one of the 5400? If so, you are urged to send your report at once. Get out of the class of "I have not done it yet" and into the class of "I am up to date on the movement." Keep step with the plan. The importance of a response from you compels this persuasion. The Board of Finance would not insist upon it so eagerly and with such persistence if it did not know that such action on your part is vital to the success of the special effort in your charge. Therefore give your co-operation without question. If your first quarterly conference has been held and action taken by it on matters listed for its attention in the "Workers' Guide," I see no good reason for your failure to send forward your pink leaf report. Do you? Then let the Board have it without further delay. Of course if your first quarterly conference failed to do this work as called for under the plan and in Paragraph 112 of the 1922 Discipline, you cannot send the rep[illegible] until you have the information. In such cases please get action as quickly as possible so that the Board may not continue to be disappointed and embarrassed in its work on account of your pink leaf report not being received.

This One Thrills Me to the Toes.

At one of the Annual Conferences a very prominent layman told me this: "Just recently the board of stewards of the charge to which I belong held a meeting to discuss plans for the ensuing year. Everything went smoothly until the question of the year's budget came up. Then the president of the board took the floor and with much earnestness said that the budget would have to be decreased all along the line, even to the reduction of the pastor's salary. A committee was about to be appointed to arrange for reducing the budget as indicated when some brother asked what was to be done about the charge's quota for superannuate endowment. Everything and everybody were very quiet for a brief period. The president of the board bowed his head in deep thought and then announced that the superannuate cause had suffered too long and that it must not be further neglected. He said it would be well to forget about reducing the budget and leave it as it had been, except that the charge's quota for superannuate endowment should be added to the budget. The board unanimously and joyously agreed." Whoopee! The "forgotten man" scored twice that time, once for himself and once for all others concerned in that budget. Mr. President of that board of stewards, you are one of God's own. You have a wise head and a warm heart. Blessings be upon you!

Out of a Difficult Situation.

Columbia charge, Missouri Conference, is at the seat of the State University. Our people there are in the midst of a mighty effort to build a splendid new church that will adequately provide for the religious needs of Methodist students who attend the university in great numbers. When Rev. M. T. Haw, pastor, brought the special effort for superannuate endowment to the attention of his people, they heard him gladly. They refused to neglect the cause of the aged preachers because they had so much money to raise for other purposes. They not only accepted their minimum quota cheerfully, but voluntarily added a considerable amount. Hats off to Brother Haw and his loyal people. They care. And I have observed that when people really care for something they will find a way to serve the object of their concern. I do not believe that any church in Southern Methodism has a heavier financial burden just now than the Columbia charge, but they are eager to do more than their part for superannuate endowment. May the example of this loyal people be followed by others!

A "Forgotten Man's" Testimony.

It was at the South Georgia Conference. Bishop Ainsworth had just called attention to the fact that our living superannuates of to-day failed to receive a total of $3,000,000 promised them on salaries when they were in active service. The Bishop then called the name of an aged superannuate who was present and asked him how much he failed to receive on the salaries promised him by the charges he served before superannuation. The dear old brother scrambled to his feet and said: "Bishop, I don't know. It was considerable, but I was so busy looking after the work committed to my care that I did not keep an account of the deficits on my salary." As the significance of the battle-scarred veteran's words gripped the Conference all of us were swept by a wave of deep emotion. Strong men wept. It was an hour that I shall long remember. O, my friends, it is for the sake of men like this self-forgetting soul that I appeal to you for help in the special effort for superannuate endowment. They did not forget! Shall we?

A Little Pepper Sauce.

I have already traveled 30,000 miles this fall visiting the Annual Conferences in the interest of superannuate endowment. Please do not force me to take the train again to go after your pink leaf report. Send it in.

Let every one remember that he who violates the laws of the land tramples on the blood of the fathers and tears asunder the charter of his own and his children's liberty.—Abraham Lincoln.

If any man will enter into that high alliance, will trust the good will of the Lord and will go out to do the King's will, he will find he has got the life indeed.—J. H. Jowett.

The Home Circle

KEEP YOUR TROUBLES OUT OF SIGHT.

By Willie C. Page.

When heavy sorrows press you,
And the way is dark and drear;
When your days are full of trials,
And new dangers oft appear;
Listen to the robin singing,
Hear her songs so gay and bright;
She may have her many troubles,
But she keeps them out of sight.

Did you know the world is sighing,
Full of partings and of tears,
Full of loneliness and heartaches,
Overrun with despair and fears?
Don't wait or take heed for to-morrow,
Keep singing with all your might;
You may have your share of troubles,
But just keep them out of sight.

GOD'S GARDEN.

There was once upon a time a king who was greatly beloved by his people, and nothing pleased him more than to receive from them some tokens of their love. And because they knew he was very fond of flowers, although the royal gardens were ablaze with color all summer, they often sent to the palace baskets of choice blooms they had grown themselves. This mado the king's heart glad. It shows what a lot of pleasure a little kindness can give to others.

Baskets and bunches came every day. Some of them had nicely written messages with them for the king to read. But for all that, the king was not altogether satisfied, for he sometimes wondered if the people really meant the kind things they said. He resolved to find out. "If they are genuinely true-hearted toward me," he said to himself, "then they will be the same to every one. Kind words ought to mean a kind heart."

Without a word to any one, the king laid aside his crown and scepter. He put on a long gray cloak that covered him from head to foot. Then he got a wide-brimmed hat that came well over his face, and, with a pair of dark spectacles on, he made sure that no one would know him. So he set off on his journey.

The road was dusty, and soon the king got dusty, too, so that he looked just like a pilgrim. "Now is the time to try my plan," he thought with a smile. So he stopped at a house and said: "I am tired and thirsty, and have come from afar. Could you give a pilgrim a bowl of milk?"

The woman scowled as she said: "O, no! There is a spring farther up; you can get some water there, and sit down while you drink it, if you are tired." And she slammed the door.

That might be good enough for a pilgrim, but the king could not help wishing that she had not sent him those flowers with the loving message the day before.

He went on to another house, and there he asked for a morsel of bread. But the man told him there was a baker's shop in the village where he could buy as much bread as he wanted. Said he: "We can't give bread to idle fellows. Begone!" And again the door was slammed in his face.

The king went on, very unhappy now. Suddenly he stopped. "I'm wrong," he said, "they don't mean to be unkind; perhaps they are too poor to give away food. I'll try another plan." So at the next house, which had a pretty garden at the side, he said: "Could you spare a few flowers for a lonely pilgrim? They would make the road seem much shorter." But the man made some excuse; and the king tried the next house, and the next. At the last house a woman said: "Do you think we've nothing to do but grow flowers? If you want them, grow them!" "Quite right," nodded her husband.

They saw him sad, and tears filled his eyes. Then, as he raised his hand to dry those drops, back fell the cloak of somber gray, and—lo!—a robe of royal purple lay beneath. It was no stranger pilgrim, but the king. And he had asked in vain.

If Christ the King came to your soul's garden, would you have any flowers to offer him? Ask mother the kind he likes best besides thoughtfulness, thankfulness, gentleness, and love.—From "Parables for Little People."

I WISH I HAD THAT KIND OF A DAD.

If there ever was a father who understood a boy's heart and how to bring out the best that was in him, that man was Theodore Roosevelt. I have been reading, for a second time, the letters of that great father-chum to his sons, Quentin, Kermit, Ted and Archie, when they were at college. No matter how engrossed Roosevelt was in his full life, the four lads were never out of his heart and mind. He was their whole-hearted companion. Their games were his; their joys and sorrows those of his own heart. His letters —humorous, lengthy and illustrated with crude drawings on the margin—reveal one of the most wonderful fathers of his generation.

I wish I had that kind of a dad, who, when I bump into seemingly unsurmountable barriers at college, would write to me as Roosevelt wrote Kermit: "Don't worry about your lessons, old boy. I know you are studying hard. Don't get cast down. Sometimes in life, both at school and afterwards, fortune will go against any one, but if he just keeps pegging away and doesn't lose his courage, things always take a turn for the better in the end."

I wish I had that kind of a dad, who would be interested enough in my hobbies to send me, as Roosevelt sent his boys, "a lot of Filipino revolutionary stamps," a dad who would remember the date of my birthday; a dad who would lend me his fishing rod; a dad who would forget his dignity often enough to show me that he could be young again; a dad who would treat me not as a kid, but as an equal.

I wish I had that kind of a dad, who, when I spend too much time at play, would not preach to me, but wisely admonish me as Roosevelt did Ted. "Do you find you can get down well under the ball to tackle the fullback," he wrote. "How are you tackling? I am glad you play football and box and ride, walk and row as well as you do. I should be sorry if you did not do these things. But don't ever get into the frame of mind which regards these things as constituting the end to which all your energies must be devoted, or even the major portion of your energies."

When Ted was puzzling whether to enter military or civil life, his devoted father helped him to decide. "I have great confidence in you," he wrote. "I believe you have the ability and above all the energy, the perseverance and the common sense, to win out in civil life. I trust in your ability, and especially your character, and I am confident you will win."

I wish i had that kind of a dad.

TOYS OF THE WORLD.

By Amelia Josephine Burr.

White kite up in the sky,
Paper bird flying so high,
East and West, what do you see?
Whisper it down your string to me.
Children brown and yellow and white,
And each one is holding the string of a kite.

Top whirling fast and slow,
Dancing the only dance you know,
What do you hear the world around
When you lie down with your ear to the ground?
Children white and yellow and brown,
With tops in the country and tops in the town.

Miss Burr, the author of the above poem, has recently returned home from a visit in the Orient, and a charming book of her verse called "A Child Garden in India," has recently come from the press. In explanation of "Toys of the World" the author says: "When you think about little children on the other side of the world, perhaps you think of their queer clothes and their dark skins and their slanting eyes, and how different from yourself they are. But really they are not so very different. They play like you, spinning tops and flying kites; they do not always like to learn their lessons, and sometimes they are a little slow about doing errands. And they love their mothers and fathers, and take care of their little brothers and sisters just as the boys and girls do on our side of the world."—The Christian Advocate.

THE ADVOCATE IN 1924.

dorsed and entered into by all the church papers, approved by the General Conference, and commended by the bishops and other connectional officers. It ought to result, and we believe it will result, in a large increase in the circulation of our church literature. For the New Orleans Christian Advocate, we feel that it is not expecting too much that its subscription list should be increased to 10,000 by the end of the designated period. It is our purpose to give full reports of the results of this special effort, and we are hoping and praying that those results will be such as to strengthen the cause of Christ throughout our territory.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A happy New Year to all our readers!

January is "Christian Literature Month;" a good slogan for the month is, "A church paper in every home."

Rev. J. C. Price writes that the outlook is encouraging for a prosperous year on the Rochelle charge, Louisiana Conference.

The editor acknowledges the receipt of many Christmas greetings from the readers of the Advocate. Blessings upon them every one!

The post office address of Rev. W. T. Bazzel, preacher in charge of the Burnsville circuit, North Mississippi Conference, is Tishomingo, Miss.

Bishop S. R. Hay has been appointed to have charge of the Conferences which were under the care of Bishop James Atkins at the time of the latter's death.

At the recent meeting of the College of Bishops in San Antonio, Texas, Bishop W. B. Beauchamp was appointed fraternal delegate to the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Rev. B. T. Crews, one of the honored superannuate members of the Louisiana Conference, is in good health. He enjoys the privilege of preaching whenever he has the opportunity.

Sunday, January 27, is "Christian Literature Sunday" throughout the church. Let it be observed everywhere.

Rev. A. L. Harper, assisted by Rev. Roy Moore, of Centenary College, will supply the Longstreet charge, in addition to the Castor charge. His address is 2613 Lillian Street, Shreveport, La.

The Christmas number of the "Big Brother," published by the Big Brothers Class, Greenville, Miss., is a thing of beauty. The leading editorial, "Christmas," by Rev. E. Nash Broyles, is a splendid production.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, has been confined to his bed by sickness for several days. We trust that he will soon be entirely restored to health.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Ruston District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to announce that the preachers' institute, which was to have been held at Minden, La., has been indefinitely postponed on account of a protracted meeting at Minden embracing the dates of the institute.

Since the new Conference year began, the ladies of the church at Hazlehurst, Miss., have put a new stove in the parsonage kitchen and a new suit of furniture in the parlor. In addition, the good people of the charge presented the pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, with a substantial Christmas purse.

The first quarterly conference of the Amory charge, North Mississippi Conference, enthusiastically approved the special effort for superannuate endowment, and, without a dissenting voice, included its quota in the budget for the year. Mr. L. E. Puckett is chairman of the committee in charge of this sacred cause.

The announcement of the sudden death of Rev. J. H. Smith, of the Tchula charge, North Mississippi Conference, will bring sorrow to his many friends throughout the Conference. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to his sorrowing family and friends in their bereavement. We trust we shall have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, Indian Bayou, La., who was pastor last year of the Campti charge, writes: "In justice to all concerned, I feel the following correction should be made in the report for the Conference collections on the Campti charge; the assessment for these claims, both General and Conference work, was $556; the report reads, $50 assessed, $50 paid, which shows paid in full—refer to Minutes. My mistake."

The Sunday school at Amory, Miss., had an average attendance during the months of October, November, and December of 256—the highest average in its history for a similar period. Mr. J. M. May has been the superintendent for thirty-three years, and during that time he has been absent only six times—a remarkable record. On Sunday, Dec. 23, sixty were present in the Nine-plus class, of which Mrs. C. M. Harrison is the teacher. Rev. W. R. Lott is the pastor of the Amory charge.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Vicksburg, Miss., writes under date of Dec. 25: "My father, Rev. H. B. Cottrell, 93 years old, passed away in our parsonage home this morning at 12:30 o'clock in the triumph of the Christian faith. He will be buried in Yazoo City to-morrow." How beautiful in the eyes of the Lord is the death of his saints! We trust we shall be furnished in due time with a suitable memoir of this faithful soldier of the Cross for publication. We extend sincere sympathy to the loved ones in their sorrow.

WORK IN MEXICO.

"I know of no better field for missionary work than the western part of New Mexico," writes the Rev. R. A. Crawford of Magdalena, New Mexico. "When I first came on the field I found the people in such a discouraged condition that they were almost ready to give up. They have just completed a nice little church with large auditorium and seven Sunday school rooms, with concrete basement under the entire building; but we are in debt nearly $6000 on it. We owe the Board of Church Extension $4000 borrowed money. They sent us $1000, which will relieve us of all outstanding debts except $1375, which one of the merchants has against us for material. We gave him a mortgage on the parsonage for that amount, and I understand he is going to foreclose the mortgage as soon as due. The people have just paid every cent they can. I never saw more loyal Christians, but they are financially depressed. My heart almost breaks to see so much needing to be done and so few to do it.

"I went out 85 miles to visit a young lady who was dying. She was from our town and was teaching school in that community. Her Christian life had such an influence on those people that they asked that she be buried among them, showing how susceptible they are to the truth. There was only one Christian lady in the entire community, but all that sinful community begged for me to come to them and hold a meeting. They said they believed in God. I find families who have grown children who have never heard a sermon. Five communities have insisted that I come and help them by holding meetings. My people here are interested in missions and missionary work, and they are not only willing to go, but some will assist as soon as the weather gets warm enough to permit me to go. Of course I know that will cause me to neglect some things here, but, oh, what can I do!

"This is a mining town surrounded by stock raising. The mines have been closed for three years and a drought for some time, and people who were wealthy three years ago are bankrupt now, but if we can save our church we can take this town for Methodism. We have a population of 1800.

"People are coming from all parts of the United States and taking up land. I have been west for over one hundred miles and in a few communities they have a union Sunday school, but they have no preaching except an occasional preacher passing through."

THE NEED OF SPECIALS.

Declaring that the interest of Sunday schools in missionary work at home and abroad is deepening and advancing and that the time is here when they must as a unit get behind the great missionary program of the church and help to carry it on, the Bureau of Specials, M. E. Church, South, through its executive secretary, Miss Carrie R. Porter, calls attention to the following facts:

The appropriation for foreign missions, general work, in 1919, was $563,528; for 1924 it is $1,403,679. For home missions, the regular maintenance budget for 1919 was $133,975; for 1924 it is $365,000. Yet the income from assessment, home and foreign missions, for 1922, was only $57,765, which is $1,189,914 short of the combined budget. To provide for bare maintenance, it will require an increase in assessment of 150 per cent. Assessment can be advanced only by order of the General Conference. How is your missionary work to be supported then? Only one answer—by continuance of the specials your church and Sunday school are carrying, and the departments which do not now have them.

"We believe," says Miss Porter, "that we have come to this point in missionary finance by the providence of God. The missionary assessment has little or no inspiration; it does not educate, nor does it illumine. It has no voluntary, spontaneous growth. It has no specific appeal. And for these reasons it does not take hold of the hearts of the members of the Sunday school. The Specials enable you to approach every man, woman and child with confidence in something concrete, indispensable, definite, in results. The time is at hand when nothing less than the directed missionary effort of every member of every church and Sunday school will reach the leadership of the world, and through these native leaders their population of millions."

NOEL MEMORIAL, SHREVEPORT, LA., MAKES FIRST PAYMENT ON SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

One of the most unique, instructive, and inspiring Christmas programs of the city was given by the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Sunday night. The decorations and setting for the pageant-story were complete. Everything about the church was suggestive of the "White Christmas." On the altar were two beautiful Christmas trees, and about them the white design was carried out with white roses and snow scenes. In front of the altar, and likewise in front of the congregation, was a large white barrel, bearing the inscription, "Our Christmas Barrel, Look In and Put In." This barrel was the receptacle in which were placed the "white gifts," and the "white gifts" were bills and checks of different denominations for the Superannuate Endowment Fund which the Methodist Church will raise during the next five years. Ten million dollars is the amount of this fund. The interest on it will be used for the worn-out preachers who have given a lifetime of service in the church and, with but few exceptions, on a very small salary, and have been retired with nothing to take care of them in their last days. This fund will furnish only a small amount for these old soldiers of the Cross, but enough to save them from actual want during their helpless old age. The quota for the Noel Church is $5,000. With the "white gifts" that were placed in the barrel, and gifts of friends who could not be present at the service, the church makes a Christmas gift of $1,000, its first payment to this great cause—winning for itself, perhaps, the distinction of being the first church in Louisiana to make first payment.

The Christmas Story.

The beautiful Christmas story, following closely the Biblical record, was told by Mrs. C. P. Munday. The story was three times interrupted—first by a visit of the shepherds who came to offer the firstlings of the flocks and the first fruits of the fields; the Wise Men came next to offer their jewels of priceless value to the King; then came a boy, who said that he had nothing of flocks and fields, nor jewels of gold and silver—he had only himself, which he gladly offered, and which was accepted as the best gift. Cecil Perryman was the shepherd; J. F. Russ, J. P. Honaker, and J. T. Pearce were the Wise Men; George Holder was the boy.

"Surprises" in Giving.

There were many surprises for the congregation in the unique methods used in presenting the gifts. The Sunday school, the organized forces of the church, of which Prof. C. M. Hughes is superintendent, had their method of giving well planned. First came the babies of the Cradle Roll, pushing the baby buggy in which were the "white gifts." It was a beautiful sight presented by these little ones as they were lifted up that their gifts might be put in the barrel. Following them came the Beginners, bearing the standard of the department. Next the Primaries, with a sure-enough little Santa Claus riding on a sled drawn by "reindeers;" then came the Juniors, a long line of them; in silent march they passed under the banner, "Tho Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and made their offering. The Intermediates came drawing a sled on which was a large snowball. A dialogue ensued about selfish giving. An angel appeared bringing a good message. The wand was used, the snowball opened, and out of it came a beautiful girl bearing gifts for the worn-out preachers. The "Triple K Boys' Class" sent their white envelopes to the front by a messenger of their number. The "Torch Lights" were represented by a beautiful maiden with a torchlight, a message and gifts. The Satterly Class, in a very striking way, gavo a panorama of a preacher's life—from the young man just beginning to tho old man worn out in the service. It made a profound impression. The gifts of the Intermediate Epworth League were sent forward by a messenger who raised this question—"Who will take the places of these preachers of the gospel when they have been retired from active service because of old age?" God's call comes to us.

The Boy Scouts came forward in full uniform. Their spokesman said: "Scouts believe in tithing—and this is our tithe, ten dollars." E. L. Houston, the tallest man in the church, is now the center of attention, as he comes in and walks slowly down to the barrel. He is clothed with bills from head to foot. He tells where he got them, and then calls for help to get them "off himself and in the barrel." Then followed gifts from the Smith-Wesley, the Weldon-Kimhall, and the Busy Men's Bible Classes, choir, and other members of the congregation—and the giving continues, for many who have pledged and wanted to make a gift could not be present.

Giving of Life.

While the choir sang "All, yes all, I give to Jesus; it belongs to Him," Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Holmes brought to the altar their infant son and presented him to God in holy baptism. While other stanzas of this beautiful hymn were sung, the pastor made an earnest plea for the giving of life to Jesus Christ who gave his life for all.

Superannuated Preachers and Santa Claus.

The pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, called forward the honor guests, the superannuated preachers and their wives living in Shreveport, and introduced them to the congregation—Rev. B. T. Crews and wife, Rev. W. F. Henderson and wife, Rev. S. J. Davies and wife, and Rev. J. G. Sloane and wife. At this point Santa Claus came and spoke beautiful words to these honor guests and presented love gifts to them. Brother Crews responded, expressing love and appreciation. Brother Henderson pronounced the blessing—and thus ended a real "White Christmas Service," in which everybody was made happy, and in which all had a very vital part.

DEATH OF REV. J. H. SMITH.

Rev. J. H. Smith, pastor at Tchula, North Mississippi Conference, died Thursday night.

He had attended a Masonic banquet in the evening, and in his genial way had laughed and played with his friends. Upon his return home, while preparing for bed, he fell, unconscious, and within a minute was gone.

His body was buried in Richton cemetery, near Pickens, on Friday afternoon.

Brother Smith was appointed to the Tchula charge at the late session of the Conference. No man in the district had made a better start. He was happy and hopeful in his work.

The church has lost a faithful, good man. His influence will abide.

The prayerful sympathies and affectionate interest of the brethren will follow the wife and son.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM.

Greenwood, Miss., Dec. 29, 1923.

NOTICE TO THE PREACHERS, THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS, THE PRESIDENTS OF MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, THE LAY LEADERS, AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE OFFICIAL BOARDS OF SARDIS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Friends and Co-Laborers: Instead of attempting to have one preachers' meeting for the district this year, I have decided to have three group meetings of the preachers and official members of the Sardis District.

The purpose of these meetings is that we shall get additional inspiration for the great work of the Kingdom that lies before us during the coming year and adopt plans for an aggressive campaign that is worthy of persons who call themselves the sons of God.

At these meetings we shall have selected speakers (from our own district), who shall discuss the following questions: Evangelism, the Benevolences, Education and the Centenary, Woman's Missionary Work, the Layman's Relationship to Evangelism and Other Church Work, Pastoral Visiting. Following these addresses, we shall have a general discussion of the work before us in which we desire that all shall particpate. We shall close these meetings with a consecration service.

It is urgently requested that every preacher do his best to get as many to attend the group meeting to which his charge is assigned as possible. The larger the number in attendance, the greater good will be accomplished.

The good people of the towns in which the group meetings are to be held have kindly agreed to furnish dinner for those in attendance. It will be greatly appreciated if each pastor will notify the brother pastor where their group meeting will he held about how many will attend from his charge.

Please let prayers be said daily for the leadership and power of the Holy Spirit in these meetings.

The Group Meetings.

CHRISTMAS AT MUMBLE MISS

By Wayne E. Wheeler

The real Christmas gift to the American people is the one brought by prohibition. A few of the immediate results of four years of sober industry are:

A cut in the death rate that saved 375,000 lives, pruning the insurance companies and policy holders $375,000,000.

A decrease in the rate of preventable illness equivalent to 1,737,500 people continuously ill for one year.

A reduction in the rate of drunkenness arrests per 100,000 population equivalent to 500,000 fewer arrests for drunkenness in 1923 alone, or over 2,000,000 fewer in the four dry years.

A decrease in the penal ratio resulting in 20,000 fewer persons being committed to penal institutions in these four years.

Elimination of intemperance as a cause of poverty, releasing $74,000,000 of charity funds for constructive work.

Wiping out 177,750 licensed saloons, around which huddled the homes of families whose revenues were drained by the liquor leech.

Over a billion dollars added to our savings accounts and over eleven billion dollars to our new life insurance policies in 1923.

TO THE ERA AGENTS.

Dear Era Agents: No doubt by this time you have received literature and all material for Epworth Era Night on Jan. 13, next. If you have not, I feel sure that you will within the next few days, provided the district secretaries are "on the job," and I am almost positive that no other State has any more faithful and efficient district secretaries than has Louisiana.

Now remember, you (Era agents) are to have charge of the program on the above mentioned date, and whether or not Louisiana comes up to the standard on this particular point depends largely upon you. And surely we do not want Louisiana to be under the Standard—but we would like to see an Epworth Era in every home represented in every Chapter in the State. Era agents, you hold a very important office in your chapter. The success of your chapter depends a great deal upon whether or not your Leaguers are using the Epworth Era to the best advantage. So make this a great drive. I hope you will plan your program two weeks before time. We are depending on you. Would like to write each of you personally, but time will not permit at this season of the year.

With all good wishes, I remain yours, "All for Christ,"

MRS. G. W. HALL SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lima, Ohio.—"Indeed, your medicine is all you say it is! I had very severe troubles such as women often have, and could do no heavy work. I was sick for several years, and from reading your ads. I finally decided to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now doing my own washing, which I haven't done for several years, and can walk long distances without those dragging pains and weak feelings. The Vegetable Compound is fine, and I never forget to say a good word for it to other women when they say they need something."—Mrs. G. W. HALL, 539 Hazel Avenue, Lima, Ohio.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Hall's experience is but one of many.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We shall have a prosperous and a happy new year in the same measure as we let the Holy Spirit use us in establishing the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ in the hearts of others. The beatitudes give us the secret of happiness. We may possess the happiness if we practice the precepts.

The kingdom is to come largely in answer to the prayers and through the efforts of unsalaried workers, such as mothers, fathers, superintendents, and teachers. These lovers of God have a lost world at their feet. They do not have to cross the sea, the street, or the highway to find needy souls. The main thing for all of us to settle is not how much can we get from God, but how much can God get of us. He has given his all to us and is waiting for us to give our all unto him that he may manifest his power to the world about us.

Mr. B. G. Webb, our superintendent of the Kosciusko school, is planning to hold an institute for all the pastors, superintendents, and teachers of Attala County at an early date. If we can get these workers to understand and use the Program of Work, every interest of the church will be blessed to a great degree. May the Lord lay his hand upon a hundred such men as Brother Webb, that we may reach every superintendent and every teacher in our Conference and fire them with a passion for lost souls and a like passion to save our children from the experience of sin.

Twenty members of the Brotherhood class of Sardis conducted the prayer service at the church Wednesday evening. Six of these men made inspiring addresses. The class has the desire to extend the blessings of the organized class throughout Panola County. The most hurtful heresy is in our failure to teach the gospel to the rising generation. Carry out the great commission and there will be no heretics. Let us organize to give the gospel to whole counties.

Brother pastor and brother superintendent, you will not forget that Sunday, Jan. 20, is the day that our Conference asked you to observe as Training Day. It is simple and easy, and will bring good results if you will only try it. Find out how many of your teachers have completed one or more of the books in the training course; find out how many want to take up the study of one of these books. Start out by saying you mean to enroll in the class of One Hundred and see how they will follow your example. Announce the fact that the offering is to be used in helping train the teachers in your district. Give the well-to-do men an opportunity to give ten dollars each for this fund. Send the amount to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., and tell him to give your district credit for the amount.

Only a few schools in the Conference have paid their Centenary pledges in full. In order to stimulate the schools to pay out during the next two years, the Board of Missions has offered our Conference four fields. The shares are $25 each, and the fields are as follows: Korea, Wonsan Christian Hospital, Wonsan, 240 shares, $25 each; hospital, Brussels, Belgium, 200 shares at $25 a share; four native missionaries to Poland, 160 shares, at $25 a share; Mississippi Industrial Institute, Holly Springs, 200 shares, at $25 a share. Write to me and say what field and the number of shares your school will take.

A TEACHER OF PATRIOTISM.

There are few, indeed, among our people, even among the most enlightened, who know how great a share The Youth's Companion has had in cultivating a fine spirit of patriotism which means: Our country; not wrong, but right. It was this weekly that started the movement for putting the flag on every schoolhouse in the United States. It formulated the well-known Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, that is repeated to-day in almost every class-room in America. It is now running a series of patriotic covers picturing in color the striking events in the nation's history, painted by the best historical illustrators in the country, pictures that will greatly help in fixing the memory of events, that so often seem merely disagreeable chores in the school history.

There are other things of which The Youth's Companion is proud in its long and honored service. For generations it has stood for the cleanest and best in periodical literature. It boasts, and the writer knows with what justice, that nothing printed on its pages ever remotely suggests the need of a censor. It occupies a unique place in American journalism. President Coolidge has said that "the destiny of America, the greatness of service lies around the hearthstone." The Youth's Companion is guiding that destiny in its chosen field as a great family paper.—The Christian Register.

INTERMEDIATE-SENIOR DEPARTMENT.

The following suggestions form the basis of the policy of the Louisiana Conference Intermediate-Senior department of our Sunday school work:

1. The effort to have every organized Wesley class during the coming three months report its activities to the General and Conference headquarters.

2. The organization of additional Wesley classes in every presiding elder's district.

3. The effort to secure a wide representation of Intermediate-Senior officers, teachers, and at least one representative pupil from each organized class, at the State Sunday school conference and federation at Homer, La., March 18-20.

4. The effort to hold a conference Intermediate-Senior section at the Homer conference for the study of specific "teen age" problems, and the planning of future activities in this group.

5. The promotion of departmental specialization courses for Intermediate-Senior workers in every standard training school in the Conference during the year.

6. For the further development of Intermediate-Senior consciousness in the Conference, the promotion in the local church of the Intermediate-Senior Council, to plan departmental recreation, worship, service.

7. Promotion of Intermediate and Senior class standards.

I trust that these points may soon be made more specific by the outlining of some conference and district goals. I trust also that this tentative sketch may have the thoughtful and prayerful study of every worker with teen age boys and girls, to the end that wherever co-operation is possible, and wherever some of these ends may be realized, we may go forward.

H. L. JOHNS,
Conference Superintendent,
Intermediate-Senior Department.

SOME LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Our Conference minutes show we now have 333 Sunday schools in Louisiana—43 in the Alexandria District, 63 in the Baton Rouge District, 38 in the Lake Charles District, 51 in the Monroe District, 34 in the New Orleans District, 61 in the Ruston District, and 40 in the Shreveport District.

The total enrollment in our entire Conference is now 39,868. Our schools raised for all purposes last year nearly $100,000.

Nearly 2,000 of our Sunday school pupils joined the church last year, an increase of 141 over the record of the previous year.

Louisiana Methodism is looking towards Homer, La., as the place for the eighth annual Conference-Wide Sunday School Conference, March 18-20. The presiding elders, at their recent meeting, voted to hold their next meeting at Homer during this Conference.

Mr. Ciem Baker, Conference Superintendent of the Little Rock Conference, who was with us at our last Annual Conference, has promised to be with us again. His record in putting over our Sunday school program in Arkansas is almost a romance.

The Elementary workers in Louisiana will be delighted to learn that Miss Marie Parham, of Nashville, who did such fine work in our Conference some months ago, will be present to direct the Elementary work.

Rev. H. L. Johns, Conference Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior work, has already planned his program for 1924, including some interesting features at the Homer Conference.

The training section of the Central office has promised a representative at this Conference, at which time our work of teacher-training and standard training schools will be planned for 1924 in our State.

The local people at Homer will put on two pageants, "The Spirit of the Gray Moss," which won first place at Lake Junaluska, and the Sunday School Day program for 1924.

One of the best features of our conference will be good music, the direction of which will be in the hands of Mr. B. D. Talley, of Bogalusa, with the co-operation of the local choir.

Our record for missionary giving in our schools is a good one, and as our Conference was one of the first to report its Missionary Centenary quota taken in full, we hope to make it one of the first to report its Missionary Centenary pledges paid in full.

WHY HORSES ARE SHOD.

By Elmer Whittaker.

The horses which run at large in the plains country go barefoot, yet they have foot-health. It is only under the artificial conditions imposed by man that the horse requires shoes. A good deal of this necessity for shoes arises from hard pavements and roads which the horse is worked on. But there is another reason. The stabled horse does not get at night a foot dew-bath. The moistrure can be supplied, and sometimes is, by packing the foot each night in wet clay, a method so wasteful of labor that it is only resorted to in exceptional cases, usually when the need is acutely manifest. To maintain healthy condition and durable texture, the horse's hoof must have moisture. This the dew-bath, enjoyed by the pastured horse throughout the night, effectively supplies. Night dew is recognized by horsemen as the best of all medicine for hoofs. Soaking in, it invigorates the whole structure. The hoof becomes much tougher, more rounded, and better spread. It is not uncommon for horses which are pastured at night through the summer season to stand up under daily work without being shod. The horse which runs constantly in pasture develops tough hoofs, which, though lacking shoes, do not chip or crack.—Exchange.

SONGS.

By Charles H. McEuen.

Many times have I heard men and women say they were brought to Christ by the influence of a song. They sometime harden their hearts against the message of the speaker, but are often softened and won through the appeal of the song as sung by a consecrated Christian singer. God has ordained singing as a means of blessing and service, and the injunctions of the Bible are, "Sing the praises of God."

The Gospel solos or songs should never be used just to fill in or to draw crowds, but should be used for the glory of God, and as a Gospel message to the world. The solo should never be used while the ushers are moving about or taking the offering, but everything should be quiet and no one allowed to enter the church until the solo is finished. Singers should never use a solo to display their vocal ability. If they do, it is for their own glory and is an abomination to God. Unless the singer has consecrated his voice to God, his singing will not reach the hearts of men and women. The soloist who obeys the injunctions of Matthew 6:33, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added uuto you," will fiud that his service is acceptable to God by seeing that service blessed to the salvation of souls.

I believe in the old-time congregational singing in revivals, aud if we reach the people, both young and old, it will have to be done in this way. We have lots of songs written to-day, but very few real Gospel songs. We need less "jazz" songs iu our churches, and more of the good old-time songs, like "Amazing Grace," "How Firm a Foundation," etc. In the revival work most of the evangelists tell me that the congregations where all the people take part in the singing are easier to preach to and to reach in sermon.

The most common, and in many ways the most useful place for the Gospel solo is in the evangelistic campaigns. People always expect it, and go prepared to give their best attention to its message; therefore, the singer should be prepared to give them the right message at the right time, in these special services. The solo will always strengthen the appeal of the hour when it embraces the thought of the sermon; therefore the singer and minister should always work in perfect harmony, the one with the other. Sometimes the solo can be used after the sermon, so the singer should be on the alert at all times to use his message in song.

If God has given you a voice, be sure you use it for his glory. Your talent is given to use, not to bury. The destiny of many souls may depend on how you use your voice.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE LOVE OF BOOKS.

Many a man owes his high position in the world to-day to the fact that in his father's library he found better company than he could find on the street or wherever those of his age congregated. Books cannot entirely take the place of companions, but it is through books, not companions, that a youth climbs, and the child that has only his companions to help him will never go very far. With a book for every mood—the old books that have fired the imagination and blazed the trails for one's dreams, and the new ones that breathe the spirit of the modern age and yet keep it within bounds—the child has a heritage that will make its future safe.

Could we give one gift to every child we should choose the love of books. And it would be a consuming love, one that would make him, like another Lincoln, go after the books he wanted. Children's Book Week will foster the love of books and help to make them available.—Editor of Good Housekeeping.

A NEW JINGLE.

"Health Training in Schools," published by the National Tuberculosis Association, has many rhymes that are recommended for use in classes. Here is one of them:

Little Bo Peep has lost her teeth,
And this is the tale about them:
Had she brushed them each day,
As the Health Chores say,
She needn't have lived without them.

A LETTER FROM MRS. PERRY.

My Dear Friend: I am handing you herewith another interesting message from Mrs. Lipscomb. She has had a wonderful trip, and it has been thonghtful of her to let us enjoy so much of it with her. I shall join with you in giving her a welcome home in Jannary.

As the year draws to a close, there is a bit of anxiety concerning the results of our year's work as recorded in the reports. These tabulated statements can make only a partial record, for they cannot tell of the hours of toil and sacrifice you have given, nor can they express the joy and the disappointment you have experienced when some cherished plan has succeeded or failed. These are being recorded, however, in another Book, and you will not fail of your reward.

Even before the close of the year's work, we must turn our thoughts to the New Year and begin to plan for it. I am reminded that January is our pledge month, and we must stress this with our Auxiliaries. The pledge cards are now ready, and it would be well if you would urge your Auxiliaries to use them at their January meeting and make plans for a thorough canvass of the whole membership, giving every member opportunity during the month of January to make her pledge for the year. There are two ways by which these cards may be secured.

1. You may order from Literature Headquarters a sufficient quantity to supply the Auxiliaries of your district, or

2. You may ask the president of each Auxiliary to make her own order.

Please let me urge that the number of cards desired be stated, and whether adnlt, young people or junior pledge cards are wanted. Many orders come saying, "Please send me a supply," and it is impossible to know whether the snpply needed is 15 or 100.

Soon I shall mail you a package of the Centenary literature being sent out. You have been so gracious to respond to this work, we are trying to take care of all of the extra mailing that we can here in the office, so we are sending the literature direct to the Anxiliaries. You will find in the package copies of the letters that have gone to the Auxiliary presidents and superintendent of publicity. It is right that you should know what goes to your Auxiliaries.

As the Christmas season approaches, I am wishing for each of you a happy and joyous Christmas. May the Peace which the Christ child came to bring be yours.

With a heart of gratitude for this privilege of association with you during these months, I am,

Most sincerely,

MRS. J. W. PERRY,
Acting Secretary.

LETTER FROM MRS. LIPSCOMB.

Shanghai, China, Oct. 28, 1923.

My Dear Sisters: My latest visitation has been in Sungkiang, where I have had the pleasure of seeing the attractive plants and efficient work of the Susan B. Wilson and the Hayes-Wilkins Bible School, and enjoying the fellowship with the missionary teachers, Misses Drake, Peacock and Hitson.

At the invitation of Miss Combs, who does evangelistic work on the Sungkiang distriet, I went for a three-day trip in her houseboat. The schedule for our trip was arranged so that I could visit some of the country day schools and missionary societies. There are thirteen soeieties in Miss Combs' district, and every one of them has contributed at least one share ($2 Mex.) to the Bennett Memorial. Some soeieties have contributed as many as seven shares.

We set forth on our trip immediately after supper, escorted by members of the missionary family, and found the boat anchored in the canal awaiting the tide. All comforts necessary for a pleasant journey had been provided. After our escorts had bidden us good-by and this novice at houseboat travel had thoroughly investigated our quarters, we settled down for the night, committing ourselves to the Keeper who never slumbers or sleeps, and to the boatmen, who sleep until the tide comes in, and then, guided by a mysterious wisdom, wake to their responsibilities. Some time during the night, as one in a dream, I knew that the anchor had been lifted and that we were moving slowly along the canal.

In the early morning we waked to find a beautiful landscape dotted with villages of thatched roofed cottages, surrounded by cotton and rice fields, bamboo groves and inevitable grave mounds. Here and there along the canal, under the straw-covered sheds, the water buffalo, with their eyes covered, plodded round and round at their task of irrigating the fields, and men, women and children worked in the fields or went, heavily laden, to market. Throughout the journey we were never out of sight of scenes and objects of intense interest, and happily for us both, Miss Combs was abundantly equal to the task imposed by her companion of explaining the novel sights.

At noon we reached the first village. Immediately the bank along the canal was lined with curious observers, who stood, sat or stooped that they might get the best view of the foreigners and the interior of the boat. Some of the Christians came to the boat to greet Miss Combs, whom they were expecting for their missionary meeting that night. The village was situated by the sea and was squalid beyond description. The people live by fishing and operating the most primitive kind of salt works from the deposits brought in by the tide.

But the gospel had fallen into good ground in this village, and six of its families are believers. A young man, a Christian, is teaching the government school in a room of the family home, and in the same room the gatherings of the little company of Christians are held. During the afternoon we went to call on Tsang Ta Ta, an earnest Christian, seventy-five years old. The alertness of her mind and the cleverness of her speech were evident even to one who could not understand her language. She gave Miss Combs a glad welcome, and expressed by every tone and gesture the liveliest interest in the stranger, asking many questions about her country, family, and age. The old lady had had her first train trip a few months ago when, attended by her little grandson, she went to Soochow to the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society. She repeatedly reviewed her experiences on this occasion, and said, as interpreted by Miss Combs: "If I hadn't known the Heavenly Father, I should not have seen these things." The visit had included some things not on the program of the missionary meeting, for her son had met her in Shanghai and shown her the sights of the city. She included all of it in the goodness of the Heavenly Father, however. On her tiny bound feet she walked with us over the village and to the seashore, and showed us with pride the plot of ground she had given for a church. "It was all I had to give the Heavenly Father," were the simple words of explanation of her gift.

In reply to my request through Miss Combs, she told the story of her conversion. Many years ago a man (now the pastor at Sungkiang) came through the village playing an accordion. She followed with the crowd and heard him preach. He came many times and the people began to believe. The truth took root in her own heart. "I did not mind giving up going to the temple and burning incense, but I was troubled about my ancestors. They might suffer if I failed to worship and offer them food," she said. At last she was so concerned about this new religion that she told her friends that, while she did not have the courage to take out the ancestral tablets with her own hands, she would go out and they might remove them. This was done, and she has been a happy Christian for many years. That night at the missionary meeting she was an interested participant in all of the proceedings.

On the afternoon of the second day we met with the women of another and larger village, which boasted of electric lights. When the meeting had been opened, the leader, who is the wife of the minister and a wonderful Christian, told the women that she had something especially interesting to show them, and going to the rear of the platform she came back bringing a small idol. She explained that this idol had been worshiped by a woman for forty years, and that the woman was present to remove the idol and confess her faith in Christ. Then an old woman, more than sixty years old, arose and with glowing face gave her testimony. The faces of the other women beamed with joy as they listened. I could not understand a word that was being said, although I knew what must be happening. I could feel the presence of the Holy Spirit and enter into the joy of these children of God over a new believer. The story was finally told me, and I am bringing home the idol as a memento of the most thrilling experience of my life.

On the third day we visited a country day school in a village where a new Centenary church has been built, and then took advantage of favorable tide and winds for our homeward journey. I am deeply grateful for the opportunity afforded me during this trip of seeing the many signs of the working of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of these people.

Lovingly yours,

BESSIE W. LIPSCOMB.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FROM ARCOLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The year starts well on Arcola circuit, Greenville District. The men's prayer meetings and ladies' prayer meetings, held separately on Tuesday nights, are an inspiration. The average attendance is about forty at each. The church prayer meetings on Wednesday nights are also well attended. The flying squadron is engaged Sunday holding services in towns within a radius of a hundred miles. They are a real consecrated lot of farmers, railroad men, merchants, and bankers. These men are members of both churches and work together like real brothers.

Merry Christmas and a happy New Year! H. D. SUYDAM, P. C.

Please let every official be present, since we have business of great importance to the church to be transacted at this quarterly conference. The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nauseless calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

Teach your child internal cleanliness

THE mother who permits constipation in her baby or older child is risking the health, even the life of her little one.

It must be remembered that an infant is helpless, unable to tell that constipation is making its life miserable. Consequently the mother must be able to recognize signs of constipation in her baby. Convulsions, night terrors, grinding the teeth in sleep, feverishness, fretfulness and such symptoms—any of these may indicate that poisons from baby's stagnant intestine are flooding the little body.

Washing Cleans Only The Skin

In older children biliousness, coated tongue, loss of appetite warn the mother that constipation is present. Constipation, unchecked in youth, may lead to serious consequences. In constipation, according to intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Only Aggravate Constipation

The mother should not resort to laxatives. A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

More Important Than Soap and Water

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in children's and general hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Let your infant or child have Nujol regularly—and see rosy cheeks, clear eyes and happiness return once more.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol yourself as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

BEST BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

There is only one novel at school life that is completely successful—"Tom Brown at Rugby."

I am constantly asked, "What are the best books for children?" The best books for children are those that were not primarily intended for children. The Bible, Shakespeare, Pilgrim's Progress, Gulliver's Travels, Robinson Crusoe, and the old-fashioned editions of the Arabian Nights. And in the vast welter of modern books that are carefully prepared for the infant mind, I think those are the best which can be enjoyed most by the mature mind—as Alice in Wonderland, the Dr. Doolittle stories, and the Memoirs of a London Doll.—William Lyon Phelps.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

GOOD LITERATURE MONTH—MAKE IT WORTH WHILE.

The appointment of any particular period for the promotion of a special cause is worthless unless it is observed. So will the designation of the month of January as "Good Literature Month" be useless unless our preachers and people—preachers especially—make use of it to extend the circulation of good literature throughout the church.

The chief thought in asking for the observance of Good Literature Month is not merely to serve the interests of the church publications themselves, but to serve the church. It has been established beyond the shadow of a doubt that the most interested, loyal, liberal, efficient church members as a rule are those who keep themselves fully informed of the work of the church through reading the church papers. Testimony to this fact is borne by all those who have had to do with the promotion of the great movements of the church. The Centenary Commission and the Christian Education authorities have stated emphatically that they could not have accomplished what they have done if it had not been for the assistance rendered by the church press; the bishops of the church have unreservedly expressed their approval of the movement to extend the circulation of these papers because of the benefit to be received by the church; every agency of the church acknowledges its obligation to the church press for invaluable help in promoting that interest; every pastor knows that his manifold tasks are made easier if his people are intelligently informed concerning the work of the church. The main idea, then, in seeking to increase the circulation of these periodicals is to promote the welfare of the church in general.

The papers themselves will, of course, be benefited by an increased circulation. Practically all of them are hard pressed financially because their receipts from subscriptions have not kept pace with the increased cost of production within recent years, and an increased circulation will materially relieve their difficulties. If the circulation of these papers were what it really ought to be, we dare say they would all be entirely self-supporting and they could make greatly needed improvements in form and appearance.

During this special Good Literature Month, subscriptions for the General Organ, the Christian Advocate (Nashville), and the Conference Organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, should be taken in every pastoral charge in our patronizing territory. In Louisiana and Mississippi there are more than 180,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The General Organ should have a large circulation in such a large constituency; and certainly the Conference Organ should have a circulation of at least 10,000. If every pastor will simply make a diligent effort during this special period to get his people to subscribe for the paper, we are sure this latter figure can be reached. In every congregation there are at least a few people who will respond to the right kind of presentation of this cause; and in many congregations a large number of subscriptions can be secured if the preacher will seriously make the effort to secure them. If the nearly 500 pastors in the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences will present this cause during the month of January, every interest of the church will be advanced. MAKE THE MONTH WORTH WHILE!

"THE LOST ART OF BREVITY."

Under the above caption, Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, editor of the Christian Herald, makes some pertinent remarks concerning long articles, long speeches, long editorials, etc. Lest some of those who need to think on these things may not see them in the Christian Herald, we reproduce his words here:

"The entire Sermon on the Mount can be read through out loud in less than twenty minutes. All the teaching of Jesus can be put into a vest pocket volume. If a modern publisher of books who had never heard of Christ were approached by one who had the Life of Christ and asked to print it on the ground that it was the story of the most wonderful person that ever lived, the publisher would refuse to take it unless it were padded out into a larger book.

"What ails our public speakers and preachers that they cannot tell their message in briefer use of words? If the greatest message ever known from the greatest teacher ever known can be compressed into a space of less than a third of an hour, how does it happen that we are unable to make public our little messages without using up vast quantities of printers' ink and hours of people's time?

"Probably the answer is found in the fact that we have lost the art of brevity. We do not know how to condense as the Gospel writers did. If they had written voluminous biographies as long and as detailed as modern biography, it is doubtful if the world would have ever read them. * * * And in order to be consistent this editorial will come to an end right here."

We are almost tempted to exhort "along these lines"—but the exhortation might be too long!

ENFORCING THE PROHIBITION LAW.

The prohibition enforcement officers may not be as faithful in the performance of their duty as they ought to be, and the alleged partial failure of the Eighteenth Amendment may, to that extent, be properly charged to them. But there are some supposedly good people all over the land who carry a heavy weight of responsibility in this same connection. A bootlegger cannot succeed in his nefarious business without customers—and it is commonly charged that some so-called "good citizens" get their supplies of liquor regularly from these violators of the law. A man who buys intoxicating liquor illegally is as much a criminal as the man who sells it, and he ought to be recognized and branded as such. We hear it said that various kinds of intoxicating drinks are served at social functions, club dinners, entertainments given in honor of distinguished visitors, etc., and that about the only comment on such occasions is a wink of the eye and the contemptuous remark that prohibition does not prohibit. We hear it said that in many cities the most reputable hotels and restaurants serve liquor on special occasions, having little fear of being reported and punished, and that they persistently violate the law for their own profit. They are all criminals that do so, deserving richly the contempt and scorn of all right-thinking people, and the severest penalties the law can inflict. These "prominent" criminals ought to be sent to jail, just as are thugs, thieves, and other violators of the law—their offense, in essence, is the same.

"IN THE BEGINNING—GOD."

In the beginning of created things we find God first and foremost—he it was who created all things. That is enough for us to know—that God was in the beginning. That we have an orderly universe we owe to the fact that God was in the beginning. Without God, life is an endless enigma and a hopeless struggle; with him, all things become plain, and peace and happiness are possible. God must be first—he will not take a second place. This year, just opening with all its hope and promise, will be a good year if we take God into account, if we place him first in our thinking, in our working, in our living. Let God be in our lives at the beginning of this year, and, if we will, he will be in it throughout the year and to the very end of it.

SHALL CIVILIZATION ADVANCE?

In a recent commendation of the National Father and Son Movement, President Coolidge uses the following words: "History points in no uncertain terms to the fact that great advances in civilization have come as the result of the awakening of the spiritual forces within the individual." If the President's interpretation of history is correct—and we believe it is—the greatest obligation resting upon good men and women to-day is that of awakening these spiritual forces. We need to awake them within ourselves as well as within others. Hemmed in as we are by material influences and forces, there is the ever-present danger that the spiritual will lose its significance and power and fall into desuetude. When that actually happens we have lost the power to advance ourselves, or to be an agent for the advance of the world. The answer to the question, "Shall civilization advance?" is to be found in the place we give to the spiritual in our lives.

REPORT OF FALL MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS

For the second successive fall meeting the College of Bishops was confronted with the death of a colleague. While the session at San Antonio the papers reported the death in Little Rock, Ark., of our esteemed colleague Bishop James Atkins. He had just finished the work at his last Conference, the Little Rock Conference. Fortunately, Bishop Du Bose had been with him to relieve him of some of the burden. Bishop Atkins was able to read the episcopal address before he was fatally stricken. A committee was appointed to prepare a memorial for our minutes.

The College met at Forest Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, South in San Antonio, Tex., and was in session from the morning of Dec. 14 until 10 o'clock the following night. The pulpits of the churches in San Antonio were occupied by the bishops on Sunday, Dec. 10, leaving the session eleven bishops present. Bishop Hendrix was kept away by illness. Bishop Murrah had expected to come, but at the last minute sent a telegram that his doctor thought so long a trip was inadvisable. Bishop Lindsey was kept away by the sickness of Mrs. Lindsey. Bishop Hughes arrived in New York too late to enable him to reach San Antonio, and Bishop Boaz was in Asia.

Our Laurel Heights people, and indeed all the Methodists in San Antonio, were most generous and attentive. Every possible facility for the quick dispatch of our work was provided. Daily at noon the ladies of Laurel Heights Church served a luncheon in honor of the bishops and such other guests as there was room to entertain.

There was a meeting at Travis Park Church on Friday night, at which four of the bishops spoke to a large and interested audience.

Arrangements had been made for a banquet Saturday night at the St. Antonio Hotel, but out of respect to Bishop Atkins and the members of his family the banquet was not held.

Asbury Statue. Dr. H. K. Carroll, Secretary of the Francis Asbury Memorial Association, came before the College and inquired whether any action could be taken to anticipate the amount asked of our church during this quadrennium for the Asbury Statue to be erected in Washington, D. C. The following action was taken: "The Publishing Agents are requested to give favorable consideration to the proposition that not more than ten thousand dollars be borrowed [illegible] Century Fund. [illegible] Board of Education [illegible] Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South wish again to assure the Commission and the church that we stand ready to cooperate in every practicable way in the completion of the great task."

[illegible]

Lay Activities. C. E. Hancock appeared and spoke in the interests of the Board of Lay Activities. The following resolution was adopted: "The College of Bishops has had before it a communication from the Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities concerning the importance of working out and putting into cooperation a great cultivation program of Christian stewardship. We have given his request our consideration. We heartily concur in the judgment that the time has come when no church needs a thorough program of intensive study of the Bible principles of Christian stewardship. Such a program will promote all the plans of Christian service, and is vital to the solution of the financial problem of our expanding church. We, therefore, approve the organization of such plan by the several Boards of the church, and we further concur in the view that such plans can be better wrought out and executed by the several Boards, in collaboration with each other, and perhaps the most effective agency for this may be the General Board of Lay Activities. We commend this matter to the Board for their consideration."

Denver Conference. From the Denver Conference a communication was received touching the territory of that Conference within the State of

[illegible] Episcopal Church, South [illegible] Conference [illegible] Board of Finance [illegible] Conference [illegible] Conference [illegible] Conference

Ainsworth called attention to forms he had prepared in connection with the work of the Committees on Examination and also in connection with Ordination. The College thanked Bishop Ainsworth for his suggestion, and requested him to bring the completed forms to the attention of the bishops at the May meeting.

Methodist Church of Australasia.—A communication from Frank Lade, Secretary of the General Conference, Methodist Church of Australasia, was read. The Secretary of this College having replied to this letter on its receipt, his letter was endorsed by the College.

Resolution on Law Enforcement.—The following resolution was adopted: "Admittedly, Federal prohibition will stand. The Eighteenth Amendment prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. The Supreme Court of the United States would necessarily declare unconstitutional all amendments to the Volstead Act proposing to legalize the manufacture or sale of intoxicating wine or beer. Traffic in intoxicants of any kind must be a lawless traffic. To satisfy appetites and coveteousness, men violate law because they hope to escape punishment. Fear of prompt and adequate punishment, while not absolute, greatly diminishes lawlessness. Industrial, social, educational, moral, and religious forces of the nation, led by its Christian citizenship, effectively illegalized the liquor traffic and secured national prohibition. The same great forces must fight with great vigor and persistence to defeat the criminal traffic. Whatever is necessary to secure effective law enforcement must be done. Adequate preparation should be made by State and nation to provide sufficient and reliable men, paid salaries commensurate with such important and dangerous work. Prosecution of offenders should be speedy, penalties by judges and juries should be adequate. Prohibition violators, however prominent, should be branded as criminals. Above all, there must be continued educational emphasis in the press, in the pulpit and in the school, upon the evil of alcoholism, and the destructive results of lawlessness upon the entire fabric of the entire national life."

General Minutes.—A communication from the Publishing Agents, Messrs. Lamar & Barton, toucing the preparation and improvement in the General Minutes, was received. The Publishing Agents were thanked for their communication, and the College expressed the view that if the Minutes could be issued somewhat earlier in the year they would be more valuable to us and to the church.

Louisville Convention of 1845.—Some years ago it was proposed by the Board of Church Extension to mark the site of the building in which the Louisville Convention of 1845 was held. Under the plan of separation adopted in 1844, this convention completed the necessary steps which led to the division of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. To Bishops McMurry and Denny, who were to act in providing this marker, Bishop Darlington was added.

Resolution of Thanks.—The following resolution of thanks was, unanimously adopted by a rising vote: "Resolved, That we appreciate very much the kindness of the Methodists of San Antonio, as expressed in the provision made for our entertainment. We desire to mention especially the homes that have been opened to us, and the courtesy of the Laurel Heights ladies in providing daily luncheons for us.

"We record our thanks to Dr. Wright, Dr. Burgin, Dr. Moore, and other preachers of the city, together with Dick O'Terrell, W. H. Chambers, and Henry Flannery, and other notable laymen, who have served us so faithfully in providing desks, stenographers and other conveniences, which have aided our comfort. We shall hold in our hearts all these dear friends."

Reports of Bishops.—Each bishop reported the state of the work of the church in the Conferences assigned to his supervision. God has blessed the church greatly in a large increase of membership. The church has made larger provision for the support of the preachers, for the general work, and for the need of the individual congregation. Measured by these items, the church was never more prosperous.

(Signed) COLLINS DENNY,
Secretary, College of Bishops.

FROM THE ORPHANAGE COMMISSIONER, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have had a revelation concerning the preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference since I entered upon the duties of Commissioner for the Orphanage. I have found the already burdened churches and pastors glad to open their pulpits and receive a money collector with apparent gladness.

The Orphans' Home has a large place in the hearts of all alike, and the response made to appeals for contributions has been ready and generous. I have visited ten charges. My association with the pastors and churches has been most pleasant. I have found splendid attendance of men at Sunday school and an intelligent planning to increase the attendance. It seems to me the New Year promises to be the best.

I am convinced that the reputation Winona has for being a pleasant place of residence for preachers is not exaggerated. People are genial and courteous, town clean and healthy, splendid schools and churches. The Sunday school is making good progress; in fact, all departments of church work seem to be in competent hands. The board of stewards impress one with their business-like methods.

The services yesterday were most impressive and refreshing. Music furnished by the choir would do credit to any city. Brother Carroll Varner is very companionable, and impresses one with his intelligent zeal and manliness. His two sermons yesterday were of an unsually high order. The morning sermon on prayer was especially helpful to Christians, and the evening sermon was distinctly evangelistic, forcefully presented. The young people were special guests at this service. I do not see how any one could fail to appreciate such refreshing services.

I will appreciate it if the pastors will write me their wishes in regard to having the interests of the Orphans' Home presented to their congregations. They may be ready for me to visit their respective charges early, or some may think it best to wait till later in the year. At any rate, I am your servant; command me, help me, bear with me, and let us all together raise the money with which to house our two hundred children, and do it this year.

Cordially,

S. A. BROWN.

ACTION OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY.

In response to numerous inquiries from various sections of the church as to the attitude of the Southern Assembly toward the character of teaching to be given on the Southern Assembly Grounds, the Commissioners adopted the following statement:

"The Southern Assembly is the child of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the only purpose of the Assembly is to aid in carrying on effectively the great work of the church. The Commissioners of the Assembly, as representatives of the church, do not favor or approve any teaching which is contrary to the doctrinal standards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Each General Board of the church which presents programs or carries on work on the Grounds (of the Southern Assembly) is alone responsible to the church for the speakers who appear on the platform and for the character of the teaching which is given by said speakers under the auspices of said Board. Any criticism, therefore, of any teaching given under the auspices of the Commissioners of the Southern Assembly, should properly be directed to them, and any criticism of any teaching given under the auspices of any General Board of the church should properly be directed to the officers of said Board."

J. R. PEPPER,
President Southern Assembly.

Lake Junaluska, N. C., Dec. 5, 1923.

BISHOP DARLINGTON ON GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY.

I am constrained to tell you that I regard this Good Literature Sunday as a long step in the right direction, and, being of that opinion, I am therefore ready to endorse the idea with all my heart and soul. Our homes are being flooded with all kinds of printed trash, from Christian Science foolishness to Russellism poison, and if something is not done to offset such influences, the result is bound to be exceedingly hurtful. This effort to call the attention of our people to our own publications should have the sympathy and active cooperation of every official of our great church, and for myself I want to give this effort my unqualified endorsement.

U. V. W. DARLINGTON.

FIGURES THAT GLOW WITH MEANING.

Figures are not always dead, cold facts. Sometimes they glow with meaning and record great achievements. Below are some statistics from J. S. Ryang, mission statistician, which show what has been accomplished during Centenary years in the Siberia Mission.

In 1921 there were 1261 adherents in the Siberia Mission; now there are 5175.

In 1921 there was 1 girls' school and boys' school, with a combined enrollment of 53; now there are 5 schools for girls and 17 for boys, with students numbering 190.

In 1921 the sum of yen 652.39 was contributed for all purposes; last year the mission raised yen 15,254.55.

When the Centenary opened in 1919, the Korea Conference had 238 organized churches; now they have 476. In other words, they have more than doubled during the Centenary period.

In 1919 there were 138 Sunday schools with 5911 pupils; after five years of stimulus from the Centenary, there are 387 Sunday schools with 13,650 pupils.

At the beginning of the Centenary, there were 6 Epworth Leagues with 221 members; the last Korea Conference reported 29 Leagues with 1143 members.

The Korea Conference of 1919 licensed 7 men to preach; the Conference of 1923 licensed 72.

The Korean Church began to contribute toward ministerial support in 1908, but during the Centenary period contributions for this purpose increased to 270 per cent in three years. Yen 5838.38 was raised for the native ministry in 1919, while the Conference of 1923 records yen 21,065.58 for this cause.

STEPS IN STEWARDSHIP.

The earth did not belong to my ancestors; they could not give it to me.

It will not belong to my children; I cannot bequeath it to them.

It does belong to God. He intrusts a share of its care to me. I am his steward.

Stewards are not required to be wealthy or brilliant, but they are required to be faithful.

Faithful stewardship is not a passive affair; it calls for thoughtful prayer, honest study and work, and joyful obedience.

The tithe is an acknowledgment that all I have belongs to God. I am his debtor. The tithe is not a freewill offering. It is a debt to God for work. To withhold it is to rob God. (Mal. iii. 8).

The Christian who prays, "Thy kingdom come," should be willing to pay as he prays. The tither will take care of the regular financial needs in kingdom building. Petition is folly if the petitioner refuses to do his part in bringing the desired event to pass.—Baptist and Reflector.

[illegible]

[illegible]

eign missionary work faced extinction. The whole Christian movement seemed doomed.

Here is the experience of one missionary: "Wo had to do without everything except actual food. We did without fires. I kept one small fire in the nursery for the small children, and the rest of the house remained cold.

"I went to my work at 9 o'clock in the morning and remained on the job until after 9 in the evening—this for three consecutive years without the smell of fire. We even cut out the kitchen range, and ate Chinese food cooked in tho Chinese quarter on a Chinese furnace burning rice straw. We did not have a new hat, a now suit, a new dress, or a new pair of shoes for two years.

"But it did not matter much that we had to live on half-rations. The serious thing was that wo faced the inexorable necessity of stopping work.

"We had to dismiss our teachers, close our schools, and send home our pupils. We had to close our orphans' homes and famine relief stations, and let the hungry go away to starve. Wo had to dismiss our doctors and nurses, close our hospitals, and let the sick go home to die. Wo had to dismiss our preachers and Bible women, close our churches, and let the multitudes perish without Christ."

Then came the Centenary—the most providentially timed movement in Christian history. Thirty-five millions pledged! Enough actual cash paid in advance to relieve the immediate distress and save the situation. The cables flashed the news to the far-flung and failing battle lines. The missionaries had fire and food and clothing again. The schools, hospitals, relief stations and churches remained open. Workers were recalled and retained.

The whole Christian movement was saved!

Then a stream of new recruits started to the various fields—three hundred strong—more than had gone in fifty years before. Churches, schools, hospitals, and institutions sprang up everywhere—a multitude that can scarcely be counted—more buildings in the foreign field than we had erected in sixty years.

Revival fires blazed everywhere—and for three full years our church received more than 400 members each day by conversion—the world's record for ingathering of souls. Our zeal pushed us out into new lands; we began the Centenary period with seven foreign fields; we will close it with twelve.

We learned consecration and stewardship, and have increased our preachers' salaries three million dollars a year. We have secured new churches and parsonages worth $47,965,394 in four years.

We revived our old-time fire on the frontiers here at home. Previously our frontier Conferences steadily lost in membership, but they have all reported gains since the Centenary came to their aid—in Arizona the membership has trebled in four years; in New Mexico, doubled. A whole new presiding elder's district, with fifteen charges, has been created from nothing in New Mexico.

A dozen of our mountain schools received substantial aid, and new schools for immigrants and unprivileged folk were founded. In our college centers and at the Universities of Missouri, Texas, Arizona, and California new churches and dormitories were erected, student pastors began their activity, and departments of Religious Education were established to give Christian training to the coming leadership of America.

Was there ever so wonderful a thing before? Can one doubt that God was in it and his Providence guided it? In the hour of the world's sorest need and darkest despair, he did not fail his people. Nor did his people fail him. And they will not fail.

STANDARDIZING FAITH.

There are some who would standardize all religious forms, beliefs, and ceremonies, but the faith and love that Christ inspires in man cannot be standardized. There are, it may be, certain forms and decorum in religion, but Christian experience is as infinite in variety and beauty of expression as the beams of light. The four writers who tell the story of Jesus' life all tell it differently. Two who most differ were his intimate associates and disciples. Two who received the story from others likewiso present a great contrast in their records of his deeds and words. Of all the souls that came to him seeking his blessings, no two came in the same way, and the effect of his words and graco acted on no two persons in the same manner. Widely apart in type of mind and experience were two brothers and two sisters who were numbered among his daily companions.

The book of Acts gives an infinite variety of Christian experience. Modern books give an unending variety of experiences in conversion. Though all must come to Christ by the same way of repentance, faith, and confession, yet to each these graces and gifts differ in degree and apprehension. Why, then, should any man or school or church seek to standardize our beliefs or experiences? As the face and outward form of no two persons are exact in appearance, so no two souls are alike in inner life, in apprehension, in faith, love, and hope.

These words are not a plea for no creeds, no forms or ceremonies, but for that liberty which is through the Holy Spirit and that grace which is given without measure. "Having," therefore, "gifts differing according to the grace that is given unto us," let us magnify these gifts and graces, knowing that they work for the perfecting of the saints unto the building up of the body in Christ, till we all attain unto the unity of tho faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."—St. Louis Advocate.

"CALL ON MY FRIEND, DEMAREE."

In one of her letters to the Board, Mrs. T. W. B. Demaree, of Clita, Japan, tells the following story of co-operation on the part of a Buddhist priest:

"A year ago last August a Buddhist priest who had traveled much in India, China and other parts of the Orient, came to call on Mr. Demaree. Among other things he expressed surprise that Christianity had become so established wherever he had gone, and upon leaving, invited us to call on him at his temple. Mr. Demaree did so, and the priest, in turn, came to services several times. Afterward he was returned to Kyoto.

"Not long ago a photographer from Osaka who had come with his family from Baffu, came to see us. With his own card he presented a card of introduction from the Buddhist priest. The photographer said he had been a Christian for many years, but that he had neglected his spiritual life and wanted help. Evidently he had sought help from the priest, and the priest knowing he was coming to Beffu, had advised him to call on 'my friend, Demaree.' This is the first time a priest has ever sent us an inquirer."

NOTICE TO THE PREACHERS, THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS, THE PRESIDENTS OF MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, THE LAY LEADERS, AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE OFFICIAL BOARDS OF SARDIS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Friends and Co-Laborers: Instead of attempting to have one preachers' meeting for the district this year, I have decided to have three group meetings of the preachers and official members of the Sardis District.

The purpose of these meetings is that we shall get additional inspiration for the great work of the Kingdom that lies before us during the coming year and adopt plans for an aggressive campaign that is worthy of persons who call themselves the sons of God.

At these meetings we shall have selected speakers (from our own district), who shall discuss the following questions: Evangelism, the Benevolences, Education and the Centenary, Woman's Missionary Work, the Layman's Relationship to Evangelism and Other Church Work, Pastoral Visiting. Following these addresses, we shall have a general discussion of the work before us in which we desire that all shall participate. We shall close these meetings with a consecration service.

It is urgently requested that every preacher do his best to get as many to attend the group meeting to which his charge is assigned as possible. The larger the number in attendance, the greater good will be accomplished.

The good people of the towns in which the group meetings are to be held have kindly agreed to furnish dinner for those in attendance. It will be greatly appreciated if each pastor will notify the brother pastor where their group meeting will be held about how many will attend from his charge.

Please let prayers be said daily for the leadership and power of the Holy Spirit in these meetings.

The Group Meetings.

Olive Branch, Jan. 16, 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.—This group includes: Mount Pleasant, Hernando, Horn Lake, Byhalia, Cockrum, Pleasant Hill, and Olive Branch.

Coldwater, Jan. 17, 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.—This group includes: Senatobia, Como, Tyro, Longtown, Crenshaw, Arkabutla, Crowder, and Coldwater.

Batesville, Jan. 18, 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.—This group includes: Courtland, Shuford, Oakland, Charleston, Sardis, Sardis circuit, and Batesville.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, P. E.

NOTICE!

We are planning, with the help of a few friends, to perfect a plan to educate daughters of ministers who have limited salaries; also to help all young men called to the ministry to secure an education. I will be glad to hear from members of the Mississippi Conference who will give their endorsement and help in this movement.

J. W. COOPER.

Brookhaven, Miss., Jan. 5, 1924.

By the census of 1920, we find there are in America the following Orientals: Chinese, 61,639; Japanese, 111,010; Koreans, 1,224; Hindus, 2,507.

What is drifting? Perhaps we have worked our way up the stream with purpose and ardor and lusty sinews. We have come to a place of exquisite beauty where all manner of loveliness are in fellowship to make a haunt of natural glory and peace, and we rest our oars, and we do not moor our boat, and so we begin to slip back and drift away. We lose the secret home of beauty, and we loiter through the dingy commonplace.—J. H. Jowett.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

UNCLE SAM'S MAIL BAG BRINGS GOOD TIDINGS DAILY.

Saturday afternoon, December 15, 1923. My, but it has been a strenuous week!

The mail has been exceedingly heavy, and much of it has required answering. However, by constant application the faithful workers in the offices of the Board of Finance have been able to take care of everything demanding attention. And now with everything else cared for, it remains for me to write the copy for the Advocate page. I do not know how I could help the cause more this week than by giving my readers a peep into our mail box.

What Is the Most Beautiful Color?

Answer: Pink. What is the most beautiful leaf? Answer: Pink leaf. What is the most agreeable report? Answer: Pink leaf report. Who is the most popular preacher with the offices of the Board of Finance? Answer: The preacher who has sent to the Board his pink leaf report.

It is pleasing to state that a splendid response is being made to the constant and insistent call for this report. During the week which closed to-day the record of receipts of this report is as follows: Monday, 41; Tuesday, 35; Wednesday, 57; Thursday, 62; Friday, 27; Saturday, 49; total for the week, 271. Fine! Come, boys, keep on saying it with pinks!

Nothing Can Stop These Good People.

I hold in my hand a letter from Rev. A. H. Andrews, our pastor at Cottondale, Ala. He states that the main church of his circuit burned two years ago without insurance, that the parsonage has lately had to be rebuilt, and that the circuit has a considerable debt staring it in the face. However, he reports that his people are very glad to do their best on the special effort for superannuate endowment, that they hope to be able to pay one fifth of the quota the first year, and that they are looking forward with the intention of paying the total quota before the end of five years. Bully for you, Brother Andrews! Such leadership is sure to win. The Board of Finance commends you heartily.

"Now just buckle right in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That cannot be done, and you'll do it."

Good News from the Holston Conference.

Dr. J. S. French, pastor of Twelfth Street Church, Bristol, Tennessee, sent in his pink leaf report this week. The minimum quota of his charge is $4,005. The report shows that the first Quarterly Conference voluntarily added $5,995 to the minimum, thus agreeing to raise for superannuate endowment in five years a total of $10,000.

"Somebody said that it couldn't be done;
But he with a chuckle replied
That 'maybe it couldn't,' but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried."

Dr. French, give me your hand, look me in the eye, and let me express the appreciation of the "forgotten man" for your splendid service in their behalf.

I Will Lift Up My Eyes Unto the Hills.

What do I behold? I see first a letter from my good friend, Rev. F. S. Pollitt, presiding elder of the Beckley District, Western Virginia Conference. His district has some hills in it—aye, mountains. He has many difficulties, and he wrote me about them. And just two days after receiving his letter came another letter in which was inclosed the pink leaf report from Beckley Station, Rev. W. H. Foglesong, pastor. The minimum quota of this charge is $2,640, but the first quarterly conference voluntarily added $1,360 to the minimum, making the total amount $4,000 to raise for superannuate endowment in five years. Brothers Pollitt and Foglesong, you make a good team. How happy your report makes us all! Keep up the good work throughout the district, and in a little while many of the difficulties will disappear. Choicest blessings be upon you for your good work!

One Whom We Delight to Honor.

Rev. A. E. Thomas, presiding elder of the Murphysboro District, Illinois Conference, is the first presiding elder to send a pink leaf report to the Board of Finance from every charge in his district. Not only has Brother Thomas succeeded in reporting his fifteen charges one hundred per cent, but in practically every one of them something has been added to the minimum quota. This district is in a difficult part of the Church, thus adding to the credit due this hard-working presiding elder. As a token of this one-hundred-per-cent response on the pink leaf report by his district the Board of Finance will send to Brother Thomas an 18x22 picture of the College of Bishops. We will also do the same for any other presiding elder who succeeds one hundred per cent in this matter.

To Keep You from Forgetting.

The Board of Finance has mailed a "forgotten man" calendar to every pastor, bishop, and presiding elder in the Church. It is designed to keep you from forgetting your opportunity for service in the special effort for superannuate endowment. It was first intended to place your name on the calendar going to you, but this was found impracticable on account of the confusion in mailing so large a number. It is suggested that you have your name placed on your calendar. Doubtless many of you are situated in places where you can have this work done, and you will find that the cost of doing it is very small. The frame of the calendar is substantial enough to last throughout the five-year period of the special effort, and the cards bearing the dates for succeeding years will be furnished free by the Board as they are needed. What does the Board want in return for this useful article? Let me see—O yes, your pink leaf report!

Where There Is a Will to Do It a Way Can Be Found.

The pink leaf report has been received from Wyatt charge, Cape Girardeau District, St. Louis Conference. This is a mission charge. Rev. J. S. Newsom is the pastor, and Rev. A. C. Johnson is the presiding elder. The pink leaf report states that the charge has decided upon a plan of its own for raising its quota. The following sentence indicating the plan selected is quoted from the report: "Due to the limited financial strength of this church at present, our quota for superannuate endowment will be taken care of with the proceeds of a cotton crop to be cultivated by the Church." This is what I call initiative. It is another proof that a way can be found to do what ought to be done. It reminds me of a story I heard about a small boy who in his Sunday school class became intensely interested in missions. He asked his father to give him some money to pay through the Sunday school for missions. His father was not enthusiastic on the subject, and as a joke he told the boy he would give him one potato. The lad thought seriously for a while and then said: "Pop, will you let me have the use of the potato for five years and all the ground I want on which to work with it?" "Pop" was suspicious, but the boy had him in a corner, and he was compelled to give his consent. The boy cut the potato in small pieces and planted them, and so on for the five years. At the end of the five years the boy sold his crop of potatoes and was able to turn over to his Sunday school a startling amount for missions.

I tell you the best angle by which to approach the special effort for superannuate endowment is the try-angle. If what you want to do cannot be done in one way, there is another way that will bring you to success. I like the man who never quits a hard job until he quits with a flag of victory in his hand.

"Somebody scoffed: 'O, you'll never do that,
At least no one ever has done it.'
But he took off his coat, and he took off hat,
And the first thing he knew he'd begun it.
With the lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
If any doubt rose, he forbid it;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it."

It Depends on the Point of View.

Shakespeare said: "On the great clock of time there is but one word—now," I say: "On the working calendar of the special effort for superannuate endowment for the next few weeks there are but three words—pink leaf report."

The Home Circle

THE LAND OF MAGIC.

There's a wonderful land where I go by myself
  Without stirring out of my chair;
I just take a book from the library shelf,
  Turn its pages, and presto! I'm there.
In that wonderful country of Yesterday,
  Where "to-morrow" is always the "now,"
Where the good ship "Adventure" is spreading her sails,
  While the sea-foam breaks white at her prow.

Where the desert sands burn in the African sun,
  Where the North shivers under the snow;
Over mountains and valleys, where strange rivers run,
  With hardy explorers I go.
I share, too, in the magic of fairies and gnomes.
  I have followed the ways of the sea;
I have studied the fish in their watery homes,
  And the bird and the ant and the bee.

I have followed the trail of the first pioneer
  Over prairie and mountain range;
I have lived with their dangers and shared in their fears
  In a country so new and so strange.
And then—just like magic—I'm high in the air
  In a glittering aeroplane!
Swooping in bird-flight now here and now there—
  Up, up, through clouds and the rain.

A ship of adventure! your sails are spread wide
  As they fill with the winds of the West;
Restless and swaying, you wait for the tide
  To bear you away on your quest.
With you I will sail for a year and a day,
  To the world's most unreachable nooks,
For there's nothing to hinder the traveler's way
  Through the wonderful Country of Books.

POOR OLD PIANO.

By Margaret Brown Elms.

"Come, Dorothy, you must practice now," said mother.

"Oh!" pouted the little girl, as she put away her dolls and seated herself at her beautiful mahogany piano. "I wish some other girl had my piano who wouldn't have to play on it so much."

Mother made no reply and soon heard Dorothy gently touching the keys and counting aloud: "One and two and three and"—over and over again, while the living-room clock steadily ticked away the moments. "The poor child is a bit tired," thought mother, as she noted the time.

Dorothy turned around and glanced at the minute hand of the clock. How slowly it went sometimes! It seemed that it had hardly moved at all since she had started to count. She listened attentively. Had it stopped? "O dear!" she sighed. "An hour's a dreadfully long time for little girls to practice when they want to play and"— Suddenly she gave the bass keys a frightful bang with her left hand as she said in a fretful tone, "I'm going to stop taking lessons, anyway."

"Bang—bang—bang!" rang the ebonies and ivories in the bass clef as Dorothy pressed both of her hands down hard, and a queer noise that sounded something like "B-wurr-r-r-r-r-r" came from the inside of the piano. "Now, you're crying," said Dorothy, striking another loud "B-wurr-r-r-r-r-r," "and—I don't care, either."

Then, the strangest thing in the world happened. The pedals on the piano changed into great big feet that were large enough to carry the shining instrument all around the room. The rack, on which "The Joyous Farmer" had stood, suddenly became the queerest-looking face imaginable, with a huge mouth, a wide, spreading nose, and two great staring eyes that looked right into Dottie's big blue ones. But, strangest of all—the bass keys began to talk, cry, sigh, and make all kinds of unimaginable sounds, while the piano walked all around the room as if it were searching for something!

Dorothy tried in vain to make out the meaning of the strange noises that were coming from the bass clef. What was that? "Doe-tee-see-mee—doe-tee-see-mee!" called the piano.

"Oh!" exclaimed Dorothy. "'Dottie, see me!' you are saying." Evidently, the poor old piano didn't know that its little mistress had been watching it all the time. She looked more carefully, however, and saw to her great surprise that great, big, round tears were falling from poor Piano's eyes.

"What's the matter?" asked the little musician in a sorrowful tone.

"Bur-wurr-r-r-r-r-r," cried the bass keys. Then, "Doe-tee-see-mee!"

"I do see you!" Dorothy quickly exclaimed. "But please stop that dreadful noise. I've got to practice, you know. Besides, there's nothing for you to cry about. If you were a little girl, though, and had to practice when you wanted to play, you'd have something to cry for, all right."

Instantly, the big feet of the piano turned in the opposite direction and walked right out of the living-room into the front hall and up to the big, paneled door. The brass knob turned, the heavy door swung back on its hinges and opened as wide as it possibly could. And what do you suppose happened? Poor old Piano quickened his steps and started right out of the door as fast as he could go, while Dorothy uttered a piercing cry: "Stop! Stop! Stop!"

Mother rushed into the room. "Stop what, dearie?"

Dorothy rubbed her eyes, looked at the piano in front of her and at the long bench on which she was lying. Then she remembered that she had lain down for a minute after having looked at the clock. She sat up immediately and exclaimed, happily: "Oh, I'm so glad it isn't true! And after this, I'm going to practice faithfully every single day and be nice about it, too."—Zion's Herald.

JINGLES, THE WHITE HOUSE CAT.

Laddie Boy, the Airedale of the Harding regime at the White House, is to be succeeded by a cat. "Jingles" is the name of the Coolidge pet. As a little half-starved kitten, says a writer in the Boston Globe, he strayed into the Coolidge home in 1919, on the very night that Mr. Coolidge learned of his election as Governor of Massachusetts. Believing the cat to be a bringer of good luck, the family adopted him and Jingles became the special pet of the Governor.

When the Coolidges went to Washington to live it was decided that Jingles should stay with Mrs. Clarence Phelon, the next-door neighbor of the Coolidges in Northampton, until they would have a permanent home in Washington.

But once again fate has been kind to Jingles. Now that President and Mrs. Coolidge are to make their home at the White House, Jingles is to share it with them, and as a result he will be, so it is claimed, the first official cat in many an administration.

The cat, when established in the White House, will have privileges accorded to few. Mrs. Phelan says she is sure he will have access to the President at all times. It was President Coolidge himself who took special pains to break him of the feline habit of chasing birds. One day, when still a kitten, he presented the President with a dead bird he had caught. The President refused to pay any attention to the offering, and from that day to this Jingles has never been known to chase a bird.

Just where Jingles hails from is a mystery. The Coolidges were never able to find out. Mrs. Coolidge always claimed he was a truly democratic cat. He had no pedigree, and it appears he didn't care whether others had one or not.

But, perhaps, the most unusual characteristic of the cat is that he possesses the same retiring quality as his master. Jingles, his admirers say, is all that a good cat should be.—Exchange.

Rev. Lee R. Sparks, of Winnsboro, La., former pastor at Franklin, La., writes as follows: "In justice to the Franklin church, I am requesting you to state that the report in our Conference Minutes crediting that church with $30 for hospital or 'Golden Cross' work, is a mistake. Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor of the Methodist church at Pineville, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on one day last week. He was returning to Pineville after a visit during the holidays to his old home—Shelby and Charlotte, N. C.—where he had not been for more than twenty years. He gave a fine account of the work of the church at Pineville.

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN WASHINGTON.

By Chas. O. Chalmers.

In reporting the recent meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association in our issue of last week we tried to give our readers some idea of the scope of the work of the Representative Church at Washington, D. C. We have often heard of this church, and many of us have had it brought to our attention during the campaign to raise money for its construction several years ago, our own Dr. George S. Sexton, who is now president of Centenary College, at Shreveport, having served two years as financial agent for the enterprise, by appointment of the General Conference. Methodism has another church in the nation's Capital which is doing a monumental work, but of which few Methodists outside of the District of Columbia or the Baltimore Conference have heard. We refer to Epworth Church, whose pastor is the Rev. John Paul Tyler. This church is situated in a northeast residence section and has a membership of 962, of which 650 have been received since April, 1919. Its growth is substantial, only 27 being lost by transfer and death last year. The church burned three years ago, and since the fire a structure that is a model of convenience for all church and Sunday school purposes has been erected. It is fireproof throughout, and is one of the best appointed and most beautiful structures we have seen. We were impressed with the inscription on the head of the Bible rest in the pulpit which is constantly before the preacher while he is delivering his message—"Sir, we would see Jesus!"

Epworth Church supports two missionaries in the foreign field, and during the past two years $12,577 was raised for missions. There are many tithers among the members of the congregation. In 1818 the pastor received $1,800 as salary for the year, without a parsonage. This year his salary is $4,000, and he has a comfortable parsonage to live in which would do credit to any church. The congregation is alive to every social need in the community—no calls go unheeded, and the people are working individually as well as in groups in the missions and charitable organizations of the city.

Dr. Tyler has done a great work at Epworth since the fire, three years ago. In 1919 the value of the property was said to be $25,000. The value of the property now is estimated at $197,417, with a debt of only $55,000, which is more than covered by pledges payable in two years. Like the Representative Church, it was stated that there was not a rich man, or even a near-rich man, in its membership. When we consider this fact, the work being done here appears marvelous.

Besides the Representative Church and Epworth Church, there is Emory Church, Rev. E. A. Lambert, pastor, which serves a growing congregation; Mount Pleasant Church, with Rev. C. K. Ray as pastor, a strong uptown church; and other smaller churches, as follows: Marvin Church, Rev. C. M. Hesser, pastor; St. Paul's Church, Rev. J. J. Ringer, pastor; and Calvary Church, Rev. W. A. Lynch, pastor. Rev. E. V. Register has served the Washington District as presiding elder three times during his ministerial career. He spent a day with the editors, and during the afternoon took a party of them around in his automobile, showing them through Epworth Church, and conducting them to other places of interest. He spoke with unstinted praise of the work of the pastors in Washington.

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR COLORED PASTORS.

By Dr. J. W. Perry.

It has been the practice for several years to have one pastor's school for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church annually, so as to cover their southern territory in a period of three years. They feel very keenly a need for two of these every year, one east and one west of the Mississippi. In these schools instruction is given in the course of study for young preachers, and in Bible study, sermon making, programs and methods of church, Sunday school and young people's work. To this program inspirational addresses are added. At this time there is not enough money available for this additional meeting. Nothing we do is more highly appreciated by the colored people or more far-reaching in equipping their pastors for efficient service.

BIRD MESSAGES.

There are many reasons, esthetic and economic, for cherishing our birds, but, best of all, they bring messages from the great All Father to his children. With their variant individualities and songs they bear to the heart good cheer, courage and inspiration.

The chattering blue jay, though he has some qualities not admirable, yet expresses to us cheerfulness, companionship, and also constancy, for he does not desert us when leaves are falling, but lingers near even through winter's cold and flashes his brilliant beauty athwart the snow, from tree to tree, keeping up meanwhile his lively conversation. As a kind of chorus come the jolly little juncos and the cheery little chickadees.

When King Winter begins to retire before the approaching Lady Spring, the bluebird arrives, bearing his message of hope. German legend makes the bluebird the symbol of happiness, but when was ever happiness without hope?

Dear, familiar robin redbreast sings of the joys of home and loved ones, and of calm content.

The charming little song sparrow is our lyric poet, and many a heart experience he portrays in "notes of linked sweetness."

Industry is the woodpecker's message, as he patiently hammers away at the tree trunk. But see! Like a brilliant flame, the scarlet tanager cleaves the air, and his word is inspiration and enthusiasm for the task!

Midsummer finds the beautiful brown thrasher "atilt like a blossom among the leaves," as he "lets his illuminated being o'er-run" in the merriest madrigal ever heard—joy, abundant joy, and praise, he sings.

And through the evening twilight, when the sunsets pale to violet and amber, the woodthrushes call lovingly to one another. And hark! Through the quiet air float those rare notes of the chewink, whose twilight hymn has a mystic and spiritual quality, impossible to describe, which seems to say to the soul—

"Onward, ever onward, toward realms unknown to mortal sense, where all our highest and best ideals shall find fulfillment, and life and love forever dwell."—Olive Hudson Causey, in Our Dumb Animals.

Our only safety lies in inculcating an attitude of respect of law.—Warren G. Harding.

AT THE CLOSE OF THE OLD, ON THE THRESHOLD OF THE NEW.

He came to my desk with a quivering lip—
The lesson was done—
"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,
"I have spoiled this one."
In place of the leaf so stained and blotted,
I gave him a new one all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled—
"Do better now, my child."

I went to the Throne with a quivering soul—
The old year was done—
"Dear Father, hast thou a new leaf for me?
I have spoiled this one."
He took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled—
"Do better now, my child."

THE PREACHER.

The minister is the proclaimer of eternal values to men caught in the tangles of ephemeral things, the snares of gossip and show, care and pride and self-absorption, greed and fear and hate and ignoble getting and spending. We go to him when we are lost, to show us the way. On stormy seas we look to him as a lighthouse. Out of the bewildering maze of unrealities we seek to have him point us to things which are real.—Will H. Hayes.

MRS. J. E. RIGGS, nee Minerva Steen, born near Grand Coteau, May 28, 1824, was married to John E. Riggs, June 15, 1842, making their home at New Iberia. She was connected with the Methodist Church at this place for nearly 80 years, was always faithful in attendance upon its services and interested in all the progress of the church until God took her home on Dec. 1, 1923, at Lafayette, La. Mrs. Riggs had been a widow 20 years. Most of this time was spent in a sanitarium or under the care of a trained nurse, becoming an invalid from a fall, not being able to walk for years; yet, with all her suffering she was gentle and sweet of disposition, retaining her faculties to a remarkable degree until the end of life. She would have been 100 years old on May 28, 1924, had she lived. There survive her five daughters, two sons, twenty-five grandchildren, twenty-eight great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren. She was buried at New Iberia, La., Dec. 2, 1923, with services at the Methodist church, Revs. Leon I. McCain, Martin Hebert, and H. N. Harrison officiating. Her nephew,

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of respect adopted by the quarterly conference of the Jena and Jonesville charge, M. E. Church, South:

Whereas, W. D. Boddie was called by death from his earthly field of labor; and,

Whereas, Brother Boddie was a faithful and loyal member of the M. E. Church, South, having faithfully filled the office of steward in his church and served on various committes in promoting the work of the church; and,

Whereas, Brother Boddie was a regular attendant of the church and Sunday school, took an active part in and greatly enjoyed these services; and,

Whereas, Brother Boddie always manifested a special interest in looking after and caring for the churchhouse and grounds,

Therefore, be it resolved by the quarterly conference, That we have lost one whose name stood for service; that we cherish the memory of one who loved a life of service, and extend to his family our sympathy, rejoicing with them in the example of a godly husband and father.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. W. M. Baker, Mrs. W. W. Adams, T. J. Kendrick, Committee on Resolutions.

FROM THE BAYOU BLUE CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: I want to thank my dear friends from various churches for the toys they have sent to the French children. I thought it would be a wise thing to put a letter in the Advocate, thanking those efficient Christians for their grace of giving.

My friends, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," said our Lord. And it is true; I am sure those efficient Christians don't realize what a great day of rejoicing it was for those children.

I held several Christmas trees in various places. I am going to give the result in the following statement:

I held one at Bayou Blue church the Sunday before Christmas, which, I am glad to state, was an ideal and interesting one. The good women of that church helped me to erect the tree. We had a full church of people who were eager to hear the program. Miss Odette Martin had charge of the program. We gave about seventy-five presents. I led the prayer, and R. E. Martin closed the program by singing "America." Everybody seemed to be satisfied.

I held another one in the little town of Labadie, in a home where I had already been forbidden to preach. But after spending much time in prayer for that man, we decided to ask him to have a Christmas tree, and he agreed to have one. We invited the children of that community, who are all Roman Catholics. I am glad to state there were about sixty children, and a great many grown persons who had never heard the gospel before; and they were all very greatly pleased. They made me sing a few songs; and, best of all, this same man to whom the house belongs testified that all I said was correct—that he had forbidden me to preach in his house in vain.

I held another one at Eagle Island, with the help of the Missionary Society, Mrs. White, Miss Hooper, and my wife. We had an interesting one there. We erected the Christmas tree in the yard, for there was no place in the house for all the people. We gave about seventy-five presents at that place. We had about two hundred persons present, and they were all satisfied to be there.

We held another one at Brulee Labadie, which was a very good one. We had some children there who never used to come to our church. We gave them each a present, and they were all satisfied. We were about sixty present.

I thank all those efficient Christians who gave those toys; I am sure the grace of our Lord is with them, and will remain.

I pray we all may have the desire to work for the advancement and extending of God's Kingdom.

The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A very spirited but friendly contest in the Epworth League of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., closed one week ago with the Golds only thirty-five points in the lead.

The two splendid young people who led the divisions kept the interest at all times at white heat, and while one bunch was giving an entertainment at the United States Hospital another would be putting on a program in the jail or carrying cheer to some of the shut-ins, for the contest did not aim alone to increase the membership, but to build up the League in efficiency and to increase the interest of its members in all lines of church activities.

It is impossible to estimate all that has been accomplished during this contest of only a few months' duration. According to the agreement, the losers entertained. They engaged the services of some of the mothers, who prepared the beautiful banquet which was served by the nurses. Misses Mary Jane Cailes, Orile Peabody and Kate Whitman, and tendered the Golds last week on Thursday night. It was an event which will be written into the annals of the Epworth League as one of its greatest accomplishments.

Mr. Claud Copenhaver very ably filled the place of toastmaster, due to the fact that he was captain of the losing side. He gave an amusing and detailed history of this race for supremacy and at the conclusion of his interesting talk surprised the captain of the Golds, Miss Ruth Luneau, by placing on her brow a crown of gold and extending to her the golden scepter.

Miss Luneau was indeed a most beautiful queen and none were surprised when later she received the most votes for the handsomest young woman present. And so to her, a box of candy was presented, which later she carried to the pastor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, who was detained at home on account of sickness.

The program was excellent—a program that would have done credit to any of the older organizations of the church. Mrs. O. H. Melton and Mrs. A. F. Lanier, each in her own gracious way, lent their talents and entertained the young people with several numbers, responding to encores very willingly.

Mr. H. P. Miller was the speaker of the evening. He talked to the young folks along the lines of Epworth League work, complimenting them upon their splendid choice of a president, Charles White, who won for his side in the late contest more than twice as many credits as any other member. He commended them for the splendid work they are doing in carrying cheer to the sick, the shut-ins and the prisoners and urged them on to still better training for more and more active work for the League in the church and in the community. He assured them that they were "building better than they knew," and reminded them that "we are the open Bible to our fellow-citizens."

The Golds are loud in their praise of the splendid manner in which they were entertained and look forward to the day when they may lead the "Whites" another "merry chase."

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT.

The Lake Charles League without a doubt sustained a great loss when they lost their faithful League worker, Miss Audrey Reed, but New Orleans feel it has gained quite a bit by her coming here. Miss Reed is in training at the Presbyterian Hospital. I am sure all her friends from the Mansfield Assembly will wish her well in her new undertaking, and I am sure Miss Reed would be glad to hear from them. New Orleans bids you welcome, Audrey, and trusts you will soon grow to love it here as much as you do Lake Charles, which we know is quite a bit.

MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Mississippi Industrial and Training School Chapter.

One of the most flourishing Epworth League chapters in our Conference is that of the Mississippi Industrial and Training School at Columbia. From its organization it has shown that steady growth which is indicative of permanency. It was organized on the second Sunday in February, 1921, under the leadership of Rev. L. L. Roberts, pastor of the church in Columbia. There were fourteen enrolled at the initial meeting. Now they have an enrollment of over one hundred. The League at Columbia assumed the financial responsibility for the first year, and was more than generous, for, in addition to the necessary literature, a piano was provided. Five delegates were sent to the Conference at Hattiesburg.

At the beginning of the second year the chapter was able to take charge of its own finances, and in addition contributed $25 to the African Special. A Junior League was organized during the year, and four delegates were sent to the Assembly at Brookhaven.

The third year has been marked by unusual enthusiasm and interest. An Intermediate chapter has been organized, and all departments are doing fine work. Nine delegates went to the second Assembly at Brookhaven, and came back full of zeal and energy, which soon spread to the entire chapter. Those who were at the Assembly will remember this splendid delegation.

The first president of the Mississippi Industrial and Training School chapter was Charles B. Stevens, from Hattiesburg. During his stay at the School he was a loyal and ardent member. He is now a freshman in the Agricultural and Mechanical College, and is a member of the college band.

The president for the second year was Mary Ford, who is a member of the life service band of the Seashore District, having pledged herself for foreign service at the 1922 Assembly.

A boy of sterling worth and character was drawn for the third president. James Walker's influence has held the boys steady to the League as few others could, and has led more than one into active church membership.

The value of the work of the Epworth League to this group of young people cannot be estimated, and those who have had charge of this work in the Mississippi Industrial and Training School deserve a great deal of credit for the great work the Epworth League has accomplished. We will not soon forget Miss Langley and her enthusiastic delegations at our Conference and Assemblies during the past three years. We wish them great success in their endeavor.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday school superintendents who will take the pains to observe Jan. 20 as Leadership Training Day will do something to help establish the Kingdom of God. The superintendents who ignore the opportunity, what will they do that is worth more?

The Bible needs no criticism, it simply needs to be taught. If the critics of the church should devote the same time in carrying out the plans of the church, these good men would do much to banish strange doctrines. The Bible critic and the church critic are in the same class, and the church critic is at the foot of the class.

How does this strike you as the aim of the Sunday School? "The aim of this Program of Work is to offer a plan by which the Sunday school may lead each pupil to a knowledge of God's will and an acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Savior and Lord, and to develop a Christian character that is expressed through worship, right living and efficient service." All of the Program of Work that follows this aim is to help attain the aim. If you know of a better aim, give it to the Sunday school; if you have worked out a more comprehensive program, let the Sunday school have it. Every school has some kind of aim and is following some sort of program. How do your aim and your program compare with the ones offered by your Sunday school leaders? Note the difference between the schools that are attempting to follow the plans offered by the General Sunday School Board and the schools that are following the plans they have inherited.

Study every plan the church is using to evangelize the world, and ask yourself the question—what is the most vital, far-reaching, and important thing the church is doing to fulfill her mission? Call it any name you please, choose the process you will—after all has been said, the one supreme task of the church is to train leaders to nurture childhood according to the will of Jesus Christ. Jesus trained twelve men for three years and said to them, "Go teach." The purpose of our leading Sunday school workers in preparing courses of study and in establishing training schools in every part of the church is to fulfill the terms of the Great Commission in a more effective way than has been done in the past. The Kingdom of God will come as rapidly as we prepare men and women to give childhood the benefits of Christ's atoning blood.

The revival method of evangelism has had the chief place in the minds of the leaders of the church in the past and will continue to have a large place as long as the great masses of adults remain unsaved. It is a triumph of grace to raise the dead; but is it not a greater triumph of grace to prevent death? The teaching process of evangelism is not antagonistic to the revival method, but should precede and follow the revival method, supplementing each other and making both more effective. Those who use the teaching method of evangelism recognize the child as God's child, by virtue of Christ's shed blood. They believe the child has a religious nature at birth and this religious nature must be given the proper nurture, to the end that it may grow in grace. This does not do away with the child's acceptance of Christ as a personal Savior, but aids him to do so intelligently and fully. Is the work of evangelism through teaching complete when the child thus accepts Christ as Savior and Lord? Nay, verily. The soul that has enthroned Christ as Savior and Lord needs to be evangelized through all the years that are to come, even down to old age. The teacher who evangelizes through the long and tedious process of teaching must pay as great a price as the revivalist who wins men back to God.

We, Brother E. S. Lewis and I, held three services at First Church, and Brother Longgrear and I held two services at Central, Columbus, the last Sunday of the old year. The purpose of this intense work was to organize a training school for those two churches. Lewis and Longgrear are doing team-work in the city on the Tombigbee. The time set for the school, Feb. 11-16. Three courses will be offered.

The Sunday schools of the Conference have been resting a long time on their Centenary payments. Resting is not as bad as repudiating. Let us pay as well as we promised. Here is the place where leadership, consecrated, loyal, intelligent leadership, is worth infinitely more than money. Do you want to know how much your school owes? Do you need any help in giving missionary instruction? Do you need mottoes, maps, an attractive "special"? If you do, write me.

FROM FLORA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I feel that you would appreciate a little information from this church, inasmuch as we think we are very much on the map this year with our new pastor, H. A. Wood.

Brother Wood came to us on Dec. 3, 1923, and reported 26 new members to the first quarterly conference, which was held here by Brother Burton last Sunday evening at 3:30 o'clock. During this period there was only one sunshine day, if I remember right.

Our Sunday school has taken new life, and the Epworth League is making good headway, and there is no question but that we shall have a wonderful year on this charge under the leadership of our pastor.

One of the most remarkable things that have happened so far is that there were fifty on hand at the second prayer meeting after Brother Wood reached Flora, which, I believe, is the biggest prayer meeting that I have ever attended at this church since I have been located here, approximately six years. We expect to have 100 at our prayer meetings just as soon as it quits raining, as we have the goods that will bring them out.

Among other things that we are contemplating accomplishing this year is to make it our business to see that the subscriptions for the Advocate are substantially increased.

Wishing you a wonderful year with your paper, which I have been enjoying for quite a number of years.

B. C. HEIDELBERG.

FROM GEORGETOWN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We reached our new work, Georgetown, Nov. 27, and found the kitchen table just loaded with good things to eat, and they are still coming in. We felt that our lines had fallen to us in pleasant places. Well, we thought that was all, but on Christmas Eve Santa came, bringing all kinds of good things to eat. My! I soon got on shouting ground.

We certainly do appreciate the kindness of the good people here, and we hope so to live that they will not regret the hospitality shown us. I think I can see signs of a revival; God grant that it may he so.

The weather conditions have been such that the crowds have not been large, but we are expecting a great year with the Lord's help.

Yours for the lost,

W. W. NELSON.

"All good Methodists should be greatly interested in the affairs of the church. The only possible way to be interested is to know as much as possible about the church. The church organs carry this information. Thus they furnish the channel through which our interest in our own church may be created and increased."—Bishop H. A. Boaz.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

HUCHOW HOSPITAL, 1923.

By Oscar G. Nelson.

The hospital is graud. It has exceeded our fondest hopes—hopes for beauty in external appearance and for completeness in its interior make-up. We have planted here a modern hospital that would do credit to most cities of the United States. It is of fireproof construction, concrete, steel and tile—no wood being used in its make-up. This is the only type of building that withstood the great earthquake in Japan, which gives us great satisfaction as we look at its four stories. We only have slight tremors here, but it is nice to know that we have the safest type of building in case a violent quake happens this way.

The land which the gentry gave us for our hospital compound adjoins the city wall and from the second story of the new building the surrounding country presents some beautiful scenery to the south and west, the compound being located in the southwest corner of the city. To the south are two lakes, one containing a tiny island just large enough for a dainty pagoda; the other, long and narrow, serves as foreground for a group of hills which skirt its southern shore. The highest of these hills is crowned with a Buddhist temple, the outstanding feature of which is another pagoda which dominates the country for miles and miles. To the west, the moat which surrounds the city can be seen for some distance parelleling the wall and finally disappearing beneath a beautifully proportioned high-arched bridge. Beyond this moat or canal, the canals cross and recross the level rice fields which are dotted with hundreds of little villages. As you know, this is the great fertile plain of China, the center of the silk industry, and in the evenings smoke from thousands of country homes and villages mingles with the mist from canals and rice fields to produce the most gorgeous sunsets and twilights I have ever seen. We are indeed fortunate in the location of the hospital. One of the main thoroughfares, South Street, passes our doors. Just outside the South Gate of the city, between the wall and the Pagoda Lake, is one of the largest suburbs of the city. Within the city we are only a few minutes from the busiest part of the commercial district. It is strategically located from another standpoint, too, as it opens up a section of the city where we haven't a church and therefore we should be a great evangelizing agent. We hope to start a new church as soon as we move from our present cramped quarters.

Now for the hard luck story. Our funds are insufficient and we have had to stop construction just short of getting into the building. It is all ready for us except for putting down the finishing coat of cement on the floors. Also we have not been able to buy plumbing fixtures, but we have put in all the pipes so that we can buy one fixture at a time as we get the money without breaking up our walls and floors to do it. We haven't money for our X-Ray plant, or telephones, but the wires are all in place and when this equipment can be bought, we will only have to attach a wire to a plug and turn on the current. We have already bought an engine and generator—used it to turn over the concrete mixer and crush our rock for the concrete, and now we have it to make our light for the future years.

We are short of money because a friend at home suffered a financial set-back and could not make good on a special gift—but we are praying for some other friend to take his place—and our God is a prayer-answering God. So we can cheerfully face the near future believing that we shall soon get into the fine building. We have tried to help answer our own prayers: The Baptist Woman's School needed a new building, so we utilized our supervising staff and buying organization to do the job for them, thereby saving them a large profit which a contractor would have gotten, and at the same time earned a commission for our new building. As that job was nearing completion, our own Virginia School folks got word that money was available for their new building and we went to work to put that over for them. That building will soon be finished and another commission helps out the hospital building fund. But it has certainly been a lot of extra work on Dr. Manget, who has given his undivided time to the hospital job, and been the organizing genius behind these others. He has taken the place of a contractor and as a result we are getting our building about twenty to thirty per cent cheaper than we could otherwise have done.

I have been responsible for the handling of the monies on these jobs, which together have amounted to nearly a quarter of a million dollars, Mexican. It has been a mean job, as it has involved purchases in various currencies, pounds sterling, gold dollars, Mexican dollars and that elusive value without currency called a tael. All this has involved quite a formidable set of books and midnight oil has been freely burned to keep these accounts straight, for I have had to keep up my surgical service in the hospital at the same time.

But now we will soon be in our new home because somewhere, somehow God will put it into the heart of some friend to make it possible for us to move. It will be a happy day for us all. I am wondering who will be gladdened by our patients' rejoicing and our own thanksgiving.

Through all this trying period my health has been good, but Dr. Manget is looking mighty tired. His has been the heaviest burden and now the money matters have added to his worries. May it be very soon that this cloud will be lifted!

In closing, let me ask for the prayers of all of you for this work which is your work, and the work of Him whom we call Lord and Master. May His Spirit strengthen you in your purpose to carry the Gospel to all the nations of this world.

A VISIT TO BRAZIL.

By Mary E. Decherd.

The people of Brazil delighted me. I met many of our Brazilian Christians. I was in Bennett College and was present at the meeting of the English Club, composed of the girls of high school age who could talk to us in English. Beautiful, charming girls they were, a credit to any faculty. We had a good time playing games and having contests. I lived with these girls four days and saw how well they are being fitted to help carry their needy fellow-countrymen the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ through their lives as well as by means of their well developed minds. And so it was in Bello Horizonte, in Pirachicaba, in Santa Maria, in Porto Alegre, in Juiz de Fora, in Passo Fundo—wherever I went. The festas in Passo Fundo and Cruz Alta brought us in contact with many fine Brazilians. The native people themselves planned our receptions; they met us at the trains; made speeches over us which would have embarrassed us had we understood Portuguese; served us delicious coces, embroidered with our initials; sent delegations to thank us for our students' assistance in their work. How could they think of so many nice things to do for strangers from another land? Evidently, they did not so regard us.

In many places earnest native workers came to see us to tell us how they needed schools, churches, more workers, etc. We heard them all patiently through the interpreters. And what could I say in reply? Nothing, except that I longed to help them, that our own work in Passo Fundo needed all the money the U. of T. students could raise, but that I would tell people here of the many, many openings in their fair land.

The Brazilians are ambitious, appreciative, charming—but so largely without opporunity at all to improve themselves. They are without resources, without education. They look to us to supply their need. I believe we would do it if we really understood. A friend said that they thought I had "schools in my pocket." Well, I have not, but perhaps some one who reads these lines has in his or her pocket the funds for such a school.

Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not. 1 John 3:6.

Have you the regular habit of meeting him each morning in real communion, as he speaks to you through his Word and you speak to him in prayer? If not, this alone is a sufficient cause of all your failure. Henceforth, this one thing I do: I will give to God the first place in each day and in all my life. I will begin each day in communion with him, and then by that constant faith-touch which reckons upon his mighty, restful presence, even when I am occupied with my daily task, I will trust him to keep what I have committed unto him, for "whosoever abideth in him sinneth not."—G. Sherwood Eddy.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.
Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You can start by investing $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started with less and made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. NOW is the psychological time to make big money, as fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day, Isabelle Inez, 328 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Adv.

FROM RAYVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have been royally received here by the good people of Rayville, and the future seems bright for a prosperous year in the Master's cause.

We have a splendid board of stewards, who look well after the pastor's salary, and pay it monthly.

Sunday school seems to be growing, and the Senior Epworth League is wide-awake and very active.

The Woman's Missionary Society is very active in its work, doing many nice things for the pastor and his family.

We are beginning to think and talk of a better equipment in a church way, which we hope will result in a new building in the future at some not far distant date.

Yours in Christ.

Mrs. Maggie Cooper Picket, our very efficient and much appreciated secretary, has resigned. After her marriage, she moved out of our Conference, and felt that she could no longer serve the Conference efficiently, and handed our president her resignation.

Mr. Hawkins (with many doubts, much fear and trembling) has appointed J. H. Weems, 308 Second Avenue, Hattiesburg, to fill the unexpired term.

JUNIOR AND INTERMEDIATE LEAGUE WEEK.

The week of Feb. 3-10 has been set aside as Junior and Intermediate League Week. This is one of the greatest weeks in our League calendar, a time when in churches where there are several chapters, these will draw closer together and when in churches where only one League exists a desire for others may be instilled in the hearts of the members of the congregation.

The Junior and Intermediate superintendents are to a large extent dependent upon the Councils of the Senior Leagues for their co-operation. The plan includes a union meeting on Sunday evening, Feb. 3, a special program given by the Juniors and Intermediates for the board of stewards, a Valentine banquet given by the Seniors, open meetings of Junior and Intermediate Leagues. The week may be one brimming over with gladness and permeated by a spirit of prayer. Suggestions are given in greater detail than in any previous year in the Junior and Intermediate Epworthians, and more briefly in the Epworth Era for February. The Central Office will be delighted to help you in making plans. We are eager to hear from you about them.

IDA MALLARY COBB,
Junior League Secretary.

Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God. II Corinthians 3:5.

EARNEST EFFORT AND HEARTY CO-OPERATION WILL PRODUCE RESULTS

FROM WATER VALLEY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I find Water Valley a great place. Everything starts off with high spirit and promise of a great year. Our reception was most cordial and gratifying. The good people have left nothing undone or said to show genuine kindness and appreciation. Real Christian thoughtfulness and attention have been abundant ever since we arrived, strangers in their midst. We now feel as if we had known them for years.

They have spent $1,200 or $1,500 on the parsonage since we came. The whole house has been re-covered with asphalt shingles, repainted, and decaying parts supplied with new wood, a new range installed, much new furniture, porches, chairs, etc. In fact, it is as a new house, comfortable, tidy and pleasing to the eye. My predecessor, Rev. L. P. Wasson, who was demoted to the presiding eldership by Bishop Ainsworth, had given all this work a good start by urging it as an absolute necessity.

He did a great work here during his quadrennium as pastor. They love him. He left his imprint upon every strata and cause of a higher life, a fuller Christian citizenship and a riper and more rational interpretation of the gospel as the alone need and strength of all men.

DICKS' MUL-EN-OL

Will not only impart a delightful fragrance to the breath, but will lessen the inroads of pyorrhea and preserve the teeth and gums. A few drops on the tooth brush or a teaspoonful in a half cup of water used as a mouth wash.

Our prayer meetings range in attendance around fifty and above that number. These people do not seem to feel that the mid-week service is a defunct, useless institution to be taboo. Merchants, bankers, wholesalers, retailers, shop men, judges, toilers, busy housekeepers, elderly matrons, children, young men and women come. They seem to find pleasure and profit as well as a growing mind and soul in the hour so spent. It is truly refreshing and encouraging to find such great numbers coming that the service has to be held in the large auditorium of the main building.

The Sunday school is a great institution. Vast throngs crowd into it every Sunday and all the classes. There are two teachers for every class; and what a fine thing it is! If one should be unable to attend, there is provision for carrying on the work without a jar. The Sunday school is well and effectively organized. In fact, it is one the historic Sunday schools of the Conference, whose lineage is well known.

Last Sunday we celebrated in a telling way the birth of the world's Savior with a "white Christmas." This was delegated to Mrs. Afton Smith's class, with privilege to commandeer any one she might deem helpful in rendering the program effective. It was a brilliant and impressive affair. There were the "Inn" and the "Manger" in the center of the stage, with the Madonna sitting by, gazing into the face of the Infant Saviour. She was clad in true Oriental style, or immaculate white, while the brilliant star swung from above over the manger with brilliant tapers gracefully leading to the place where the child lay. The rustic shepherds, garbed in familiar apparel of those far-away times, emerged from far quarters and came with earnest faces and wistful manner and gathered with wonder and admiration about the manger to behold him who was born King. Then there were approaching from another quarter the Wise Men with pilgrim's staff in hand, clad in autumn-colored robes and flowing garments, laden with the evidences of a long journey, and dust-covered sandals, their faces showing awe and deep anxiety and soul-quest. While kneeling about the manger they opened their earthern urns, bearing gold, frankincense and myrrh, which they gladly offered with reverent spirit and worshipful manner. It was a wonderful lesson in action. Toward the end of the most stirring and impressive program, all the people in the house filed by the manger and deposited their gifts to the Saviour. These gifts amounted to $400. Not one, I think, in all the house failed to bring a gift, most of it in money. There were tears in many eyes as the realistic scenes were being enacted and they were bestowing their gifts, glad in the souls redeemed and made conscious of the mightiest gift of God to men. It was one of the greatest revival scenes I ever witnessed. Why not? Are there no thoughts that plow and stir and fertilize the deepest centers of being as we look upon such things?

I am most pleasantly domiciled here, with Brother Raper at Main Street Church, and Brother J. W. Dorman, the young superannuate, living hard by me. Brother Dorman is one of those choice, rare men of clear judgment, sound mind, warm heart and exalted character. He's a former pastor and greatly beloved by all this flock and town. It's a rich privilege to have him near by. Brother Raper has captured his folks, and they say he's a real preacher of the Word.

Blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in Me. Matthew 11:6.

When we get to heaven, opportunities, so far as we can judge, will be gone forever of gladdening the heart of our Redeemer by trusting him when all seems wrong. Let us treasure them now. They are part of life's deepest wealth.—Charles G. Moore.

SOME BIG ISSUES.

The church is perhaps always facing big issues, either supposedly or really; but at this time we shall call attention to a few of these issues about which it seems to us there can be no difference of opinion.

The Centenary.

Just at this time we are in the midst of a campaign to pay out the pledges made to the Centenary Movement. Using round numbers throughout, we are face to face with the fact that of a total pledge of $36,000,000, the church thus far has paid only $19,000,000 for the support, extension, and maintenance of its missionary operations at home and abroad—and we are at the close of the five-year period allotted to the prosecution of this great undertaking. The Centenary Askings were based upon a quota of $25,000,000, with the full payment of which all the Centenary program could be carried out. In spite of the fact that this quota was so largely over-subscribed, the quota itself has not yet been paid, and many of our missionary operations are, therefore, in the midst of a most critical situation.

The Centenary Commission, under the full authority granted to it by the church, is at this time putting forth every effort to collect these unpaid pledges. By the full consent and hearty cooperation of all agencies representing other interests of the church, the months of December and January were set apart for completing the Centenary task. Every pastor in the church is expected to lead his people in a vigorous effort to collect these unpaid pledges, and every Centenary subscriber who has not met his obligations is expected to make definite settlement—either by full payment at this time or by definite assurance as to the future payment of his pledge.

This intensive effort to collect these pledges cannot go on forever, and the elaborate machinery of the Centenary Commission cannot be maintained always. The work must be completed, so that the attention and strength of the church may be given to other enterprises, and now is the time to complete it—its completion at this time is one of the big issues before us.

The greatness of this undertaking and the importance of completing it are forcefully expressed in the following resolutions adopted by the gathering of preachers and laymen representing the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences at Jackson, Miss., last week:

"We, your Committee on Resolutions, beg leave to report that in our opinion the Centenary campaign was the most daring and courageous effort ever undertaken by any denomination in the history of the Christian church. We feel that the development of a new aggressiveness and the collection of $19,000,000 in this effort are of themselves a splendid achievement that is worthy of our church.

"But our achievements must not cause us to lose sight of the many enterprises which have been halted by our delay to pay some of these pledges. In the culminating days of this splendid effort we have before us an unfinished task. Half-finished church and college buildings and hospitals in every land of our missionary effort wait upon the consecration and the willingness of our great church. In many cases these uncompleted structures must be lost, and with them the very hope which they symbolize, unless these individual pledges shall be speedily redeemed.

"A study of our situation reveals the fact that practically one-half of the unpaid pledges were made by churches subscribing $10,000 or more—the very group of churches which we represent. We, therefore, call upon every church to put on the cultural program sent down to us through the bishops and the Commission made responsible for this very vital task. And we urge that no church shall fail to make the personal canvass of subscribers January 20 to February 1, as provided in the pay-out plan. Let us do all in the spirit of faith and prayer, and with no less a feeling of responsibility for collecting these pledges than for paying our own, assured that in no other way can the Centenary task be completed."

Signed: W. L. Duren, J. Loyd Decell, C. M. Reeves, C. M. Roberts, W. R. Lott, Committee.

The Christian Education Movement.

The magnitude of the Centenary program must not be allowed to obscure the vital cause of Christian education. Our educational institutions lie at the very foundation of all our efforts to strengthen the church, uplift humanity, and Christianize the world. Not only are we dependent upon these institutions for the development of a competent leadership for our Christian forces, but we are also dependent upon them for the development and inspiration of these forces themselves. Unchristian and non-Christian education is a menace to civilization; Christian education is the hope of the race.

The importance of this issue of Christian education in Louisiana and Mississippi is accentuated by the fact that some of our own institutions are facing the alternatives of increasing their endowment and equipment, or of being deprived of their classification as A-grade schools. The seriousness of this situation cannot be overestimated. It is not a theory, but a fact that confronts us. We must meet our obligations to these schools, and meet them now, or suffer an almost irretrievable loss. Our pledges to the Christian Education Movement ought to be paid at any sacrifice, and, in addition to those pledges, large additional amounts must be secured for the proper support of this fundamental interest of the church. We are dealing with no greater issue at this time.

Superannuate Endowment.

"Say it with pinks," is the slogan that is now being heard throughout the church, the General Board of Finance being in the midst of launching the campaign to raise an endowment sufficient to provide adequately for the needs of our superannuate preachers, their widows and orphans. Questions concerning this long-delayed but worthy cause are now incorporated in the minute business of the quarterly conference, and there is no way of evading the issue or of escaping the responsibility for the proper presentation of this special effort. The first quarterly conference of every pastoral charge is expected to make a report on the "pink slip" of what it proposes to do in this matter, and the consummation of an end long hoped for hangs on this action. It is inconceivable that any pastor or any congregation should pass lightly by this cause that has waited so long for adequate attention and proper presentation.

We have enumerated above three specific tasks that await accomplishment this year—two of them the immediate work of the church. While they may seem to have largely to do with money—and they have—they are connected vitally with all those spiritual impulses that grow out of regenerated human nature; and the accomplishment of these tasks will, we dare say, give tremendous impetus to and help maintain what is always and everywhere the great mission of the church—the spiritual blessing of mankind. It is a safe prophecy that in every church that will meet its Centenary obligations, pay its Christian education pledges, and give liberally of its substance to the care of the worn-out servants of the church there will come a spirit of revival that will immeasurably bless those who already profess to be followers of Christ, and that will sweep many others into a gracious experience of saving grace. The issues are before us—let us meet them courageously and accomplish completely all the tasks involved in them.

THE PROSPERITY OF THE CHURCH.

At the close of the report of the Fall Meeting of the College of Bishops, furnished the church press by the Secretary, Bishop Collins Denny, we find the following words: "Each bishop reported the state of the work of the church in the Conferences assigned to his supervision. God has blessed the church greatly in a large increase of membership. The church has made larger pro-

it, as Philip the evangelist had done to the Samaritans, to the Ethiopian eunuch, and to all the towns from Azotus to Cesarea. That was the kind of work Paul meant when he said to Timothy, "Do the work of an evangelist." A pastor is not an evangelist, nor can he "go into the evangelistic work," on his own accord, and make a success of it. God calls men to their places in the church. There is not an office in the church as important to the people as that of an humble, faithful, godly pastor. Strengthening weak churches is included in the work of an evangelist. Primarily the work of an evangelist meant to preach the gospel in the fields of the unsaved and unorganized. There are many places where we have no church that could be easily organized into strong Methodist churches and Sunday schools. It's nice to preach in a fine church, live in a good parsonage and receive an adequate salary. These things are the results of developing places that in time past were unorganized. Let's evangelize the unsaved multitudes. There is not a class of men in the church better prepared to do this work than intelligent, consecrated evangelists. The main hindrance is lack of faith in God, and will-power. The God of Elijah still lives, and is just the same to-day as when he changed Elijah's appointment from Cherith, where he was fed by the ravens, to Zarephath, to be supported by a poor widow woman.

Some people would be surprised if their prayers should be answered, like a man whom the writer once saw blush on receiving what he desired. He was a farmer and became very much distressed about his crop burning up during a drought. It was suggested to him that the Lord would give rain in answer to prayer. He said, "If you will pray and get rain, I will increase my subscription to the pastor." His proposition was accepted, a great rain came, the farmer's face turned red. He paid it, but it was given back to his children. He thought a prophet took dinner with him that day. It is easier for some to pay than to pray. "All things are possible to him that believeth." Many charges do not believe themselves able to bear the expenses of an evangelistic meeting. Some have a mistaken idea about the amount of compensation that evangelists get. They are entitled only to a living in common with other hard-worked preachers. It has become too much the custom for evangelists to be invited only to the best organized and best paying churches. Thus conditions have become such that when "First Churches" are compared with country churches, the question arises, "How shall we solve the rural church problem?" The only way is by giving the smaller places and rural churches the same attention that is given town and city churches, without placing it too much on a money basis. Then they "shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." All Christian communities, however poor, love Christ, and have church pride, and when properly taught and spiritually stirred, come to the front. Many places are hard, but God has not called men to seek good, easy places.

There is another matter that has never been satisfactory to my mind, and that is, the meager support of so many of our pastors. One faithful, godly preacher who gives his time and labors to the church is as much entitled to a support for himself and family as another. There is not as much difference in the quality of service rendered as in the salaries paid, for the same work. Many have been waiting for a plan to be introduced to adjust this matter. There is a remedy for the malady. What one preacher can do in this regard, another can do, if he goes about it right. If he does not know how, he ought to learn how. As evidence of what can be done, take the following examples: The writer once held a meeting for a circuit pastor in one of the most spiritually dead small country churches he ever saw. Finances were about all behind. After a few days' teaching, the people cheerfully paid their pastor and the benevolences in full, and then proposed to pay for half the pastor's time. Another rural church in the same condition paid up all finances and erected a new church right away. Still another country church, at the close of a ten days' meeting, proposed to pay the pastor for full time the following year, and did do it. A more important "drive" than this could not be put before the people—not as a drive, however, but under the proper head.

The pastors serving rural charges could do better work with a better support under the present conditions. There is not a more important agency in our church than our faithful presiding elders. But for them, many pastors would not fare so well as they do. Presiding elders cannot always manage the finances as they would like to do.

During a part of the writer's humble ministry he has witnessed about ten thousand conversions in stations, circuits, and missions. Our greatest present need is evangelists among the weaker churches and unorganized places. At this time there is so much that our young ministers should know about how to "stir up the gift of God which is in them," so they can do successful revival and pastoral work, spiritually and financially, all of which young and inexperienced preachers do not know. I would enjoy taking them into a class, and giving them these things by a short course of lectures, which the schools do not teach, and that otherwise it will require a lifetime to learn, and some will never learn at all. I have written sincerely for the glory of God.

GETTING RID OF GOD.

By Rev. H. W. Rickey

Prelude.

Our modern civilization is a Satanic system of organized covetousness. Its God is a cash-register. The mass chorus sings: "Great is the Diana on the Almighty Dollars." It is upheld by learned liars, grievous grafters, pirates of profiteering, lucre-loving landlordism, legalized inequalities and injustices, powerful navies, standing armies, the devil of dynamite, the chemistry of destruction, all the powers of coercion, intimidation and oppression of the masses.

The earth is the landlord's, and the fullness thereof, and he owes nothing to God. His tenant or renter is only a revenue producer, "his hands" to increase his income. Landlordism fabricates an aristocracy based on self-interest, fattens on lies, lusts of the flesh, the love of liquor and the love of gold. Nothing is allowed to thrive that conflicts with landlordism. It rations out a living to others as it does to livestock, barely enough to get a certain amount of work or profit out of it. It is a pagan-system in origin and continuance. Hence, our civilization is paganized. The legislation, education, social customs, business methods, politics, philosophy of the soul, concept of the human body, sex relations, religious concepts, have never been depaganized.

Pagan Evolution.

Evolution is a recession to superannuated pagan world-views of ancient philosophers, with some later refinements and complexes added by infidels.

The change of one force into another, the proofs that all powers and forces are only variations and expressions of an omnipresent cosmic energy, the tie that connects mind and matter, explain them as we may, can do no other than lead the pondering mind to the irresistible conclusion that the origin and perpetual fountain of energy is in God.

"Causation is the will, creation is the act of God," said W. R. Grove. Energy is only the strength of will. Divine or human. Mind or morals could not be put into man by a cosmic mechanism that has neither. Only God could invent man.

Faith in order is the basis of Science; and there could be no order without an Ordainer. Even Haeckel confessed that "most modern naturalists are inclined to give up the attempt to explain the origin of life by natural causes." DuBois Reymond avowed: "It is futile to attempt to account for the chasm between the living and not living by chemistry."

Keyhole squints at Nature may conduct tadpole philosophers into Atheism, but, as Bacon advised, no man can be too well studied in the book of God's words, or in the book of God's rock chapters. Dana and Wallace agreed that for the production of man was required "the special act of a Being above nature, whose supreme will is the source of natural law."

The infidel spirals his objections against Vital Force. Abolish that fact, he can get rid of God. Strauss saw that as long as there was no ferry across from lifeless matter to living creatures, as long as we must keep in mind a special vital force, there is no possibility of spanning the abyss without the aid of miracle. To admit a miracle is to let in the Creator. No man can repudiate the miracle of creation, unless he was converted in his youth, and have faith in God. To believe in such a miracle is to apostatize from Evolution. The man who believes in the first verse of Genesis possesses the antidote to the vagaries of Evolution. Yet, some swallow anything, provided it is not found in the Holy Bible. Their credulity far exceeds the faith the Bible exacts of us.

Bishop Butler showed the correct understanding of nature is fixed, settled, stated. To affirm that Nature's laws are constant and reliable, presupposes a regulative mind that makes them so. Only a Director General can affect the myriads of processes so that they keep always within the boundaries set by law. The stability of Nature's methods is an omnipresent miracle. It is a far more astounding miracle that electrons possess law respecting manners than any lesser miracles recorded once or occasionally. God has made no law stronger than himself. The Almighty wears no self-made straight-jacket of natural laws. Natural laws are the intelligent servants of the bidding of God. "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Richter saw two uncontested miracles or revelations in this age. He compares them to an Old and New Testament. They are the birth of a finite being and the birth of life within the hard wood of matter. "In the one unexplainable every other is involved, and one miracle shatters a whole philosophy." The prejudice against miracle or the supernatural grows out of the fear of its philosophy-shattering power.

The Bible, or correct view, is that the powers and processes of Nature are supernatural in a triple sense. First, as more than the mind of man can account for in their origins; second, in more than he has ability to resist in their devouring tendencies; third, in more than he can reason out in their trend, drift or goal toward which they all are advancing. The orderly classification of Nature's facts into a science is convincing proof of the mind in us of a kin or kind to the Original Classifier. "We are his offspring," and possess a classifying mind.

The molecule is a tiny world in itself—a replica of the cosmos. Since Nature began, none of her destroyer-forces of the ages has produced the least change in the properties of any given molecule. The well-defined species of molecules passing down fabulous ages owes nothing to Evolution. We cannot ascribe their origin, preservation, retention of their characteristics to mindless mechanics of natural laws. Evolution necessitates change, but the molecules possess changeless sameness and have the marks of a manufactured article. If God conferred a natural immortality on molecules, atoms, electrons that defies fire, chemical combination, and other destroying agencies, cannot God give eternal life to those that love him? If God saves the least fractious of matter from destruction, can he not save us who are of more value than many electrons?

Tyndall had lucid moments, especially when he said: "Either we must open the doors freely to Creative acts, or abandoning them, let us radically change our notions of matter."

Precisely! Rob God of his attributes, endow matter with God's prerogatives, and go on sailing through the vacuum of an empty science.

Kant said: "Give me matter and I can explain the formation of a world; give me matter only, I cannot explain the formation of a caterpillar."

THE TIME OF BEGINNING IN EARNEST.

By Luther E. Todd.

Feb. 1, 1924, is the date for beginning the six weeks' publicity in all the charges of the church in behalf of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. This period of cultivation will extend to March 16, 1924.

The St. Louis office is now mailing to every pastor a package of the booklet, "The Call of the Forgotten Man," for careful distribution among the members of the charge. Every pastor should be on the lookout for this package, and, upon its arrival, put it in a safe place until Feb. 1.

The final results of the great movement to provide adequate Superannuate Endowment will be determined chiefly by the amount of real work done in publicity. The people will gladly contribute to this cause when it is explained to them, and Feb. 1, 1924, is the time to begin the explantion.

The general plan of action, for the period of publicity, is clearly stated in the Workers' Guide, pages 23-25. If this program is followed with real purpose and enthusiasm, the whole church will be aroused to such an interest in the Forfotten Man that nothing can stop her until she pays the debt she owes her aged and worn-out preachers. On the contrary, if there is no cultivation, the outcome is sure to be disheartening. There can be no harvest without the sowing of seed.

With the actual campaign for the comfort of the Lord's disabled prophets so near at hand, my soul longeth and my heart crieth out in supplication for the blessings of Almighty God upon those who are called to serve as leaders. The church never faced a greater opportunity than that which is now presented for supplying the distressing needs of those who made her great. Help us, dear Lord, faithfully to meet the responsibilities which rest upon us in this emergency.

LOCAL PREACHERS—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. C. M. Chapman, D.D.

What the Church Owes to Them.

Now and then one can hear the expression, "We cannot use local preachers," or, "The age of local preachers has passed." The chronicle of the Methodist Church would be incomplete without an important chapter on the valiant deeds of the local preachers in our ranks when the issues of life in spiritual matters tried men's souls in laying the foundations of our present spiritual prosperity. May we have a word about these men, as follows?

The Methodist Episcopal Church in America was organized by local preachers: At Sam's Creed, Md., by Robert Strawbridge; at John's Street, New York City, by Philip Embury; in the West (as then known) in Ohio, by Governor Tiffin—all local preachers of high order and of solid piety.

Some Prominent Local Preachers.

Charles Wesley, John Fletcher, John Calvin, Adam Clarke, Matthew Henry, Christian David, Count Zinzendorf, William Booth, C. G. Finney, George Whitefield, Lyman Abbott, Otterbein, Moody, Sam Jones, Lorenzo Dow, Bishop McKendree, John Howard, etc.

Things Accomplished by Local Preachers.

John Fletcher was a master writer of theology, one of the great preachers of his time. Charles Wesley wrote the hymns of Methodism—remove his psalms of heaven's melodies from Christian worship to-day, what a pause would come to Christian worshipers! Christian David and Count Zinzendorf gave to Methodism and the Christian world a new touch of assurance in the true witness of the Spirit, as evidential in Christian life. We may be in doubt as to priority of Sam's Creek meeting house or John Street Church, but we know that faithful local preachers gave us both, and they are to be praised for faithful work.

The local preacher, William McKendree, became America's first born Methodist bishop. The State Constitution of Ohio was written by the local preacher, Governor Tiffin. Matthew Henry has become immortal in his commentary—to those of Calvinistic trend of mind. Adam Clarke may be said to be the first writer of a Methodist Commentary—others now as good, but none better. John Calvin, writer of Calvinistic literature and a master theologian—believers in election and decrees as opposed to free grace and unlimited atonement owe more to Calvin than to any other master among them. The Salvation Army was organized by William Booth—the local preacher. The tide of spiritual revivals may be said to have become national first under the power of the spirit-filled D. L. Moody—a local preacher. Among the heroes of revival fires carried by local preachers to a lost world were C. G. Finney, George Whitefield, Sam Jones, etc.

Universities were established in America by local preachers—Harvard by John Harvard, in 1636, by the Congregationalists and local preachers; Princeton, in 1747, by local preachers in the Presbyterian Church; Yale, 1701, by local preachers of the Congregationalists and, later, Unitarians; Columbia, New York City, by local Episcopalians and a local lottery.

Local Preachers as Statesmen.

Governor Tiffin, of Ohio; Governor Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania; James K. Polk; James A. Garfield; C. K. Marshall, of Mississippi; Irvin Miller, of Mississippi, and others. Mississippi Methodism had such men as Griffin, Ford, Moses Floyd, Sellers. Mississippi Baptists had such as Norvel Robertson Hitt, Carter Price, Giddens, John and James Stampley. Mississippi Presbyterians had among their early local preachers the two Swazyes, who preached and worked near Moss Point, Miss.

Seeing that "we are encompassed by so great a cloud of witnesses," let us ever honor the rank of local preachers for what they have done and can yet do.

HOW TO VOTE.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

In July, 1851, F. W. Robertson, of Brighton, England, preached a notable sermon relating to the general election of that year—and preachers who possess a copy of Robertson's Sermons will profit by reading that sermon over again. The basis of the discourse is the election in which Matthew is appointed to the Apostolate. Its points are: The object of the election; the mode of the election, and the spirit in which it was conducted.

A vacancy had occurred in the ranks of the Apostles, which Peter ruled should be filled. Two names—Barnabas and Matthias—were proposed, and after the disciples had sought Divine guidance in prayer—"Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all, show clearly which of these two Thou hast chosen"—the vote was taken.

Two elements stand out prominently in this pattern election—the human and the Divine. First the human. This was a matter in which men had some part and lot. It was not one settled by a Divine edict. The method of procedure took count of human instrumentality; moreover, it was democratic. Not even did the Apostles claim the prerogotive of determining who should fill the position. Each of the hundred and twenty disciples had a vote; all votes were of equal value, and we may assume every voter voted. In all this the human element played its part.

But there was also the Divine element. The electors were deeply sensible of their insufficiency to decide aright without the help of God. Theirs was a grave and great responsibility, to be regarded religiously and conscientiously, and they made their act a matter of earnest prayer. Never were electors more earnest that Vox Populi should he Vox Dei. They did not presume that the voice of the people was of necessity the voice of God. How many are the folk of to-day who have allowed themselves to become slaves to the false notion that you have only to make the social system fully democratic for the millennium to be immediately ushered in! The disciples were not deluded by that dangerous doctrine of the devil. They were not at all sure that their "popular" will accorded with the will of God, but what they desired was that the two should become one. And so before they voted they prayed, "Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all, show clearly which of those two thou hast chosen." Very few in our day would deny the justice of the aim to secure a fair expression of the will of the people, but not all recognize the greater need still for widest-spread effort to ensure that the will of the people shall represent the will of God.

A further feature of this election was this, that the choice lay not between good and bad, but between good and better. Both candidates were estimable men, possessing estimable qualifications for apostleship. Each was worthy of votes and would receive them. The pressing concern was that of deciding which was the better man.

Again, as Robertson points out, the voters were to vote not from any motives of self-interest, or interest of just a section; and whichever candidate was elected would owe it as his duty, too, to serve the interests of the whole church, and not a mere part of it.

The objection may be raised that the Scriptural example had to do with a sacred matter—the election of an Apostle—and that there is not necessarily any parallel between the case and a State-wide election. The point raised is really, what has Religion to do with Politics? Much every way. The objection referred to ceases at once to have any weight as soon as it is recognized that life is a unity. No marked division exists between the sacred and the secular—except in spirit—not in sphere. In spirit, as Robertson says, "The election of a bishop may be a secular thing; the election of a representative may be a religious thing." Life is a unity. Some one has gone so far as to say that the kingdom of God cannot come apart from politics. Seeing that isolated, individual life, self-determined and self-governed—every man doing what is right in his own eyes—is an impossibility with us to-day, how urgent a matter it is to see that everything is done to insure that the best conditions of social life shall obtain, and for electors with this in view, to make it a religious duty to secure the return of men (and women) to the Legislature and municipal office who have at heart the highest welfare of the community. It is the duty of electors to regard their vote as a responsibility as well as a right, and to exercise it conscientiously, religiously and prayerfully.

As to the duty of ministers, we would quote Robertson again: "It is the imperative duty of a minister of Christ—from which he cannot, except in cowardice, shrink—to endeavor to make clear the great Christian landmarks which belong to such an occurrence"—that of a general election. "His duty is not to introduce politics in the common sense of the word, meaning thereby the views of some political party. The pulpit is not to be degraded into the engine of a faction. Far, far above such questions, it ought to preserve the calm dignity of a voice which speaks for eternity—and not for time. If possible, not one word should drop by which a minister's own political leanings can be discovered. Remember," and the words of Robertson are as appropriate to-day as seventy-one years ago, "Remember, the matter of paramount importance to be decided, is, not whether a preponderance shall he insured for one of the great parties which divide the country, or the other. The important thing to he wished is that each man shall give his vote as these men (the disciples) did—conscientiously, religiously, unselfishly, lovingly."

"I AM GOING TO LEAVE IT WITH YOU"

Bishop James Atkins, who died at his post of duty in Little Rock, was Chairman of the Centenary Commission from the beginning. He delivered the great address which launched the movement at Memphis. He was the author of the Centenary motto, "When two million Methodists go from their knees to any task, it shall be done." He was the first superintendent of the new Centenary mission fields in Europe.

How deeply the Centenary impressed him is evidenced from the fact that his last appeal, his final official utterance, spoken to his presiding elders at the close of his Conference, was about the Centenary, Concerning which he said:

"I have called you back to urge you to great faithfulness in this work. The world is broken, and unhappy relations are found among all peoples. The distress is growing, and the people of Europe are pitiable and helpless.

"I believe that Christianity in America is at its best, and it is the only hope of the world. The Protestant Churches of America hold the key to the situation, and our own Church has an important part in the world reconstruction. God is expecting much of the Methodists, and I want our men to know and feel the importance of this hour, that their work may tell in the redemption of the world.

"I have been connected with the Centenary from the beginning, and I am much interested in completing it in this quadrennium. Whether this will be my privilege is immaterial, but I would like to see a glorious conclusion of the great work in which I have had a part.

"I want you to feel the pressure of the hour. I want you to know how much depends upon the Church. These are the greatest days that ever came to the Church. I want its leaders to be wide awake and to make full proof of their ministry. And now I am going to leave it with you."

And so he has left it with us all, giving to the people called Methodists, with his last breath, a commission to bring to glorious completion the greatest movement they ever had the consecration and courage to begin. We owe it to his memory, and to the world parish which he served, to finish the Centenary by paying out the pledges we have made.

You Never Can Tell Until You Try

To-day is Friday, December 21, 1923. Three more days and it will be Christmas. When this page is read, it will he well along in the new year. How the time flies! The days are so precious that I would like to be one thousand instead of one so that I could give heed to a thousand voices calling for service which, being but one, I am unable to answer.

We Have Had a Good Week, Bishop.

Of course hy this time everybody knows that we are right now chiefly interested in receiving the pink leaf report from every charge in the church as soon as the first quarterly conference is held. If my readers could see how the pinks are coming from every direction, I am sure that douhters concerning the progress of the great movement in behalf of Superannuate Endowment would cease making pessimistic remarks on the subject. Look at this record on pink leaf reports received this week: Monday, 46; Tuesday, 38; Wednesday, 65; Thursday, 73; Friday, 41; Saturday, 32; total received this week, 295.

I find that the Inland District, Northwest Conference, Rev. John H. Dills, presiding elder, has now a 100 per cent standing on the pink leaf report. Please bear in mind that Brother Dills is working in mission territory, and he has difficulties to meet that are anusual. He is to he commended for having done this part of the special effort program so perfectly.

The Ashland District, Kentucky Conference, Rev. W. M. Given, presiding elder, has sent in a pink leaf report from every charge except one. I am sure before these lines are printed that this district will also be entitled to its place of honor in the 100 per eent column.

A Preacher Shouting Happy.

This week came a letter from Rev. Charles W. Seale, pastor of the Springville-Trussville charge, Gadsden District, North Alabamam Conference. With the letter came the pink leaf report, and it shows that the minimum quota of this charge was $1,850; but the brethren volantarily added $650 to the minimum, making the total $2,500. Brother Seale writes: "They did this without any great insistenee on my part, merely explaining that the plan for one minute did the business. If our pastors will just present the matter, there will be no trouble about securing a good amount of endowment for the 'forgotten man.'" I am not surprised, Brother Seale, that you are happy in having your charge pledge thirty-five per cent ahove the minimum requested for Superannuate Endowment. You have a right to smile all the year.

The pink leaf report from West End charge, Winston-Salem District, Western North Carollna Conference, Rev. W. A. Newell, presiding elder, and Rev. R. H. Dougherty, pastor, is before me. The minimum quota of this charge is $4,400. The brethren voluntarily added to the minimum amount $600, making the total quota to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment $5,000.

I am glad to share with my readers as many of the pink leaf reports showing additions to the minimum amounts as I am able to publish. The brethren of West End charge deserve the commendation of us all, and I am sure they have it. Richest blessings be upon them!

This Presiding Elder Is a Treasure.

Occasionally I reeeive a fault-finding letter that makes me unhappy. However, niuety-nine per cent of my mail is of a character that encourages and helps to carry the load. I have just received a postal from the presiding elder of the Brookhaven District of the Mississippi Conference, which reads as follows:

"Dear Brother: The package has arrived, and I shall use the pamphlets to the best advantage. You ean count on us of the Brookhaven District. Don't worry over us. Just indicate the joh, and then you can leave us to put it over while you are worrying over the other ehap.

"Success to you! And the Lord be with you!

"Yours cordially,

"H. M. ELLIS."

A Midwinter's Experience.

I have just received a letter from Rev. Seba Kirkpatrick, of Strawn, Tex., which should be published, as follows:

"I was comfortably located in my study the other morning reading Dr. Ed Cook's splendid exposition of the Sunday sehool lesson in the Deeember Magazine. My heart was thrilled as he pietured Paul in his missionary journeys, pioneering the way for the church of God and a new civilization. A gentle knock was heard at my door. 'Come in,' I shouted with the enthusiasm of a schoolboy. Almost before I knew it there stood in my presence an old man. It was raining, and the north wind blew outside. The old man was wet and eold. I saw expressions of culture and charaeter in the outline of his rugged and noble faee. 'Pastor,' said he hesitatingly, 'pardon me for intruding. My own life has been spent as a pastor, and I knew you would understand. I am sixty-eight years old. I was a pastor thirty-eight years without a break. It's eold, and the highway is muddy and sloppy. I have friends in St. Louis, and I am making my way to them to spend the winter. Three years ago I left a Northern city where much of my life work bad been spent and went to Los Angeles, Calif. I was almost totally blind. Through the providence of God and the skill of a splendid surgeon my eyesight was restored, and now I ean read and go about. A few days ago I left Los Angeles and came to Abilene, Tex. I expeeted to meet a prominent minister of my denomlnatlon there and get some funds. He was out of town and would not be back for days. I knew no one else there, so I walked from Abilene to Cisco. I spent night before last in Cisco. Yesterday, through rain and cold, I walked from Cisco to Ranger. It was cold and dark and raining when I reached Rauger. I knew no one. I have never asked for charity for myself. The kind agent gave me permission to sleep in the depot. Before daylight this morning, without any breakfast and in the rain, I left Ranger for Strawn. I was making my way to Dallas to some friends. A truck driver picked me up ten miles out of Ranger. He said: "Old man, you are cold and wet and tired. Let me carry you as far as Strawn." Now I am here, pastor. They tell me the roads are impassable from here to Weatherford. I could walk on the railroad, but that's such tiresome walking. If I can get to Weatherford, there is a paved highway from there to Fort Worth and Dallas. Once in Dallas, I am all right.'

"'That's enough,' said I. The old veteran had told his story. Every word was true. I could not keep my hands off of bim. 'You are a hero, every inch of you,' said I. 'There's a good dinner and a railroad ticket for you on the Sunshine Special.' I saw him eat his dinner and take his train. Then I went back to my study to reflect. Every word he had spoken revealed refinement. Every gesture and movement reveald princely character. For years he had stood before cultured audiences, and their lives had been enriched by the treasures stored in his mental and spiritual nature. Now he is old and cast aside. Rather than ask for charity he had set out to walk nearly two hundred miles. He had slept in a depot and gone without supper and breakfast. Timidly he had told his story. Only December rain and fierce roads had driven him to my study. I sat and cried over the experience. Such men have given us a great, rich church. They made strong and safe the foundations of government. It isn't fair to rank them as beggars. We have not treated them right. Unfortunately our Superannuate Movement has not eome soon enough for some of the worthiest of them."

A Question Pastors and Presiding Elders Should Answer.

Shall the plan of Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment up to and including the first quarterly conference go over one hundred per cent?

SAY IT WITH PINKS!

The man who patronizes the bootlegger is a grade lower in the moral scale than the bootlegger himself. The bootlegger sins for money; his patron puts his love for liquor above respect for law.—William Jennings Bryan.

The Home Circle

THE LITTLE STREETS.

"To-morrow I'll do it," says Bennie.
"I will by and by," says Seth.
"Not now—pretty soon," says Jeunie.
"In a minute," says little Beth.

O dear little people, remember
That, true as the stars in the sky,
The little streets to To-Morrow,
Pretty Soon, and By-and-By

Lead one and all,
As straight, they say,
As the King's Highway,
To the city of Not-at-All.

THE TWO SISTERS.

By Willie C. Page.

Vaginia Wayne was in her seventh year and the pet of a large family connection. Aunts, uncles and cousins humored her and called her "Beauty," for she was a very pretty little girl, with dark brown hair and eyes, and when she smiled there was a dimple in each cheek.

Her mother feared she was growing up vain and selfish.

One evening, after playing for a time with her numerous dolls and expensive toys, she went to where her mother sat near the window reading and said, in a cross, petulant tone of voice:

"Mother, I am tired of playing with my old playthings. Please tell me a story—something different and new."

"Very well," said her mother as she laid aside her book.

"A long time ago there were two little sisters who were orphans and lived with a charcoal burner and his wife on the edge of a great forest. The old couple were very poor and worked hard for a scant living.

"The little sisters could dimly recall the time they had been brought to this humble home. They remembered a wrecked train on the big bridge over the river near the house; that their dear father and mother had gone away never to return; that the old couple had brought them through the dark forest, guided by a torchlight, to their little home, wet and cold, where they had warmed and taken care of them, giving them the best of all they had.

"Dorothy was a beautiful little girl with golden curls and very fair. Theresa was dark and homely. In spring and summer the sisters played in the sunshine, tended the flowers, watched the birds and butterflies, and were happy and content; but when the winter came, with its dark days of rain, and the wind sighed through the barren branches of the great trees, they were sad and often talked in whispers of their mother and father, of their home in the city, of loving arms about them when frightened, of good-night kisses when the moon smiled down on the dark woods and cast soft shadows over the forests.

"As they grew older, Dorothy was very unhappy and often cried and would say: 'I am so tired of this dreary place; I want to go away, back to the city where things are bright. I won't stay here—I am going if I have to walk and beg my food.'

"'No, no, sister, we must stay and help Grandmother and Grappy, for they are getting old and feeble,' said Theresa.

"The very next day some tourists lost their way and came to the cottage for information. A lady, seeing Doorothy among the flowers, exclaimed: 'Oh, what a pretty child—I want her for my own.'

"After a long talk with the old people, telling of the many advantages they would give her, the charcoal-burner and his wife gave their consent, and they carried her away.

"'Oh, dear lady, please take me," pleaded Theresa, the tears streaming down her face. 'O, sister, don't leave me,' sobbed the little girl.

"Dorothy's heart was filled with joy. She was so many lovely things that she grew vain and tage that she did not care about her sister, sad and lonely. She was petted and provided with so many lovely things that he grew vain and selfish. She often thought of her little sister, but did not care enough to go back to help or comfort her.

"Theresa grieved for a time, then said: 'I will be bright and cheerful for the sake of Grandmother and Grappy.' When they were sick she nursed them, brought sticks for the fire, prepared their simple meals, and kept the fires in the kilns going. One night a great storm came and some travelers were driven to seek shelter at the cottage. Theresa did her daily tasks and all she could think of for the comfort of the travelers. The next morning one of the men said: 'We have searched the kingdom over seeking a little girl with a heart of gold. The king and queen want a companion for the little princess who has been ill. Will you come, Theresa?'

"'O, I would love to, but I can't leave Grandmother - she needs me every day.' Tears blinded her eyes, but she shook her head, 'No, I cannot leave them alone.'

"'We will take them also—there is room in the palace for all,' repiied the steward.

"So the homely little girl with a heart of gold was joyfully received in the palace and soon became a favorite and loved by all who knew her. In time of hardship and misfortune she had been brave and unselfish."

Vaginia got up from her seat and came and stood by her mother's chair. "Mother, I am glad you told me that story, for I do not want to be vain and selfish like Dorothy."

"No, my dear, I want you to be happiness-maker and let your heart go out in love and sympathy to others; do nameless acts of kindness; make silent victories over favorite faults; for these are the threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life, for character is all," said mother. "I want my little daughter to become a noble woman, always remembering that beauty amounts to little if not accompanied by a sweet spirit."

Contempt for one law breeds contempt for all laws!--Selected.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

I believe if we could make an investigation to find out the universally favorite passage of the Old Testament, without doubt the result would point out the twenty-third Psalm, or, as we call it, the Shepherd Psalm. In this beautiful lyric the psalmist has outdistanced the old conception of a God of justice and anticipated the conception which we consider characteristic of the New Testament, of God as a God of love and mercy. In what more beautiful way could that conception be brought to our minds than by the pastoral language and figures which we find used so effectively in the psalms?

But while the entire psalm is of wonderful beauty and contains a marvelous message, one clause gathers the strength and beauty not only of the whole psalm, but of all revelation; it condenses the most important attributes of the Father and furnishes us in a few short words the essence of truth and religion. The single-colored shaft of the skyrocket goes straight up into the heavens, and when it has reached its utmost height, it bursts into a thousand wonders of light and beauty. In the same way I like to think of the grand, sublime love and truth of God as combined in the first clause of this psalm, and when it penetrates the soul's heaven, it breaks into an unending phase of God's goodness as explained in the rest of the psalm. But the great truth is in those words, "The Lord is my Shepherd."—Rev. W. G. Smyth.

PREJUDICE.

The meaning of the word is obvious—prejudgment or judgment beforehand.

The sin is not less deadly because it is so common.

Many a good man and true woman has suffered defeat and even death because of it.

It is a serpent that strikes in the dark and wounds without warning.

It is hatred in disguise. It is fire in the bosom.

It is a lie concealed in the heart.

It is the spawn of envy, the offspring of hell, and the contemptible assassin of character.

It is the sin of small men and less than ordinary women.

It is abhorred by a noble nature, and only fostered by the base and mean.

It feeds upon filth and has its dwelling in the dark caverns of the corrupt heart.—Selected.

Editorial

THE PROSPERITY OF THE CHURCH.

vision for the support of the preachers, for the general work, and for the need of the individual congregation. Measured by these items, the church was never more prosperous."

We read these words and take courage. The bishops are in position to speak authoritatively concerning the condition of the church throughout its bounds, and their report shows that it is increasing in membership, making better provision for the support of the ministry and of the local work of the congregations than ever before, and that it is enlarging its contributions to the general work of the church. These are properly spoken of as marks of the blessing of God; and so we take them to be. We can find no ground for pessimism concerning the church in the report that is thus officially laid before us. The work is moving forward, the church is prosperous, the favor of God is manifest. Let us be of good cheer and labor faithfully at our appointed tasks.

THE FIRST FRUITS.

Under date of January 7, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, of Haynesville, La., writes: "Enclosed please find $10, for which send the New Orleans Christian Advocate to the appended list of names. This is a little in advance of Good Literature Day, but the Colquitt church is twelve miles out and an afternoon appointment, which I am bound to get when I go after it. Yesterday was my day, and you have the result."

These subscriptions are the first fruits of what we trust will be a great harvest on Good Literature Sunday, January 27. Brother Gearheard is the pastor of our splendid church at Haynesville, who, in his zeal to reach unoccupied territory, has taken on this afternoon appointment. We do not know the size of the membership at Colquitt, but presumably it is not very large; yet the presentation of the cause of Christian literature produced fine results. Thanks, Brother Gearheard.

Will not all our pastors present this cause to all their congregations? If they will do so, we are sure success will attend their efforts, and all the interests of the church will be advanced. Who will be the next?

METHODIST HANDBOOK, 1924.

The Southern Methodist Handbook for 1924 is dedicated to the late Dr. Thomas N. Ivey, who originated the Handbook, and for more than twenty years issued it annually. For some years the present editor, Dr. John S. Chadwick, was assistant to Dr. Ivey in the editorship of the Christian Advocate and assisted in the preparation of material for the Handbook. In bringing out the 1924 issue he dedicates it to the man who established the Handbook. This volume carries the picture of Dr. Ivey, a biographical sketch and other tributes to the man and his work.

The Handbook, a volume of 170 pages, carries much valuable information concerning every department of our church's activities, statistics for the year just closed, Methodist history, and all of the other features of former issues. The illustrations add much to the value of the book. Elsewhere in this paper is an advertisement of the 1924 Handbook, just issued. Send your order for one or more copies.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. A. Bernard, of Gueydan, La., is happily engaged in his work. He reports an especially delightful holiday season.

Mrs. J. F. Evans, of Cleveland, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for more than sixty years. Blessings upon her!

The address of Rev. W. P. Bailey is Sarah, Miss., Route 2, instead of Longtown, as it appears in the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, pastor of La Branch Street Church, McComb, Miss., has had the joy of seeing three preachers licensed in his church during his two years there.

Brother L. H. Elliott, of Rolling Fork, Miss., will be ninety years old in February. He reads the Advocate regularly and keeps in touch with all the work of the church.

The Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet at the Hotel Chisca, Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 30-Feb. 1. A fine program has been prepared for the occasion.

Rev. Lee R. Sparks, our pastor at Winnsboro, La., writes that his work is moving along nicely. He states also that the regularly appointed agent for church literature is at work and that results will be forthcoming.

The annual Presidents' Meeting of the Epworth League is in session in Meridian, Miss., this week. Bishop H. M. DuBose, Dr. F. S. Parker, and other prominent leaders of the church are expected to be in attendance.

Rev. D. L. Griffin requests us to state that those who desire his assistance in the promotion of an old-time, Bible-planned evangelistic meeting, should address him at Cedar Grove, La., P. O. Box 153, instead of Shreveport, La., R. F. D. No. 1, as formerly.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., who has not been in good health for several weeks, was in New Orleans last week for medical advice. We are glad to learn that a careful examination showed no cause for alarm.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Superintendent, was in New Orleans last week to attend a meeting of the New Orleans District Sunday School Association. He paid an appreciated call at the Advocate office while in the city.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, authorizes the following announcements: "Bishop Ainsworth has appointed Rev. S. C. Yates, of Dublin, to the vacancy at Tchula, caused by the death of Rev. J. H. Smith. Rev. W. W. Milligan, of Swift and Morgan City, goes to Dublin. Rev. J. C. Nelson, local preacher, and teacher at Morgan City, will supply the Swift and Morgan City charge."

Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Monroe, La., is reported severely ill, with the prospect that he will be unable to fill his pulpit for several weeks. Earnest prayer will be made, we are sure, by his brethren that he may soon be restored to health.

The quarterly conference of Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., recently recommended Robert Louis Williams, a splendid young man twenty years of age, for license to preach. He is attending Millsaps College and expects to complete his preparation before entering the regular work.

Mrs. Ora Nixon Arnold, of Houston, Tex., has made a gift of $120,000 to Southern Methodist University for the establishment of the Chair of American Statesmanship, of which Dr. E. D. Shurter is to be the head. The gift is made as a memorial to the donor's late husband, George F. Arnold.

Mrs. S. D. Chambers, of Beach, Miss., though advanced in years, is active in all the work of the church. She has paid her Centenary pledge in full, has paid her Christian Education pledge to date, and meets all her other church obligations quarterly. She is a regular reader of the Advocate.

A copy of the Minutes of the recent session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference reached the Advocate office on Monday of this week. It is handsomely printed and is up to the high standard previously set by Dr. J. R. Countiss, Secretary of the Conference, under whose direction it is issued.

Prince Nyabonga, son of King Omekama, of Uganda, one of the British protectorates on the East Coast of Africa, is attending Clarke University, in Atlanta, Ga., sweeping the floors to help pay his expenses. He will succeed his father some day as king of Uganda, taking the name Hosea I. He is a Christian.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, requests us to announce that the Preachers' Institute for the Brookhaven District will meet in the Methodist church at Brookhaven at 9:30 a.m., Jan. 17. It is of the greatest importance that every pastor in the district be present from the start.

The sixteenth birthday of the Presbyterian Hospital, this city, will be celebrated in the Corinne Casanas Memorial Building, Saturday, Jan. 19, from 3 to 6 o'clock p. m. The graduation exercises of the 1924 class of the Training School for Nurses will be a feature of this occasion. Dr. J. C. Barr is the president of the hospital.

In a personal letter to the manager, Rev. L. C. Wilson, our pastor at Lake Arthur, La., says: "The people at Lake Arthur gave us a most cordial reception on our arrival here and have been constantly showing us courtesies and bestowing upon us good things to this day (Jan. 9), and so we feel that the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places."

Rev. John W. Rohertson, district evangelist for the Greenville and the Greenwood Districts, North Mississippi Conference, has just returned from Birmingham, Ala., where he was called to the bedside of his mother, who is critically ill with pneumonia. Brother Robertson asks the prayers of the readers of the Advocate in her behalf, that she may be spared awhile longer if it be God's will. We are sure his request will be heeded.

With great sorrow we announce the death of Mrs. L. C. Henderson, at Farmerville, Tex., on Jan. 10, at the advanced age of ninety years. She was the maternal grandmother of the editor of the Advocate, a life-long Methodist and a devout Christian in whom there was absolutely no guile. She was a complete invalid for several years preceding her death and a great sufferer, but her faith was bright to the end. A saint has gone home.

The Rev. Clovis G. Chappell, pastor of our Representative Church, Washington, D. C., in his address of welcome delivered to the members of the Southern Methodist Press Association, which met in that city Dec. 14 and 15, stated that more than $12,000 had come into the treasury of the church last year through loose collections, and that the budget could not be met were it not for these liberal basket collections, which are increasing in amount from year to year.

Rev. G. W. McLain, a member of the North Mississippi Conference for twelve years—1908-1920—is now pastor of the Methodist church at Clifton, Arizona, where he ministers to a fine people. The church plant is a good one, including a brick church and a brick parsonage. Clifton is one of the towns in the West that are asking for the location of one of the hospitals to be established by the Hospital Board, offering property valued at $100,000 as an inducement.

Press dispatches on Jan. 8 reported the critical illness of Bishop W. B. Murrah, at his home in Memphis, Tenn., following a stroke of apoplexy. The prayers of the church will ascend in behalf of one of its chief pastors that he may be spared to serve it in the future as he has done so faithfully in the past. Hundreds of old Millsaps College students will feel keen personal sorrow at the news of the suffering of one whom they learned to love and honor during their college days.

Mrs. J. L. Bufkin died at the home of her son-in-law, Henry G. Turner, in Laurel, Miss., on Jan. 8. The funeral service in Laurel was conducted by Rev. J. R. Jones, assisted by Rev. Lyman Carley. Interment took place at Vossburg, Miss., the former home of the deceased. Mrs. Bufkin was a devout Christian, a sister of Hon. D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta, Miss., one of the leading laymen of the Mississippi Conference. The Advocate extends tender sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

The Spartanburg, S. C., Journal of Jan. 3 contains an account of the death of Mrs. James Henry Yarbrough, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gabriel Cannon, in Spartanburg. Mrs. Yarbrough was a daughter of the late Dr. John B. McFerrin. As a member of the Woman's Missionary Council she was greatly interested in the missionary work of the church and the Special Effort in Behalf of Superannuate Endowment. She was the organizer of the first city missionary society in Southern Methodism and was honorary president of the same at the time of her death. She had lived in Spartanburg since 1911. The church has lost one of its most effective workers.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Carl H. Williams, Long Beach, Miss., 2; Rev. A. A. Bernard, Gueydan, La., 2; Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Haynesville, La., 5.

A CORRECTION.

I notice that the Minutes of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, which have just recently come from the press, fail to give Winona station credit for any money raised on the Centenary and Education funds. I do not know whose fault this is, for $778.30 was paid in on the Centenary quota, and $466 on the Education fund. Winona is very nearly out on her Centenary quota, and is making a good showing on the latter. I am sorry this oversight on some one's part has caused these spaces to be blank in the Minutes.

CARROLL VARNER.

"Announce Board of Finance has received two thousand three hundred and sixty-nine pink leaf reports to date, and that response of church in this matter is very encouraging. Urge preachers who have not sent this report to do so as soon as facts are available."

ATTENTION, PASTORS GREENVILLE AND GREENWOOD DISTRICTS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

In order that I may do the work assigned me by the Bishop and his Cabinet at our last Annual Conference, I need the hearty co-operation of every pastor in these two districts; hence I am using this means to ask that if any of you desire my services you will communicate with Brother J. THE CENTENARY IN JAPAN.

Centenary money expended in Japan to date, $1,022,361.

Twenty-seven Centenary missionaries have been sent to Japan.

The Hiroshima girls' school, with 1,000 students, is one of the most influential institutions in Japan. This school has seven kindergartens connected with it.

The Kwansei-Gakuin, at Kobe, has an enrollment of 1,700 young men, and with Centenary funds an aditorium large enough to accommodate the student body has been erected. Upon the promise of Centenary endowment funds the institution has been raised to the grade of a university.

There has been erected at Osaka, the Lambuth School for Christian Workers, with Centenary money appropriated by the Woman's Department, Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The great shipbuilding center of Japan is Kure. Here Southern Methodists have developed an evangelistic center for women. The only building in the city available for this purpose is rented and will have to be purchased or this important work will be without a home. The enterprise is halted by tardy Centenary collections.

HOW TO HINDER A REVIVAL.

By coming in late or going out early.

By looking as though everything that was being done bored you.

By sitting on a back seat when you ought to be on a front one.

By watching the clock closer than you do the points of the sermon.

By not doing anything to get unconverted people into the meetings.

By showing no interest in the conversion of the Sabbath school children.

By putting on your overcoat and wraps while the last hymn is being sung.

By not standing up to show which side you are on when requested to do so.

By asking the Lord for everything except a present blessing when you pray in public.

By openly finding fault with the preacher whenever his preaching does not suit you.

By keeping your hands in your pockets when you ought to be shaking hands with everybody.

By getting up a social party or some sort of an entertainment right in the middle of the meetings.

By taking no part in the singing, and doing nothing to show that your heart is in the meeting.

By talking a great deal more about the weather and other unimportant topics than you do about religion.—From "Blasts from the Ram's Horn."

No sermon is of any value, or likely to be useful, which has not the three R's in it; ruin in the fall, redemption by Christ, and regeneration by the Holy Spirit. My aim in every sermon is loudly to call sinners, to quicken saints, and to be a blessing to all.—Ryland.

A FRIEND.

Forest, Miss.

MRS. ALMA JANE ZEAGLER was born Aug. 24, 1880, in Wilkinson County, Miss., and passed to the great beyond, Dec. 18, 1923, at Jackson, Miss. She leaves a husband, Brother P. K. Zeagler, and three children, William, Ethel May, and Louie. For years she had been a member of the Capitol Street Church, loyal to its work, and faithful in attendance at Sunday school and its other services. She was always to be found relieving distress, and helping in all good work in the church and in her community. From the beginning of her last illness she realized that the end was near, and gave direction for her children. She died in the faith, ready to go to her Lord. May her loved ones follow in her steps. The funeral services were conducted by Dr. H. F. Brooks, her pastor, from the Capitol Street Methodist Church, and she was laid to rest in Cedar Lawn Cemetery.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND OTHERS.

Dear Brethren: I am on the altar for service, and I take this means of offering to you all that I have to give. Please use me. Especially do I ask to be used in the way places and the hard places.

Since Conference I have preached ten times; organized one Sunday school; five have joined the church on profession of faith; many have testified that they desired to do better for the coming year in the services held.

I feel that I am led by the Spirit of God. I could not do my work by wisdom, but God has helped me and his Spirit has used me in a wonderful way. I believe God brought me to America to be used. Where he leads me, I will follow.

I desire your prayers for me. I want you to let me preach and hold services. My time for January is taken, and I want no idle time this year. Open your hearts to me.

A Happy and prosperous New Year to you, each and every one.

Pray for me and my work.

Yours in Him,

CHARLES ASSAF.

FROM MAGEE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I received my appointment to Magee and Sanitorium Sunday night, and Monday afternoon following I was at Magee attending the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society. They gave me a very hearty welcome. We moved into this parsonage the next Tuesday. The good ladies had done all they could to make the parsonage comfortable. They had a committee to welcome us. They had a good dinner for us and many good eats in the storeroom. These good people have continued to show their appreciation of us in many ways.

This is a large and responsible work. The work at the Sanitorium is very much appreciated by the patients and officials. I find so many there that I have known before that I feel a peculiar interest in this work. The Sanitorium is doing a great work for humanity. Dr. Boswell and all of his staff of helpers and nurses are kind, considerate, and efficient. If we were to spend all our time there, we could not do the work that needs to be done. If any one who reads this has friends or loved ones there and will write me, I shall be glad to give them special attention.

We have received such hearty co-operation from the people, not only of our church, but of other denominations, that we are very hopeful of a prosperous year on this work.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

My God will hear me, Micah 7:7.

In the quiet home, in the heat of life and strife, in the face of death, the privilege of speech with God is inestimable. I value it more because it calls for nothing that the wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot give—that is, the simplest expression to his simplest desire. When I can neither see, nor hear, nor speak, still I can pray so that God can hear. When I finally pass through the valley of the shadow of death I expect to pass through it in conversation with him.

The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to bestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Letter from Sophie Kuntz.

Dear Friends: I was very glad indeed to be asked to write a letter for the League column of the Advocate. Some of you I have the privilege of knowing personally through the Assembly. Some are planning to prepare for some definite form of Christian work just as I am now doing here at Scarritt. We are all Leaguers together trying to serve our Master to the best of our ability.

This, my second year at Scarritt, has been a very happy one. I wish that every Louisiana girl had the chance of being here, too. There are so many good things in connection with our school that it is hard to know where to start telling about them. I am going to give you just a little taste of what happened here during Christmas. Maybe you might some day come and see for yourself.

Early Christmas morning we were awakened by strains of "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." We would have thought it was really an angelic chorus if some rather earthly shrieks of delight hadn't made us realize otherwise. Jumping out of bed, we opened our door and found that Santa had remembered us as well as all the other girls along the hall. We quickly drew in the packages and began to open them. Never was cord tied so tightly around boxes before. Soon, however, my roommate and I were adding to the joyous "Oh's" and "Ah's" that came from all the rooms. This delightful process over, we quickly dressed and went down to the chapel.

There in the holy quiet of Christmas morning the sweet old Christmas story was told again in song and living picture. We saw again the angels as they sang of the wonderful birth and the shepherds and wise men as they bowed in reverential awe before the manger. When the scene closed, we were led in prayer by Miss Gibson, who, for thirty-two times, has led the Christmas morning service in this same chapel. Then singing, "Joy to the World," we went into the dining-room.

After breakfast, we hurried to the parlor to be ready for Santa Claus. We soon heard his sleigh and reindeer as they landed on the roof, and really got a glimpse of them. Then the old Saint himself came down the chimney with a bound, and left a big sack of presents. There was something for everybody, but we had each to do some stunt before we got the gift. However, it was worth it.

I couldn't begin to tell you everything we did through the holidays. They were just filled with good times and with trying to do some little good to make some others happy. On New Year's Eve, when those of us who were left at the school gathered in the parlors for our watch night service, we felt that God had indeed been good to us all.

I am hoping that some who read this letter will be attending Greater Scarritt in the near future. If you have given your life for definite service, enter your training as soon as possible. You will have some delightful years ahead of you.

I would love to hear from some of the Louisiana Life Service Volunteers sometimes, and from other of my League friends, too. Best wishes for a successful year in League work.

Yours,
SOPHIE KUNTZ.

New Orleans City Union.

A very splendid meeting of the City Union was held on January 8 at Epworth Church. Among the news items are: Junior, Intermediate and Senior Leagues have been organized at Mary Werlein Mission and the Senior League won the attendance percentage for the evening. I am sure all the New Orleans Leaguers are glad to hear of these new Leagues and will do all they can to assist in any way possible. The date for the City Institute was set for the second week in February—February 10 to 16. From all indications this is going to be the best Institute ever held, and it is hoped that a good many out-of-town Leaguers from the New Orleans District will be able to come in for that week.

Last, but not least, comes the news of the glorious City Union Banquet to be held January 24 at the Bienville Hotel. All arrangements have been made and tickets ready. Girls, this is to be a real "classy" affair, so look your classiest. This banquet is one of the five real big treats our Third Department is offering this year and it is to be an annual affair. Any out-of-town Leaguer friends desiring to come in for same will have to get in touch with Miss Violet Wade, 1014 Cambronne St., New Orleans, for reservations. There are only a few to be had, so write at once, if you are coming.

The meeting closed with a delightful minstrel performance given by the Epworth Leaguers of Epworth.

The Government will endure on the rock of law enforcement; or it will perish in the quicksands of lawlessness.—Harry M. Daugherty, United States Attorney General.

It is not the thing that you meant to do,
But that the thing that you did, my son,
That counts in keeping the record true
Till the long day's work is done.

RUN-DOWN WEAK, NERVOUS

Benefited by First Bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lancaster, Pa.—"After I was married I became terribly run-down and was weak and nervous. My sister-in-law told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My husband got me a bottle at once, and it did me so much good that I kept on taking it. I began to feel well and strong again and was able to do my housework up to the time my baby was born—a nice fat little girl in the best of health. I surely am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends when they have troubles like mine, and I am perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. Frank H. Grimm, 533 Locust Street, Lancaster, Pa.

Women should heed such symptoms as pains, backache, nervousness, a run-down condition and irregularity, as they indicate some form of female trouble.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for all these troubles. For sale by druggists everywhere.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

LETTER FROM CUBA.

To The Woman's Missionary Societiee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, U. S. A.

Havana, Cuba.

Miss Estelle Haskin,
Lambuth Building,
Nashville, Tenn.

My Dear Miss Haskin: Your letter was received asking me for a message of the new day in Cuba, that you might broadcast it to the women of our auxiliaries. I will hasten to reply, sending this letter by the splendid aeroplane mail service operating between the United States and Cuba.

I am here attending the Standard Sunday School Training School, which is being carried on in Candler College. There are more than one hundred delegates, including representatives from every province in the island. Among these delegates are women teachers and officers in the woman's missionary societies. The women are being entertained in Colegio Buenavista (Boon-a-vis-ta), and how I do wish the women in the missionary societies might be here to enjoy fellowship with these fine Cubans and to see how enthusiastic they are in the work. They are to receive their certificates at the end of the term if they meet all the requirements of the courses. All this is something new which will mean much for the future of the kingdom of our Lord here in Cuba. At the close of the training school definite plans are to he made for an island-wide evangelistic campaign into which all our workers will throw their strength.

I must not fail to tell you that the great handicap to our work here has been lack of trained Cuban preachers and teachers in sufficient numbers to meet its needs. You may ask where these workers are to come from now. O, how I wish I had time to tell you in detail of the great new day in Cuba which was ushered in by the Centenary and which has become more glorious each year! Many young people answered the call to life service by volunteering to dedicate their lives as preachers, teachers, or evangelistic workers. They have been organized into Volunteer Bands, and already they are entering our training schools to prepare themselves for this work. Women's missionary societies have been organized, and the women are supplying scholarships for some of these volunteers in training; Cuban preachers are contributing to the support of others. They realize the need, because here and there numbers of congregations are pleading for day schools for their children which shall be in charge of our own Christian teachers.

I have never seen more enthusiastic groups of Christian workers than the women's missionary societies which it has been my privilege to meet with here. The president of the Woman's Missionary Conference who resides in Camaguey (Cam-a-gwi) has been given a piece of property by her husband which she may use in any way she sees fit, and her heart burns with a desire to use it for the establishment of a Christian social-evangelistic center. Would it not be a little strange if the women of the missionary societies in Cuba, an organization less than two years old, should establish a social-evangelistic center here on their own initiative when, up to this time, we have had only three schools and no missionaries working outside of the school work?

O, I wish I could tell you what a magnificent work our missionaries are doing here. Miss Frances Moling is known all over Cienfuegos (Thie-en-few-a-gos), and her influence is felt far and wide outside the school. Miss M. Belle Markey has organized well the school in Havana and is developing the normal department. Last year she superintended the building of a second story on the house, in addition to her school work. Did you know that Miss Rebecca Toland was one of our pioneer missionaries to Mexico, going to that country in 1881? Then she became a pioneer in the work here in Cuba. After fortw-two years, she is still an outstanding missionary. So greatly is she beloved that upon recommendation of the Chamber of Commerce in Matanzas, the city made her officially an "adopted daughter of Matanzas" in a formal ceremony. Too much cannot he said of the work of Misses Annie Churchill, Clara Chalmers, and Juuia Jones; but O, we need more missionaries like all of these for our work in Cuha.

There is now a well-defined educational system in our work on this little island. This new day in our educational work has brought uniformity of study courses and correlation of schools and has increased greatly the efficiency of the work. Day schools are correlated with boarding schools, and regional boarding schools—Pinson College in Camaguey, Colegio Eliza Bowmau in Cienfuegos, and Colegio Irene Toland in Matanzas—are in turn correlated with Candler College and Colegio Buenavista in Havana, which together form the great training center.

Recent action of the Board of Missions has placed definite responsibility on these institutions. Candler College is to train the preachers, young women training in Colegio Buenavista for evangelistic work having access to these classes; Colegio Buenavista is to train the teachers, young men in Candler being admitted into the pedagogical courses at Buenavista. It will surely be a new day for our work in Cuba, indeed, when these trained workers go out from our schools to take up their work. By the way, we must get money from somewhere to supplement the Week of Prayer fund and put up the school building which is so urgently needed, or Colegio Buenavista may fail Cuba in her new day by having to refuse to admit students.

I praise God daily for what has been done under his leadership in this mission field, and I trust that our Methodists at home may not fail him in taking advantage of the opportunities which lie before us in this great new day in our work in Cuba. We do not have to work at the task alone; we shall work with Cuban Christians to bring Cuba to Christ.

Yours most sincerely,
ESTHER CASE.

SOMEBODY BLUNDERED.

By Garfield Evans.

He rode six hundred miles on a motorcycle, thinking that he was going to a place where he could work his way through school. He had felt impressed to do some Christian work, and was conscious that he was not properly prepared. He had a high school education, and had attended college one year, but stopped because it was not particularly interesting. He was not a lazy boy, but was working hard in some occupation and was making a good salary.

His inclination was to prepare for some definite missionary work. He was advised by his presiding elder to go to an industrial center, with the assumption that he could get work and have sufficient time to study. A position was secured by correspondence, and the trip was made. Arriving at his new place for work, he found he would be compelled to work long hours, and the only opportunity for study was the coaching by a friend after a hard day's work—when he was in no condition to study.

This position was held for several months, when it was given up, and another one sought of a more congenial nature. But this second position offered no plan for getting the preparation which he needed. All this time he was under the impression that he would be accepted by the church for work on the foreign mission field.

He was not a little surprised when he discovered by conversation with a connectional secretary that he must return to college and thoroughly prepare himself in academic courses before he could serve on the foreign fields. Such a waste of time and effort by such blunders hinders the securing of our choicest young people and tends to develop a spirit of rebellion or indifference in those who might prepare for large usefulness.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventiug influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at hedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

A BIRTHDAY LETTER.

Dear. Brother Carley: It has been quite a while since I raised a voice in the Advocate. It is because of a sense of incompetency to write intelligently. But please allow me space to give a little vent to my pent-up thoughts and feelings.

This is New Year—a very appropriate time to form new and better resolutions; however, with me good resolutions are always in vogue.

This day to me means even more than New Year. It is my birthday! Last night when the clock struck 12, and the whistles were screaming, bells chiming, and the fireworks displaying their activities, time was recording the last moments that completed my seventy-third year, ushering me into my seventy-fourth year.

With reverent awe and gratitude I realized the great goodness of God and his unnumbered blessings to me. He was my guide in youth, bringing me on to manhood, and now to old age. I am the last of a family of eleven children left to cross the River. But God has purpose in all things. I must remain on this side until the Angel comes to part the waters, and the Lord says, "Come up higher."

I am so delighted with the new movement in our Central Church! Since the coming of our much beloved pastor, Brother Del Longgrear, the whole church seems to have taken on new life, and are forming new resolutions, receiving a new spirit, desiring greater and better things, reaching out after those things that are more excellent. Brother Longgrear is a great church superintendent and financier, as well as a great preacher: when he pulls, the whole load moves. Pray for us. May God bless our beloved Advocate and its Editor. I have been a reader of the Advocate for more than fifty years.

Yours most truly,

F. H. MURPHY.

Stomach Trouble?

Health is Most Important to You.

Columbus, Ga.—"Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a grand medicine for stomach trouble. I have suffered greatly all my life from a disordered stomach. My food seemed to set so heavy, no matter what I ate. I have taken many of the medicines advertised for this trouble, but none of them has ever come up to Golden Medical Discovery for giving prompt and lasting relief. Whenever I have a sluggish liver, with sick-headaches and constipation, I have found Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets a very efficient remedy. They do not gripe or cause any other distressing condition such as a great many pills do."—Mrs. Laura Kimbrough, 3503 Erlene Avenue.

Obtain this Medical Discovery of Doctor Pierce's at your nearest drug store, in tablets or liquid, or send 10c. to Doctor Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package, and write for free medical advice.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

Many Diseases Start from Clogged Intestines

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

AN ARMY MORE THAN 2,400,000 STRONG

Figures recently compiled show the numerical strength of our Church to be above 2,400,000. Quite a large army, is it not? This army has always given a good account of itself and has been steadily growing since its organization. Not only must new recruits be secured, but it is of as much importance that we take proper care of those who are already enrolled, by seeing that they are

PROPERLY EQUIPPED AND BY KEEPING UP THE MORALE

This twofold need can best be met by putting a Church paper in the home of each member. Then the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" will have a new meaning to you. Let's do this on Good Literature Sunday. You will render your Church a real service.

Brother Pastor, you are an officer in this army. How about your company's equipment? A Church paper in every Methodist home will multiply many times the present spiritual force and effectiveness of the Church.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY

DR. CARROLL WANTS FACTS AND INCIDENTS OF EARLY METHODISM.

Recently in a notice of my book, "Francis Asbury in the Making of American Methodism," Will Allen Dromgoole, of the Nashville Banner, stated that he is the great-grandson of Edward Dromgoole, an early Methodist preacher who wrote John Wesley of the fitness of Asbury to be in charge of the work in the United States. The reviewer also referred to the fact that George Coke Dromgoole, the eldest son of Edward, who served as a member of Congress from Virginia, was named for George Whitefield, the evangelist, and Thomas Coke, the first bishop.

It has occurred to me that there are probably others who are similarly linked to the early years of American Methodism, and this item is intended as an invitation to any who are thus related to contemporaries of Asbury, or know of interesting facts and incidents of that period, kindly to send them to me at Plainfield, N. J.

The dedication in 1924 of an equestrian statue to Francis Asbury, which is to stand at the intersection of Sixteenth and Mount Pleasant Streets, Washington, D. C., should bring to light interesting incidents and records of the early days of American Methodism. Old faded letters may exist relating to Francis Asbury, Robert Strawbridge, Philip Embury, Barbara Heck, Ezekiel Cooper, and others. Christopher Ruckle had a valuable letter of Barbara Heck in his possession. He settled at Maumee, near Toledo, Ohio, in 1848. He left a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Whidden, who was living at Presque Isle, Ohio, in 1890. GULF COAST WORK.

The Centenary has given to the foreigners of the Gulf Coast at Biloxi additional workers, a well organized church, known as the Wesley Memorial Church, and has furnished funds for the complete renovation of the Community House property. SUNDAY SCHOOL.

World and the Old Gospel," "Christian Education the Hope of Civilization," "Winning the World Through Childhood," "The Place of Religious Education in World Evangelism," "The Sunday School and World Prohibition," "The Sunday School and National Righteousness," "Indigenous Lesson Courses," "Training a Native Leadership," "Adequate Literature for Schools of All Lands," "Organizing Adult Classes in Every Land," etc.

Many constructive features of the convention in its relation to Sunday school work will be cared for in departmental conferences. Some well known leader is now in charge of each of these special fields of Sunday school activity, and the completed program will not represent the methods of any one country, but will show that department in its world relationships.

As a part of this convention, two full days will be devoted to a conference of officials. This will include officers of the World's Sunday School Association, National or International Sunday Schoool Associations and their auxiliaries, and denominational or interdenominational Missionary S. S. Boards or Councils. Data for this very comprehensive survey is now being gathered from all parts of the world. This data will be put into printed form and will be the basis of the discussion. For consideration by the Conference it will be classified by continents and by nations. The findings, after modifications have been made by the Convention, will probably be issued in printed form.

Dr. W. G. Landes, General Secretary of the World's Sunday School Association, and Secretary of the Program Committee, will leave soon for another conference with the Glasgow Convention Committee, and the outline of the program will be issued shortly thereafter; meanwhile the speakers and conference leaders are being secured.

Adequate arrangements have been made to care for the about 2,000 delegates who will go from North America. The Transportation Committee has secured the exclusive passenger space on three steamers which will sail from American ports on June 7, going direct to Glasgow. Special tours have been outlined for those who care to travel in Europe either before or after the Convention. Another tour bulletin has been issued which gives the daily itinerary of the eighteen carefully prepared tours. All information can be had by addressing the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. The pre-convention tour to the Holy Land and Egypt will leave New York on April 9.

THE WORD FOR TO-DAY.

By Clayton Albert Smucker, Ph.D.

There are plenty of morally earnest folk in the world who are fast becoming indifferent to the commonplaces either of morality or religion, and who are prepared to question anything and everything rather than let sham be worshiped under the name of good. Inside every church—but far more outside all churches—men are beginning to ask why they should believe anything merely because it is imposed by authority in church and State, and they are asking, not because they are indifferent to what is highest and best, but because they are determined to find out what that is. Let none of you who are in earnest about the future be deceived as to the conditions in the present.

Everybody knows that ecclesiasticism is decaying. Nothing is more astonishing than the absolute obtuseness of the official religious mind as to what is really going on. That mind is either perfectly satisfied with things as they are, or, like the Pharisees of old, it throws the blame upon outside influences. And the apathy of the masses is just as pronounced. They are sunk in materialism of a different sort from that of the respectable church-goer, but not one whit less pungent in its effects. What is the conversation of the ordinary youth of to-day, especially among the wage-earning classes? Has it anything to do with the potent movement which is stirring in the world-heart? Not at all. It is concerned with athletics, gambling, sensuality. It scoffs at the religion as represented by the churches, but not because it seeks anything better. To the average man life consists in having a good time, not in noble aim and high endeavor. It is said that the folks are gospel-hardened. That is not true; they are not; they seldom or never hear the real gospel, and have little conception of what it is. It is now as it was in the days of Isaiah, and as it was again in the days of Jesus, it is only the few that have the vision. Of the many it may truly be said that the god of this world has blinded their eyes and hardened their heart. What we need right now is some moral earthquake that will get folk back to the simple evangel of Jesus, love to God, expressed in love to man.

To every age there comes a different word of God, not a new one, but a special call to see and realize a fresh application of an old principle. The word for to-day is brotherhood. When you see a man worried and heart-broken by the struggle to keep his business going; when he knows that every new day is bringing ruin nearer and nearer by the remorseless operation of forces over which he has no control; when you see a father driven to despair because he cannot obtain sufficient employment to find bread for his children; when you hear of people living in foul rookeries—ignorant, degraded, and with loathsome habits—it is not enough to say that they must believe and be saved; still less is it enough to say that their sufferings are their own fault. Nor does it avail to tell them that they must set their affections upon things above, and that this world does not matter. There is a subtle worldliness in that very form of advice; it is a way we have of comforting ourselves, and taking things easy when they are to our advantage. There is nothing more detestable than to hear folks whom the world has treated well talking about worldliness. Why, the whole outlook of such folk is unreal; they have not even begun to know what the religion of Jesus means. It is morally harmful to keep on telling the world that Jesus died to save sinners unless you are prepared to do the same thing in exactly the same sense. It is a downright evil to keep on insisting on a sanctification which ignores the root causes of misery and degradation in the world around you. It is false and misleading to present Christianity as though it were a system of belief having a magical efficacy in securing men a place in heaven. All this will have to go in order that one main thing may stand out plain and clear, namely, the urgency of justice and equity in the dealing of man with man. "This do, and thou shalt live." We want that message made white hot. We want to get men so possessed by it that when they see anything inconsistent with it, whether in an individual or an institution, they will boldly say so and take the consequences. We must make an end of pretending. It is inconsistent with the gospel of Christ that men, women and little children should live in chronic misery. It is a sin against the law of God that we should be content to have it so.

Now and always the real follower of Jesus is called upon to wage war against everything that holds the lives of human beings in bondage. There are no sins so great as the sins of omission. We can justly say to every one who is living a useless life, however outwardly respectable and pious it may seem, "You are an offense in the sight of God;' the world's sin lies at your door because you have done nothing to cure it. Your very standard of goodness is false and wrong. It is no goodness that lives in the shelter and avoids the stress of life. It is no goodness that is merely the negation of certain forms of sin. True goodness is like a sharp sword cleaving wickedness asunder and severing the bonds of those who are held captive by poverty and shame. If you really belong to the great Christ you sing about you cannot sit still, you cannot keep out of the fray; you must be up and doing, out in the open where the fire is hottest. The time is here when Christians will have to talk less about heaven and set to work to make it. Thank God for the thousands who are doing it already. But what are you doing with life? How much is the world better and brighter because you are in it?" Away with materialism in thought and deed; away with selfish indifference to the world's woe; away with all desire to grab and hold every man for himself; away with all falsehood in faith and morals; away with self-satisfied piety and cynical impiety. May the Lord open our eyes that we may see!—The Christian Advocate (New York).

METHODISM MAKING HISTORY.

February 1-March 16.

There have been many epochal hours in the history of the Methodist church, but no previous year has witnessed a greater achievement than will be credited to this new year of grace. Methodism has undertaken many great movements of faith and investment for the good of humanity, but none of greater significance than the pending program to provide a more adequate support for our ministers, who have worn themselves out in the service of the church. The church and civilization owe these aged veterans a debt, whose payment has been too long delayed, but at last the fullness of time has come, and our two and one-half million members are going to do something that will be worthy of us and them.

There are no less than nine hundred and fifty of these honored heroes in retirement at the present time, besides as many more widows of ministers, and half as many dependent orphans of deceased preachers. It is unthinkable, but true, that these men worked during their effective years on an average salary of but little more than $400 per year, and now, when they are no longer able to bear the burden in the heat of the day, the church pays them less than half this amount for their yearly support. It is not creditable to the church that these men, who have made so large a contribution to the religious and social welfare of the world, should be dependent upon relatives in their declining years or left to suffer in silence, as many of them do. The church owes them at least enough to provide the necessities of life.

Fortunately our numbers and resources have attained such proportions that any general enlistment of our people makes it comparatively easy to achieve a great thing. A moderate sum from every congregation will yield the $10,000,000 proposed as a permanent endowment, and this will enable the church to pay these men (with the regular collections) an average of $600 to $700 per year. It cannot be doubted that the church generally reveres these honored heroes, and only awaits the opportunity to make a response to this cause that will be more general and generous than has been given to any other movement of our day.

I am anxious for the full program of this campaign to have right of way in the Tenth Episcopal District from February 1st to March 16th. I doubt if a single Conference in the connection fails to meet its quota, and certainly I want us to see to it that the response from our Conferences is a full one hundred per cent, and then some for good measure. The complete success of this movement is assured, if the plans are fully carried out in every charge. I am confidently pledging our headquarters that this will be done by every man in the Tenth Episcopal District.

THE CHRISTIAN HEART.

By Rebecca L. Turner.

What wiit Thou have me do? O God, my Father,
Let me not err among the calls I hear.
Give me Thy promised wisdom, and I rather Shall know Thy voice, "Come this way," deep and clear.

How wonderful the gift of life unending
Through Thy great suffering Son bestowed on me!
For, though my years reach on through ages blending
With the unreckoned cycles of eternity,

Were every puise of being spent in labor,
And every breath in prayer, I could not earn,
By any toils, the purchase of my Saviour.
Teach me the love He asks as His return.

If thus I love, can I, but little caring,
Half-hearted serve the cause that broke His heart?
Or not cast off as ailen and ensnaring
All thonght in which he can not have a part?

O precious Christ, my Priest, my Friend forever,
For me there is no joy without Thy smile;
Unfaltering faith and nnreserved endeavor
Belong to Thee, who counted me worth while!

A CHRISTIAN ARMY IN CHINA.

The Story of General Feng and His Army Going Into Battle Singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

By George T. B. Davis.

Twenty-three years ago an ignorant Chinese soldier was shooting holes through the characters of a Mission signboard to scare away the cholera demon, and to show his hatred of the foreigners. To-day that former private soldier is one of the most unique and influential figures in China, and is commander of one of the most remarkable armies since the days of Cromwell.

This interesting personage is General Feng, who has an army of thirty thousand men just outside of Peking, and the latest reports state that fifteen thousand of the troops have professed faith in Christ. It is the cleanest army in the world. No smoking, drinking, swearing or gambling is seen. Some of those who are not saved say they might as well become Christians, for they have to act like them anyway. The men often march from drill singing gospel hymns. A year or two ago when they were fighting the Manchurian War Lord, they went into battle singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." It is scarcely necessary to add that the enemy was defeated.

Some time ago Rev. E. Stanley Jones visited China and held meetings with Dr. J. Sherwood Eddy in General Feng's army. Mr. Jones gives an interesting pen picture of General Feng. Writing in the Belfast Witness, he says: "He is the most outstanding man in China in many ways. Unemotional Chinese and foreigners have, with equal emphasis, told me that they thought he was the one man that could save China, and that he would make a splendid president of China—far better than any they have had so far.

"One day a friend of Feng caught him unawares mopping the floor. Some of his staff remonstrated with him that such work was degrading for him, and they quoted Confucius to that effect. Feng said, 'Yes, Confucius said that; hut what does the New Testament say? Here is a New Testament. Find some passage that bears on the subject.' It was this: 'Whosoever will he great among you, let him be your minister; and wbosoever will he chief among you, let him be your servant.' They acknowledged that Feng was right. No man is ashamed of any work of any kind.

"He has a motor car which is used for guests and officials visiting him, but he himself does not use it. He either rides a bicycle, walks, or rides a horse. The officers understand that they are not to ride in ricksbaws, for it makes them soft. They go in for hardness.

"As we talked with General Feng and felt his grave but humble demeanor, we thought of a comhination of Abraham Lincoln, Cromwell, and Moody—the elements of all three meeting in this man. He suffers for his people like Lincoln; he is as iron as Cromwell; and as flaming as Moody. And yet he is human and lovable, with a strong sense of humor."

Probably no other missionary in China has been so used of God in leading General Feng's men to Christ as Dr. Jonathan Goforth, the well known missionary evangelist. For years he has heen spending considerable periods conducting revival meetings among the troops, and has seen thousands of them puhlicly confess Christ. Some months ago three thousand of the troops were haptized in one day.

When in New Zealand recently, the writer received an urgent call from Dr. Goforth to visit China and work in the Christian Army, and we are now in Australia en route to Peking. More than two years ago, our party—consisting of my mother, her companion Miss Beebe, and myself—left America on a Bible distribution and soul-winning tour of the world. Before leaving America letters were sent out to fifteen hundred people, asking them to pray, and to get others to do the same. Prayer has been answered in a marvelons and miraculous manner. The work of the past two years has simply heen a narrative of answered prayer.

We were invited to Australia by a godly business man of Sydney. I expected our work would be chiefly among adults. In an unexpected manner, God swung wide the doors of the schools of Sydney, and at the same time he swung wide the purse strings of tbe man who invited us to Australia. He declared he would give Testaments free of cost to the boys and girls of Sydney who would enlist in the Pocket Testament League. In a two months' campaign, more than eighteen thousands Testaments were distrihuted, and thousands of hoys and girls and young people confessed Christ. Seeing the marvelous blessing that followed the distribution of Testaments in this manner, this keen business man and his brother became fired with a desire to give Testaments throughout New South Wales to boys and girls who would agree to read and carry them.

In a little more than two years they have given away over one hundred and fifty thousand Testaments. These added to those we have distributed in other parts of Australia and New Zealand make a total of about a quarter of a million Testaments given away in connection with the work during the past twenty-seven months. It is the Lord's doing in answer to believing prayer, and to him we give all the praise!

In his invitation to visit China and work in General Feng's Christian Army, Dr. Goforth writes: "I wish you might come this autumn and plan to spend at least a year in China. You are needed, and you would have the hearty sympathy of General Feng and his five Brigade Generals and Chief of Staff, as well as his fifteen Colonels, and most all his Majors in your effort. It will be the greatest opportunity of your life; for you, through this Christian Army, can help make this great people a Bible-loving people."

An edition of fifty thousand Testaments in Chinese is being printed for the campaign in China. They are small enough for the pocket, and are hound in durable cloth covers. I wrote Dr. Goforth asking how many Testaments would be needed for the army. In reply he says that while some of the men have Testaments and carry them, they are rather worn, and that General Feng wishes each man in the army to receive a new one. This will mean thirty thousand copies, while we are hoping to use at least twenty thousad more in special work among prisoners, orphans, lepers, students, and other special classes.

Dr. Goforth declares General Feng's army is the greatest spiritual force in China. He urges me to get Christian people everywhere to pray for them "because their upholding means the salvation of untold millions." One of the foremost Christian workers in Australia, and a man of keen spiritual vision, says: "I agree with Dr. Goforth that General Feng's army is the key to the future welfare of China."

Surely you wish to have a part in this work by joining with others in praying fervently day by day for General Feng and his army; and for us as we labor in their midst. By your prayers you can have a vital share in the victories achieved. We are making an effort to get fifty thousand intercessors to pray for the work and workers. Can we count on your co-operation?

A Prayer Card has been issued containing suggested prayers for General Feng and his army, and for our party. You can also render splendid service to the cause by sending for a supply of these cards and distributing them in your church and community. A letter addressed to "The Sunday School Times," 1031 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will bring the desired number of cards free of cost.

In closing, let me appeal to Christians everywhere to focus their prayers upon this strategic and unparalleled movement in China, and thus demonstrate to the world once more the fact that God hears and answers believing prayer.

GREAT HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS.

By Hugh Fraser.

Onward, Christian Soldiers.

Although we have here in Canada as many, if not more, puhlic holidays as they have in England, they have some which are little known here, and one of them is Whitsuntide, which falls seven weeks after Easter.

On Whit-Monday, 1865, the children from two small villages in Yorkshire were uniting in a school festival. Among other events of the day there was to be a procession, and those in charge were anxious to have a hymn with such a good swing that the young people would heartily join in singing as they marched along. The clergyman of the Anglican Church in one of the villages was the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, and as he had already written several hymns which people liked he was asked to write one for the Whit-Monday procession. He sat down and wrote, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," one of the best known and most loved hymns ever written. It was written especially for boys and girls, but grown-up folks appear to like it just as well, and during the days of the Great War it was a great favorite with the soldiers and was sung thousands of times.

"Onward, Christian Soldiers" is not the kind of hymn people care to sing sitting in their seats. There is a grand swing to it and a heartiness about the words themselves which make everybody want to sing and do their hest. It was said of a great military leader that when his soldiers grew weary during their long marches, he used to order the band to play, and the music seemed to put new life into the men. That is just the kind of thing that this splendid hymn does. It puts new life into people, and many an audience which had become listless has had new light brought to it when everybody was asked to stand and sing this hymn.

The author of the hymn did not live in a great city. Practically all his life was spent in a few small villages. In 1881 he was appointed vicar of a small parish where the total population was only about 250, and there he remained for many years. He died only last week. He would have been ninety years old on Jan. 28. He was the author of a great many hymns, the best known of which are "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Now the Day Is Over," "On the Resurrection Morning," and "Through the Night of Doubt and Sorrow."

The idea of the hymn suggests that all Christians are engaged in a great battle—the greatest of all battles—the conflict against evil. An army is divided into many regiments, and every regiment has its own uniform and its own part to play. This hymn recognizes that there are many regiments in Christ's army, but emphasizes the truth that when it comes to the great question of loyalty to the Master all the regiments are united. This is the idea expressed in the lines:

"We are not divided,
All one body we;
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

There have been many great empires in history. The Egyptians once were a great people, but their glory has long since passed, and they can scarcely be called a nation to-day. Assyria terrified Judah with a cruel tyranny, but the prophet's prediction of their doom has long since been fulfilled. The great Babylonian empire has completely vanished, and men to-day scarcely know where the great city stood. Greece and Rome also long ago ceased to have more than a shadow of the former glory.

In contrast with these passing kingdoms, the hymn sets forth the truth that the church of Jesus continued to grow and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. There is a magnificent ring in that stanza:

"Crowns and thrones may perish,
Kingdoms rise and wane,
But the Church of Jesus
Constant will remain;
Gates of hell can never
'Gainst that Church prevail;
We have Christ's own promise,
And that cannot fail."

There is a good deal of evil in the world, no sensible person denies that, but there is also much good, and the forces of evil will eventually be overcome. That fine, courageous note sounds in the last verse of the hymn. As brave soldiers fight, even in the face of great odds, the Christians must fight looking on and being inspired by the magnificent example of Jesus. Christians must follow on, keeping the flag of Jesus ever going on before:

"Onward, then, ye people,
Join our happy throng,
Blend with ours your voices
In the triumph song;
Glory, laud, and honor
Unto Christ the King;
This through countless ages
Men and angels sing."

God appointed that year by year His people should be reminded of His goodness to them. And I venture to say that it would be well indeed for us if we would dwell a little more, in these busy lives of ours, in thankful remembrance upon God's great goodness to us. When you think back upon the years of your life, is it not simply wonderful? How good our God has been! O do not let us forget to praise Him for His loving kindness and His great goodness in the years that have gone by!—T. R. O'Meara.

"KEEP IN DE MIDDLE OB DE ROAD."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

E. O. Excell, when he was singing for Sam Jones' revivals, used to sing as a solo an old Negro ditty, the refrain of which was, "Keep in de Middle ob de Road." Its meaning and appropriateness were very evident. Some one asked a sensible Methodist preacher: "Are you a Modernist or a Fundamentalist?" The answer is: "Neither—'I keep in de middle ob de road'! It is the only safe and sane place." The so-called "Modernists" are neither modern nor scriptural, in the distinguishing tenets of their contention. So it is with the so-called "Fundamentalists." While both maintain some things that are true, as all who claim to be Christians must do, yet both contend for some things that are false. On one side of the road, the safe way, the way of truth and righteousness, there spreads a morass of briars and tangled vines and noxious weeds and shadowy, dismal swamps—masses of uncertainty and hopelessness. This is the "Modernist" side. On the other side of this road there spreads a wide vista of alluring landscape, very attractive to some—decked with gorgeous flowers that allure, and spanned by rainbows that promise much; but the flowers are poisonous and the rainbows lead to no safety. This is the "Fundamentalist" side. The only safe going is in the middle of the road.

This parable is really not borrowed from Excell's Negro song; nor is it original with this writer. Moses wrote long ago: "Ye shall not turn aside (from the God-given statutes and ordinances) to the right hand or to the left." For seeing the time when Israel would have a king, he admonished this coming king, "that he turn not aside from the commandment to the right hand or the left." (See Deut. 5:32; 17:20.) Joshua, following his master, makes the same plea—1:7; 23:6. The plea then was a very sane and righteous one. It is so now.

Most emphatically this preacher is neither a "Modernist," nor a "Fundamentalist"; but he is a middle of the road man. He finds this road to be not only safe and sane, but really "an highway * * * and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

Brethren, let us "keep in the middle of the road"!

ROBERT MORRISON CENTENNIAL.

One hundred years ago Robert Morrison, the first Protestant missionary to China, mighty in word and deed, finished his great service of love—the translation of the Bible into Mandarin Chinese.

The occasion was fittingly observed under the auspices of the American Bible Society by a group representing all the missionary activities in China, at a luncheon given at the Hotel Biltmore, on Dec. 28, 1923. The principal addresses were made by the Honorable Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Ambassador to the United States; the Rev. J. Leighton Stuart, D.D., President of Peking University, and the Rev. William Ingraham Haven, D.D., LL.D., General Secretary of the American Bible Society.

The American Bible Society, in 1882, made a grant of $3,000 to help in the publication of this first Chinese Bible; the British and Foreign Bible Society made even larger grants. The one hundred years that followed have been full of activity on the part of the Bible Societies and missionary organizations in preparing the Bible for the Chinese; and it is said that the book is now available in China in as many as thirty-nine languages, dialects, and colloquials. The average circulation on the part of the American Bible Society during the past two or three years has been about 2,000,000 volumes. Since the Society first established its China agency in 1876, it has circulated 32,789,716 volumes of the Christian Scriptures in China.

Robert Morrison is conspicuous for many other achievements besides the translation of the Bible. His first work to be published was a Chinese grammar, which was followed by the New Testament, and later by the Old Testament. In 1820 he established an Anglo-Chinese College at Malacca "for the reciprocal cultivation of Chinese and European literatures." In 1821 he published a Chinese dictionary in six volumes. In 1823 his complete Bible was brought out. In 1826, after a short visit to England, he returned to China and began the preparation of a Chinese commentary on the Bible. He also established a dispensary, which marks him out as the forerunner of modern medical missions.

Robert Morrison was born of Scottish parents at Bullers Green, near Morpeth, on the 5th of January, 1782. He died at Canton on the 1st of August, 1834.—Bulletin, American Bible Society.

COURAGE TO BE A FOOL.

To be certain kinds of "fool" requires no courage. Without even trying, one can drop into the class of which Carlyle was thinking when he said gruffly, in a dyspeptic mood, perhaps: "There are thirty millions of people in England—mostly fools." These are the copyists, the sycophants, the parasites, the barnacles which society carries. But there is another variety, called "fool," but, in reality, hero. And of this heroic breed Stevenson wrote, "God be thanked for a young man who has the courage to be a fool." Most of the kingdom-builders were called fools by their contemporaries. Abraham, Moses, Nehemiah; Augustine, Huss, Wesley; Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt; Carey, Brainerd, Thoburn—all fools, according to the "wise and prudent" of their generation. And Paul? "Mad," said a royal auditor. "A fool for Christ's sake," said the victim of that holy dementia. "God be thanked for a young man (or any other) who has the courage to be (that sort of) a fool."—George Clarke Peck.

A PROBLEM IN MATHEMATICS.

On Oct. 1, 1923, there were on record in the office of the Bureau of Specials, 1895 Sunday schools and classes with Centenary Specials, totaling $763,484.95. Divide this by five and you have the number of dollars paid per year by these Sunday schools during the Centenary period, for sending out missionaries and supporting native workers and their stations in active, intimate, helpful partnership with the missionaries in the eleven foreign mission fields and in the home land. If these 1895 Sunday schools and classes will renew their Specials at the same amount per year, $152,697, and if the other 15,054 Sunday schools, with their many classes, will hold sacred for missions the missionary money given on Missionary Day, and direct this offering, taking some part of the missionary world-field as their own, and grow with it, what a tremendous power the Sunday schools will become in the Christianization of the world!—Bulletin.

God has entrusted us with the reputation of others—F. W. Pattison.

To each individual and to every community God has given a task and a special trust. That is the view of life with which every man and woman will find it safest to go out into the world, that they have been intended to do something in this land, that they are here for some purpose which God has entrusted to no other living soul than themselves, and that as the years go on they must keep honor with the trust of God.—John Kelman.

CHINA AND HER FRIENDS.

By the Honorable Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Ambassador.

Address at Robert Morrison Centennial Under the Auspices of the American Bible Society, December 23, 1923.

I cannot tell you adequately with words at my command now greatly I appreciate the opportunity that this Society gave me in coming to you today to bring greetings from the country that I have the honor to represent. The American Bible Society was kind as to give me a choice of dates, in order that I might be able to come. First of all, I am glad of this opportunity to bring you greetings, and also to be able to have the pleasure of meeting here so many of my old friends. I have noticed many of my American friends here who have helped me and helped China on previous occasions. They are many. Owing to the late hour I shall not name them one by one. But I wish to assure them the work they have done for us in the past shall be remembered a long, long time—if not forever.

I am glad to have this opportunity to join you in order to do honor to the memory of Robert Morrison. Robert Morrison, after his appointment to China, after equipping himself for his new post, came—as one of our previous speakers told you—to this city in order to find a passage for China. I also read in the books that, after his arrival in China, he first lived with an American friend. So, it is only fitting and proper that this celebration of the centennial of the translation of the Bible into the Chinese language—should be celebrated in this city.

I am genuinely happy that I have the pleasure to be with you and to do honor to his memory.

Robert Morrison had the honor of being not only the first Protestant missionary to China, but also the first foreigner who made a serious study of the Chinese written language. He not only finished the translation of the Bible into Chinese, but also compiled, I am told, the first Chinese-English dictionary. Therefore, he rendered a great service to the missionaries who have come to China after him; and, in fact, to all Westerners who have come in ever-increasing numbers ever since his death. In this dictionary he furnishes a key, a "rosetta stone," as it were, to all Westerners who wish to learn the Chinese language and to get a better and more intimate knowledge of the Chinese people and Chinese civilization.

The greatness of his accomplishment would be better appreciated if we realized the disposition of the people at the time. The Chinese were always tolerant of foreign religions. On that account Nestorians came and flourished, and the learned members of the Society of Jesus played a very important part, both in court and among the people of China. But, owing to internal dissensions among different societies of Catholic missionaries over the question of ancestor worship, a wave of strong indignation arose against the missionaries. The controversy over ancestor worship became so bitter that the Manchurian emperor found it necessary to issue an edict against Catholic missionaries then in China. So, when Robert Morrison arrived, there was still in China a feeling—or rather a fear, that missionaries might interfere with one of the most cherished customs of the people.

Then, the account of the conduct of the Westerners in China, the Spaniards, Portuguese, etc., was not of a favorable character. The stories described these adventurers as being cruel and aggressive, inhuman and arbitrary. China was also fighting against the clandestine trade in opium. A fleet of fast-going boats infested the China coast to smuggle opium into China. This was about the time when Robert Morrison arrived.

Times have, however, since changed. The attitude of the people toward Westerners in general and missionaries in particular has also changed, thanks to the door that Robert Morrison opened. Westerners coming after him are able to accomplish a good deal. And I believe that a great deal more can yet be accomplished. At this time when China is passing through a period of transition in her attempt to follow the example of the Western world and to solve the problems of true democracy she needs all the patience, tolerance, and advice of all her friends and, above all, such advice as is of a constructive character.

One of the previous speakers has suggested that I should speak to you something about the phonetic spelling. I am afraid it is a subject that will take considerable time, but suffice it to say that it is an attempt to place the Chinese language on a phonetic basis. During the last ten or fifteen years an effort has been made to put the Chinese in a phonetic form, instead of having it as it now stands, in a hieroglyphic form. It has thirty-nine characters. The movement has done a great deal of good and made a great deal of progress. If I understand correctly, you will find that some parts of the Bible, if not all of it, have already been put into the new phonetic form.

Before I stop I wish to thank you once more for your kindness in manifesting an interest in my country and in my people; and I am glad that I have had this opportunity to thank you in person.

CALVIN JOYNER TELLS OF WORK IN CHINA.

C. N. Joyner, missionary to China, supported by McFerrin Methodist Church of Northeast Nashville, paid a flying visit to the city during the past few days, en route to Dallas, Tex., where he will join Mrs. Joyner and their six-months-old baby, Nicholas. Mr. Joyner is an architect and engineer, and has been serving the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the China Conference during the past two years, where he was interested in the construction of buildings, and taught for a period in Soochow University. Before leaving for the United States he was employed for a time by the Shanghai government in the construction of a modern sewerage system.

"My work for the Shanghai government was not strictly missionary," said Mr. Joyner, "but it was advancing the cause of sanitation, and in that way to some extent missionary. I worked for them about half a year on the installation of a new sewerage system for the city. In the past all sewerage had been carried in baskets on the backs of men. This resulted in such an unsanitary situation that the Shanghai government in recent years appropriated seven million dollars for the installation of a more modern system. The business section of the city is now equipped with modern facilities, and within the next five years the authorities hope to complete the entire system."

Mr. Joyner compared the engineering problem of Shanghai with that of New Orleans. Both are situated on a delta near the mouth of large rivers, he said, and as a result the drainage and sewerage problems present great difficulties. New Orleans has met the problem by deep drainage canals and levees. Mr. Joyner says that Shanghai is meeting her problem of sanitation in much the same way.

"The Chinese express themselves as being very much pleased with the new system, and it is hoped that when more peaceful times arrive in the interior the central government will extend this system to all the large cities in China."

Mr. Joyner comes of missionary stock. His father is Dr. N. E. Joyner, of New Orleans, a graduate of Vnaderbilt University of the class '97, and for many years a missionary in old Mexico. While a student in the university he became interested in Christian work at McFerrin Memorial, and thus forged the link that now binds his son to the congregation. Upon reaching Mexico he became interested in the condition of the Indians, thousands of whom are still living in the same savage state in which Cortez found them. "They could not understand Spanish," says Mr. Joyner in speaking of his father's work, "and it was necessary to reach them through an interpreter." After some years in this work, Dr. Joyner returned to the United States and worked for several years as a pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in New Orleans, where he was successful in establishing St. Mark's Hall, one of the most promising pieces of settlement work in the United States, according to many critics. This work has lately been housed in a splendid new building, the gift of the Centenary.

The elder Joyner again returned to Mexico in 1911 as director of Laurens Institute, Monterey. He and his family were among the last to leave the field when missionary work was halted by the revolution.

Following the example of his father, Mr. Joyner has transferred from work in the China Conference to work in the Mexico Conference—a natural move, he says, considering the long connection of the family with the missionary work of Southern Methodism south of the Rio Grande.

While in China Mr. Joyner met and married Miss Elizabeth Powell, daughter of Dr. Nathan Powell, of the Powell Training School, Dallas, Tex. She was at that time serving as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Soochow.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Joyner are Centenary missionaries of the Methodist Board of Missions.—Nashville Banner.

ATTENTION, PREACHERS!

I am very anxious to get hold of some data relative to the contribution the Newton District, of the Mississippi Conference, has made to the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

First: I want to know the names of both the active and superannuate preachers in the Mississippi Conference who started from within the bounds of the Newton District, even though in former days it may have been called the Brandon or Forest District.

Second: I would like to know the names of the preachers of other Conferences who started from the Newton District of the Mississippi Conference.

Third: I would be glad if some of our church historians would send me a list of the names of our sainted dead who came from within the bounds of the Newton District.

Fourth: I want the names of those preachers within the Mississippi Conference, and elsewhere, who have at some time attended the Training School, located at Montrose, Miss.

I would appreciate it very much if every preacher who has come from this District or has attended the Montrose Training School, would send me a card to that effect, and also give any special information you may have relative to the District or Training School.

My desire is to show as concretely as possible something of the contribution this District has made to the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Prompt responses are very much desired.

L. E. ALFORD, Presiding Elder,
Newton District,
Mississippi Conference.

Newton, Miss.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are to begin a meeting with Brother Andrews at Amite, La., June 8. I would be glad to arrange several meetings in Louisiana and Mississippi if the brethren need us. Now is the time to close the dates.

I refer you to Brother Andrews, or Brother Selfe, at Hammond. I have the best singer I can secure, and Mrs. Neal has charge of the piano in our meetings.

I can furnish tent.

W. HARDY NEAL,
General Evangelist,
Green Forest, Ark.

Thus Say the Bishops of the Church

We rejoice in the positive success of the Centenary throughout the church and in the notable fact that in the current year the collections show a substantial increase over the two preceding years. This indicates the vital interest the membership of the church has in carrying to completion the whole Centenary program.

While the results of the Centenary in the foreign fields and in the homeland have stirred the church to new enthusiasm and larger faith in their ability to carry on, we must not falter until the unfinished task of the Centenary has been completed.

The Centenary Commission has set up a special program for cultivation and collection which, if loyally carried out by our leaders and membership, will undoubtedly go a long way toward Completing the unfinished task of this great missionary movement.

In securing the Centenary pledges the membership of the Church was carefully visited and gifts were solicited from every member. We believe that the collection of these pledges will be largely dependent upon the same sort of personal visitation and solicitation. We therefore urge that the same plan be followed in the collection of the pledges—namely, that committees in every local Church visit the subscribers and earnestly request them to complete the payment of these pledges during the period set apart by the Centenary Commission, which period is January 20 to February 1, 1924.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY
Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.
510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The Intensive Period of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment Is from February, 1, 1924, to July 1, 1924.

The General Conference of 1922 made a law that the first quarterly conference should (1) approve the minimum amount to be raised by the charge in five years for Superannuate Endowment, and (2) appoint the Charge Special Effort Committee to direct the movement for raising the charge's quota. (See 1922 Discipline, paragraph 112.)

These duties of the first quarterly conference, as required by the law of the church, are clearly set forth in the Workers' Guide on pages 16, 17, and 18. When these matters have been attended to by the first quarterly conference, a report should be made by the charge to the Board of Finance showing the action taken concerning them. The Workers' Guide carries a pink leaf on pages 19 and 20, arranged conveniently for giving this information. The pink leaf should be carefully filled in on both sides, detached at the perforation, and mailed by first-class postage to the Board of Finance. This is the pink leaf report that I have been writing so much about in recent weeks.

The time of beginning the actual application of the plan of Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is fixed for Feb. 1, 1924. We are not at liberty actually to begin the plan for the movement before that time, except in the doing of those things demanding action under the law at the first quarterly conference and reporting its action concerning these matters on the pink leaf, as stated. Therefore, I urge the pastors everywhere at the present time to express their loyalty to the Special Effort by saying it with pinks.

An Obligation That Should Not Be Neglected.—The Centenary Commission has been given the liberty for an intensive movement during December, 1923, and January, 1924, to collect subscriptions made to the great Missionary Centenary. The Board of Finance is in hearty sympathy with the effort of the Centenary Commission to make these collections, and it sincerely hopes that every pastor will do his full duty in co-operating with the Commission in doing this work. Let every lover of the cause of the "forgotten man" be faithful to the Centenary Commission's collecting program during December and January, and I am sure that these leaders will in turn be faithful to our Special Effort during its period, which actually begins Feb. 1, 1924.

Every Day, Every Way, It Is Getting Pinker and Pinker!—This is Saturday, Dec. 29. It has been a holiday week, but, nevertheless, a good one in pink business. Pink leaf reports have been received this week as follows: Monday, 86; Wednesday, 74; Thursday, 44; Friday, 23; Saturday, 25. Total for the week, 252. Also the total number of pink leaf reports received from the beginning is 1,691. This means that already approximately $3,000,000 has been officially subscribed by the charges for Superannuate Endowment.

I sincerely believe that by Feb. 1 fully 4,000 pink leaf reports will be in the files of the Board of Finance. And before the cultivation period, Feb. 1 to March 16, is over I believe that practically every charge in the church of the Annual Conferences which have been held will have sent in a pink leaf report. The pinker it gets, the broader my smile. Come on, everybody, and add some more color to the cause of the "forgotten man"!

Presiding Elders Who Are One Hundred Per Cent Pink.—My readers will recall that some time ago I promised to publish an honor roll of the presiding elders who succeed in having the charges of their respective districts send in the pink leaf report one hundred per cent. It is a pleasure now to list these worthies in the order that they reached the goal:

1. Illinois Conference, Murphysboro District, Rev. A. E. Thomas, presiding elder.
2. Northwest Conference, Inland District, Rev. J. H. Dills, presiding elder.
3. Southwest Missouri Conference, Sedalia District, Rev. H. J. Rand, presiding elder.
4. Tennessee Conference, Mount Pleasant District, Rev. R. S. Tinnon, presiding elder.
5. Western North Carolina Conference, Statesville District, Rev. D. M. Litaker, presiding elder.

Let the good work go on. I have a vision of the names of all the presiding elders of the church on this honor roll. It seems to me that if I were serving as a presiding elder at the present time I would count it a real privilege to serve the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment in such manner that my name could appear on this honor roll for future generations to read. It is doubtless true that the work is exceedingly difficult in some districts, and yet I cannot get it out of my mind that a way can be found to do anything which ought to be done. Brother Presiding Elder, just get the mental picture of a host of over 2,300 superannuated preachers and the widows of preachers reaching out their suppliant hands to you in this emergency, and I am sure you will have the courage and the determination to keep working at this thing until it is accomplished. I am eager to add your name to the one-hundred-per-cent list. Get all the charges of your district to send the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance, and you shall have your place on the honor roll of your brethren who succeed in doing likewise.

It may help you to read quotations from letters written by presiding elders who are already one hundred per cent pink. One writes: "I have faithfully presented the cause at every quarterly conference, devoting from thirty to sixty minutes each time to the subject. In my district there is no opposition. I am plugging away at it and mean to put up a creditable job by the middle of March and for five years thereafter." Another writes: "Every quarterly conference in my district accepted the quota without a dissenting voice. It is the most popular movement I have ever seen." Another writes: "The inclosed pinks complete my district. The members of the committees have been carefully selected." And so on. And I say: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of Him who bringeth good tidings!" Say it with pinks!

On His Toes Awaiting the Signal.—I receive hundreds of letters from preachers expressing heartfelt interest in the Special Effort. I wish the many encouraging things they contain could be given to the public, but space will not permit. However, as a sample I will quote from one letter now before me the following: "For the past four years I have been sort of aching to get at this matter of Superannuate Endowment. I think there has never been a movement in our church more needed than this. Now that the time has almost arrived to begin actual operations, I am rarin' to go." A pastor who feels that way about it is sure to get a good start when the whistle blows. He makes me wish I were a pastor right now and could have the opportunity of toeing the mark with him for an honest-to-goodness race toward the appealing goal of justice for the "forgotten man."

I wonder what the church will do
About these preachers, tried and true,
Who to the Lord their young years lent
And labored until strength was spent?
These preachers who did strive to win
The world from Satan and from sin,
These saintly men, now worn and bent,
Whose lives self-sacrifice have meant?

Yes, I wonder what we will do as a church? But I do not have to speculate concerning what I will do personally. Whatever may be the outcome of the Special Effort, I am positively certain that I shall be able at the end to say I have done my dead level best. If all the preachers of the church will join me in this whole-hearted consecration to the task, there will be no need to worry about the outcome. Failure comes from careless indifference, neglect, and procrastination; success issues from an honest try. If we really make the effort, it shall be done. Please remember that Feb. 1, 1924, is the time fixed for actually beginning the work. What can you do until then to help the movement? Why, you can

SAY IT WITH PINKS!

Please Remember—A way can be found to do anything which ought to be done.

The Home Circle

FIRST CHOICE.

"I got here first!" cried Bobby. "I am first chooser!"

"No, I was first," said Ted. "I got to the gate first."

"But I got to the door first," insisted Bobby. "I am first chooser."

"Suppose we all sit down," said Miss Ruth. "We haven't said 'Good-morning' to any one yet."

Bobby and Ted and all the other children went to their little brown chairs.

The good-morning song did not sound as merry as usual; and when it was finished, Miss Ruth said: "Once I saw two little chickens quarreling over one worm. It was a long, long worm, quite enough for both, but neither would give the other one little bite. No, each one pulled and pulled and peeped and peeped until— What do you suppose happened?"

"What?" asked all the children in one breath.

"A great big old rooster came along and scolded and flapped his wings and took the long worm away from the little chicks and ate it himself."

"Oh!" breathed all the children.

"And what did the little chickens have for their dinner?" asked Sara.

"They went away and looked for another worm or maybe a bug," said Miss Ruth.

"And did they quarrel next time?" asked Bobby.

"I was not there next time," said Miss Ruth, "but I think they did not quarrel any more, at least not that morning. For they had been taught that quarrels do not pay. Now, shall we ask Rosalind to choose the first game because she was absent yesterday, and we are so very glad to see her again?"

"Yes, yes!" cried the little girls and boys.

Rosalind skipped to the center of the room. "Ten Little Indians," she chose.

Bobby slipped his hand into his pocket and felt the new whistle he had brought to help play "Postman," and Ted sighed, remembering the new game they had learned yesterday. It was a good game.

But "Ten Little Indians" is a good game, too, and soon they were circling around the room like true little red men. They could almost believe they were out in the leafy forest. They could almost feel the mossy turf under their moccasined feet. They almost forgot they were little white children in their kindergarten room. But two little boys did not quite forget the story of the little chickens who lost their dinner because neither was willing to give up to the other.—Mrs. A. O. Smith, in The Christian Observer.

THE LOST MITTEN.

By Ruth H. Whitney.

"Alice, Alice, where are you?" called Mildred. "Come quickly. Mother says you and I may go to Sunday school."

Alice came running down the stairs, her eyes shining. "Oh! how nice," she cried. "Won't it be just lovely?"

It was a treat for these little girls to go to Sunday school, especially in the winter, for they lived on a farm nearly four miles from town.

"I am going to wear my new pink mittens," said Alice. These had hung on the tip-top of the Christmas tree a few weeks before, and Alice had not had a chance to wear them. Grandma had knit them for her to match her pink scarf and cap.

"Don't forget your pennies, Alice," called big sister Margaret.

Now, the day before had been Alice's birthday, and it was the custom in her Sunday school for the children to bring as many pennies as they were years old when they had a birthday. Alice took six pennies from her bank and put them in her new blue velvet purse, which brother Rollin had given her.

Alice kissed little Harriet and baby Don good-by, saying, "If you are good children you may have some of my cake when I get home." For another nice thing about this Sunday school was the fact that Alice's teacher made a cake for each child's birthday.

Edgar, the boy who worked on the farm, came driving black Dinah up to the door, and away they went. It was a cold, frosty morning and the little girls' faces grew rosy as they rode along. The sleigh bells jingled merrily, and they had a jolly ride.

"If it was only summer we would get there quicker in papa's car," said Mildred.

"But this is just as much fun, even if Jack Frost does nip our noses," Alice replied.

Edgar was going to spend the day at his home, and Alice and Mildred were going to grandma's to dinner and to stay through the afternoon.

Alice's teacher was very glad to see her once more, and the children smiled and nodded to her.

"Alice, you may drop your pennies in this little box while the children sing," said the teacher.

Alice dropped her pennies slowly one by one, and the children sang:

Happy birthday to you,
Happy birthday to you,
Happy birthday to you, Alice,
Happy birthday to you.

Alice gave a little squeal of delight when she saw her birthday cake. It was covered with a thick white frosting with tiny pink candles scattered over it. And there were six pink candles, too. Such a happy time as Alice was having.

Mildred and Alice enjoyed the afternoon at grandma's, too. They had so many things to tell her that the time flew swiftly by.

"There comes Dinah now," called Mildred.

"I believe she knows which house grandma lives in," said Alice.

The children bundled up warmly for the long ride home.

"Where's my other mitten? I can't find it," cried Alice.

"Look in your other pocket, dear," said Mildred.

But it wasn't there, and nowhere could they find it. Alice felt as bad as the three little kittens who lost their mittens.

"Here, Alice, you may wear one of my black ones," said grandma. "It won't be much too large." For grandma was a tiny woman not much larger than Mildred.

Alice tucked her hands in her muff with one pink mitten on and one black one, and they drove merrily home.

Grandma thought she would find the mitten lying about somewhere after they were gone. But it seemed to have vanished completely. So she bought some more yarn and knit Alice another one. And there were two pink mittens once more.

Now here comes the amusing part of the story of the lost mitten. One day in March Alice came dancing in from school. "Look, mother, what I found down in the lining of my coat!" And she held up the lost pink mitten. It had slipped down through a rip near her pocket, and there it had been all winter.

So now Alice has three pink mittens. And it is sometimes as handy to have a spare mitten as it is to have a spare tire.—Zion's Herald.

This truth comes to us more and more the longer we live: that on what field, or in what uniform we do our duty matters very little, or even what our duty is, great or small, splendid or obscure. Only to find our duty certain, and somewhere, somehow do it faithfully, makes us good, strong, happy, useful men, and tunes our lives into some feeble echo of the life of God.—Phillips Brooks.

"Faith" in God, "hope" in God, "love" for God—these are the things which endure, and these are the gold and frankincense, the myrrh which, unless our eyes have been blinded and our hearts have been darkened, we will pour out not only now at Christmas, but straight onward through the years, at the feet of the loving and adorable and omnipotent King.—C. E. Jefferson.

If we but struggle on alone with God, and in the loss of physical strength upon which we have depended persistently cry to Him, the thigh of weakness may prove to the soul the verity of His words, "My strength is made perfect in weakness," for the voice of God will say to the persistent soul, "Thou art a prince among men."—John Timothy Stone.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. J. R. A. Vaughan, for fifty years a member of the St. Louis Conference and one of its leading ministers, died on Jan. 8.

Rev. B. F. Bullard, pastor at Calhoun City, Miss., is preaching to large congregations every Sunday. Everything goes well on the charge.

One of the most interesting and suggestive bulletins that come to our desk is the one issued by Rev. John A. Randolph, our pastor at Sardis, Miss.

Next Sunday, Janury 27, is Christian Literature Day throughout the church. The General Organ and the Conference Organs ought to receive a large increase to their subscription lists.

Rev. C. C. Wier, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Congerence, was a business visitor to New Orleans last week. We regret not being in the office when he called.

Rev. John F. Foster, our pastor at Lake Providence, La., reports an attendance of 62 at prayer meeting recently. Brother Foster is one of the most faithful and diligent members of the Louisiana Conference.

The Methodist and the Presbyterian churches at Belzoni, Miss., have united in an evangelistic campaign to begin on Jan. 27, with Rev. Burke Culpepper, general evangelist, leading. A great revival is anticipated.

Rev. T. C. Cooper, our pastor at Homewood, Miss., in sending a nice list of subscriptions to the Advocate, states that he is serving a fine people, and is beginning what promises to be one of the best years of his ministry.

Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, for several years pastor of the Representative Church, Washington, D. C., has been transferred from the Baltimore to the Memphis Conference, and appointed pastor of First Methodist Church, Memphis.

The Southern Methodist Handbook for 1924 is almost an invaluable volume for those who would have at hand full information concerning all departments of church work. Dr. John S. Chadwick, the editor, has brought the whole church under obligations by preparing the Handbook. It sells for fifty cents, and may be had by addressing the Southern Methodist Handbook, 239 Fourth Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

In the assembly room of the Lambuth Building, the officers and employees of the Board of Missions meet each day at noon for a short prayer service. This service lasts only fifteen minutes—but it means much to those who carry on the work of the Board of Missions.

Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretray of the Board of Finance, announces that a prominent layman of Meridian, Miss., who desires that his name be withheld, has just caused to be written in his will a bequest of $50,000 for Superannuate Endowment. Blessings upon the donor!

Dr. William E. Dodd, professor of American History at the University of Chicago, will deliver the address on Founder's Day at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, March 12. Bishop John M. Moore will preach the commencement sermon for the same institution on Sunday, June 1.

MESSAGES FROM OUR OWN BISHOPS.

Bishop Candler:

"Every church member ought to take his church paper and read it with care. Otherwise he will lack the information and instruction required for the highest Christian living and most successful Christian activity."

WARREN A. CANDLER.

Bishop Ainsworth:

"The time has come for a great revival of Methodism in these lands. Nothing is more needed now than a fresh impulse in Methodist preaching and Methodist living, and nothing is more essential to this program than a wider circulation of Methodist books and papers. John Wesley said, 'the chief reason that our people are not better is because they are not more knowing as well as more holy.' He wisely urged upon his preachers and people to 'read the most useful books (and papers), and that regularly and constantly.' We will never have a church thoroughly alive religiously and thoroughly enlisted in the activities of the kingdom until our membership buys and reads the best devotional books and keeps informed of the work of the church through its own press. I cannot too strongly urge upon our preachers and churches in the opening of a New Year to plan to circulate some good books and place The Advocate in every family of the congregation. This is one of the bottom sills in a good foundation for a year's success."

WILLIAM N. AINSWORTH.

Members of the Big Brothers' Class of Greenville, Miss., recently went to Inverness, where they held the evening service and organized another Big Brothers' Class with a membership of 30. Rev. J. J. Baird, formerly an active worker in the class at Greenville, is pastor at Inverness.

Our church at Lafayette, La., Rev. Leon I. McCain, pastor, leads the Lake Charles District in payments on the Centenary and the Christian Education Movements, and shares with another church second place in the Louisiana Conference in payments to the Centenary. This is a record to be proud of.

Henry Leon, the faithful colored man who has worked at the Advocate office for many years, had the misfortune to lose all his furniture and household possessions by fire on Monday night of this week. He had a small amount of insurance, but his loss is far in excess of that. He and his family barely escaped with their lives.

Senator T. L. Dowling is chairman of the State campaign to raise $300,000 for Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La. The campaign is meeting with success, De Soto Parish having pledged more than $60,000. One of the urgent needs of the college is an administration building, which it is proposed to erect at the earliest possible time.

Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, has been voted a vacation next summer, during which time he will conduct a party through Palestine. Dr. Rowland is an experienced traveler, and those who join his party will be exceptionally fortunate. The party will be made up largely of preachers, teachers, and Christian students.

Dr. W. G. Henry, formerly pastor of the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., now professor in Emory University, will conduct a party on a tour of Europe next summer. Seven countries will be visited, and many places of interest, including battlefields, art galleries, etc., will be seen. The party will be made up of Congenial Christian people.

Dr. J. D. Hammond, for several years the Secretary of the General Board of Education, died recently at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Bradford Roulstone, in New York City, following a stroke of apoplexy. Dr. Hammond was a faithful servant of the church. He was buried at Central Islip, N. Y., where he was serving a small Methodist Episcopal church.

Rev. W. P. Andrews, for many years a member of the Pacific Conference, died in Modesto, Calif., on January 3, being seventy-one years and a few days old. Brother Andrews was a native of Mississippi and served several years in the Mississippi Conference. He was greatly beloved wherever known. The Pacific Methodist Advocate pays a tender tribute to his memory.

Dr. S. F. Kerfoot, president of Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn., honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week. Hamline University is the oldest college in Minnesota and the only Methodist institution doing full college work. It has a student body of about 600. Dr. Kerfoot, accompanied by his wife, is traveling in the South for the benefit of his health.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Gilbert, La., 2; Rev. J. G. Johnson, Shannon, Miss., 3; Rev. A. Y. Brown, Fulton, Miss., 4; Rev. L. R. Sparks, Winnsboro, La., 2; Rev. T. C. Cooper, Homewood, Miss., 5.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT PREACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Dear Dr. Carley: A very inspiring and successful Preachers' Institute was held in Brookhaven, Miss., Jan. 17, by the presiding elder and pastors of the Brookhaven District. There were twenty preachers present. The presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, conducted the Institute in a very brotherly way, evidencing on his part a very great concern that the greatest possible progress be made in the district this year.

Different topics, relating to the work of the church and the preacher, were brought forward and discussed in an informal manner, but in a way that proved distinctly helpful. The two themes of spirituality and efficiency were uppermost all through the day, and brought to us a strong desire to make the year of 1924 the most successful this district has ever known in the winning of souls, and the advancement of our Zion along all lines.

The following resolutions were passed unanimously: "Whereas, we, the presiding elder and preachers of the Brookhaven District, in session as a Preachers' Institute, have expressed ourselves as in favor of fasting and prayer as a preparation for our revival work; therefore, be it resolved, That we urge this upon our people and practice it ourselves, remembering the example of Jesus."

The second resolution was as follows: "Resolved, That we set as our district goal for 1924, 1,000 accessions on profession of faith and every dollar of all claims paid in full."

Brother Ellis insisted that we were all his guests, and provided for us a tempting lunch at the Bell Cafe, that was most thoroughly enjoyed. It was a most delightful day in spiritual helpfulness, and suggestive of victories on revival lines in days to come. The Advocate was not forgotten, and Good Literature Day will be kept in mind. Watch the presiding elder of this district lead his forces to great victory.

ANOTHER CORRECTION.

I note that Brother Varner, of Winona, "corrects" the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference as to the statistics on Centenary and Education. If Brother Varner had pursued the excellent pedagogical principle of learning to read before he learned to write, he would have found on Statistical Table No. 3, Grenada District, Winona Station, "Paid on Centenary Pledges $789" and "On Christian Education Pledges $578," which corresponds exactly to his report he gave the secretaries, and is more than $100 more than he claims in his "correction" in the Advocate of this week.

THE BACKSLIDER.

By Colonel S. L. Brengle.

Everywhere I go I find backsliders—Methodist backsliders, Baptist backsliders, Salvationist backsliders—all kinds of backsliders by the thousand, until my heart aches as I think of the great army of discouraged souls, of the way in which the Holy Spirit has been grieved, and of the way in which Jesus has been treated.

If these backsliders were asked the cause for their present condition, ten thousand different reasons would be given, but, after all, there is but one, and that is this: they did not wait on God. If they had waited on him when the fierce assault was made that overthrew their faith, robbed them of their courage and bankrupt their love, they would have renewed their strength, and mounted over all obstacles as though on eagle's wings. They would have run through their enemies and not been weary. They would have walked in the midst of trouble and not fainted.

Waiting on God means more than a prayer of thirty seconds on getting up in the morning and going to bed at night. It may mean one prayer that gets hold of God and comes away with the blessing, or it may mean a dozen prayers that knock and persist and will not be put off until God arises and makes bare his arm in behalf of the pleading soul.

There is a drawing nigh unto God, a knocking at Heaven's door, a pleading of the promises, a reasoning with Jesus, a forgetfulness of self, a turning from all earthly concerns, a holding on with determination to never let go, that puts all the wealth of wisdom and power and love at the disposal of a little man, so that he shouts and triumphs when all others tremble and fail and fly, and becomes more than conqueror in the very face of death and hell.

The secret of all failures and of all true success is hidden in the attitude of the soul in its private walk with God. The man who courageously waits on God is bound to succeed. He cannot fail. To other men he may appear for the present to fail, but in the end they will see what he knew all the time, that God was with him, making him, in spite of all appearances, "a prosperous man."

Jesus puts the secret into these words: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

Know, then, that all failure has its beginning in the closet, in neglecting to wait on God until filled with wisdom, clothed with power, and all on fire with love.—Helps to Holiness.

FACING UP TO LIFE.

Looking himself squarely in the face seems to be a very difficult and trying thing for many a man to do. It must be a very necessary and a very excellent thing to do, at least on occasion, and the failure to do it must have somewhat serious consequences, and yet such failure is all too common. Too much introspection is not good; taking oneself too seriously is also an unhealthy thing to do, but there is a certain honest and sincere facing up to life, and a looking of its responsibilities and opportunities squarely in the eyes, that is a very manifest duty, and if we shy off from it in a cowardly and light-headed fashion we are shutting something out of life that it absolutely needs to bring it to its best. Frankly and fearlessly to ask honest questions about life in general, and about our own special relation and obligation toward it, and how we are measuring up to them, may take a good measure of courage, but unless we do it are we not likely to let slip some of the things that count for most? Most of us are inclined to be slipshod and careless in regard to many of those things that count for most, and the demand for a strict accounting with life is once in a while an absolute necessity. If we dare not make that accounting to-day, that fact is a sure proof of how badly we need to make it. If we are afraid to face up to life, what is it but that we are cowardly where cowardice is most fatal.—The Christian Guardian.

CHRISTIANITY DOES NOT SHUN PROOF.

We are told that when George Bowen was a young man and a skeptic he was led to read the Bible, which he frankly admired but as frankly did not believe. Then one night he said aloud in his room: "If there is a God that notices the desire of men, I only wish that he would make known to me his will, and I shall feel it my highest privilege to do it at whatever cost." At once the thought came, "How foolish to suppose that God will occupy himself with our desires!" Two or three days later he took home with him by mistake from the public library Paley's "Evidences of Christianity." When he discovered his mistake he threw it down, then took it up again and glanced at the first sentence. Becoming interested he read on until he was so afraid of being convinced, that he went away into the country to put it from his mind. He returned resolved to give it a second and more careful reading. When about half-way through the book he offered the prayer, "Help thou mine unbelief." When he had finished the book his doubts were gone; he was convinced of the truth of the Scriptures. He turned to the Bible itself, and day after day he shut himself up in his room and read it, till he found that he was a sinner, that he needed a Savior; that a Savior was offered him. He gave himself up unreservedly to God's will, and some years later he became one of the greatest examples of a missionary in India.—The Central Christian Advocate.

IN MEMORY OF REV. W. P. ANDREWS.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

While in California, I had every reason to be proud of the preachers who went from Mississippi tot the Far West—the Featherstuns (father and sons), Cary Chamberlin, Hiram Singleton, Horace M. DuBose and W. P. Andrews.

In this worthy list, there was none who in worthiness of character stood higher than W. P. Andrews. Indeed, he ranked among the noblest of any company. He was modest, courageous, sweet-spirited, and clean. Sir Galahad was not purer, nor Nathaniel freer from guile. During a long life I have known many men—noble men—but among them never a worthier spirit than he.

He was not a great preacher, nor a brilliant one, but he was a faithful one. Withal, his sermons were always clear, instructive, and edifying. He was a writer of more than ordinary ability and interest. If he could have expressed his clear, incisive and forceful thinking as well with his tongue as with his pen, he would have commanded a larger place as a preacher. As it was, he wrought well. A man of his knightly spirit and worthy life could not have done otherwise.

His life was a great sermon, and his character an inspiration. Only Christianity could have molded such a man.

CHURCH PRESS.

Next only to the Methodist pulpit the Methodist press is the most valuable agency of the denomination. The two ought to work in harmony. They do so work. Wherever these papers are read the pastor finds himself addressing a prepared public. Wherever the pastor believes in the papers and teaches men so the circulation is increased. Wherever the circulation increases every denominational enterprise has a better chance of being understood and being enthusiastically promoted. If the pastor were to be cut off from the Advocate subscription list, he would quickly drop to a local and provincial atmosphere. He knows what it means to him when his Advocate doesn't come. Has he ever thought that to probably three out of four people in his church the Advocate never comes and never will unless he starts it?—New York Christian Advocate.

"If there be lying before you any bit of work from which you shrink, go straight up to it. The only way to get rid of it is to do it. In every piece of honest work, however irksome, laborious and commonplace, we are fellow-workers with God."—F. B. Meyer.

ORINTHA BARKER PACE was born Feb. 8, 1880, at Conehatta, Miss.; joined the Methodist church in early boyhood days; married Miss Mabel Carson, Dec. 21, 1902; but on Dec. 22, 1922, death with its icy fingers touched his brow, and his spirit winged its way into God's eternal heaven, although the influence of his Christian life lives on and on. He leaves a devoted wife, eight children, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. His remains were laid to rest in the Conehatta Methodist cemetery to await the resurrection morn. He was confined to his bed only a few days and he bore his illness without a murmur. Approaching the end of this earthly life, he called his loving wife and told her he was going home. We have the assurance that all was well, and when we shall leave this world of changes, we shall find our missing loved one in our Father's fair mansion. His departure has saddened our hearts, but from yon heavenly home, dear brother is looking down, and while waiting at the beautiful gateway is beckoning his loved ones home. May the comfort of the Holy Spirit sustain the bereaved.

His sister,
MRS. ANNIE EADY.

AN APPRECIATION.

Others have written of her life and of her going away. Yet, intimate association of more than half a century impels me to add this tribute.

MRS. SUSAN M. DeLOACH, in childhood, imbibed from her consecrated mother those principles which go to make up a beautiful life, and which matured in her a lovely Christian character. Like those mentioned by St. John in Revelations, of her it may be fitly said: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. * * * They rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." Her works are recorded on high, and are well remembered by the many whom her hands, prompted by her loving heart, ministered to when help was needed.

She needs no great eulogium—a lasting memorial lies within the hearts of the living. Her stalwart sons, her devoted daughters, exhibit a picture of her handiwork. Their loving memories of her (and not these only, but those who by marriage became her sons and daughters) furnish a monument more enduring than marble shaft or costly mausoleum. Her last days, filled with physical suffering, were spent with her family, who spared no pains to give her ease, nor thought any effort too great that might minister to her comfort or her happiness.

Still, loving care could not stay the fatal moment. She was ready, yea, and willing. With tears and heart-throbbing they bade her farewell, as she left them to enter through the pearly gates into the eternal city, that city which has in its walls resplendent jewels.

Her weary frame is at rest; her freed spirit is happy, as she sees Him face to face, whom for many years she served with loving, faithful service.

A CENTENARY AUTO IN JAPAN.

Never was an auto more appreciated than the Centenary auto given Miss Nannie B. Gaines, of the Hiroshima Girls' School, Japan, by the Trinity Church, Roanoke, Va. Her latest letter goes into detail about the evangelistic services held in the country surrounding the school:

"It will soon be too cold to go out every day for the meetings, but I hope we can make some arrangements to continue the work until warmer weather. I have never enjoyed summers more than the two spent in this work. I have gained in health of body and in spirit.

"I do so long to see something more done for the poor and those who are not drawn to the church. What we do seems only a taste of what could be done and of what should be done. We are simply planting seed in uncultivated soil.

"Even the Buddhist temples and movies have left these people among whom we work alone. They are the refuse of the wars with China, Russia, and the Great War. This is said to be one of the worst districts around Hiroshima, but we find the children eager and thoughtful, and the parents seem to listen with interest. If our mission decides to locate one of our evangelistic centers in this section of Hiroshima, as has been suggested, here will be work already to hand."

METHODISM AND BRAZIL.

Brazil is half of the South American continent. By agreement with our sister Methodism we occupy Brazil and they the other half of the continent. Anything that touches Brazil commercially, intellectually or spiritually, must eventually touch all of South America. Although capable of supporting a population of 250,000,000, its present population is only about 27,000,000. Three-fourths of the territory and more than three-fourths of the people have yet to be reached with the Gospel.

Southern Methodism operates in four States. There are now three Annual Conferences—the Brazil, Central Brazil and South Brazil. In these three Conferences there are 10 districts, 200 churches and preaching places, and 13,000 members of the church. Just to man one of the districts in the North Brazil Conference would require all the workers in the other three. Such are the vast distances to be covered in Brazil that one presiding elder traveled last year 420 kilometers by Ford car, 90 on horschack and 1,378 by rail—a total of 1,888 kilometers, to cover his district.—Book of Facts.

Please let every official be present, since we have business of great importance to the church to be transacted at this quarterly conference. The church gives us the opportunity to demonstrate our loyalty to God and His great plan of redemption for the human race. Every call of our great church is but the voice of God to His children to hestir themselves in behalf of world redemption, as becomes those who are sons of God. We had a great year together last year, and I am encouraged to believe that the next twelve months will mark yet greater accomplishments for the Kingdom of God in the Sardis District than were done last year. Pray for me and all other Kingdom workers.

A LETTER FROM MEXICO.

Colegio Roberts, Saltillo, Mexico.

Miss Estelle Haskin,
Lambuth Building,
Nashville, Tenn.

My Dear Friend: I hasten to send you another letter that you may hurry it on to the women who are standing behind us with their love and their money and their prayers.

This is my last objective in my round of visits to the stations where our women's work is located in Mexico, and all the way my heart has been singing with joy as I have witnessed the growth of the work and the enlargement of opportunity through our schools, our social evangelistic centers, and our student volunteer work.

One who had not seen the work in its disorganized state during the revolution and immediately following it could not fully appreciate what it is now, I fear. When I realize that a great many of our workers were brought out of Central Mexico and placed in new stations, as we exchanged our work there for work on the border, and I remember the disorganized condition of the work when our missionaries returned to their tasks in this part of the field which was new to many of them in 1918, I am greatly amazed.

Palmore College in Chihuahua (Chee-wah-wah), Instituto MacDonell in Durnago, and Colegio Roberts in Saltillo (Sol-tee-you), were the three schools which had been established in the territory now occupied by our church in Mexico; they had been closed and the work stopped for several years. In this new day of opportunity in our work, we have added two schools to the number—Instituto Ingles-Espanol (Inglase-Es-pan-youl) in Monterey (Mon-ter-ray) which came to us by exchange from the Disciples of Christ, and Colegio Progreso in Parral (Pair-ral), which came to us by exchange from the Congregationalists. Roberts College has been developed into the greatest educational training center in Northern Mexico, and our other institutions are correlated with it, so that it draws for its Normal and Bible Training Department on the band of Student Volunteers in each of the other schools. These volunteers are the very cream of the young life in our church in Mexico and are certainly the hope of the future of our work.

Until our workers returned, we had no social evangelistic centers, and the only evangelistic work which had been carried on by our women was done by them incidentally in connection with the schools and churches, and by the Mexican Bible women who did their work, as a rule, in the form of house-to-house visitation. Now we have the great social-evangelistic center in Chihuahua, in which all the lines of service which are usually carried on in our Wesley Houses at home are being put into effect, including Daily Vacation Bible School, and literally hundreds of people—men, women, and little children, through the kindergarten, day nursery, cooking classes, English classes, commercial courses, Bible study courses, supervised playground, and dispensary are brought in contact with our Christian workers and our church, and are being fed daily with the bread of life by Miss Fox and her co-workers, Miss Laura V. Wright and Miss Lorraine Buck. A similar institution is being conducted in a rented building in Monterey, which is the largest city in our territory. Miss Sarah E. Warne is in charge of this work, and Miss Ethel McCaughan is associated with her. This institution has opened the doors of numbers of homes to our missionaries, and we long for the day when the Centenary money will be paid for 1923 and we can purchase from the General Department of the Board of Missions the hospital property to give us the room we need for the Centro and make it possible for the hospital to have a new home. You will remember that at the Council last April Miss Anne Devours was consecrated as a missionary to Mexico, and it was my privilege to sit down with her and Miss Annie Craig and formulate plans for the remodeling of the old property, which reverted to us, in order to make it suitable for the work of a social evangelistic center. Already the presence of these missionaries is contributing largely to the spiritual life of the church in Durango.

An enlarged field of service has come to the school in Parral, which was a day school until Miss Ellie B. Tydings was placed in charge last September. The school has been moved into a rented house because of the insanitary conditions of the school property, but through the providence of God we were able to rent a splendid building which had been used for a residence, for a very small amount of rent.

I wish you could have gone with me through the hospital in Monterey, making the round with Deaconess Cornelia Godbey, who is the evangelistic worker in the hospital. This is a new work for us, and our nurses, Miss Naomi Chapman and Miss Edna Potthoff, are also working in the hospital. We may enlarge the borders of our medical work by sending one of these nurses to Chihuahua when the hospital is opened there at some time in the near future.

The Centenary has given us the money for two splendid buildings, the administrative building for Colegio Roberts in Saltillo and that for Colegio Palmore in Chihuahua. Both of these buildings have attracted great attention to these educational institutions. You have heard already of the formal opening of the building in Saltillo, when the Governor of the State presided over the ceremony. Last September the new building for Colegio Palmore was dedicated. I regret that my visit to Chihuahua came a little bit too late for me to be present at the ceremonies. Miss Harper, who labored for so many years in Mexico with Miss Lizzie Wilson, in the school, and Prof. Esquivel, who helped to develop Palmore College, returned and took part in the celebration. You would rejoice, I am sure, if you could hear our missionaries tell of the enthusiasm of the alumnae of the school and of the great plans they are making to help raise funds for the equipment of the building and to extend the interests of Pal-

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Conference Sunday school session (as this year in Homer) with full attendance, to plan comprehensive State program.

4. Finance this program largely through district budgets.

ANNUAL CONVENTION, LOUISIANA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The Louisiana Sunday School Association announces April 23-25, 1924, as the dates for holding their thirty-eighth annual convention for the Sunday school workers of all evangelical denominations in Louisiana. The place is Lake Charles, which will provide entertainment for all delegates who register.

The Program Committee promises the best program the Louisiana Sunday School Association workers have yet had, and while they were unable to secure Mr. William Jennings Bryan, they aunounce that they have been successful in getting A. Augustine Smith, Professor of Fine Arts in Religion at Boston University, who presented the pageant, "The Light of the World," at the 1923 convention in Jerusalem Temple, in New Orleans, to return and present his pageant, "The Commonwealth of God." This pageant requires a cast of 150 persons, and the costumes to be used were purchased in Tokio, Japan, when Mr. Smith directed the pageants presented at the World's Sunday School Convention, held in that city in October, 1920. In addition to presenting the pageant, Mr. Smith will address the convention on "The History, Biography, and Romance of the Hymnal," and "The Use of Art and Pictures in Religious Education." In this lecture, Mr. Smith will use his "Temple of Arts," through which he will conduct the delegates in the study of thousands of dollars' worth of reprints in color of more than 200 masterpieces from the galleries of Europe and America. In addition to these presentations before the general sessions Mr. Smith will present special topics relating to Music and Pageantry in the Children's, Young People's, and Adult Division sections of the convention.

The Program Committee will also emphasize the work of the Superintendent, Organized Classes, Departmental Organization, the Daily Vacation Bible School, the Week Day School of Religion, Christian Education, and the community program of Religious Education that the Louisiana Sunday School Association will offer for 1924.

The convention will bring together the Sunday school workers from the Baptist, Congregational, Disciples, Episcopal, Evangelical, Methodist, Presbyterian, and United Brethren churches, which will make it the most representative gathering of the Sunday school workers in the State.

FROM PETAL, MISS.

Dear Advocate: For some time I have been thinking of sending you a short message for publication, but for some cause or other I neglected doing so.

I take advantage of this method to write to all of our friends, since it would be so time-consuming to write to one at a time. I have prayed and wished for each of you a Merry Christmas, and that this New Year may be the best, in every way, in all of your lives.

When I left for Annual Conference, from the Satartia circuit, my salary was not paid in full, and hence the Journal will show it in that light. I write this letter to say to the brethren that on my return from Conference the good people of the church said it must be paid, and in a few moments it was done. May God bless them. Therefore, the pastor and presiding elder were paid in full. I will say to the new pastor that there is not a charge in the Mississippi Conference more convenient, and whose people are any better. I pray for them a great year.

Well, I will close this letter and say something about Petal. I find that Brother Moody and his members were in great love with one another, and that is a good sign of an active church. Brother Moody and his flock left a real nice, roomy parsonage for our family to occupy. I hope he has one better to enjoy.

The ladies are very active over here at Petal. They have spent about fifty dollars to be put on the inside of the home, and are working hard to do more. They are going to build a nice garden and yard fence in the near future. By the way, that storm that Brother Howse told us about came on to Petal, and left in its trail all kinds of good things. While Brother Howse was having a hard time overcoming his blow, I was looking on—just thinking. Last Saturday night the ladies came in and covered the dining-room table with real good things that a preacher needs. Now, Brother Howse is without, looking on, and I am eating. May God bless these ladies.

That's not all—the Epworth League gave us all the Christmas that we could use; in fact, we had good fruits for several days. May these young people be very happy.

I wish all the preachers would write an article to the paper. I enjoy reading them so much. Pray for us.

B. H. WILLIAMS, P. C.

FROM MATHISTON, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: We held our first quarterly conference Monday, Jan. 14, Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding. We had a good representation from all our churches, and a good spirit prevailed. We had a fine report and put our needs before the conference, and they accepted both the Orphans' Home and Superannuate Endowment fund. We are glad to report that we are looking forward to the greatest year in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Mathiston, Miss.

Monday night after the conference, Brother Wasson delivered a very impressive sermon to the young people, which was highly enjoyed by all present.

We have all plans made for our revivals, and are expecting a great time.

J. E. LAWHON, Pastor.

P. S.—Every one is well pleased with our new presiding elder.

A PLUCKY CONGREGATION.

While Dr. Pinson was in the Orient last spring, he preached to a plucky little congregation in Hiroshima, Japan. They were housed in an old, ramshackle building, and had just received notice that they must hunt other quarters. Even though he spoke through interpreters, seventeen signed cards in that small congregation as seekers of the Christian religion. Failure to supply this growing group with a house in which to worship will be a failure of the Centenary, and not to be thought of. This is only one example among many.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

FROM SHUFORD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have delayed writing a report for the Advocate, for I was not sure just what I wanted to write.

Our people received us cordially. On our return after Conference, it looked as if Santa Claus had been to see us. They showered us with a great variety and large quantities of the necessities of life.

We are planning great things for the kingdom this year. We have a Sunday school at each of the four appointments. Our plan is to increase the enrollment 25% and attendance 25%. A week-day school of religious training is being planned in connection with Mount Olivet consolidated school.

Our four Missionary Societies and three Epworth Leagues accomplished good work last year, and are laying plans for more extensive work this year.

Two of the churches are planning to paint—Lovejoy, the outside, and Pisgah, the inside, of their churches. A $40 assessment was made at the first quarterly conference for upkeep and improvements of a parsonage.

The board of stewards of each church made a careful head-of-family and independent member assessment, the total of which went far beyond what was assessed for ministerial support, and we hoped that we could keep our finances up to date this year; but the first-quarterly conference found us with less than two-fifths of the amount that was needed. Our Mission Board was liberal enough to make a $200 appropriation on the charge for this year.

I have been in several homes that I didn't get to last year. Six have been received by letter. I heard last night of a profession of faith that may mean an additional member, or perhaps two.

We are planning our meetings and making out our prayer list now, and trust that God will reward our efforts

Pray for us.

T. B. THROWER.

THE CENTENARY IN CUBA.

With Centenary aid fifteen new missionaries have been sent to the Island of Cuba.

Buenavista College, at Havana, a great girls' school, the property of the women of Southern Methodism, has been enlarged with Centenary money.

At Camaguey the people contributed $16,000 toward the dormitory of Pinson College, and $30,000 of Centenary money was added to supply the remainder needed for this building.

Probably the greatest single Centenary enterprise in Cuba is the Central Institute, at Havana. This is a special of the Kentucky Conference, and promises to be the best Protestant institution in Cuba. The cost is $160,000.

During the Centenary period local congregations of Cuba have increased their contributions 25 per cent. Church membership has increased one-third during the same length of time.

The Centenary has made improvements and extensions at Irene Toland College, Matanzas, and Eliza Bowman College, Cienfuegos.—Centenary Bulletin.

In Eliza Bowman School, Cienfuegos, Cuba, students use an old residence, and classes are held in corridors, bedrooms and under the trees of the yard.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER; 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

YOURS AND MINE.

By Garfield Evans.

The joint committee of representatives from the Woman's Missionary Council and the Epworth League Board have had their first meeting, and will probably meet for a second time in January or February. Various inquiries have been made as to what this committee has done, or what it will recommend.

It was charged with reporting a plan of correlated or unified organization. As to a plan of correlation, scarcely any one is interested in such an undertaking. At the outset we would be inviting as many, if not more, problems as already exist; since in any plan of correlation the organization in the local church must work under the handicap of a divided overhead control, which experience has shown to be unsatisfactory.

To unify from the standpoint of Board control strikes at the root of the matter, but at the same time it touches tender flesh where there is liable to be much flinching. It is not certain that the patient will stand for the operation. Concerning unifying the organizations the following problems and reflections may be considered:

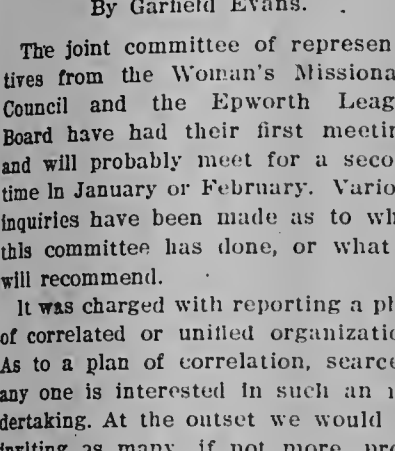
1. Two young people and children's societies have grown up in the church independent of each other. They are now doing practically the same work, although they are responsible to different Boards. In considering any plan of affiliation, prohibitive attitudes arise in such statements as, "Just see how much we would have to give up," or "We must protect ourselves." The conception does not seem to have arrived that there can be one organization for young people or children that is ours. Every argument seems to hinge around reservations of yours and mine.

2. The matter of financial arrangement is no longer an issue. The organization that would contribute the largest membership agrees to either a pro rata or an equal division of funds.

3. It is common talk that when the "higher-ups"—meaning the administrative secretaries—get together the problems will be solved. This is easily said. But some one forgets that administrative secretaries are controlled by policies made by Boards, and that the Boards act according to the voice of their constituent Conferences. Certainly, any plan of affiliation must be organized from the standpoint of unified administrative agencies; but the Boards will not be unified in their opinion until there is a unified demand.

4. There has been much agitation by scattered groups and individuals, failed in giving a practical solution for the local church. This is an impulsive statement. We are a connectional church, and according to our polity we stand or fall together.

There is need for concerted action. Spasmodic oratory and impassioned deliverances will not help. District and Conference meetings should go on record with some definite plan. Conference officers and groups of officers should formulate plans which they will support. Those who are interested should use the press in giving to the church information about the existing problems, and a discussion of the remedial steps needed. Acting with full charity to the opinions of others, and with confidence in God, we are challenged to work out as they pleased if the "higher-ups" Some have expressed the opinion that they felt perfectly justified in doing these problems.



Are You Discouraged, Blue?

This Advice Is of Vital Importance to You

Columbia, S. C.—"I was suffering with a breakdown in health, and became discouraged. I suffered with bearing pains and pains down through my limbs, my appetite was poor and I became frail and weak. Nothing I took seemed to do me any good. One day my husband got one of Dr. Pierce's pamphlets and we soon decided to try the 'Favorite Prescription.' My husband bought a half dozen bottles to start with. I began to improve at once and before these bottles were gone I was perfectly well and have been well ever since."—Mrs. Hattie Wessinger, 209 Sumpter St.

Mrs. Housewife! Do You Favor Food Law Enforcement?

You appreciate the vital importance of pure and fresh drugs—drugs that are prepared and packed under fixed government regulations.

How about foods? Aren't they just as important? Take baking powder, for instance—it is useful only when it produces its maximum of leavening strength in the baking. Leavening efficiency means light, wholesome breadstuffs—bakings that are easily digested, which in turn aid towards perfect health. Lack of leavening strength means flat and soggy bakings which are surely indigestible.

The pure food laws of our country have standardized baking powder—they require that it contain 12% leavening gas at the time of sale to the consumer. Why is it that these laws have not been applied to baking powder mixed with flour, and sold in sacks as self rising flour?

Thousands of barrels of self rising flour are annually sold in our southern states without any regulation by pure food measures, except in Texas.

Any grade of flour and any quality or strength of baking powder can be used in making self rising flour and sold to the unthinking public without official criticism.

Numerous baking and laboratory experiments have been conducted by state chemists and other investigators. They found a surprising amount of this mixed flour to be so deteriorated as to be productive only of heavy, soggy bakings.

Do you want to eat foods made from self rising flours that do not contain the necessary leavening strength—foods that are hard to digest and a detriment to health? Do you want the law to protect you in this instance as it protects the user of medicine? It is for you and others interested in public health to decide.

Remember Calumet Baking Powder meets every requirement of the law—that it retains its great leavening strength to the last spoonful.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in.

AN ARMY MORE THAN 2,400,000 STRONG

Figures recently compiled show the numerical strength of our Church to be above 2,400,000. Quite a large army, is it not? This army has always given a good account of itself and has been steadily growing since its organization. Not only must new recruits be secured, but it is of as much importance that we take proper care of those who are already enrolled, by seeing that they are

PROPERLY EQUIPPED AND BY KEEPING UP THE MORALE

This twofold need can best be met by putting a Church paper in the home of each member. Then the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" will have a new meaning to you. Let's do this on Good Literature Sunday. You will render your Church a real service.

Brother Pastor, you are an officer in this army. How about your company's equipment? A Church paper in every Methodist home will multiply many times the present spiritual force and effectiveness of the Church.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY

A GREAT INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

The Agricultural and Mechanical School in Montemorelos, built by the Centenary, is doing notable work. This school has an orange orchard with two thousand trees, live stock consisting of registered cattle and hogs, a mechanical shop and a corn and vegetable field. They matriculated 150 pupils last year.

Laurens Institute has 23 teachers and a large student body. They matriculated last year 320 girls, 85 of whom were boarders. The Centenary added a new dormitory to this school costing $30,000.

The Institute Ingles-Espagnol, Monterey, has 13 teachers and 320 girls. A dormitory for this school is one of the unfinished tasks of the Centenary. Without it, the missionaries will be discouraged and the work hampered.

Woman's Missionary Society.

more. Isn't it great to be so far along in our missionary work that we can begin to lean on the past generation and look to the alumnae of our schools to help us in a most practical way?

The activity which interests me most in the schools is the volunteer feature, of course. It did my soul good to see these young people meet together with earnest purpose and pray together for the salvation of the world and to pray for blessings on themselves as they make preparation for their life work as preachers, teachers, or evangelistic workers.

The women of the Missionary Societies are alert and ready for every good work. I know you remember that their organ is called "Antorcha Misionera," which, translated, means the "Missionary Torch," and truly they are letting their light shine forth wherever they are organized. They are entering the different lines of social service, following in the footsteps of our own missionary women at home. They are furnishing scholarships for student volunteers in Roberts College, and they are sending money to help support our work in Korea.

The newest thing I find in our work in Mexico, which, perhaps, is the most encouraging of all, is the wonderful advance the native congregations have made in the matter of self-support and in determination to carry the responsibility of the work themselves, doing their full share of it.

Time fails me to tell you the story of each of the splendid young women volunteers who have already graduated from Roberts College and are out in the field at work; how they have been instrumental in the conversion of numbers of people; how they have traveled from village to village in rural sections, sometimes in ox-carts and other primitive modes of travel, to organize Sunday schools and day schools, or to answer the call that some one go to tell the people of the gospel of Christ.

Every station at which I have been, and each new thing I see in connection with the work, makes me feel that it is more wonderful than the last, but truly this Jubilee Celebration that is being held here now as a great jubilee celebration of our fifty years of work in Mexico, is the finest thing I have ever seen in our work in Mexico. While rehearsing the story of the great achievements of the work in Mexico up to the present time, great plans are being made for rapid advances along other lines of work, particularly on spiritual lines. Let us pray much that God may deepen the spiritual life of his children in this mission field, and that speedily his kingdom may come throughout the whole region for which our church has assumed primary responsibility.

I fear this letter is growing too long for me to tell you in detail of the splendid work being done by the heads of our institutions—Miss Fox at Centro Cristiano in Chihuahua; Miss Emma Eldridge, Palmore College, Chihuahua: Miss Ellie B. Tydings, head of Colegio Progreso in Parral; and Miss Mary E. Massey, at Instituto MacDonell, Durango; Miss Dora L. Ingrum, at Instituto Ingles-Espanol in Monterey; Miss Sarah E. Warne, in the Centro in Monterey—a wonderful band of missionaries! I have left our pioneer missionary, Miss Lelia Roberts, to the last, but everybody knows Miss Roberts, and I fear I could not do the subject justice if I were to try. The other missionaries not mentioned in this letter already are busily engaged in work—Miss Myrtle Pollard, Miss Myrtle James, Miss Lorraine Buck, Miss Ruth Byerly, Miss Eva Massey, Miss Edith Park, Miss Virginia Booth, Miss Norwood Wynn. Pray that God may thrust forth many more missionaries into his harvest field in Mexico. More workers are needed if we are to accomplish the work. I feel so much at home in Mexico and rejoice so in the advancement of the work here that I would not care one bit if something should happen to keep me right here where I had the privilege of spending my first happy years on the mission field.

Yours sincerely,

ESTHER CASE.

STATEMENT OF MINORITY OF BISHOPS ON UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

When this writer was officially informed that the episcopal members of the Commission on Unification had prepared an Address in advocacy of the plan agreed upon by the majority, he, as one of the minority, claimed the right to send forth with the address a statement of his reasons for his opposition to the plan. He was repeatedly denied the exercise of this right.

Finally he quoted the action of the Commission as set forth in the manuscript notes of the stenographer, page 139: "'An address ought to be made to the two Churches by the ten Bishops that are members of this Commission. I believe such an address from the ten Bishops, whether in favor of the plan or not, will have a wholesome effect on the two Methodisms, and do a large thing toward the passage of the paper through the churches.' This suggestion prevailed." (Black by the writer.) On this ground, lower than his inherent right as a member of the Commission, he asked permission to set forth his position at the same time and through the same channels as were used by the majority. He received no answer to this request.

Is this question to be settled by a count of votes, or by the weight of reason? Napoleon is reputed to have said that Providence is on the side of the heaviest battalions, yet the sun that rose at Austerlitz, set at Waterloo. Four years ago the Commission, by a vote of 44 to 6, put forth a plan of Unification by reorganization, and a number of the Commissioners with no small enthusiasm published their conviction that the plan proposed would prove to be the solution of the troubles of the churches. It was even said that men would answer at the bar of God for their opposition to that plan, the answer to be followed, of course, by God's condemnation. Yet that plan was not even submitted to a vote in either General Conference. Evidently at that time the confidence of the large majority was misplaced. The majority is not always right.

It must be carefully kept in mind, a fact repeatedly overlooked, a form of fallacy anciently detected yet still vigorously alive, that the question now before the churches is not Unification generally considered, not Unification as an academic thesis, not the desirability of some sort of Unification. It is easy to speak to that general question enthusiastically, "with burning words," and it is altogether useless now that the Commission has acted. Not Unification in general, but this specific plan and no other is now before the churches.

Some of the reasons that led this writer to differ from his colleagues are:

First—This specific plan is a misnomer, it is not Unification. It is not even a welding. It is an unassimilated mixture of two great and prosperous churches. It proposes to experiment with success.

Second—By this plan not one of the ends for the attainment of which the negotiations were begun, and have continued, is achieved. The two churches are to maintain rival Methodisms in the same communities. Existing frictions, "irritating competitions, are to persist. "Altar against altar" is sanctioned by the plan, and "advised" in the published address. "Needless waste and competition" are not "eliminated." The plan indorses what now exists and provides for its spread. So determined was the Commission not to provide in this fundamental document for the attainment of these desirable ends that the following amendment offered and urged received but five votes—all from the Southern Commission:

"From the adoption of this agreement neither of the two jurisdictions shall organize a congregation in any community in which the other jurisdiction has an existing congregation until the quarterly conference shall consent."

This amendment was a part of the action taken by a "Joint Commission on Exchange of Territory with the Methodist Episcopal Church," which Joint Commission consists of seven members for each of the two churches. At a meeting of this Joint Commission held in Cincinnati in February, 1923, all seven of the Southern Commissioners and four of the seven Northern Commissioners voted for that agreement, yet two of the Commissioners on Exchange of Territory who voted for this agreement in February voted in the Commission for Unification against it in July.

If the Commission on Unification proposed to achieve the ends for which it was appointed, why would it not write some such provision in this fundamental document? Chosen by the church to try to relieve friction, to allay competition, to prevent overlapping of work, to conserve men and means in a needy, tumultuous world, this writer could not vote for the plan whose fundamental document perpetuates these very things.

Third—The great and astute Bishop Joseph Butler tells us that "probability is the very guide of life." For lack of surer ground in dealing with this plan we must take probability, recognizing the possibility of mistake.

Madison, wise, great and experienced in matters of government, was sure that since the Virginia statesmen of 1776 had prepared a State Constitution that endured for fifty years, the statesmen of 1829-30 would prepare one that would endure for a hundred years. Yet within twenty years another constitution was found necessary.

In the Constitutional Convention of 1787 James Wilson announces that "to have States equal in the Senate will give a government neither solid nor lasting," and he predicted that the presidential "veto would seldom be used." Rutledge predicted that "Congress would not sit more than six or eight weeks in the year." Sherman said there was "no probability that the number of future States would exceed those of the existing (thirteen) States." He also said, "the people . . . will never give a majority of votes to any one man" for President. Williamson said, "It was pretty certain . . . that we should at some time or other have a king." Evidently he could not hear the clash of crowns tumbling from the heads of the monarchs of Europe. Gorham said, "Can it be supposed that this vast country, including the Western Territory

GIVE OUR PEOPLE A CHANCE AT IT.

The time is drawing nigh (February 1) when we are to begin the campaign of six weeks on behalf of the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

This cultural campaign will continue until March 16, when it ought to be crowned with the greatest success of any movement ever undertaken by our great Church.

Its triumph ought to be, and I believe will be, an easy victory, if every presiding elder and pastor does even half his duty to the cause.

There is scarcely one among all of our more than two millions of people who does not recall with undying gratitude the holy and helpful ministrations of some beloved preacher who is now on the list of superannuates.

Tender memories and constraining obligations, therefore, will move the members of the church, everywhere in the connection, to make generous contributions to a fund designed to relieve the wants of these veterans of the Cross.

Our people will recall the words of St. Paul to the Corinthians: "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" (I Corinthians xi:11.)

They cannot forget the spiritual riches which have come to them and their children from the self-denying labors of these old preachers.

They will be ready to acknowledge also a large debt for material things which they owe to these aged servants of God; for the values of all kinds of property in our country would be far less than half of what they are, if the gospel which these men preached had never been heard in the land.

For these and other compelling considerations our people will be quick to respond to this moving appeal of the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

If their pastors and presiding elders give them the chance to give to this cause, they will do quickly and joyously all that is asked of them—and more.

Bethren, give them a fair chance to do it.

IT IS NOT CHRISTIANITY.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There must be a continuity of Christian truth, or there can be no continuity of the characteristic life which can he justly called "Christian." The human mind cannot take into it just any sort of belief and transmute into an output of life of uniform type and consistency. Confucian principles yield Confucian character. Buddhism makes Buddhists. Shintoism produces Shintoists; the Koran creates Mohammedans. In like manner, from the Christian Scriptures springs a definite and distinct type of life which has persisted from the days of the Primitive Church until the present time. It has sprung from certain definite beliefs from which it has derived both its color and conformation, and those beliefs have been most briefly and clearly stated in the credal facts and truths set forth in what is commonly called "The Apostles' Creed." That is the most universally accepted form of faith in our times, and such it has been for centuries. There have been periods during which its light has been dimmed for a time by the prevalence of contradictory tenets over wide areas, as, for example, when the Arianism which the faithful Athanasius resisted caused that able and incorruptible theologian to cry, "It is Athanasius against the world."

But no candid man, who knows what are the tenets of Arianism, would now say it was the faith of the Church of Apostolic times. It is in antagonism to the teachings of the New Testament, and, if it had prevailed permanently over Christendom, real Christianity would have perished, Christians would have disappeared from the churches, and Arians would have taken their place. Whatever might have been the type of religion issuing from it, most certainly it would not have been that which led the people of Antioch to call the followers of Christ in that city "Christians."

Well, Arianism, with various modifications of the tenets of Arius, although in the main the same, has been revived by speculative theologians and eccentric sects many times since the days of Athanasius, who wounded it sorely with "The word of God which is the sword of the Spirit;" but it has always failed of general acceptance and has never attained more than a limited and transient existence. As soon as men see that it does not accord with "The faith once for all delivered by the saints," or, in other words, as soon as they perceive that it is not "Christian," they turn away from it. Such has been the case of Arianism in the past and such will be the outcome of its present manifestation in the form of what is called "Modernism."

Already men are beginning to discern its real nature and natural tendencies. They have discovered in it the unmistakable features and form of Arianism, although it is somewhat disguised by rouge made of modern color words and raiment woven from the fibers of modern materialism.

The Editor of the Christian Century even perceives that "Modernism" is in irreconcilable conflict with the fundamental principles of the Christianity which our fathers knew and which they transmitted to their posterity. That periodical is the most influential weekly organ of liberalism published in the United States, and in a recent issue of his modernistic publication, its Editor says:

"Christianity, according to fundamentalism, is one religion. Christianity, according to modernism, is another religion. Which is the true Christian religion, is the question to be settled in all probability by our generation for future generations. * * * Christianity is hardly likely to last much longer half fundamentalist and half modernist. It is not merely the aggressiveness of fundamentalism that is forcing a choice, it is the inherent nature of the issue itself.

"Two worlds have crashed, the world of tradition and the world of modernism. One is scholastic, static, authoritarian, individualistic; the other is vital, dynamic, free, social. There is a clash here as profound and as grim as that between Christianity and Confucianism. Amiable words cannot hide the difference. 'Blest be the tie' may be sung until doom's day, but it cannot bind these two worlds together. The God of the fundamentalist is one God; the God of the modernist is another. The Christ of the fundamentalist is one Christ; the Christ of modernism is another. The Bible of fundamentalism is one Bible; the Bible of modernism is another. The church, the kingdom, the salvation, the consummation of all things—these are one thing to fundamentalists and another thing to the modernists. Which God is the Christian God, which Christ is the Christian Christ, which Bible is the Christian Bible, which church, which kingdom, which salvation, which consummation, are the Christian church, the Christian kingdom, the Christian salvation, the Christian consummation? the future will tell. But that the issue is clear and that the inherent incompatibility of the two worlds has passed the stage of mutual tolerance is a fact concerning which there hardly seems room for any one to doubt."

The Editor speaks truly in nearly all he says; but when he says, "The future will tell," he is mistaken; the past has told already. The New Testament and all church history have settled the issue. One need not wait for the future to show the end of a speculative rationalism which exalts itself above the Apostles and Martyrs and Saints of all the Christian centuries, and proposes to displace the Christianity, which they believed and proclaimed, with a religion which consists for the most part of theological novelties manufactured out of the relics of Arianism. The propagandists of these innovations have no reason for truculence and the adherents of historic Christianity have no occasion for trembling.

In this connection, it is pertinent to the issue to quote the following extract from an editorial of the National Republican, Washington, D. C.:

"One of the New York religious radicals declares that the time has come when the American people should cease planting one foot in the first century and one in the twentieth: In other words, he objects to the loyalty of the Christian church to the Author of the Christian faith. The basis for Christian faith may be debatable, but whether it should be in a Christian church is not a debatable question. It is quite possible that this particular theological sensationalist may be, as he seems to think, an improvement on the founders of his professed faith, but the readers of newspapers who witness his persistent posing for the spotlight are filled with disgust rather than with reverence for this headliner of religious vaudeville.

"Contempt for the past with all its admonitions, traditions and inspirations, is characteristic of a cheap brand of new thought that is being ostentatiously offered on the market in religion and politics in these days. If the rich inheritance of centuries of human experience is to be rejected in science, in art, in religion or in statecraft, wise people will want some assurance that the pilots who are throwing chart and compass overboard have the ability to improvise safe navigation. There is a widespread inclination to believe that the vogue of such prophets and soothsayers is a sign of intellectual and mental decadence, rather than of genuine progress.

"The popular effect of this caterwauling about creeds is clear enough. It tends to bring all religious faith into disrespect. The need of the world is more faith, more loyalty and more fidelity to fundamentals, not more skepticism, more unbelief and more petty dissension created by self-seeking mountebanks wearing the livery of the Lord to serve the devil in."

To much the same purpose speaks the Editor of the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, who, in a late issue of that ably conducted paper, says:

"No church can, without self-stultification, retain in its ministry men who deny that which the church deems indispensable doctrine. The church cannot, of course, order the mind of any man and make him believe that which he cannot believe. And no honest man will teach what he is convinced is not true. It were better, then, that the religious teachers who find themselves out of accord with ancient doctrines go their own way in peace, leaving it to the established churches to pursue their important and highly valuable labors in accordance with unalterable convictions.

"Fundamentalists cannot recall modernists to the beliefs of their fathers, while modernists cannot hope to convert more than a relatively small number of present fundamentalists to their newer conceptions of truth. In the end, the modernists will have to set up a new fold. It would be better that they go out quietly as was done by the venerable rector of St. Bartholomew's in New York who, divested himself of the symbols of priesthood during Sabbath services and quit the church with whose authoritative tenets he is no longer in agreement."

With these sound views the Nation also agrees, speaking thus:

"In the Baptist Church the lack of a rigid creed and the liberty of the individual conscience make the lot of the liberal somewhat easier. But in credal churches, like the Episcopal and the Presbyterian, they fight at a certain disadvantage. When the Episcopal bishops say that the doctrine of the virgin birth is an integral part of the accepted creeds, and should be accepted by the clergy, the statement seems plausible to the layman in the pew and the man in the street. It is not easy to answer such an argument as the Philadelphia Convention of Presbyterian Fundamentalists set forth:

"'We believe that men should be as free to teach as the winds are to blow. But we also believe that the Presbyterian Church is a church whose creed, in the most explicit and unmistakable language, commits its ministers to certain definite views of Christ and the Scriptures. No men should be ordained to the ministry of the Presbyterian Church who cannot cheerfully accept the doctrinal teachings; and to countenance in Presbyterian pulpits a teaching which violates the creed of the church is as contrary to right as it is contrary to common sense.'

"It is not enough to say, in reply, that liberals are good men and fine preachers. It is not enough to talk of tolerance. All that may have a psychological effect on the churches; but, logically, it is necessary to prove that creeds do not mean what they say or are more elastic than they seem."

The New York Evening Journal, discussing the general subject, puts forth these two pointed paragraphs:

"If the Three Musketeers of free thought, Voltaire, Paine and Ingersoll, should return, they would be interested to read that the Modern Churchmen's Union embraces 500 Episcopal clergymen of America who do not believe in the divine birth or physical resurrection of Christ. Also that this union has enlisted to defend a Texas minister who is charged with heresy.

"One of the endless embarrassments of the foreign missionary is that the native, sought to be converted, is unable to keep up with the constant innovations in the proffered faith."

If one will take the time to compare the utterances of these "modernists," so-called, with "Tom Paine's Age of Reason," he will find a most striking resemblance in both the ideas and language of the old infidel and these modern skeptics. Indeed both probably derive their notions from the same source. Paine probably got much of his stuff from the licentious Frenchman, Astruc, and got it directly. Our modernists got theirs from such men as Wellhausen and Kuenen, who in turn got it from Astruc. These skeptics in the pulpit are peddling second and third-hand wares.

If the American churches should yield to their demands, what would become of our foreign missions? Can diluted editions of Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" be used as missionary textbooks to instruct and evangelize the people of Japan, China, Korea, and India?

The American churches will do nothing of the kind. Let the modernists get together and go off to themselves with their doubts and double dealings. The cause of foreign missions will suffer little by their departure. They can still talk of sociology and salvation by soup and soap. The conversion of pagan peoples to Christ is quite beyond their purposes and their power. They are zealous chiefly in compounding powerless poultices for social sores which are more irritated than healed by their quackery.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The dominant purpose of one's life controls his conduct and reveals his character. Attempts at concealment here are vain; fuller and clearer than lettering on a signboard the infallible advertisement may be read by all. I sometimes think men and women lie more about themselves than any other person or thing. And yet no character of sterling worth can be built on deception. Men may drift away from this simple truth in their plots and plans, in society, in the State, or even in the church, but most assuredly they will come back to it. For it is the sheet-anchor of the soul, the strong hook and cable that holds amid the storm. Truth, and not falsehood, is the final test of a man, what he is and what he may be. Moreover, it is this that wins the victory in all of the wear, tear, and struggle of life. All great men, those who were really and truly great in the loftiest sense of greatness, were disciples and lovers of Truth. Solomon's "Wisdom" and Plato's "Truth" are very nearly akin. One wonders where the old Greek found this fountain of life, not having the full revelation of God. These old seers had a consciousness of righteousness, but when Jesus came he quickened and vitalized those age-long principles and gave to them a power and beauty hitherto unknown. "The words I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." No star-ladders of human thought can afford footing to climb beyond these words. Solomon was great in wisdom, Plato great in truth, but greater than all was he who crystallized and expressed these in personality and power. For he taught how men might live by them and in them.

"Jesus Christ was a Jew." The gentleman announced it as though he had discovered a fact in history. It is true racially, and that is as far as it goes. He did not endorse or accept the current Judaism of his day in the earth, nor does he the errors of this day. All that was and is good in Judaism he held and taught; all that is narrow, selfish, erroneous, contrary to the laws of right and truth as taught by Moses and the prophet, he denounced in no uncertain terms. You can't crib and confine genius, much less life and salvation. Euclid was Greek, but that does not affect in any way the demonstrations in geometry. Edison is American, but the whole world uses incandescent light. Provincialism in a narrow, bigoted sense is a curse, yet the Truth has its empire of life and thought, beyond which it may not wander. But none need fear that the boundaries of this vast empire are not sufficient for the full activity of all his powers. I believe America to-day has this world-wide vision as no people ever had before in all history. But we cannot minister to the sick nations across the sea at the expense of righteousness, as Jesus himself could not cure the hurt of his people in his day. "Ye would not," is the sad refrain of the hymn he sang amid tears over Jerusalem's fate. Yes, Jesus was a Jew, but infinitely more than a Jew; his saving grace is for all who will have it, his kingdom as far-flung as the march of the stars, about the earth, his sympathy for a sin-stricken race knows no bounds. He is forevermore the universal citizen and native to all lands.

HERE AND THERE IN CHINA.

By Bishop H. A. Boaz.

I left Chou Foo on Oct. 14. About 10 o'clock in the morning we passed Lincheng, the place where the train was derailed last spring and the bandits took many passengers, both native and foreign, from the train and held them for ransom. Perhaps eight or ten miles distant are some rugged, barren mountains; it was in the fastnesses of these mountains that the bandits held their captives.

My good wife was left behind in Peking. She was uneasy lest the bandits attack our train. They did attack a train that same day, but it was some distance from where I was and on a different line. No bandits gave me any trouble until the night of the 25th. While I was quietly sleeping at 2:30 in the morning, a "bandit" rushed into the train, rapped loudly on the door of my compartment and bade me get up and get off the train at once. In less than thirty minutes I found myself on the compound of the Changchow General Hospital, in the hands of Dr. W. B. Russell, the superintendent of the Methodist hospital at that place. He was the "bandit" who dragged me off the train in such short order.

I spent the next day looking over the city of Changchow. They have a population of about a hundred thousand within the great city walls. The Methodist work there is prospering. The good women are building a new school, and the outlook for the future is very hopeful.

I spent Saturday in Shanghai, and returned to Soochow the next day, where I spent Sunday, preaching in the morning to about five hundred Chinese students, mostly from the Soochow University. Soochow University is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and has a student body of about six hundred young men. Many of them understand English and are doing splendid work in school. We have also at this place a big hospital and several churches.

My trip down to Huchow on Monday was, to me, full of interest. We took a boat just outside the walls of Soochow at 8 o'clock on Monday morning. All day long we traveled through canals, reaching Huchow about 10 o'clock that night. The fare for this full day's ride on the canal launch was fifty-five cents, and our lunch of Chinese food cost the magnificent sum of ten cents. I didn't eat much of the Chinese food, as the missionaries had fixed a most excellent lunch of foreign food for me. The missionary with whom I traveled, however, preferred the Chinese food to the dainty lunch with which my hostess had provided me.

The Conference met on Wednesday morning. It is composed of about 57 Chinese preachers and 31 foreign missionaries. It was somewhat difficult for me to preside over the China Conference, as I was laboring under three handicaps—I did not know the language, I was not very familiar with the field, and I was serving as a substitute bishop. Bishop Hay, the Episcopal superintendent of the China Mission field, had been detained in America on account of ill health. The preachers, however, were patient and courteous to the last degree. I had no difficulty in keeping run of the business affairs of the Conference, as I had a Chinese interpreter on one side of me and a foreign missionary on the other. It was arranged that I should speak about thirty minutes each morning to the Conference, and several hundred students came from the two adjoining schools to hear these morning addresses, which I hope proved profitable to them as well as to the preachers and laymen attending the Conference.

Huchow is what might be termed an inland city of a hundred thousand people. It is surrounded by a splendid wall and was to me a place of much interest. The streets are not more than eight or ten feet wide. The principal thoroughfare is not over ten feet wide. No horses, jinrickshaws or carts of any kind can make their way through these narrow streets. We had to walk wherever we went, unless we could take a boat through the canals. There is as much dirt and filth in Huchow as I have found anywhere else. The people dip water from dirty canals, and after boiling it use it for drinking purposes. A physician of our Mission told me that at least twenty tons of filth are dumped into the canals of Huchow every day of the year. Just why the whole city doesn't die with cholera I cannot understand.

I found the people of Huchow more superstitious than those in some other places. Near the Mission Compound there is a Buddhist pagoda about fifty feet high and fifteen in diameter, made of stone. I was told the people believe that about seven hundred years ago this stone pagoda flew from across the lake, about a hundred miles away, and took its place in the city during a single night.

The Southern Methodist people have two good churches in this town and two splendid schools. They also have a half interest in a hospital, the new building for which is just nearing completion. It may be of some interest to the builders of the city of Dallas and the surrounding country to know that the laborers on this building received Mexican $5 per month and their rice, the rice costing about $3 a month. A laborer costs $8 gold per month! Bricklayers and carpenters receive Mexican 50 cents, 25 cents gold, per day, and buy their rice. Other laborers are paid in proportion. One cannot wonder that a magnificent hospital building has been erected for less than gold $100,000 when labor can be obtained so cheaply.

During the Conference the official fellowship was all that could be desired. I was entertained in the home of one of my old college classmates, Rev. Ed. Pilley. We did not have much time, however, to talk over college days, as he was a presiding elder and our time was given mostly to the solution of the difficult problems involved in making the appointments for the ensuing Conference year.

We left Tuesday morning in a canal boat for Sungkiang. A part of the time we were in the Grand Canal, which stretches from Peking to Hangchow, about eight hundred miles. The whole country is a perfect network of canals, and on these canals small boats, gasoline launches, and sailboats are going to and fro like ants on an ant path. I saw as many as thirty-four boats at one time. Some of them are run by gasoline engines, some are propelled by oars, and some are pulled by men walking along the banks of the canal. On these canals are many houseboats on which people live, having no home. I saw numbers of such boats occupied by a man and his wife and several children. Sometimes more than one family live together on one of these houseboats. They fish for a living. Since rice is only about three cents per person per day, it doesn't require very much for the boatmen's families to keep going.

I spent Tuesday night in Sungkian, looking over the interest of our church in that interesting city. Wednesday I came to Shanghai. This is a city modern in many respects. It has about a million inhabitants, with perhaps fifty thousand foreigners.

I speak here to-morrow and leave Monday morning for Soochow, where I am to preside over the Mission meeting.

THE VISION.

The vision of God is indeed the transfiguration of the world; communion with God is the inspiration of life. That vision, that communion, Christ by him coming has made our abiding inheritance. As often as the Christian touches heaven, the heaven that lies about us though our eyes are holden that we should not see it, he is again filled with the powers of the world to come. Then reverence finds its perfect satisfaction; then devotion finds its invincible strength.—Brooke Foss Wescott.

STATEMENT OF MINORITY OF BISHOPS ON UNIFICATION COMMISSION.

(then bounded not by the Pacific Ocean, but by the Mississippi River) will 150 years hence remain one nation?" Further quotation would be tedious. Here were men possessing a knowledge of history and of human nature, and of an ability —taken as a whole—that has been pronounced unsurpassed in the history of the world. In providing a government for State or church certainty as to results is unattainable, prophecy is childish, only a probable inference is possible.

What seems to be probable in a government whose legislative body is composed of a Northern Jurisdiction of approximately one thousand, and a Southern Jurisdiction of approximately four hundred delegates, each Jurisdiction to vote separately, where the fundamental document provides specifically: "Every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective?" (Black by the writer.) Suppose a case that often occurs: An Annual Conference is to be organized, or even to be divided. The Northern Jurisdiction, which as the Methodist Episcopal Church now has, and under this proposed plan will continue to have, organized in nearly, if not quite all, the States, wishes to organize a new Conference in Virignia, or the Carolinas, or Georgia, or Tennessee, or Alabama, or Mississippi, or Texas. Suppose a bare majority of the Southern Jurisdiction should not agree that the Northern Jurisdiction shall continue to force itself into the very heart of our work. Will that large Northern Jurisdiction, supported by a minority of the Southern Jurisdiction, submit to such conditions? Do not assert with the dogmatism of prophecy that no such condition can arise. Do not point to the express terms of the contract. Neither constitutions nor treaties bind a majority determined to carry out its purpose. You say our people will "count the cost" of the exercise of such a veto on the majority, and will yield. One of ourselves truly said, and under great strain through years of revolution lived what he said: "'Counting the cost' is in things temporal the only wise course, as in the building of a tower; but there are times in the life of an individual, of a people, when the things that are eternal force themselves into the calculation and the abacus is nowhere."

It is impossible to see even as a probability how such a provision in the fundamental document can reasonably be expected to promote peace. To some it bears on its face the aspect of war. That is "every vote" the majority should be permitted to control in matters relating exclusively to its own work is right, that in such matters the minority should have the power to protect itself, is also right; but where either is vitally concerned or believes itself to be vitally concerned, that it should quietly submit even to a majority does not accord with history and is contrary to human nature.

Fourth—The Plan gives no voice in the government of the church to those chiefly concerned, the people and the preachers. This fundamental document does not so much as recognize that they have any rights.

When in 1808 a delegated General Conference was proposed, only to avoid the division of the church was it adopted. Literally it took the tears and prayers of Asbury to gain approval. Its constitution provided that every five members of the Annual Conference should have a representative in the General Conference, and the General Conference itself was expressly prohibited from making more than seven the basis of representation. By the plan now proposed the General Conference, without the consent of the Annual Conferences, can reduce the representation in the General Conference, to "one ministerial delegate for every one hundred and twenty members of each Annual Conference and equal number of lay delegates." This brings representation almost to the vanishing point. Again, in 1808 the Annual Conference retained the sole right to initiate changes in the Constitution of the General Conference. Not till 1832 did the Annual Conference agree to share with the General Conference the right to propose amendments, and from that day to the present continues to demand "that three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences who shall be present and vote" must agree before an amendment can be adopted. This ancient protection of the rights of the Annual Conference is by the plan now proposed silently yet completely abolished. It is not overlooked that Article XI of the proposed plan states that each Jurisdiction shall be bound by its present law "until the General Conference, by legal process, shall otherwise ordain." What is that "legal process?" Who shall define it? Why not say not until the General Conference, but "until the Annual Conferences by legal process shall otherwise ordain?"

Again, among us no preacher can be ordained an Elder until he has opportunity to learn that the constitution of the church and the constitution of the General Conference are not the same. In our church the solemn, delicate, grave responsibility is lodged to check the General Conference, not simply when it disregards the Restrictive Rules, not simply when it overlooks and overleaps the constitution of the General Conference, but whenever in the broader meaning it takes any action that "is unconstitutional." Instances are numerous, some of them comparatively recent, of actions adopted by two-thirds of the General Conference, yet negatived by the Annual Conference. A "supreme and all-controlling" General Conference never has commanded, does not now, and never will command this writer's consent. This plan more than any plan yet proposed eliminates the Annual Conference as part of the government of the church, makes the General Conference "supreme and all-controlling" and deserves to be defeated.

An effort was made to give the Annual Conferences, even in cases not often likely to arise, an ultimate determining voice in laws by which they are to be governed; the question was argued; but the Commission, by a large majority, refused to consent. In the conviction of Americans it ought now to be fixed that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. More than a hundred years before Jefferson wrote those words in the Declaration of Independence—a document that "ought to be hung up in the nursery of every king and blazoned on the porch of every royal palace," Milton had written: "It being thus manifest that the power of Kings and Magistrates is nothing else, but what is only derivative, transferred and committed to them in trust from the people to the common good of them all, in whom the power yet remains fundamentally and cannot be taken from them, without a violation of their natural Birthright."

A great scholar and thinker says: "It is always curious to realize how unintelligible to some minds thought-out political principles remain." As a member of an Annual Conference, this writer could not vote to surrender his rights, as a Commissioner he will not ask his brethren to consent to be governed and to be dumb.

SPECIAL EFFORT NEWS ITEMS.

By Luther E. Todd.

A letter just received from Bishop H. A. Boaz bears the glad tidings that the Korea Annual Conference has assumed a quota of 20,000 yen ($10,000) for Superannuate Endowment, and also the good news that the Bishop hopes to have the Japan Mission assume a stated amount for this great cause.

Concerning the action of the Korea Annual Conference in this matter, the following extracts from a letter received from Rev. J. L. Gerdine, presiding elder of Songdo District, will thrill the church:

"Our Conference is putting first emphasis on self-support. We have felt that there was little meaning to collections for benevolences as long as the Conference was subsidized by the Board of Missions. By concentrated effort during the past three years we have reached the point when the Conference pays three-fourths of the support of its pastors. This year one of our districts, and perhaps two, will attain full self-support. We are straining every effort to reach this goal in all the districts. It seemed impossible to do more for even a cause so worthy as Superannuate Endowment.

"However, Bishop Boaz felt that we must find a way. His faith and persistence could not be set aside. He personally subscribed one-eighth of the amount assumed, and secured a like subscription from our great layman, Mr. T. H. Yun. It was then up to the rest of us to find the remaining three-fourths. After individual subscriptions had been secured, and the Conference assessment added, we still lacked nearly one-third of the 20,000 yen assessment.

"About one-half of the preachers of our Conference were assembled at a Preachers' Institute in Seoul. The matter was presented to them and was met with unanimous enthusiasm. Each preacher pledged one-twentieth of his salary for the next five years to complete the quota of our Conference. The preachers did not even ask what return they would receive. They knew that they would be beneficiaries, but they did not want that to be considered the basis of their gifts. The object appealed to them as in every way worthy and urgent. They were glad of the opportunity to demonstrate their love and loyalty to the mother church. One expressed the sentiment of all by saying: 'When I think of what the Southern Methodist Church has done for us and our people, I can find no words to express my gratitude. We want to strengthen the ties that bind us together, and I know of no better way than this to do it. The link we are forging through our contributions to Superannuate Endowment will unite us so strongly to the mother church that the tie can never be severed.'

"This is the spirit in which the Korea Annual Conference responds to the church's call on behalf of Superannuate Endowment."

Attention is called to this matter to reveal how far-reaching is the call of the "forgotten man." It is enough to stir the most pessimistic among us to earnest enthusiasm for the great cause. All honor to Bishop Boaz and the Korea Annual Conference for the love and loyalty thus expressed for this sacred cause. If this good news does not move the home Annual Conferences to do their best for the "forgotten man," nothing can.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF GENERAL EVANGELISTS.

By Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary, Bureau of Evangelism.

The General Evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in their annual session at Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 19 and 20, 1923. The session was marked by brotherliness, devotion, and the presence of the Holy Spirit. Many of the brethren who have been members from the beginning stated that it was the greatest session in the history of the Association. There was freedom of discussion of all topics up for consideration, and some helpful conclusions were reached.

Rev. Forney Hutchinson, D.D., of St. Luke's Church, Oklahoma City, Okla., was present by invitation, and delivered four heart-searching and soul-stirring addresses. Bishop Beauchamp dropped in on us during one session and delivered a great message on "Evangelism in Europe." The brethren showed their approval of the work in Europe by voting to undertake the support of an evangelist there.

The plans of the General Committee on Evangelism for a church-wide revival were endorsed and encouraged in that these evangelists pledged themselves to the committee to go anywhere they may be called to aid in revivals or conferences.

There are no more loyal or heroic men in the Methodist brotherhood than these evangelists. They have left home and family and the blessedness of comfortable pastorates to do this work to which they have been called. They deserve a few flowers as they go along in their work of helping the pastors to bring in the day of salvation for their people.

While the conference was in session, the committee met and passed upon the characters and work of the General Evangelists, and they were unanimously recommended to the bishops for reappointment. The following new men were accepted and recommended for appointment:

Rev. James M. Smith, Hattiesburg, Miss.

We hope you will use the General Evangelists. If your Conference evangelists do not satisfy your needs, do not send off and get a man of some other denomination, or some man in our own church who is not a recognized evangelist. All of our men who are doing evangelistic work should secure recognition from either the General or the Conference Committee, and we hope our pastors will give preference to them.

If any pastor is in doubt as to the man he needs, if he will write us telling us what his needs are, we might be able to help him in finding the right man. The Bureau of Evangelism is charged with "promoting evangelism throughout the church," and we crave to be of service in every way possible to all our pastors and churches. Of all the big business in which the church is engaging itself in these momentous days, none begins to compare with the salvation of humanity, and we must not be afraid to use extraordinary methods to accomplish this one big business of the church.

METHODS AND PLANS OF WORLD LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

By Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

A considerable portion of the liquor traffic which formerly carried on operations in America has been transferred in other countries, where, nevertheless, it is controlled and directed by what remains of the organized liquor interests within America.

American Prohibition, moreover, had the effect of vastly curtailing the wine export trade of France, Spain, Portugal, Italy and Austria. As a result, the great wine and vineyard interests of those countries have themselves not only united for common defense, but have also joined in cooperation with outlawed American liquor interests.

The ale and stout and whisky industries of Great Britain, moreover, have become thoroughly alarmed at the agitation of the Prohibition question in the British Isles and have accordingly sought alliance with what remains of the American liquor traffic, together with the national liquor organizations of other countries interested for like reasons. The beer interests of Germany, Austria and the Balkan States, as well as the vodka interests of old Russia, are establishing a relationship of co-operation with similar interests of other countries.

The object of the forces back of this organized international activity in behalf of the world liquor traffic is two-fold. It is intended, first, to prevent the spread of Prohibition throughout the world, and second, to secure the nullification and finally the repeal of Prohibition in America and wherever else the policy has been adopted. At the close of a secret convention of the international League Against Prohibition, held at Brussels, Belgium, in October, 1922, the international press carried the interesting and significant information that the wine interests of Europe, with headquarters at Paris, had pledged millions to carry on a merciless campaign against Prohibition in America.

A favorite weapon of the liquor traffic is that of gross misrepresentation of conditions under Prohibition. Absolutely false and unfounded statements with regard to the failure of Prohibition in America, which have made their way through international news agencies to practically every country in the world, are not only indicative of the methods which the international liquor traffic is already using in its campaign, but they also suggest something of what the Prohibition forces in every country may expect as an important phase of the conflict ahead. In this respect the liquor interests, internationally organized, are running true to form, since they are using precisely the same methods as those employed by the liquor interests of America for twenty-five years prior to the adoption of National Prohibition.

The chief weapon which is being used by the organized world liquor traffic in countries outside of America is that which aims at the generation of anti-American feeling. This is the natural method for the world liquor traffic to employ. It is in keeping with the record of that traffic in all countries during the past century. A traffic which itself has no respect for the laws of God or man, can hardly be expected to manifest sincere love for any government. Such a traffic knows no appeal but the appeal to ignorance and prejudice.

Lady Astor, of the English Parliament, upon leaving American shores after a brief visit in her native land, in 1922, made the significant declaration that the principal anti-American feeling in England had been created by the owners and promoters of the English liquor traffic who hoped by anti-American propaganda to postpone the day of Prohibition in Great Britain.

By generating hatred for America, the international liquor interests naturally hope to generate a hatred of American institutions and American governmental policies, which in both cases involve the prohibition of the liquor traffic. Sowing hatred for America, according to their calculations, will naturally make the road to Prohibition in other countries more difficult and thus longer protect them and their interests from the rising tide of world Prohibition.

REV. W. W. SIMMONS ILL.

Brother W. W. Simmons went yesterday to Vicksburg Sanitarium for treatment. He is a great sufferer, and has been for weeks. I have been to see him very often, and it is remarkable to me to see him so interested in the church. He frequently tells of the thrilling things he has experienced in his long and useful life in the service of the church. He often speaks of the great time he has enjoyed with his brethren and associates. In my short knowledge of Brother Simmons, I have heard many say that he was a great preacher, and evidently he has made many people happy and to rejoice. So, brethren of the ministry and laity, kindly write this veteran of the Cross and cheer him in return. Do not forget him in your prayers.

E. D. SIMPSON, Pastor.

The Magic of the Pink Leaf Report

If you will bear in mind that the pink leaf report from the charge's Quarterly Conference records the amount that the charge has officially accepted as its quota for Superannuate Endowment, you will understand why I keep on pleading say it with pinks. And let me assure you they are coming from every direction and every day. This week (ending January 5) 264 have been received, which makes a total of 1955. Let me tell you about a few of the latest arrivals:

St. John's Church, St. Louis.—Their pink leaf report from the first quarterly conference is now before me. It is signed by Frank L. Wells, presiding elder; Ivan Lee Holt, pastor; B. C. Jenkins, secretary. It shows that the minimum quota of the charge is $7000 and that the quarterly conference voluntarily added $13,000 to the minimum, making the total the charge agrees to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment $20,000.

When it is remembered that this great church has built three St. John's churches in foreign fields, paid approximately $40,000 on the Education Campaign and $60,000 on the Centenary Campaign, pays $10,000 annually to social settlement work in St. Louis, pays $15,000 annually to maintenance of Barnes Hospital, has contributed liberally to the building of nearly all of the twenty-four churches in the St. Louis District, is contemplating the erection of a great Sunday school house in the near future at a cost of $150,000, and maintains several missionary workers in various foreign fields, I am sure that my readers will agree with me that this report on their intentions concerning the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is one of the pinkest of the pink.

Hardly had St. John's Quarterly Conference agreed upon a $20,000 quota for the Special Effort when Col. Paul Brown subscribed $8000, John W. Fristoe, treasurer of the Board of Finance, $2000, and W. M. Sloan $500, a total of $10,500 subscribed and to be paid the first year on the $20,000 quota. It is my conviction that this wonderful church will not only raise its quota in a reasonably short time, but it will pay considerably more for the cause than it has assumed.

Quickly upon the heels of the pink leaf report from St. John's Church, as referred to in the foregoing, came the announcement of Col. Paul Brown that he had written in his will a bequest of $100,000 for Superannuate Endowment. Col. Brown does things, and he does them invariably in a big way. For years he has been intensely interested in the cause of the "forgotten man," and now he does something for this cause that will not only prove an everlasting and valuable aid to the Conference claimants but will also be a monument to the Colonel's liberality and beneficence which time can never beat down.

Colonel Brown deserves from the entire Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the warmest gratitude for the many splendid contributions he makes to her various causes. He is a most liberal contributor in the maintenance of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, had built and chiefly maintains the Warren Brown Hospital in Arkansas, paid $20,000 cash to the Centenary, $14,000 cash to the Education Movement, and is constantly contributing to the building of churches in the city of St. Louis and elsewhere. May time deal gently with him and our gracious Father give him yet many years in which to serve as his faithful steward!

St. Paul's Church, Springfield, Mo.—Rev. J. C. Saylor, presiding elder, and Rev. J. W. Pearson, pastor. The pink leaf report is before me. It states that the minimum quota of this charge is $5000 and that the charge has voluntarily added $5000 to the minimum, making a total of $10,000 that the charge has approved as its quota for Superannuate Endowment. Bully! I tell you I like the pinks. The pastor of St. Paul's writes that he invited the leaders of all the departments of the church to be present at his first quarterly conference so that they might hear the presentation of the superannuate cause. One hundred and thirty-eight people attended, notwithstanding the weather was very inclement. The quarterly conference proper accepted the minimum quota and added the additional $5000 without a dissenting voice; then the entire company present (one hundred and thirty-eight people) took a rising vote on the proposition, and the vote was one hundred per cent in favor of St. Paul's Church raising $10,000 for the "forgotten man." I know the St. Paul's congregation, and I know that they will do what they have promised.

Central Church, Kansas City, Mo.—J. B. Swinney is the presiding elder; Dr. M. N. Waldrip is the pastor. Now please everybody listen while I read the pink leaf report from this charge: "Minimum quota, $6400; voluntarily added to the minimum by the quarterly conference, $600; total amount the charge agrees to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment, $7000." Fine! But wait a minute; that isn't all. I read that the quarterly conference has adopted Plan No. 1, which means that they intend to raise the entire quota in cash the first year of the Special Effort. So, you see, this report is exceedingly pink—aye, it is rosy! A letter from Dr. Waldrip accompanies the report, and it is just as interesting as the writer. He writes, referring to the quota: "This will call for our best. Please send literature for one thousand members. I have a fine committee. Shove on the stuff and see us move. We shall raise our quota in one day." Now isn't that just like Waldrip? His church is a great down-town center, and it is not easy to finance its program. But they do it and also meet other obligations to causes outside of self-maintenance. Hats off to Dr. Waldrip, to Brother Swinney, the presiding elder, and to Central Church, at Eleventh Street on the Paseo!

Weldon Station, Weldon, N. C.—Rev. S. E. Mercer is the presiding elder, and G. W. Perry is the pastor. Minimum quota of this charge, $2722; amount voluntarily added to the minimum by the first quarterly conference of the charge, $1278; total amount Weldon Station agrees to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment, $4000. These brethren have adopted Plan No. 2 for raising their quota, which means they will present it as a special each year for five years, seeking to raise not less than one fifth of the quota annually. Who said the North Carolina Conference was not interested in the Special Effort. Nobody. Because that great Conference is on its toes for Superannuate Endowment, and everybody knows it.

Hot Off the Wire.—I have already overwritten my space, but I cannot stop without giving my readers an electric thrill or two. Note this:

"Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 30, 1923.

"Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo.: As a New Year gift to the Lord we raised our Special Effort quota for the year of $400 this morning. Check will follow.

Here's another:

Letter and check go forward to-morrow.

"W. W. HOLMES, Pastor."

Whoopee!—The booklet, "Call of the Forgotten Man," is being sent to all the charges for general distribution during the cultivation period, February 1-March 16. Hit hard, boys!

The Intensive Period of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment Is from February, 1, 1924, to July 1, 1924.

The Home Circle

THE TADPOLE.

There was once a little tadpole
  Who lived down in a pool,
And every day he wriggled
  With his brothers off to school.

In the sunlit, shallow water
  He quickly learned to swim—
And never guessed what Nature
  Was going to do to him.

But soon he sprouted hands and feet,
  His eyes began to poke;
His voice changed from soprano
  To a harsh and hollow croak.

His little tail grew shorter,
  His body round and plump;
He didn't swim so very much,
  For now he'd learn to jump.

One day he slowly scrambled up
  To sit down on a log,
And, on looking in the water,
  He found he was a frog!

THE BEST SIDE OUT.

Even though Mrs. Butterfly did the most of her work of visiting the flowers during the day and Mrs. Moth spent her working hours at night, it did happen that occasionally Mrs. Butterfly met Mrs. Moth late in the afternoon. Mrs. Butterfly would be flying home to rest from her labors and would notice Mrs. Moth quietly resting on the top of a leaf, dozing away in the light of the setting sun.

On one of these occasions Mrs. Butterfly stopped on the branch of the tree which held Mrs. Moth's leaf and said: "Mrs. Moth, don't think me impertinent, but would you mind telling me why it is that you sleep so?"

Mrs. Moth roused herself drowsily from her day-dream and said that she didn't quite understand. When Mrs. Butterfly had repeated the question, Mrs. Moth answered, smiling: "Well really, I don't know, Mrs. Butterfly. I suppose that it is just natural for some of us to work at night and some in the daytime."

"Oh, I didn't mean that, Mrs. Moth! I beg your pardon for not making myself clear. I understand perfectly that you are better fitted to do your work at night and that it would be impossible for me to work in the dark. What I meant was this: Why is it that you never rest with your wings together, as we butterflies do? You always sleep, I've noticed, with your wings stretched out flat, so that the tops of them will show. But we Butterflies fold ours so the tops will be together." Mrs. Butterfly looked as if she felt better after she had made this explanation and waited patiently for an answer.

Mrs. Moth looked just a bit embarrassed and hesitated. Then she shook her wings a little and roused herself as if she had made up her mind about something. Then she begun: "Mrs. Butterfly, you've asked me to disclose a little secret—one that may not be complimentary to our family; but I rather think it may not be in our disfavor, after all. So I'm going to tell you about it.

"As a matter of fact, we Moths are not very attractive-looking on the underside of our wings. Our colors are pretty on the top side. Now, you Butterflies have almost as pretty coloring on the lower side as on the upper. For that reason you can well afford to fold your wings in such a way as to show the lower side of them when you rest. But our mothers have for generations taught us that we should live with our best side out. For the reason that we think our mothers have taught us well, we try, when we sleep and when we work, to hold our bodies so as to show the very best of ourselves." Mrs. Moth nodded her head emphatically then, as if she meant to repeat that she thought the teaching of her mother was a good one. She looked to see what effect her words had had upon her friend.

"I hadn't thought of that as being the reason, Mrs. Moth, but it certainly is a good one," agreed Mrs. Butterfly. "Thank you so much for telling me about it." Then, having invited Mrs. Moth to call on her when she could, she waved her wings and flew away to rest, while Mrs. Moth roused herself to begin work for the night.—Presbyterian Banner.

HOW TOMMY SAVED THE SHIP.

By Mary Kendall Hyde.

Tommy Pierson jumped out of bed cold and trembling. He was cold because he had kicked all the bedclothes off; he had kicked the bedclothes off because he was restless and having troubled dreams.

Tommy had been spending the Thanksgiving holidays with his grandmother, and had been living on mince pie and squash pie and cranberry pie and doughnuts and gingerbread and most especially cookies—that kind of cookies that all boys like and only grandmothers make! And when he reached home late in the afternoon of a stormy day, he found that his mother had prepared an unusually tempting supper because of the cold, wet day and the fact that both Tommy and his father were safe at home.

Tommy's home was in Gloucester, Mass., one of the great fishing ports of the world. Mr. Pierson was captain of a sailing vessel, as all the Pierson men of Gloucester were, and made long voyages to far distant lands. His wife had not come of a seafaring family and had never outgrown or overcome the fear and anxiety she suffered in her husband's absence. Lately she had observed that Tommy was turning out some very creditable models of ships or of their various parts with his jack-knife; and she was dreading the time when he should succumb to the call of the sea. And so it was with a sad face that Mrs. Pierson listened to her husband's stories of daring adventures and narrow escapes, as they sat by the open fire while the northeast storm blew with ever increasing fury and Tommy whittled away on a new style of rudder.

With his mind full of sea tales and his stomach overloaded with rich food, no wonder Tommy dreamt as the gale rattled the shutters of the windows and whistled down the chimney. And so about 6 o'clock in the morning he jumped out of bed cold and trembling, as we have said. A boy of fifteen can't run to his mother to be comforted every time he has the nightmare, of course! So Tommy walked up and down the cold room once or twice and then started to look out the window. The glass was covered with thick frost. He tugged at the window until it opened and looked out on the harbor.

From his home on the top of a hill he could see as far as "the Bar." And there was—O, what was it?—a ship? Yes, it must be! A ship going to pieces on the rocks! Tommy rushed to his father's room and told him what he had seen, but his father turned over in his warm feather bed and said: "Go back to bed, son; you've been dreaming." Tommy knew all too well that he had indeed been dreaming, and returned to his bedroom.

Peering out again through the dim light of early morning the boy was sure his eyes had not deceived him, that there was a vessel on the rocks. He slipped hastily into his clothes, stole quietly down stairs, and hurried over to his Uncle Joel's house. Tommy and Uncle Joel were real "pals," and the boy felt sure he could rely on the older man. Uncle Joel turned out promptly, and with Tommy went down into the town, calling up every man on the way; for this was in the early part of the nineteenth century, and there were no hasty communications by telephone or "wireless."

Although the wind blew fiercely and the icy spray covered everything, boat after boat was manned to make one stormy passage after another, until all the ship's crew were saved. The captain of the vessel took Tommy in his arms, hugging him tight as he called down God's blessing on him for being the one to whom they were really indebted for this gallant rescue.

Several months later a special messenger arrived in the fishing port of Gloucester, bringing a gold watch to the young hero, inscribed: "Thomas Pierson, Jr., for Saving the Crew of the British Ship Adam C."—New York Christian Advocate.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. A. George is happy in his new work at Ripley, Miss. The work goes well.

Rev. D. L. Griffin requests the prayers of the readers of the Advocate in behalf of a meeting he is to begin at Waterproof, La., on Jan. 30.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, now engaged in evangelistic work, is making his home at Silsbee, Tex. His post office box is 387.

Rev. A. K. McLellan observed Good Literature Day, at Barham, La. This is the first year that Barham has had a Methodist pastor. The prospects for our church there are good.

Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, our pastor at Leesville, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Wednesday of last week. He reported that all goes well at Leesville.

Rev. W. O. Hunt requests us to say that his address is Oxford, Miss., Box 261, and that mail addressed to him at Abbeville, Miss., or at the University will not reach him. Let all concerned take notice.

Rev. E. D. Simpson, our pastor at Gloster, Miss., writes that on Jan. 24, Rev. W. W. Simmons was taken for treatment to the Vicksburg Sanitarium. Let his brethren remember Brother Simmons in their prayers.

Rev. S. F. Harkey, pastor of the Meadville and Bude charge, Mississippi Conference, is in favor with his good people. The charge voluntarily made a liberal increase in the pastor's salary for this year.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth will preach at Amory, Miss., and dedicate the church there on February 3, at 11 a.m. The pastor there, Rev. W. R. Lott, is sending in 100 subscriptions to the Advocates and expects to have 200 by the end of the year.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Mr. W. F. Texada, a steward in our church at Boyce, La., on Friday, Jan. 18. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

The Epworth Leagues of the church contributed to missions during the year 1923 the sum of $74,594.82. Of this amount, the Leagues of the Louisiana Conference gave $1,490.46; of the Mississippi Conference, $1,535.81, and of the North Mississippi Conference, $1,765.05.

Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Bogan, of Columbia, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Bernice Inez, to Mr. John Hardie Traylor, of Columbia, La., at the Methodist Church in Columbia, on Jan. 20. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the young couple.

The bulletin of the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., for Jan. 27, was devoted almost wholly to presenting the claims of the church papers—the New Orleans and the Nashville Christian Advocates. Rev. O. W. Bradley is the wide-awake pastor of this great church.

Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Crossley, of Hattiesburg, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Cora Mae, to Mr. Herman W. Russell, of Philadelphia, Miss., on Jan. 24, at the Court Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the young couple.

Rev. Julian S. Duncan, president of the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, has announced that the annual Assembly will be held at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., June 18-21. The program will begin on Wednesday afternoon, June 18, and close at noon, Saturday, June 21.

Rev. R. L. Armstrong is proving most valuable as assistant at First Church, Baton Rouge. He and the pastor, Dr. C. W. Crisler, each week since Christmas, have called upon or seen three to four hundred persons, many of them at the Louisiana State University, where 385 of the students are Methodists.

The Woman's Missionary Society at Franklin, La., has raised, since the Annual Conference, $616 for the orphanage, put a new roof on the parsonage, made other necessary repairs, and "pounded" the pastor twice. No wonder the newly-appointed pastor, Rev. J. A. McCormack, writes: "This is a delightful place."

The editor of the Advocate has recently been confined to his home with an attack of the "flu." He is grateful to Dr. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city, for editorial assistance, and to Rev. W. G. Evans for filling the pulpit at Felicity Methodist Church on last Sunday.

We learn from the Big Brothers of the recent death of Judge J. K. Hamblen, of Greenville, Miss., at the advanced age of 91 years. He had been a faithful member of the Methodist Church for many years, faithful in attendance upon the services of the church as long as health permitted.

Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, the new pastor on the Adams circuit, Mississippi Conference, has entered vigorously upon his work. He has already ordered the lumber for a new church at Adams. Rev. W. W. Nelson, Brother Snelgrove's predecessor at Adams, had this project well under way, but was unable to complete it on account of ill health.

Rev. O. B. Matheny is entering hopefully upon his second year at Vimville, Miss. In spite of very unfavorable weather, he has completed the first round of his charge, and has found bright prospects for the year's work. Plans are under way for repairing the parsonage, completing one unfinished church, and repairing another. Brother Matheny serves a fine people.

For many years, Hon. D. W. Heidelberg, of Shuhuta, Miss., has offered as prizes a year's and a half-year's subscription to the Advocate for the best attendance record of a member of his Sunday school class. This year the full subscription was won by Mr. J. W. Braswell, and the half-year's subscription by Mr. J. E. Rainwater. Brother Heidelberg says he feels that he could not offer a better prize—and we agree with him.

The board of stewards of our church at Brookhaven, Miss., has made provision for an assistant to the faithful pastor, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, and Rev. James W. Sells, son of Rev. J. L. Sells, has been appointed to the position. Brother Sells is a graduate of Millsaps College. He served the Georgetown circuit as pastor for the past two years, where he was greatly beloved. He has already entered upon his work at Brookhaven.

On Friday evening of last week Mr. Calvin N. Joyner delivered an illustrated lecture on China in First Methodist Church, New Orleans. Mr. Joyner has recently returned to this country from China, where he spent two years in missionary work. Mr. Joyner came to New Orleans from Dallas, Texas, where he is staying at present. He will go soon to take charge of a mission school in Mexico.

Rev. J. R. Roy writes that he has been cordially received at Bossier City, La., succeeding Rev. A. H. Parker, who, during a pastorate of two years there, had done a fine work and made many friends. Brother Roy states that he finds a good Sunday school at Bossier City and a good prayer meeting. The attendance at the Sunday services is good. The assessment for the pastor's salary has been raised in the amount of $300, and in other lines the prospect is good for advancement this year.

The report of Mr. G. A. Perkins, agent in New Orleans for the American Bible Society, shows a substantial increase during 1923 over the work of 1922. There was a total distribution of 50,127 volumes, consisting of 2,716 Bibles, 1,574 Testaments, and 45,837 Gospels. Of these, 35,594 volumes were sales and 14,533 volumes were donations. More than 2,000 of these were distributed in hospitals and jails. Mr. Perkins is doing a work of incalculable value in this territory.

The booklet, "The Fellowship of Prayer for the Lenten Season—March 5-April 20," has been prepared with the co-operation of a committee of the Commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches, of which Dr. C. L. Goodell is executive secretary. The booklet contains a Bible reading, a text, a sentiment, a meditation, a personal question, and a prayer for each day of the Lenten season. Any pastor who will send his name and address to this Commission, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City, will receive by return mail, postpaid, a free copy of the booklet. The use of the booklet will minister to the devotional life of those who follow its themes.

On Thursday evening of last week the Union Epworth League of New Orleans enjoyed a splendid banquet at the Bienville Hotel. Every League in the city was represented and a number of the pastors wre present. Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor of Epworth Church, New Orleans, and formerly Field Secretary of the Epworth League in Louisiana, was the toastmaster. Music was furnished by young people who were present and a number of interesting toasts were made to the different Leagues of the city. Mr. Edgar Cayard, president of the City Union, made a fine report of the meeting of the League presidents at Meridian, Miss. Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, was the chief speaker, speaking upon the new day of opportunity for the young people in the church.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, New Orleans (Algiers), 11; Rev. H. J. Boltz, Simsboro, La., 2; D. W. Heidelberg, Shubuta, Miss., 2; Rev. H. J. Moore, Forest, Miss., 2; Rev. O. B. Matheny, Vimville, Miss., 5; R. H. Nestler, New Orleans (Epworth), 3.

THE GOSPEL OF LIFE SERVICE IN FOREIGN FIELDS.

The Centenary has preached the gospel of life service in foreign as well as home fields.

In Brazil 38 young men are preparing for the ministry.

From Mexico 173 volunteers are reported.

The Board of Missions recently received a cable stating that 30 students of Soochow University, China, had volunteered for life service.

In Poland, where we have been working three years, 20 young people have already dedicated their lives to definite Christian service.

A SOCIAL MINISTRY OF THE CENTENARY.

In the Florida peninsula, where the dwarfing effects of motherhood in industry are reflected in the physical, mental and spiritual health of the children, the women of Southern Methodism have expended for maintenance and reconstruction more than $100,000 of Centenary funds in the last four years. Social conditions have been improved. The clinic work has reached hundreds of children in the cigar factories. One church built in Tampa is developing toward self-support—it has raised for connectional purposes over $1300. Where we had practically no Italian membership, we now have a very good church of nearly a hundred, and there is a new attitude of respect exhibited toward our work on the part of local Protestantism.

MEN, LIKE TURTLES, MUST LIVE IN THE SHELLS THEY BUILD.

A kind-hearted, rich man brought the plans of a house to a young builder and said: "Build me the very best house you can from these plans. I am particular about its being well built. I wish to give it to a friend when it is finished."

The builder was a thief. The man did not know it. He took every short cut he could, using inferior material of every kind—cheap lumber, too much sand in the cement and plaster, cheap plumbing, the shingles spread out too thinly on the roof, etc. At last he slicked it over with cheap paint so that it looked pretty fair when it was done.

Then the man for whom he was building it brought him the deed and said: "It is yours. You were the man I was having it built for. You are young, just married, and I wished you to live in your own home and be happy and useful in the community."

The builder now has to live in that house. It is his. He built it. The public knows too well the fraud in its construction to buy it. And whenever the sap-flooring on the porch rises up after a summer shower, or the cheap plastering cracks, or the cheap paint peels, or the cheap plumbing leaks, or the roof lets in the rain, he knows he robbed himself, and cheated himself, and swindled himself.

Every man swindles himself whenever he does wrong. We are each building a house. It is our record—ourselves. We will have to live in it forever. That is a long time. May God help each of us to build it fair and true and honest. For what can be worse, save the loss of a soul, than when life is done and through the years we have slowly put up a building which it is forever too late to change, to have the great Architect say to us, "Your house is not erected according to the plan I gave you, nor the material such as was called for by the specifications."

In commenting on his life work the great Apostle said: "Wherefore I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Reviewing his wonderful life from the promontory of death, he said: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith."

Faith shows a future vision of one kneeling before the throne and saying: "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do."

Earth, and possibly heaven, has nothing better than that.—Christian Education Magazine.

NO RELIGION.

The worst kind of religion is no religion at all, and these men, living in ease and luxury, indulging themselves in the amusement of going without a religion, may be thankful that they live in lands where the gospel they neglect has tamed the beastliness and ferocity of the men who, but for Christianity, might long ago have eaten their carcasses like the South Sea Islanders, or cut off their heads and tanned their hides like the monster of the French Revolution. When the microscope search of skepticism, which has hunted the heavens and sounded the seas to disprove the existence of a Creator, has turned its attention to human society and has found a place on this planet ten miles square where a decent man may live in decency, comfort, and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted—a place where age is reverenced, infancy protected, manhood respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe where the gospel has not gone and cleared the way and laid the foundations and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their views. So long as these men are dependent upon the religion which they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may well hesitate a little before they seek to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of faith in that Savior who alone has given to man that hope of life eternal which makes life tolerable and society possible and robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom.—Lowell.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Nothing is more significant in these days, when people are wont to despair of the loss of influence and prestige by the churches, than the largely increased attendance recorded in practically all of the Sunday schools. Never in the history of this country have so many people attended the Sunday school as are going regularly during the present year. It is noticeable in Columbia, and especially is there an exceptionally large attendance of men and women. For many years the Sunday schools were placed by many church members in the category of the week-day schools in that they were looked upon as a splendid place for the children, but with little appeal for the grown folks. Now all of this has changed. The so-called Bible classes or adult classes in many churches have the largest membership and the most regular attendance.

Not alone has the church not lost its hold on the people, but there is evidence daily that it is gaining ground. It is annually collecting larger sums of money, and the heart must be touched if successful appeals are made for financial support. The Sunday school is the great training school for the church. The bulk of church members are now recruited through the Sunday schools, and as a result the old and thoroughly vicious ideal that so long prevailed to the effect that youth had to sow wild oats no longer exists. As between the Sunday school and the regular church services, perhaps a majority of the adult Christians to-day, forced to a choice, would vote to retain the Sunday school in preference to the preaching services.—Exchange.

STRAIGHT TALK.

If you think that the Eighteenth Amendment is ever going to be wiped out, you will have to think a good many times. It is not going to be done. If anybody thinks that the open saloons will ever come back in America, why, he has never done much thinking. I think that the well-to-do churchman who has got money enough to buy him a lot of fine stuff to put away in his cupboard somewhere is a miserable lawbreaker against America and Almighty God and on his way to hell. And you are helping to tear up and out the foundations of human society.—Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

TRY IT.

The budget plan is the easiest method of securing the general circulation of our church paper that has been devised. It is the most economical and altogether the most satisfactory way to do it.

THE BEST EVANGELISTIC HELP

Any evangelist whose work is born of the Spirit, who does Holy Ghost preaching in a Teaching way.

What will be expected of sinners after conversion should be visioned in the preaching that saves them. Then they will build churches, support pastors and do everything they were taught. People are easily led when shown a vision. Weak stations become strong, communities and towns become half and whole stations. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Spasmodic revivals are temporary. Deep spiritual constructive revivals are permanent. I have described the most valuable class of help for pastors and churches. Untrammeled, I will give this class of services anywhere. Also I would guarantee to teach young preachers, itinerant or local, how to do revival work successfully. Write for my pamphlet, free.

FROM MERIGOLD, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are living in a nice, well-furnished, comfortable parsonage at Merigold this year, and are trying to serve these good people as pastor. When we arrived here we found a house as clean and neat as I ever saw, or ever expect to see. There was a pretty bouquet of flowers in each room, and the kitchen pantry was well filled. Brother and Sister McKeown were as thorough in preparing the parsonage and premises for the new preacher and his family as they were in doing the work of the Kingdom during the four years they were here. The people here were not only thoughtful of us before we arrived, but they continue to be thoughtful of us and are ready to co-operate in any good work.

The general outlook for the year is encouraging. The Sunday school at Merigold is doing good work. It is as well organized as it can be until we get into our new church. Several of the classes meet in a near-by residence. In fact, the Primary and Beginner Departments do all their work at Mrs. W. B. Parks' home. These departments are doing good work, but it will be more interesting when we get in the new church building. The bad weather is considerably interfering with the work in the rural communities connected with the charge.

We organized our young people of Merigold into a very promising Epworth League last Sunday evening. Practically all the young people of our church were out and entered into the organization with much enthusiasm. They are being backed by the older people, and we believe it is going to be a very live League. There is a League at Shipman's Chapel, with a membership of sixty. Those young people have done, and are doing, some fine work.

The weather man is interfering very much with our building program here at Merigold, but when the weather clears up we will soon have as pretty, substantial, and commodious a church as any town of this size anywhere.

We appreciate the hearty reception that has been given us, and are praying that God may use us for his glory through this year.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother: By the mistake of some one, the report of Spring Hill station, Louisiana Conference, in the Minutes of the last Annual Conference, reads: "Church, value $7,000," when it should read $7,500; also, no indebtedness, and parsonage valued at $3,000, when it should read $3,000 indebtedness on church and no parsonage.

I will appreciate this correction through the Advocate.

Sincerely,

T. W. ST. JOHN

GRADUATING IN PRAYER.

By Edward M. Bounds.

To graduate in the school of prayer is to master the whole course of a religious life. It is a life trade. Prayer is a trade to be learned. Painstaking care, much thought, practice and labor are required to be a skillful tradesman in praying. Practice in this as well as in all other trades makes perfect. Toiling hands and hearts only make proficients in this heavenly trade.

The gospel moves with slow and timid pace when the saints are not at their prayers early and late and long. An increase of educational facilities and a great increase of money force will be the direct curse to religion if they are not sanctified by more and better praying than we are doing. Praying apostles will beget praying saints. A praying pulpit will beget praying pews. Prayer is not an opiate but a tonic; it does not lull to sleep but arouses to new action. Paul calls it a striving, an agony. Within Jacob it was a wrestling, with the Syrophoenician woman it was a struggle which called into play all the higher qualities of the soul, and which demand great force to meet.—From His Book.

THE WORTH OF THE MISSIONARY.

Who can estimate their (the missionaries') value to the progress of the nations? Their contribution to the onward and upward march of humanity is beyond all calculation. They have inculcated industry and taught the various trades. They have promoted concord and amity, and brought nations and races closer together. They have made men better. They have increased the regard for home; have strengthened the sacred ties of family; have made the community well ordered; and their work has been a potent influence in the development of law and the establishment of government. Wielding the sword of the Spirit, they have conquered ignorance and prejudice. They have been among the pioneers of civilization. They have illumined the darkness of idolatry and superstition with the light of intelligence and truth. They have been messengers of righteousness and love. They have braved disease, and danger, and death, and in their exile have suffered unspeakable hardships, but their noble spirits have never wavered.—President McKinley.

God has many interests to consider, many conflicting forces to deal with, and many issues to provide for. Therefore, different men may have different views, and yet all be in the right. Many purposes may be aimed at in redemption beyond what we can see, and thus many processes which to us look meaningless find their end. The water is not taken over the mill-head simply that it may find its nearest course to the river, nor is the path led over a broken path because that is the straightest way to travel.—W. F. Adeney.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, are carried throughout the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, sleepless nights, lack of energy, all result from constipation. Each of these takes away piecemeal something of your health and strength. In time, intestinal poisoning due to lack of internal cleanliness, may cause the breakdown of some vital organ.

Health and Happiness Reward Internal Cleanliness

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

More Important Than Soap and Water

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Sunday School

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

There are four of our Sunday schools that had paid up their five-year pledge before "Pay-Out Week" began.

After "Pay-Out Week" we hope to publish a long list of the schools that have reached this goal. The Sunday schools that have a balance due on their five-year pledge will be asked to relate their balance to a Missionary Special, alloted us by the Bureau of Specials. The Bureau of Specials have alloted us the following Specials:

French Misson, Louisiana Conference, 160 shares, at $25 a share.

Missions to the Italians in Louisiana, 60 shares, at $25 a share.

Granbery College, Brazil, 200 shares, at $25 a share.

Japan, 194 shares, at $25 a share.

There has been held recently a district council meeting in nearly every district in our Conference, and the district officers in each of these districts are resolved to make the district work successful during 1924.

Mr. H. P. Wall, Secretary of the New Orleans District, is visiting each of his schools.

At the Homer conference, the last night will be known as "District Night," and each district will present an interesting showing of its work and plans for 1924.

The date of our annual State-wide Sunday School Conference and Wesley Bible Class Federation is March 18, 19 and 20, at Homer, La. This date conflicts with the Billy Sunday revival at Shreveport, yet to a South Louisiana Sunday school worker it will mean an opportunity to attend both meetings, as Homer is near Shreveport.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

It was with great pleasure and profit that last Sunday was spent at Bolton. God blessed us. The workers adopted the "B" Program of Work and pledged to go forward in the work. A program was ordered. It is trusted that this fine church will have a great year's work.

Monday night a board of directors was raised to look into the establishment of a Standard Training School for the Hattiesburg District. We met with the Main Street people with a good representation from other churches. It is hoped that this school will be established and maintained.

Tuesday the District Elementary Workers of the Conference met at Jackson. The Mississippi Conference Elementary Council was organized with the following officers: Mrs. J. C. Wood, Jackson, Miss., President; Miss Bernice Whatley, Collins, Miss., Vice President; Mrs. J. E. O'Key, Forest, Miss., Secretary-Treasurer. They adopted district and sub-district program of work "C," and pledged to work for them. They agreed to hold another meeting, and to project Elementary District Institutes in each district. The foundation work of our Sunday school is in the hands of these consecrated workers.

Thursday the Hinds County Institute organized, with Prof. Summers as President; Rev. B. F. Lewis, Vice President, and Ross Moore as Secretary.

Friday Madison County Institute organized by electing Mrs. W. H. Bradley as President; Mr. Du Aine Morgan, Vice President, and Mrs. George Harvey, Secretary.

These county meetings are to meet at least once a quarter for the purpose of placing the responsibility of the teacher upon them to create interest in the Standard Training School in Jackson, March 16, and otherwise to create interest in the work of the Sunday school.

Miss Marie Parham, of Nashville, has spent the week in our Conference, and she has done magnificent work.

Brother Schisler was with us at Hattiesburg to help in the establishment of the Standard Training School. We enjoyed his visit very much indeed.

Four schools have inquired about Specials. Our Sunday schools owe $18,000 on their Centenary pledges. If we can get the Special assumed, we will pay out in great shape. Let us all pull together.

Sunday School Day is approaching. Every preacher's name will appear on the Roll of Honor displayed at the Annual Conference if each school on the circuit has contributed and if the station has contributed an amount equal to 10c per pupil as reported in the Conference Journal of 1923. I trust we will have 100% Honor Roll.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Good reports are coming in from the schools that observed Jan. 20 as Leadership Training Day. We can give intelligent help to such schools. If for any reason the day was not observed, try another Sunday and report to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., the results.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth is to give us three or four great messages on the opening day of our school, to be held at Grenada College, June 11-18. Dr. Norman E. Richardson is to teach "The Principles of Religious Teaching," and give lectures on "Recreational Leadership." We have the strongest faculty for the school that is possible for us to secure.

When God wants to make a big man he piles on responsibility and work. Better thank the Lord for big jobs than complain at so many things to do. Give God a place in the plans and let him do the things you cannot do. We have only a short time to be co-workers with him in his purpose of saving a lost world. Some day we will thank the Lord that we had some one to urge us on to greater endeavors.

Big plans are being made to evangelize the people of the Greenville District. The biggest thing that is before us is the training of parents and teachers to evangelize the children and young people. The school for this purpose will be held at Clarksdale, April 7-12.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD MEETS.

The Sunday School Board met in executive session at Grenada, Jan. 22, 1924. Those present were: Rev. E. S. Lewis, Columbus, Chairman; Rev. C. A. Parks, Holly Springs, Secretary, and Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Treasurer. The year's work was thoroughly gone into and plans were laid for the greatest achievements yet attained in this important field of the church. Two things we ask of the people of the North Mississippi Conference—preachers and all: Give us your hearty co-operation and then watch the results. The Standard Training School to be held at our own Grenada College June 11-18 (put a ring around the date on your calendar, brothers, pastors and superintendents) is to be the biggest and best ever. The minimum attendance of pastors is set at 100. One hundred of our pastors taking credits at this school will mean a new day in the Sunday schools of our Conference. Watch the papers for the announcement of special features of this big school.

MEETING OF BISHOP AINSWORTH AND PRESIDING ELDERS OF THE TWO MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES.

In response to the call of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, the presiding elders of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences met him in Capitol Street Methodist Church, of Jackson, Miss., on Thursday, Jan. 10. The meeting opened at 1:30 p. m., with all the presiding elders of both Conferences present, except one or two who were delayed a few minutes by train schedules.

The meeting was opened with a song, Bible lesson and prayer led by Bishop Ainsworth, in his deeply spiritual and fervent manner, who invoked the presence of the Spirit Divine on the field, white unto the harvest, and on each of the commissioned workers present for the conference.

Bishop Ainsworth next explained his purpose in calling the meeting as being: a closer fellowship in the work, a larger outlook and deepened sense of responsibility for the work and the adoption by each of the best methods for the attainment of the coveted results. There were to be no cut-and-dried speeches—indeed, there were no speeches at all. He wanted a full and free exchange of experiences and plans in clear, but brief, statement.

It was strictly the concern of the Bishop and presiding elders, so others were excluded from the room. The Bishop led by stating the topic, or problem, and directing the trend of thought; and throughout that afternoon and the following morning there was the most wide-awake round-table discussion, exchange of plans and experiences, asking questions and answering them, and not one dull or tedious moment.

About all the vital matters that pertain to the presiding elder's life and work were brought up for consideration. Beginning with his own spiritual life and communion with God, on through his reading and mental refreshing, his relation to the pastors and the pastor's home, his influence with the officials, his responsibility for the evangelization of the district, his importance in the pay out of the financial obligations, and other important matters, the eager discussion ran.

It was a delightful meeting. The spiritual atmosphere was inspiring, the fellowship was enjoyable, the exchange of methods and experiences was informing and helpful; and Bishop Ainsworth was always ready with happy, guiding questions or suggestions, and ever and anon an illuminating plan or experience of some presiding elder elsewhere in the church.

As the Centenary Pay-Out Campaign was holding the attention of many from the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences in their meeting in the same church at the same time, we fell in with them for the evening hour.

The meeting adjourned at 12:30 p. m., Friday, with each man profoundly consecrating himself to the challenging tasks of the year, and highly appreciative of the intelligent and enthusiastic leadership of our good Bishop.

FIVE HUNDRED FOR A SERMON.

The World's Work Magazine for February carries the following announcement:

Five hundred dollars for the best sermon is offered by the World's Work Magazine. The World's Work believes that there is more interest in spiritual truth to-day than ever before in history. For this reason, this secular magazine is offering its pages as a "printed pulpit" from which ministers, lay or clerical, of any denomination may project their message.

Theological argument is barred by the Editors. But any kind of sermon that makes real the spiritual life to doubting, or anxious, or weary human hearts, is welcome.

Manuscripts may be of any length less than four thousand words. They should be typewritten, and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return if unavailable. A carbon copy should be retained by the author. They should be addressed to the Sermon Editor, the World's Work, Garden City, New York. No manuscript received later than April 1, 1924, will be considered. If no sermon received is deemed suitable for publication, no award will be made, but this contingency is not anticipated except as a remote possibility. If more than one manuscript is accepted by the Editors, the extra manuscripts will be paid for at the magazine's usual rates.

The Editors themselves will pass upon the sermons, as they wish them chosen for their appeal to the layman only. No further details than the foregoing are necessary, and the Editors, therefore, beg to be excused from answering inquiries in advance of their final decision.

WHITLINGS.

By L. R. Akers, D.D.

Divorce court records make us think that love is not only blind but deaf and dumb also.

To be a prophet or to profit is the difference between the Good Shepherd and the hireling.

Some Christians would quadruple their usefulness if they would take the "R" out of fright.

Many Christians might qualify for elevator jobs—having much experience in ups and downs.

Not back to the trail of the apeman, but forward in the steps of the God-Man is the preaching needed for this present age.

The "blues" create a wretched color scheme—red eyes, a purple nose, a yellow streak, black thoughts, and the white feather.

The average preacher would be perfectly willing to give up half fare on the railroads if he could only keep from going through the year on half-fare.—Selected.

HIS REWARD.

Frank M. Chase, writing in the Dearborn Independent on the owner of E. W. Howe's Monthly, relates the following: Despite his busy days Howe had, when scarcely past twenty-nine, completed the book that was to yield him unending literary fame. "Should 'The Story of a Country Town' find readers," he says in the preface to the book, "it may be interesting to them to know that it was written entirely at night, after the writer had finished a hard day's work as editor and publisher of a small evening newspaper. I do not think a line of it was written while the sun was shining, but in almost every chapter there are recollections of the midnight bell."

After completing the manuscript he had it put into type in the Globe's shop, and a number of proofs were taken. In this form he submitted the book to all the publishers he could learn of, but rejection came in every case. Among a number of the literary leaders of the time to whom Howe also sent proofs of the book was W. D. Howells. With his peculiar literary perception, Howells detected the elements of greatness in Howe's book, and in the Century Magazine praised it accordingly. The result was that fully a half-dozen of the publishers who had rejected the book immediately sought the privilege of printing it. Mr. Howe accepted the first offer. The book was first published in 1884, and had a large sale. Unlike most "best sellers" it continued to find buyers for years, and is even now regularly bringing royalties to its author.—Exchange.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE NOEL MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH, SHREVEPORT.

Love, hearty co-operation and a deep earnestness—to make this year the best one in faithful Christian service—characterized the first meeting of the new year of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Noel Memorial Church. Some good preacher has said: "If the first day of the civil year is marked by appropriate resolutions, how much more fitting for the new church year to begin with a well grounded and clearly expressed determination to live on a higher plane."

It was with this thought uttermost that a very busy year's work was planned. Our auxiliary of nearly two hundred members is divided into seven circles, with leaders of faith and consecration, and the members, under such able leadership, are ever diligent in visiting the sick and helping the needy.

We are trying to scatter sunshine by visiting the kiddies at the Shriners' Hospital, the inmates of the Old Folks' Home, and cheering patients in the sanitariums. The missionary work is emphasized and kept prominent in each circle by a Mission Study Class. Mrs. C. P. Munday, a deep Bible student, and a woman of exceptional gifts, is the teacher of the Bible Study Class, which meets once a month, and is now studying the great characters of the New Testament.

The Auxiliary is increasing in number and interest, as evidenced by the large attendance at the Business meetings, also the Literary and Social meetings. The officers are:

President, Mrs. W. N. Collins; Vice President, Mrs. James L. Dorman; Recording Secretary, Mrs. John Bridgers; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. O. C. Rush; Treasurer, Mrs. Paul M. Brown; Superintendent Children's Work, Mrs. W. A. Crawford; Superintendent of Study, Mrs. C. P. Munday; Superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. Thomas S. Serpell; Superintendent of Social Service, Mrs. John Wilkerson; Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. M. Pillar; Superintendents for Young People's and local work yet to be elected; agent Missionary Voice, Mrs. J. G. Sloane.

MRS. THOS. S. SERPELL,

OUR CUBAN MISSION.

The Cuba Mission was opened in 1898 by Bishop Warren A. Candler, following the Spanish-American War. A start had been made as early as 1879, but successful work was not possible during Spanish occupation and rule. In the quarter of a century that it has been in existence, the Mission has passed the stages of infancy, childhood, and adolescence, and is now meeting the responsibilities and opportunities which are the privilege of maturity. The very success of the work has been its chief embarrassment.

We now have an Annual Conference with four districts, 25 charges, 46 churches, and a membership of 5,318.

We have 39 church buildings and 26 parsonages, valued at $362,877.

We have 7 colleges and schools, with a total enrollment of 1,347, and with property valued at $446,763.

In spite of a financial crisis and political unrest in the island, the Cuba Mission last year raised for all purposes the sum of $21,253.

THE TOY MAKER.

By Margaret E. Sangster, in the Christian Herald.

All winter long he works alone,
In his small, sun-filled place,
And eagerness is in his hands,
And love is on his face.
For in his soul he hears the surf,
And feels the singing spray,
And visions come of white-capped waves,
That stretch dim miles away!

The boats he builds seem empty, quite,
And quite as boats should be—
But, oh, they hold the ocean's lure,
The magic of the sea.
A white-haired man, who toils for bread,
Put in his soul a gleam
Of romance, while in his fingers shape
The semblance of a dream!

"IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN."

The good Quaker poet was and is forever right,

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest are these, 'It might have been.'"

It might have been. Yes, God knows and we know all too well it might have been, but never can and never will be. It is too late. The water has gone past the mill. Oh, those things that might have been! Enumerate them; or are you already haunted by them? The things unforgettable, the words, forgetfulness, resentments, which cut so deep a gash in another heart, the things we might have done to dear ones now dead. God! Would we might forget!

But there is a future that is still our own. Praise God for that. Arise, let us be going, maybe to make amends, maybe to try to bury our past in newness of life. Anyway, let the memory of what might have been sternly command us to pursue a different course this new year.—Selected.

THE BURDEN BEARER.

Over the narrow pathway
That led from my lonely door,
I went with a thought of the Master
As oft I had walked before;
But my heart was heavily laden,
And with tears my eyes were dim,
But I knew I should lose the burden
Could I get a glimpse of him.

O, friend! if the greater burdens
His love can make so light,
Why should his wonderful goodness
Our halting credence slight?
The little, sharp vexations,
The briers that catch and fret—
Shall we not take them to the Helper
Who never failed us yet?

Tell him about the heartache,
And tell him the longings, too;
Tell him the baffled purpose,
When we scarce know what to do;
Then leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
And carry away the song.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORDLEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

With most men "out of sight is out of mind" as to it. There are a small number comparatively who have formed the habit, which has become the master. In their secret hearts even these would like to be freed from the temptation. If men in "vast numbers" wanted whisky, they would never have voted it out. As it becomes more difficult to obtain, fewer and fewer have any interest in obtaining it, and a new generation is growing up which has never seen a saloon. All who do not drink do so with notice from society and the State that they are doing a dangerous thing and against the common good. This, also, is a wholesome restraint. Some few wild spirits like to break every restraint. They have to be dealt with. But that phase will pass. It is an insult to our people to say "vast numbers" want drink.—Chattanooga News.

THE CENTENARY HELPS THE FOREIGNER.

By Mrs. J. H. McCoy.

Perhaps the most manifest benefits that have come to our Home Mission enterprises from Centenary money are apparent in the great improvement in our work among foreign groups.

In New Orleans, La., where for nearly two decades the women have been working in the cosmopolitan foreign section, and where we had only an old dilapidated French house in which to work, we now have the beautiful St. Mark's Church and Community House, costing an estimated $148,000, and ministering to a population of not less than [illegible].

Among the French Acadians of the Parishes of Lafourche and Terrebonne, sixty miles west of New Orleans, Protestantism has waged a very feeble struggle against the ignorance and superstition of a mediaeval religion, until the Centenary gave to the Southern Methodist Church the sinews of war with which to fight. The valuable Community House plant, the Mildred B. Wesley Community House, in Houma, La., was built with Centenary money, and the handsome brick church in that same little city where we had no church until the Centenary came, was built with funds from the same source. This church now has a membership of approximately 200, and several other rural churches in the same section have been organized and houses of worship built from Centenary funds. With the encouragement of the Centenary Movement to cheer them on, the deaconesses and missionaries in this great Home Mission field where four hundred thousand people of direct French Acadian lineage live, have used their efforts to splendid effect, and this fall a new school for these people will be opened. The most ignorant rural population of white people live in the French parishes. The investments in the French parishes since the beginning of the Centenary period will total more than $70,000.

The Centenary has given to the foreigners of the Gulf Coast at Biloxi additional workers and a well equipped church, known as the Wesley Memorial Church, and has furnished the fund for the complete renovation of the Community House property. The foreign population of Biloxi includes Poles, Austrians, French, Italians, Czechs, and Bohemians.

In the West Virginia coal fields Centenary money has enabled the women to double the number of workers entered in Christian Social Service. The population of Vernon County, West Virginia, is estimated at 175,000, dependent on coal mining either as miners or in occupations [illegible] the fact of mining. The Community House has been built in Wyatt, W. Va., [illegible] approximately 5,000, and [illegible] by the women and men [illegible] ever realize this great gift to the [illegible]. In one night's service [illegible] different nationalities were represented. The missionary who made a survey of the community in 1922 [illegible].

At Ensley, Birmingham, Ala., in an Italian community of 5,000 [illegible] a nice brick church has been erected with Centenary funds and [illegible] Italian converts. A full-time Italian minister is in charge. The Community House workers have been struggling to win the people to Protestantism, but the workers had no church to which to direct their converts. Christian America can [illegible] little in true Americanization without the church of open Bible and of the Sunday school for all the people.

EVANGELISM.

By Rev. E. Nash Broyles.

We have heard much [illegible] in recent years—and perhaps too [illegible] and [illegible] critical as little [illegible] of more preaching. "Go tell the story," said one in a list of evangelistic fervor, who never thought to understand it. Such a good story ought to be well told.

We appreciate fervor; and we especially appreciate fervor that constrains us to "go tell the story," but fervor without an anchorage in a blessed experience is as an opinion without evidence, a conclusion without facts, and ranks with prejudice in point of being without logic, or proper procedure of thought.

Now, don't misunderstand us. We like to hear the congregation sing, "Go tell the story." There is a chime that sets us worked up nearer to a shout except the actual vision of a soul redeemed. But we hate to hear the members of the congregation return by "tell the story." The sinner would rather hear the actual story. The man spiritually asleep had rather hear the actual story.

People without religious experience can't "tell the story." It can't be learned out of books as a mere intellectual effort, and yet a part of the story comes from the printed page. We can learn it better from the lips of those who know it. Our own experience will convince us, send the story, and fire us with evangelistic zeal.

Obituaries.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. ANNIE SMITH FORD, was born in York County S. C. When but a little girl she, with her people moved to Marshall County Miss. where she spent the rest of her life. On Feb. 21, 1872, she was happily married to William Garland Ford, a Confederate veteran, who merited his military and civil title to rank of Major. To that happy union of love there were born three children. In early life Annie Ford gave her heart and life to her Master, and served him faithfully until he called her home. Her health had been impaired by the ravages of the "flu" and for two or three years she had not been able to lead a very active life being again attacked by a bronchial trouble and her heart weakened from former attacks, she was unable to overcome it. On Friday morning, Jan. 11, 1924 at about 8:30 o'clock, while surrounded by physician, nurse and loved ones, she, without a struggle, dropped off to sleep in her Lord. She died as she had lived—in the faith that is triumphant. She has passed from the church militant to the church triumphant. The community has lost a good woman, the Methodist Church a devout member, the husband a devoted companion, the children a precious mother and the brother a favorite sister. Those left to sorrow over her going, besides the many friends, are: Her husband General William Garland Ford; three children, as follows: Mrs. L. P. Quinn, of Greenwood, Miss.; Mrs. D. P. Alexander, of Memphis, and Miss Annie Garland Ford, of Holly Springs, Miss., and a brother, Hon. Eagleton M. Smith, an attorney of distinction also of Holly Springs. She will be missed most by those who knew her best. "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, that they may have rest from their labors."

Her pastor,
C. A. PARKS.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, on Dec. 11, 1923, BROTHER W. J. CONERLY answered to the call of God to come up higher, thus making vacant a place in the board of stewards of the Gloster Methodist Church, a place he had filled for about thirty years, honorably, efficiently, liberally and spiritually; and,

Whereas, as his stately appearance, his manly association among men and his spotless character, are greatly missed, not only in the steward body, but church, town and State; and,

Whereas, this choice vessel of God is serving in the Church Triumphant, thus laying aside the earthly temple to await the coming of his Lord and Saviour;

Be it resolved, That we express our deep sympathy to his devoted and God-loving wife, his three sons, upon whom his mantle is now being resolutely carried, his consecrated daughter, the wife of Rev. Elmer C. Gunn; and to Rev. and Sister W. W. Simmons, who have sustained a great loss in "Willie," though a son-in-law, yet more than a son.

We pray God to strengthen these sad hearts, deepen their love to Christ for whom he lived; and brighten their hopes for a final union with this man of God, who was a loving husband, tender father and dear son, and a friend of God, and servant of Christ and his church.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the bereaved family and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and to any other paper desiring to publish same; that his host of friends may join us in prayer and sympathy, for to know Brother W. J. Conerly was to love Him.

Signed by Stewards J. S. Cobb, J. E. Brown, W. P. Webb.

E. D. SIMPSON, Pastor.

Another of our good women has gone from our church at Prairie, Miss. MARTHA EUL WISE, nee Roberts, died in the triumphs of a living faith Dec. 7, 1923. She was born in Monroe County fifty-nine years ago; married to William Wise in 1881; joined the Methodist church in young womanhood, where she cheerfully served her Lord until her translation. Her home was a place of joy. She always met her guests with a genuine smile. She loved children; they delighted to be in her home. She loved the church, filled her place in it as long as health would admit. Her life was most guileless. Oh, how we miss her. Her last days were days of increased peace. She leaves one brother, one sister, two half-sisters, one half-brother, two children, two grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a host of nephews and nieces, to mourn their loss.

WAR MUST GO.

The task of establishing justice and good will between nations and cooperation for the supremacy of law and the abolition of war is one of the most pressing of all the tasks that today confront the churches. The Christians of the whole world should seek with utmost determination to reconcile the nations, to remove their misunderstandings, to banish their hatreds, fears and suspicions, remove dangerous economic causes of war, and to create among them the spirit of unity and of a noble purpose to work together.—Ex. Com. Federal Council of Churches.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WOODROW WILSON.

On Sunday morning, February 3, at 11:15 o'clock, while thousands of people were assembled in their accustomed places of worship to make their acknowledgments to God on earth, the soul of Woodrow Wilson went to meet its Maker face to face. Patriot, scholar, statesman, seer prophet of a better day for all the world, this great man went to his grave broken in body and disappointed in hope. But his spirit was serene and his faith was unquenched. He lived not by bread alone, but by the high ideals and holy aspirations that inspire wonderful vislons and lead to vast emprises. His dreams seemed not to be realized and his prophecies seemed not to come true? What of it! The day is not done, the end is not yet. Some day!

"* * * What stops my despair?

but what man Would do."

TILL MARCH 16.

There is just one major task before the church from now until March 16—the task of getting squarely before the church and upon the hearts of the people the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. Happily, this is not a difficult task. The cause itself is one that appeals powerfully to those who are made familiar with it, and the plan adopted for its promotion is so simple that the smallest church on the weakest charge in the connection can work it. The first quarterly conference, the adoption of the quota and the acceptance of whatever sum in addition seems practicable, the appointment of the committee and the sending in of the pink sheet report—these are the first steps; then the distribution of the literature, the presentation from the pulpit by pastor and minute speaker, the working out of details of the canvass by the committee, and the securing of the pledges on March 16 and during the week following—these follow in order.

We believe preachers and people will go to the accomplishment of this task with actual joy. It is not "just another drive for money;" it is the definite undertaking of the church to meet one of the most sacred obligations resting upon it—the obligation to provide a modest but adequate support for its worn-out servants, their dependent widows and orphans. A more appealing cause has not been presented to the church, and we venture to predict that the response will be prompt, unanimous, and generous to a degree.

It should not be forgot that fifty per cent of the amount pledged in an Annual Conference will be credited by the General Board of Finance to that Conference for the benefit of its own claimants, the income therefrom to be distributed under its own regulations. The other fifty per cent will be administered by the General Board as its funds are now administered.

The time is not long—but it is long enough. Let us make March 16 a memorable day in the history of Southern Methodism.

THE INSIDE OF THE HOUSE.

The streets around may be unpaved, littered with trash, lacking drainage, almost impassable; the neighbors may be coarse, unfriendly, disagreeable in many ways; the house itself may be small, unpainted, unattractive from any point of view. Yet there may be inside the house a little bit of heaven because a happy family dwells there. So in the mansion on the avenue, with all the surroundings that culture could desire and wealth provide, there may be a section of heli because love has departed from the home. It is the inside of the house that counts.

FAINT-HEARTED.

It is a strange thing that after nearly two thousand years of victorious progress there should still be professed followers of the Master so faint-hearted as to believe—or profess to believe—that Christianity has just about run its race and that it is upon the very verge of disaster and defeat. According to their lugubrious wailings, most of the young people are going to the devil—if they have not already arrived; older people are losing interest in the things that have to do with the higher values of life; business is dominated by crass selfishness and dishonesty; society is utterly corrupt and in the process of disintegration; faith is fast disappearing from among men; the church is losing—or has lost—its spirituality, and only a few—very few—are left to bear witness to the saving power of God. Such faint-heartedness is—if we may be pardoned for saying so—simple foolishness. The facts cited may have in them something of truth, but they are not all the truth. Many young people have succumbed to the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil—but more thousands of them than ever before in the history of the world are dedicating their lives to the service of God and their fellow-men; some older people apparently have grown lax in their interest in the best things of life—but there are still enough of a better kind to keep going multitudinous agencies for the betterment of mankind; there is much of selfishness and dishonesty in business—but there is still enough honor left to support a colossal business fabric that would fall of its own weight if men did not trust one another; society lacks much of being what it ought to be—but in every community the majority of men and women are pure in thought and life; the church has not measured up to its possibilities and opportunities we freely admit—but it is still the most powerful institution in the world standing for the promotion of righteousness, its membership is increasing at a rate never known before, and its gifts for the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth are growing larger and larger every year. If their own faith in God cannot quiet the fears of the faint hearted, twenty centuries of Christian conquest ought to give them some little hope for the future.

The sunlight is glancing
O'er armies advancing
To conquer the kingdoms of sin;
Our Lord shall possess them,
His presence shall bless them,
His beauty shall enter them in.

With shouting and singing,
And jubilant ringing,
Their arms of rebellion cast down,
At last every nation,
The Lord of salvation,
Their King and Redeemer shall crown!

THE CAUSE GOES ON.

The recent conviction of Mr. W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in New York, upon a charge of the misuse of the funds of the League, will be made much of by those opposed to prohibition, as if the wrongdoing of an individual constituted an indictment of a great cause. Even if Mr. Anderson is guilty—and there is reason for believing that he is not, being the victim of a "frame-up"—the cause of prohibition will go on its victorious way. Judas betrayed the Master—but Christianity is the dominant religion of the world to-day.

"WHEN THE HURLY-BURLY'S DONE."

The streets are roaring with the rumbling of heavy trucks and the honking of innumerable automobile horns; a brass band is in full blast around the corner; a great throng of people is hurrying along the sidewalks, some of them intent upon their own affairs, some of them interested in what is going on around them. All is life, action, movement, jarring sounds, discordant voices. But the quiet hour will come. At the close of day, the trucks will be off the streets, the noises will be hushed, the people will be in their homes, and peace will settle over the city. We thank God for the quiet hours, when we can rest our weary bodies, refresh our jaded spirits, renew our spiritual strength with high and holy communion. Another hard day ahead? Yes—but "my grace is sufficient."

JUST A SAMPLE.

The other day the local newspapers gave an account of a young man recently arrived from New York. He went to the race track, bet all the money he had on the races, lost, and was arrested by a policeman as he was in the act of drinking a deadly poison. God have pity on the misguided citizens who contend that racing is a desirable asset to a city!

here that the Germans found out that the Americans were into the war for something else besides a picnic, and it was here that the retreat began that ended across the Rhine, and the Armistice was signed. It was here that our Marines have become immortalized, and the name has been changed officially from Belleau Wood to 'The Hill of the American Marines.' As we stood there amazed at the wonders about us and the lovely American cemetery below us on the side of the hill, the guide informed us that we were standing on American soil, for on July 22, 1923, France presented that spot of ground to America, and Maj.-Gen. J. G. Harbord, in his speech of acceptance for America, said: 'It is very appropriate that this shell-torn wood, and blood-soaked soil should, with the consent of our great sister republic, pass forever to American ownership. It is too precious in its associations, too hallowed with the haunting memories of that fateful June of five years ago to be permanently sheltered under any flag, no matter how much beloved, other than our own, and now in the quiet sunshine of a happier summer it has become a tiny American island, surrounded by lovely France.' White stone boulders with the insignia of the American Marines mark the positions of the different divions, and are dotted all through the wood, while 4,000 white crosses mark the graves of as many American boys, on the side of the hill below. New graves are being added every day, for Captain Campbell, who is in charge of the cemetery, told us that bodies are being found continually by workmen who are grading the hill and making a lovely park out of it. The identification disks are all perfect, and the bodies are being buried with the others who sleep there. Wouldn't it be wonderful if they could find the other 100 bodies that were declared as lost?

"We reached Chateau-Thierry in a few minutes, but not much of interest is there except the bridge that our boys blew up after they had pushed the Germans across the Marne and had set them on the run that ended across the Rhine. Of all our 73,000 boys who were killed, the most of them still sleep in France.

"Yesterday was another wonderful day, for we all went to see the wonderful painting, 'The Pantheon de la Guerre,' which is the panorama of the war, and which I hope you will get to see, for it is going on a trip to America, and it is worth a trip from Mississippi to New York to see. It is considered one of the greatest achievements of the war, and certainly glorifies our heroes. There were two authors who conceived it, but about forty artists took four years to paint it. It is about 200 feet long, though forming a complete circular building. It was begun after the first battle of the Marne in October, 1914, and added to as the war progressed. There are six thousand people in the painting, and each portrait a hero. You can easily find people you know, and with field or opera glasses one could recognize more. All the figures are life-size, and every country which participated in the war is given a panel and her famous men and women who were in war work are there, too. On the American panel, you can easily recognize President Wilson, standing alone, Colonel House, Taft, Roosevelt, McAdoo, Bryan, Hoover, Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Mrs. Munro of Red Cross fame; the Y. M. C. A. man, the Red Cross nurse, the different forms of service, each represented by a real man. I can't describe it to you, but I do say this: Begin now to save your money and take a trip to New York next summer, where it will be on exhibition at one of the theatres there. The thought and the spirit shown in the painting are more than wonderful, and the thing is so wonderfully done.

"I must stop. It is 10 o'clock. I hear the porter dragging his bed into the front hall where he sleeps to open the door for late comers. One can tell what time it is by this noise, for Paris is a 10 o'clock town. All doors are locked and barred and shutters pulled down in front of show windows, and everything is dark and dreary."

THE CHURCH PRESS.

By Rev. E. Nash Broyles.

An institution so enormous must have its own press. Doctrines must be taught, happenings must be registered, policies must be announced, a forum of opinion must be maintained, free expression must be had, exhortations and appeals must be delivered—the church must have its own press.

The non-sectarian public press cannot perform the service—it is non-sectarian and indefinite. An inter-denominational press cannot perform the service—matters distinctly denominational must be dealt with. The Methodist Church must have its own press.

The conviction has come out of an experience of need, and when the church is stirred by a deep conviction the effect is abiding and action sure.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South—our church—has its own press. A score of periodicals go weekly to thousands and hundreds of thousands of subscribers. The subscription price is as little as can possibly obtain to issue the several papers.

If you do not take your church papers, you cannot be sufficiently informed in church activities. An institution so enormous informed people should know about. Activities taking place in our own church family, our love and loyalty should impel us to learn.

The pastor will be glad to send in your subscription or renewal—and charge no commission.

Every member of the church ought to take the church paper that will be of most service.

Subscribe or renew your subscription—now.

Good news, wholesome doctrine, announced policy—learn what the Methodist Church is doing.—The Big Brother.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the mightiest weapon that has been known, in all the world's history, just as it is to-day. It was said that Mary, Queen of Scots, was more afraid of John Knox's prayers than of an army of ten thousand men. The most important relation in our lives is our relation to prayer, and that relation is sustained by prayer. Prayer is God's law, working in the spiritual universe. We must remember that we must obey laws in the natural world to obtain results. Witness the street car stops, the train stations, even the weighing machines, which will not register or benefit us unless their laws are carried out. If we obey the rules of certain laws, we may use them. Not otherwise. In the same relation if I obey God's law, it will obey me. God says to us: "If my people, who are called by my name, shall pray, I will hear."

Ye have not, because ye ask not. You can judge just how spiritual, or how religious you are by the way you pray. Prayer is the barometer of the spiritual life. What is prayer, and what do you mean by its being the law of our spiritual life? Not begging, not asking. It is communion, fellowship, the interchange of heart and affection with God. Just as a boy pours out his soul in communion with his father, it is as much a prayer as when he makes a material request of the parent.

Prayer is a vision as well as a voice divine. People may say there is so much mystery about prayer; and it is difficult to tell whether your prayers reach God or not. We can't see the prayer as it goes upward. And then enters the skeptic who asks: "What's the use?" Using the illustrations of the workings of radium, the X-rays, the Marconi, and electricity, the workings of which none understand. I ask the motorman what moves the car, and he answers: "The juice." The scientist uses many more words, but he says no more. It is the vital spark which brings us in touch with a certain marvelous power. So with prayer. It brings us in touch with the Father. Prayer works. That is why I pray in spite of all the mystery which surrounds the contact. Skeptics ask: "How can God hear you when you pray?" Because he is at the other end of your supplication. We may know not what prayer, nor electricity, nor even the workings of a watch may be, but we can see what they can do.

Prayer is the revelation of God which Jesus brought to the world. You can only come to the Father through the Son. Jesus used only three names for God. They were God, Lord, and the Father. When he used the first it was a quotation from the Old Testament. God and Father were his favorite names and he uses Father over a hundred times in St. John's Gospel alone. In the Greek, the word means one to be supplicated, in the Latin it means light. Jesus revealed a personal God. There are some who say he is not personal, but principle. Those people demonstrate, but they don't pray. They have nobody to pray to. They may get a sort of reflex blessing, but no direct aid can come unless you speak to God. Jesus spoke to God only once on the Cross, and then came immediately back to the name, Father. If he is our Father, we have a right as well as the privilege of praying to him. Our Heavenly Father will not turn us away. Never mind the difficulties in the way. God will interfere with natural laws if he has to to grant our requests, for he is not only a creator, but a Father. God does many things for his family of children that he would not do for the cold world. There is a realm of faith which he controls. Just as the ocean captain runs the ship and his word controls even its throbbing engines, so this world is my Father's house and he runs it. He can speak to his servants; the natural laws, and they must obey him. We are only poor and straightened, because we have not come in touch with our Father enough to reflect his power and his glory. We can come only through the medium of prayer. Therefore, pray.—Dr. William Evans, as reported in Nashville Banner.

CENTRAL EUROPE WALKS BACKWARD.

By H. E. Woolever, Editor the National Methodist Press.

Recently an appeal was made to the State Department to protect the rights of America's missions in Poland. Following the war and the break-up of the countries in Central Europe, the Roman Hierarchy sent a special papal delegate to Warsaw, where later the Roman Church took over the old State churches and commenced a warfare against non-Catholics. Poland has had a growing Protestant element, and the territory was assigned to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as part of its foreign missionary territory. Bishop Beauchamp, the former leader of the Centenary Movement in that church, has been in Poland supervising the large relief and mission work of his church. Property is owned valued at considerably over a million dollars, and work is carried on at several points. Some time ago, a very curt order was sent to the Bishop ordering all relief work carried on by his church to cease. Since his arrival in this country, a new order has been issued commanding the Methodists to close up their churches and other property.

Last week Bishop Beauchamp laid the facts before the State Department with a request that the rights of Americans in Poland be respected. The Constitution of Poland declares for religious freedom, but, as in Italy, when the opponents to Protestantism are in power, constitutional rights are overridden. The Department sent a communication to Poland which has resulted in permission to keep the buildings open until the latter part of March. Certainly some steps should be taken to provide reciprocal guarantees which would assure the same treatment for American Protestant schools and churches in Roman Catholic countries as the United States accords Roman Catholic activities in this land. Such reciprocal relations now protect commercial interests. There is some diplomatic language which would nicely gloss over the real issue, but above is the essence of the trouble.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

To live as God would have us live, to do his will in faith and righteousness, requires some earnest thought. Possibly never before in the history of our race was there such confusion of ideas relative to God, to duty and conduct. Not only is there a breaking down of barriers between right and wrong, but also a well directed campaign to obliterate distinction in these opposing principles. Some of the leading contributors to the secular press are masters of this dangerous deception. Lenine, autocrat of Russia, a man who neither feared God nor regarded any law of right known among men, who murdered as ruthlessly as Nero any who opposed his will, has passed out of this life, and the heroics are being played to a finish. Why a decent newspaper should publish a eulogy of such a monster in human form passes my understanding. I am fully aware of the Roman maxim, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum," but when there is no "bonum" to be seen or heard, where are you or where am I? Breaking down all authority, acknowledging no basis of conduct as a guiding principle, disregarding the standards that hold society in bonds of civilization, and utterly regardless of true and tried principles of government among other nations, this man was a problem to statesmen and a wonder to the world. But when I write praiseworthy words, please give me something better than this godless, ruthless, selfish autocrat. Why a nation of such magnitude endured him for a time I can scarcely understand. In free-born America he would have died before breakfast, and I fancy not peacefully.

Mr. W. J. Bryan, commoner, orator, Christian, statesman, recently delivered, in our city, his masterly defense of the Bible as interpreted, taught, and accepted by evangelical Christianity. The Coliseum, the largest audience hall in Shreveport, was crowded to its fullest capacity. It was estimated, and no doubt correctly, that seven thousand people were in attendance, and many were turned away. Mr. Bryan is one of the world's great men, great in his native gifts, great in his career as a public man in our country, and greater, perhaps, in his undying faith in those essential and virile principles that underlie our social and civil fabric. The Christian religion and the Book that teaches it to him are a revelation from God. The deathless principles of life, duty, and conduct, contained in the Bible, to him, as to a large body of the leading thinkers of the world to-day, only can save the race from ruin and desolating warfare. And never a Crusader of an older day espoused his cause more loyally and defended it more courageously than this knight of a later age. If majorities in favor of a cause or movement ever settle a great question, there is no doubt whatever as to the complete defeat of the ultra-Modernist's interpretation of the Bible. I am much in favor of people thinking, of men reaching conclusions through the exercise of intellectual processes, but no conclusion is of any lasting value in moral and spiritual things unless its premises are based on experience and observation. A million years is an immense period of time—no man can, or ever could fully comprehend this vast sweep of centuries and millenniums—yet the evolutionist handles this incomprehensible age like a grocery clerk hands lagniappe over the counter. What wonderful chronometers these fellows have! Who made them, who wound them, who set and timed them in eocene ages, when the earth was yet young? A million years, one thousand millenniums, ten thousand centuries! These are but as yesterday when it is past to the Almighty Creator; but to my poor, finite mind it is a vast, stupendous sweep of ages. May the good Lord give unto these men who are endeavoring to undermine his creative power with their teaching better arithmetic and less imagination. I love truth. I accept science founded on truth; but this jungle of overgrown imagery, palmed off on the public of our day, never was science and never will be. But I started out to write of Mr. Bryan. Again I repeat he is a great man and has a great mission. He has a message of hope, gladness and comforting assurance for this old sin-sick, doubting world. Hear him and judge whether I speak the truth.

THE CHIEF TASK OF THE WORLD ALLIANCE.

By William I. Hull, Ph.D., Professor of History and International Relations at Swathmore College.

The outstanding task of our generation is the abolition of war, the substitution of peaceful for military methods of settling disputes between nations, and the promotion of co-operation among the nations for the fulfillment of world opportunities for promoting human welfare. The gigantic size and difficulty of this task are obvious from a casual observation of world conditions to-day. Hence it behooves rational men to utilize every honorable means of accomplishing it. Business men, laboring men, the women, the statesmen, and all the champions of the higher intellectual, moral, and spiritual life are engaged, in their respective spheres and according to their appropriate methods, in endeavoring to solve the great problem.

It would appear to be peculiarly the province of organized religion to champion this cause of peace, since the church is built upon the cornerstone of love to God and love to man. The Christian church in particular, with its far-reaching national and international organization, with its numerous and devoted membership, with its great inheritance and divine mission, is the agency of all agencies to which mankind can properly look for the promotion of the cause of peace throughout the world.

It was with such considerations in mind that the founders of the World Alliance of the Churches for International Friendship launched their organization upon the stormy seas of European politics at the very beginning of the world war. With national branches in some score of nations, with international conferences meeting from time to time, and with a permanent international executive committee, the Alliance has become the outstanding agency of the Christian churches for the promotion of international peace and friendship. Its last international conference, held in Copenhagen, Denmark, in the summer of 1922, in its widely representative membership and with its advocacy of the reduction of armaments and the rights of racial and religious minorities, was typical of its aim and methods.

The American branch of the World Alliance has just held its last national convention in Philadelphia, and the key-note of this meeting was the duty of the church to promote the adoption of the International Court of Justice, and to secure a world-wide spirit of friendship and goodwill, through which alone the International Court and other international agencies can meet with entire success. As evidence of the high ideal and great opportunity of the church in the international task of our time, there may be cited a few of the high notes which were struck in the Philadelphia meeting.

For example, Governor William E. Sweet, of Colorado, long known for his demand for a thorough-going application of Christian principles in business, political, and international affairs, made a stirring address which centered around the dictum of Victor Hugo, namely, that there is something stronger than an army, and that is an idea whose time is come. Governor Sweet proclaimed in eloquent and convincing words the truth that the church must stand if it is to stand at all: for the idea of human brotherhood, and that the hour of this idea has struck.

Dr. William P. Merrill, the President of the Church Peace Union and of the American branch of the World Alliance, made another stirring address on the "Mobilization of the Churches," in which he pleaded for the necessary preliminaries of successful church action in behalf of peace, namely, the drill and education of church members; the division and correlation of function and responsibility among them; the building up of financial resources as adequate as are those of war itself; and the subordination of everything else to the pursuit of peace. "Millions for defense and not one cent for friendship," he declared to be a disgrace in our twentieth century Christian civilization. The Christian churches, especially, and the members of these churches, since they supported so generously the prosecution of the recent war, are peculiarly responsible for the financial support and the prosecution of the peace campaign which alone can bring adequate peace to this weary world.

Archbishop Soderblom, of Sweden, another speaker at the Philadelphia Conference, reminded his American auditors that all the world is one in the possession of Graeco-Roman culture; that the parable of the Good Samaritan should be taken to heart by the nations of France, Germany, the United States and others; that the Nicene Creed of faith must now be followed by a Nicene Creed of duty, which will bind the church as never before to the international task. And he uttered the solemn warning that unless the church does accept and live up to its great international responsibility, it might as well be given an old-age pension and retire to innocuous desuetude.

As conferences and discussions proceed and as our thought is gradually clarified, it becomes increasingly certain that the mission and opportunity of the church in connection with the great international problem of our time is not merely to support the proposals of statesmen for the establishment of world courts, leagues and nations, and the like; but it is, on the contrary, to test all such proposals by the fundamental peace principle of Christianity, to accept or reject them according as they fulfill that test, and to propose political, economic, and especially fraternal methods which shall come up to the standard of Christianity. In connection with the World Court, for example, the Christian church must demand that this court shall be founded upon a purely pacific basis, and that neither force nor the threat of force shall be relied upon to compel nations to appear before its tribunal or to fulfill the court's decisions. Similarly, in connection with the League of Nations and every other proposed international association, the Christian church must demand that neither the use of force nor preparations for, nor threat of it must be relied upon to compel nations to live up to their international responsibilities. Articles 8, 10, 11 and 16 of the covenant of the League of Nations must be tested by the pacific principle of Christianity, and if found wanting—their elimination must be demanded by the Christian church.

It is peculiarly essential that on the eve of the next presidential campaign in the United States, the Christian church should make absolutely clear its position towards any international association and the sanctions which are proposed for such an association. The chief service which the World Alliance can perform, therefore, at the present crisis is to convince the people that there are other adequate sanctions besides military force and economic coercion which can be relied upon for the promotion of effective international government and international co-operation; and to convince the governments that these sanctions can and must be substituted for force in any plans which they may work out and offer to the people for adoption. The Christian church in America occupies a peculiarly fortunate position in the fulfillment of this great service to our own country and to mankind; for it has back of it the successful experience of the Supreme Court of the United States and the other departments of the Federal Government which, in their dealings with the sovereign States of this Union, are not based upon military force and economic coercion. With the experience of our Federal Government behind it, the Christian church in America can advance with confidence to the great task of applying peace methods of Christianity to the preservation of the world's peace and the promotion of its co-operation and friendship.

METHODIST MEN'S CLUB ORGANIZED AT EPWORTH CHURCH.

The men of Epworth Methodist Church in New Orleans were entertained at a dinner by the ladies of the church, on Friday night, Feb. 1, and at the close of the dinner the pastor, Rev. J. B. Grambling, presented the matter of organizing the men of the church into a Men's Club, which is one of our general organizations. The suggestion met with enthusiastic approval of every man present, and a charter membership list of 28 men was immediately made, and plans for future meetings were adopted. The Club decided to meet again on Friday night, Feb. 22, for the election of officers and final organization. They also decided that their regular meeting night would be the first Friday of each month, and would take the form of a supper to be served by the ladies of the church, and each man would be expected to pay for his own plate.

To show their earnestness in this movement, the men decided to observe the week of Feb. 11 as a week of work, and each man will give his time and effort to the building of an annex to the church in order to make it possible for the church to meet the growing demands of the community.

This is the first Club organized in the city of New Orleans, and it bids fair to have a membership of fifty or seventy-five men, and the men of this Club are already looking forward to the organization of a Methodist Men's Club in every Methodist church in the city.

OFFICIAL CALL FOR THE NINTH CONVENTION OF THE WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

To the Sunday School Workers in Every Land.
GREETING!

In the name of the Sunday school workers of Great Britain and Ireland we, the officers of the World's Sunday School Association, invite Sunday school workers from all nations to attend the World's Ninth Sunday School Convention to be held in Glasgow, Scotland, June 18-26, 1924.

It is nearly three years since the Sunday School Workers of the World assembled in Tokyo. Some of the results of that Convention are already known, especially the change in the attitude of the Far East toward Christian teaching; where there was oftentimes distrust there is now open-minded inquiry.

The influence of the Christian churches and the thirty millions and more members of the Sunday schools of the world ought to be a force sufficiently intelligent and influential to create a mind and a heart attitude that is Christian among the youth of the oncoming generations that will forever cast out the spirit that breeds war.

Christian education is beset with problems in every land, and it is time for us to meet and commune together that we may receive fresh vigor and knowledge to face the serious conditions with which we are confronted.

This Ninth Convention will have as its motto: "That the World May Know That Thou Hast Sent Me." The daily program will cover every phase of Sunday school work at home and in the mission fields.

At Tokyo the Scottish National Sabbath School Union invited the World's Sunday School Association to come to Glasgow, and the invitation is peculiarly fitting. Glasgow—in which city the meetings are to be held—has for its civic motto: "Let Glasgow Flourish by the Preaching of the Word." The city, though known chiefly as a commercial and shipping center, founded by Saint Kentigern about 450 A. D., is an ancient Cathedral and University town.

Scotland, on which the eyes of the religious world will be set in 1924, has long been known as a Bible-loving country, whose Christian people have in time of persecution bled and died for their faith. It is the land of John Knox, David Livingstone, John G. Paton, and James Chalmers, and many others renowned in the history of missionary work.

Scottish hospitality is cordially offered, and a warm welcome is assured to all who find their way to the Convention. All who purpose attending should make early application for membership. Delegates from India, Continental Europe and Great Britain should communicate with the General Secretary, World's Sunday School Convention, 70 Bothwell Street, Glasgow, and all others with the General Secretary, the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

Let all who are interested pray for the officers and the committees charged with the responsibility of the Convention plans, to the end that great glory be given to the name of Jesus in whose name the world can have peace.

Issued in the name of The HON. J. J. MACLAREN, D.C.L., LL.D.,
Justice of the Appellate Court of Canada,
President of the World's Sunday School Association.
ARTHUR M. HARRIS, New York,
Chairman of Executive Committee, W. S. S. A.
W. G. LANDES, C. E. D.,
General Secretary, W. S. S. A.
The Rt. Hon. LORD PENTLAND, G. C. S. I.,
President of the Convention Council.
JAMES KELLY, M. A.,
General Secretary of the Convention.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Don't You Hear Them Calling You?

At Daybreak February 1, 1924, every preacher and lay member throughout the whole Church has full liberty in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. From February 1 to March 16 the aim is to have a red-hot program of publicity, as follows:

1. FROM THE PULPIT—

   During these six weeks the pastors should deliver several addresses on the subject at the regular hours of public worship.

   Gifted lay members and visiting preachers can be used in many places for addresses as opportune occasions arise.

2. BY LAY MINUTE SPEAKERS—

   Snappy Forgotten-Man speeches by Minute Speakers, delivered to Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, Churches of the Circuit, etc., will help much.

   The publications sent to every Charge by the Board of Finance furnish abundant material for these addresses.

3. BY DISTRIBUTING LITERATURE—

   Every Charge will be supplied by February 1, 1924, with a package of the booklet, "The Call of the Forgotten Man," for general distribution.

   If any Charge desires a package of "When Crossroads Cross Again," same may be had by application to the Board of Finance.

In addition to the foregoing, the secular press and Church press will carry appealing matter on the subject during the six weeks of publicity. The harvest of the Special Effort will be measured by the extent of seed sowing and cultivation.

I Am Calling, Too---for the pinks

The Home Circle

MY FOLKS.

I think my folks are very queer—
You'd be surprised at things I hear.
Sometimes it seems I'm very small,
And then again I'm big and tall.

At night I tease to stay up late,
But mother says: "No, no, it's eight.
Go right upstairs; and hurry, too.
Indeed—a little boy like you!"

At six next morning, from the hall,
She wakes me with this funny call:
"Come, come, get up; and hurry, too.
For shame—a great big boy like you!"

When through the night I grow so fast,
How very strange it doesn't last!
I shrink and shrink till eight, and then
I'm just a little boy again.

—Anne Porter Johnson, in Harper's Magazine.

HENRY'S PRIZE.

On their way home from school one afternoon Henry and three of his playmates stopped every now and then to make snowballs to throw at some spot on a tree or fence or telegraph pole. They made believe that whoever hit the mark would get a prize.

When they came to Granny White's house Henry noticed a star-shaped thing half-way between the two parlor windows of the little frame cottage.

"Look, boys!" he cried, pointing to the spot. "Let's see who can hit that star!"

"Whee, that's easy!" said one of the other boys, as he picked up some snow.

"This time it's my first turn!" shouted Henry, and threw with all his might. But he had aimed a little too far to one side and his snowball crashed right against the window-pane.

Frightened at what they had done, Henry and the other boys ran away as fast as they could till they were a long way from Granny White's house; then they stopped, all out of breath.

"Let's throw snowballs against that barn!" called one of the boys, but Henry did not feel like throwing snowballs any more. He kept thinking of poor old Granny White and the broken glass. She lived alone, and he wondered how she was going to keep warm with a big hole in her window. "I don't want to play any more," he said to the other boys. "I'm going home!"

He walked away as fast as he could toward Granny White's house. But when he reached it he could not bear to look at the parlor window. He went to the back door and knocked. Granny opened it with a smile on her kind old face. "Well, well; if here isn't Henry!" she said. "Come right in and get warm!"

Henry wondered how she could be smiling when one of her windows had just been broken. He sat down near the kitchen stove and turned to Granny. "I broke your window, Granny. But I didn't mean to. I was trying to hit that star on the front of your house between the parlor windows, and I missed it and struck the glass. I'm awfully sorry!"

Granny White smiled a pleasanter smile than ever. "You didn't break the glass, Henry," she said. "The snow must have been soft, for it did not go through the pane."

Henry was an astonished little boy when he heard that the window wasn't broken after all, and he was glad, too. "That's why you are smiling," he said; "you are so glad that the glass didn't break and let in all the cold air."

"It isn't that alone. I am happy that you were honest and manly enough so that you came back to tell me you did it, because you really thought you had broken the window. I never should have known who threw that snowball, because when I heard it hit the glass and hurried to the parlor window there wasn't a boy or a girl in sight!"

When Henry noticed that it was getting dark outside and told Granny that he must be going home she gave him a big bagful of cookies and said: "Here, Henry, take home these nice fresh ginger cookies for your supper. I was just baking them when you threw that snowball."

As Henry ran home he was very happy to think that he hadn't broken good old Granny White's window after all. But he was still happier that he had gone back and told her who it was that had thrown the snowball. Then, suddenly, as he hugged the bag with the warm, spicy cookies in it he thought of something funny: he was the only one of the boys that afternoon to win a real prize and he hadn't hit the mark either!—Emma Knotts, in The Youth's Companion.

BETTY AND BEE.

By Myra M. Newell.

"Betty, I wish that you would run over to Mrs. Black's and get that spool of thread that she promised me," said Betty's mother.

Betty looked up from her book, frowning. "Why can't Bee go?" she said. "Bee isn't doing anything, and I'm in the most interesting place in my book."

"It will take you only a little while, and Bee has done more than her share to-day," replied her mother gently.

"I'll go," Bee announced. "I want to see Tabby's new kittens, anyway." Before her mother could object Bee was out the door running swiftly across the lawn. Betty curled up contentedly over her book, pretending not to see the look of reproach that her mother gave her.

A few days later daddy surprised them by saying that he was going to spend a week in the city, and that one of the girls could go with him. "It won't be all fun, though," he warned them. "Aunt Alice isn't well, and we shall have to be as helpful as we can. I want some one who will dry the dishes, make her own bed, keep things tidy wherever she is, and never refuse to do anything that Aunt Alice asks."

"Oh, daddy, do take me!" cried Betty. "I love Aunt Alice, and I'll do whatever she asks me to do."

"How about you?" asked daddy, turning to where Bee stood, flushed with hope, but silent. Her look was answer to his question.

"Well, mother, how about it?" he said, and the girls knew that mother was to decide. She didn't look happy about it, though. I think she wished that she didn't have to do what she was going to do.

"I vote for Bee," mother said slowly. "I think Bee has earned a treat, and she is the more willing worker. I'm sorry to have to say it, but Betty isn't a helpful little girl to have about the house. She could be, if she would, but Bee so often does her work, that Betty hasn't learned to do many things."

"Oh, mother!" Betty's cry was full of hurt and disappointment, but she begged no more. Not until they had taken Bee and daddy to the train did she speak about it.

"Why didn't you tell me before, mother, so that I could have been learning, too?" she wanted to know.

"I did tell you, over and over again, but you never were ready to listen," said mother sadly. "Because you have lost a good time, I'm sure you're going to remember that letting Bee do your work is harming you, and that it is helping her. And now, since you've been the best kind of help to-day, we're going shopping, and we'll have some ice cream!"—The Sunbeam.

IN CHARLIE'S POCKET.

"What's in your pocket, Charlie?" I asked,
"O, nothing much," he stated.
That night I sewed a button on
And just investigated.
I turned the pocket inside out;
It scarcely took a minute.
You'll think I'm joking, I've no doubt,
But this is what was in it:
A top, a handkerchief in rags,
Some marbles and a whistle,
A pencil and two paper bags,
Some chalk and a toy pistol,
Five nails, a screw, a hammer head,
Two candles stuck together,
Some cigar bands, a bit of lead,
Some scraps of soiled leather,
A cookie—stale, no longer round—
A knife, an old brass locket.
This is the "nothing much" I found
In Charlie Porges' pocket.

Editorial

LOTT LEADS.

Quite a number of the brethren have duly observed Good Literature Sunday and made their reports as to results. To all of them we extend our sincere thanks. We trust that those who did not find it convenient to observe the day appointed, January 27, will take up the important matter of circulating the church literature at an early day.

Among those reporting thus far, first honor goes to Rev. W. R. Lott of Amory, Miss., who sent in a list of 100 subscribers with check to match. To him and the good people of Amory we express our hearty thanks. We venture to believe that the circulation of one hundred copies of the Advocate in that pastoral charge will materially assist all the work of the church.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

More than one hundred were in attendance at the prayer meeting at the First Methodist Church, Brookhaven, Miss., recently.

The annual revival meeting at Whitworth College, conducted this year by Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Wiggins, Miss., is in progress this week.

The name of the Scarritt Bible and Tralning School, recently re-located at Nashville, Tenn., has been changed to "Scarritt College for Christian Workers."

"The Methodist Messenger" is the name of a local church paper issued by the First Methodist Church of Brookhaven, Miss. Rev. J. W. Sells, the assistant pastor, is the editor.

Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., has suspended the publication of its weekly bulletin, and in its place is sending out "The Noelian," to be issued monthly.

In other words, those using clergy tickets between any two points within the State of Pennsylvania may buy Clergy tickets between any two points within as well as through the State.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil begins auspiciously his sixth year as pastor of the Rolling Fork charge, Mississippi Conference. During his pastorate, the church at Rolling Fork has been remodeled and enlarged, and a new church built at Cary. Materials are now being put on the ground for repairing and enlarging the parsonage.

A gracious revival meeting was recently held in Minden, La., which resulted in the addition of 103 members to the Methodist Church. The preaching for the first two weeks was done by Dr. O. E. Goddard, after which the pastor, Rev. W. C. Childress, continued the meeting for another week.

A committee has been formed at Kansas City, Mo., to invite the next General Conference to meet there. In connection with the invitation, the statement is made that there is no other city as large as Kansas City within the bounds of the church where the General Conference has not met.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, is being urged by his friends to become a candidate for the governorship of Arkansas. Rev. Leon Picone, under appointment by the Louisiana Conference as missionary to the Latin-American people, with special reference to the Italians, has received six members on profession of faith and five by certificate since the meeting of the Annual Conference. These members are identified with the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, this city, special services in Italian being held for them.

The Advocate extends congratulations to all concerned in this notable achievement.

Volume 1, number 1, of "The Methodist Layman," official organ of the General Board of Lay Activities, has just reached our desk. Subscriptions should be sent to the Methodist Layman, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

A telegram from Dr. Luther E. Todd, received on Saturday of last week, gives the cheering news that the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is receiving the enthusiastic support of the church at large. To date, 3800 "pink leaf" reports have been received by the Board of Finance. We can not believe that a single charge in Southern Methodism will "fall down" on this great movement. Send in the "pink leaf" report!

The Publishing Agents have announced the appearance from the press of the Combined General Minutes and Methodist Yearbook. The book is convenient in form and it gives a wealth of information about all the work of the church, including history, biography, literature, and statistics. The price is fifty cents—barely more than the cost of publication. Every preacher and many laymen will want a copy.

Mr. William Jennings Bryan delivered his address, "Is the Bible True?" to an immense audience in the Jerusalem Temple, this city, on Monday evening of this week. His argument was directed principally against the Darwinian theory of evolution. The first, the twenty-fourth, and the twenty-sixth verses of the first chapter of Genesis, he declared, are worth more for a proper understanding of creation than all the discoveries the scientists have ever made or ever can make. Mr. Bryan is rightly looked upon as a great leader of righteousness, and he is heard gladly by great audiences wherever he speaks.

Benjamin Franklin spent much time in England from 1757 to 1762, representing the American Colonies. While there, he placed one hundred pounds in the hands of members of the Society of Friends, as a trust, to be invested, with accumulations, for not less than one hundred and fifty years, at the expiration of which, at the discretion of the trustees, awards were to be made from time to time for the most valuable contributions to science on the subject of cures, particularly in relation to surgery, the nervous system, and "mind treating" in the recovery and preservation of health. The first awards have recently been made, one going to Fusakichi Omori, of Tokio, one to Charles P. Steinmetz, of Schenectady, N. Y., and one to Pierson W. Banning, of Los Angeles, Calif.

A GOD WHO IS EARNEST.

By Rev. H. A. Smith.

"Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3:10.

This passage is a striking example of a great truth hidden behind the words and theme of Scripture. The theme now is the importance of the tithing law. No Hebrew law was more carefully observed than this ancient law of Moses.

The prophet, however, used this familiar theme to convey to the people a much more significant idea than tithing—the great truth that God is seeking to co-operate with men who are willing to do their share. To "bring the whole tithe into the storehouse" was more than merely keeping the law, it was a Hebrew expression for co-operation with Jehovah. The assurance was given that Jehovah would surely return a great blessing, and the people were invited to test this co-operative plan that never failed.

All life is co-operative. If money is borrowed, the use of it is dependent upon the payment of the interest. God gives men talents, capabilities, happiness and love to be used. Used co-operatively with God, their influence will be greatly increased. It is in the use made of them that progress is achieved. The reward of life is more life. The blessing promised for bringing the tithe is, in reality, a greater capacity for living. The full measure of this blessing can come only through complete co-operation with God.

It is, then, through co-operation with God that the powers of the personality come to maturity and exert their greatest influence.

The power of prayer and intercession is developed only through co-operation. Men pray when they are in earnest in their efforts at accomplishment. When men are in earnest they find a God who is in earnest. God's part is always dependable; he is always waiting, and when men come to him in earnest the divine plan is completed. The essential elements of prayer, then, are earnestness and sincerity.

These were the characteristics of Jesus, who was a man of prayer. He taught by word and example its real significance as a co-operative plan. "Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find," were his words. Jesus led a life of asking and seeking, and, above all, it was a life of conscious co-operation with the Father. The Master expressed keenest sorrow for the young man who sought but refused to accept what he found.

God is always in earnest; the world is not. What's the use? is the all too frequent question. Such a spirit makes co-operation impossible. God is always seeking men, but he never carries all the burden. The blessing comes only when men work with God, when they do their share.

Another way that the power of personality comes to maturity and influence is through co-operation in giving of material things. The tithe is the law or rule by which this is accomplished, but it must be remembered that this ancient law is the signboard, not the road. The tithe is spiritual co-operation being expressed through the physical life. The spiritual element is the real thing involved, and when any excuse is given for the absence of the material element it is safe to infer that the spiritual element is also lacking. The tithe, or any other method of paying one's share, is, in reality, an expression of the spirit of co-operation.

It is also in the use of talents that personality exerts its greatest influence, which is all on the side of good, and is greatly increased through conscious co-operation with God. When the elements of personality are turned into service it becomes a measure of co-operation. It is in service to their fellows that men work most completely with God. The divine purpose and the highest human purpose is to enlarge the capacity for life. Jesus called it "the kingdom of God, the rule of love, the life more abundant," which is accomplished by helping men to find themselves.

Men find themselves only as they find God, who is earnestly, lovingly, seeking them. Jesus said, "No longer do I call you servants . . . but I have called you friends." Men were to realize that they shared the confidence of God as trusted friends. This was a new conception of God's method. Once he was thought of only as a ruler or king who gave commands and must be obeyed, but Jesus revealed God as a Father, who is seeking to work with men for the enlargement of their lives. Like the good teacher, God is ever drawing men out along the lines of their greatest usefulness. He gives talents, happiness and love; only men betray them by selfish use.

It is this conception of life, as a conscious co-operation with God, that brings hope. The sense of isolation and aloneness in an unfriendly world is dispelled, and the greatest joy and satisfaction is found in this consciousness. To attain it, begin somewhere to give into the storehouse the whole tithe of talents, of mind and heart, the tithe of money, also of prayer; then, as David Livingstone said, since God's word is the word of a gentleman, we may expect the promised blessing.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

PATHS OF PRAYER.

By William Steward Gordon.

"And in the morning a great while before day, he departed into a solitary place and there prayed."—Mark 1:35.

O sacred paths of Palestine,
  O quiet paths of prayer,
Where Jesus walked in early dawn,
  And found his Father there!

The trails he walked at Nazareth,
  All barefoot 'round the town,
The sheepwalks over Olivet,
  All zigzag up and down;

That oozy footpath 'round the lake,
  The road to Bethlehem,
The rock trail up Hermon's heights—
  I long to follow them!

I seem to sense the early dawn,
  My brow with zephrys fanned—
I see the red sun blush and rise
  Above the Syrian sand.

I hear him whistling to the birds,
  His sandals wet with dew,
I see the lilies brushed aside
  To let the Savior through.

And look! He kneels upon the grass,
  His hand upon a stone,
And prays for wisdom and for strength
  To walk the path alone.

Have I a daily place of prayer?
  Do I my spirit feed?
Are flowers less fragrant than there?
  Is mine a lesser need?

O, I will walk the way of prayer,
  The path of service true.
Since Thou wilt lead me every step,
  To heaven's gate and through!

FOR INDIVIDUALITY OF FAITH.

"Every man who is a Christian must live a Christian life that is peculiarly his own. Every candle of the Lord must utter its peculiar light; only the true individuality of faith is marked by those characteristics which rescue it from bigotry; first, that it does not add something to the universal light, but only brings out most strongly some aspect of it which is specially its own; second, that it always cares more about the essential light than about the peculiar way in which it utters it; and third, that it easily blends with other special utterances of the universal light, in cordial sympathy and recognition of the value which it finds in them. Let these characteristics be in every man's religion, and then the individuality of faith is an inestimable gain. Then the different candles of the Lord burn in long rows down his great palace halls of the world; and altogether, each complementary to all the rest, they light the whole vast space with him."—Phillips Brooks.

The World's Student Volunteer Convention, in session last week in Indianapolis, Ind., launched a movement for a nation-wide campaign against war. More than seven thousand students, representing about one thousand colleges and universities, were in the launching, and did it over the opposition of the chairman, the papers say. That the thing of putting war out is on the way seems quite apparent. The organized women of the land are in the fight. The best conscience of civilization sees the necessity of some action. The enemies had as well get ready for capitulation. When such forces are united, they are mighty to the tearing down of the stronghold of the enemy.

MRS. SARAH G. HERRON, nee Montgomery, was born in Madison County, Miss., Jan. 17, 1840, and died in Canton, Jan. 12, 1924. If she had lived five days longer, she would have been 84 years old. She moved to Canton in 1859. That year she was married to J. A. Herron, and joined the Methodist church here by certificate at that time. She was a member of Canton Methodist church for about sixty-five years—no one knows just how long before that she first joined. She remained faithful to the end. She lived in the same residence all of her married life. Her husband died in 1892. Two children, one son and one daughter, live to mourn her going. Sister Herron was the oldest member of our church when she died, and was the first to be buried from the new church. She loved her church and was faithful to its teaching. She read her Bible, and had been a subscriber for the Advocate from young womanhood and always enjoyed it. This writer had the privilege of visiting her only one time before she was taken sick. Her whole conversation was about her church, her Bible, and her former pastors. She could call them by name; told how she would enjoy their godly counsel—how much she felt they had helped her in her Christian experience. On Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Jan. 13, from the Methodist church, she was buried in Canton, followed by a host of friends, who mingled their tears with the tears of the sad son and daughter. The services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by the pastors of the Baptist and the Presbyterian churches of Canton. God bless and comfort the loved ones. Sister Herron lives beyond.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

DYNICIOUS CLARK BENNETT was born May 6, 1854, three miles west of Louisville, Miss. He joined the church early in life. He moved his membership to Camp Ground Church, on the Noxapater charge, in August, 1881. He was elected steward November, 1886, and served the church in this capacity until his death, Jan. 2, 1924. During his long service as steward he missed only two quarterly conferences, and that because of sickness. Brother Bennett was happily married to Miss Alice McGee, March 31, 1878. To this union there were ten children born: Mrs. Sallie Clark, Mrs. Corrie Allgood, Charlie, Albert, Walter, and Wilbur Bennett. The other four preceded him to the eternal home. Brother Bennett was truly a good man. He loved his church and his pastor. One of his last acts was to collect money for his pastor's salary. No man will be missed quite so much at Camp Ground Church as he. He served his time and generation well, and died in the triumph of a living faith. We shall not see his face here again, but we know where to find him. May God comfort his bereaved family, and may the father's example lead them to the end of this life, and to our eternal home.

His pastor,

W. R. GOUDELOCK.

MRS. SARAH JANE RUDDER was born in Texas in 1846, and died in Shreveport, La., on Nov. 27, 1923. For sixty years she lived in Shreveport, and was prominently identified with all the movements of the Methodist Church. She was a charter member of the Texas Avenue Church; professed the experience of sanctification at Scottsville camp meeting; was always loyal to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was a big-hearted soul. Everybody who knew her called her "Aunt Jennie." Her benefactions have gone out to every cause and to the ends of the earth. She was full of energy and was a great worker in revivals. She had no children, but to her all the young preachers who served the church were "her boys." She was indeed a mother to them. She was loyal to the traditions of the South, and loved to read religious books and papers. She loved animals, and always had some about her. Her last days were full of suffering, but through it all she was patient, and came to a triumphant death. Her faith was well founded. Her works do follow her.

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from the walks of life our friend and brother, F. H. LINN; and,

Whereas, he has been a faithful member and steward in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for many years, and the fourth quarterly conference appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions in memory of his services; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the wife has lost a true and loving husband, the children a faithful and devout father; that the church has lost a true, faithful member and conscientious steward; that the community has lost one of its most loyal and energetic citizens;

Resolved further, That a copy of this be spread on the quarterly conference minutes, a copy sent to the family, and one each to the Times-Post and New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by the committee: Dr. E. K. Guinn, J. M. Valliant, E. C. Driskell.

SAYING "THANK YOU."

By Mary Carolyn Davies, in the Christian Herald.

Do we thank our Father, every livelong day,
For the silver shadows, for the sunlight gay—
For the sound of music, for the glowing sea,
For the stars that light the heaven's mystery?

Do we thank our Maker, every passing hour,
For each bit of beauty, for each gentle flower,
For the tender twilight, when the night is near,
For the smile that follows after every tear?

Do we thank our Teacher, with each swift heart-beat,
For the gift of fingers, for the gift of feet—
For our eyes, our hearing, for our lips and hands,
Or do we think swiftly that He understands?

We should thank our Father, simply as a child,
For his utter patience, calm and and sweet and mild,
For the blessings scattered, over all the way—
We should thank our Father, every livelond day!

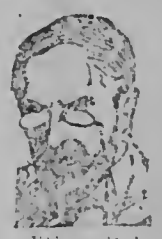
Weak Blood Needs Iron

Says Doctor



To Build Up Your Strength, Energy and Endurance.

"WHEN you feel yourself slipping into a weak run down condition, it is because your blood is becoming thin, pale and watery, literally starving for want of iron," says a physician. "Once you supply iron in proper form, a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Iron is the red-blood food which satisfies iron hunger and works day and night to build up red corpuscles, repair wasted tissue, renew the vigor of your body and ward off germs of disease.

"For years, in my own practice, I have prescribed organic iron, NUXATED IRON, because it contains iron like the iron in spinach, lettuce and apples and like the iron in your blood. Consider Nuxated Iron is in a class by itself as a health giving tonic. It acts as a powerful strength and body builder, steadies the nerves, puts color in the cheeks and spring in the step.

"Whenever I have a patient come to me who says he gets up feeling tired in the morning, is nervous, irritable and easily upset when he can no longer do a day's work without being all fagged out at night, has pains across the back and pale drawn look on face, I at once put him on a course of Nuxated Iron. In many cases I believe that this has prevented a state of nervous collapse or a run down condition so weakened that it would be an easy matter to contract some serious disease.

"If you are not strong or well I simply try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks and note the amazing change in your health, vigor, energy and endurance. You should be astonished at the results in even a few days time. The manufacturers guarantee satisfactory results or the druggist will refund your money.

Soggy Biscuits and Indigestion

From time immemorial, leavening gas has made the "touch" which made the paste of flour and water a digestible food—the staff of life. A flat and soggy loaf or biscuit is an unleavened food. So it is that leavening agents such as yeast or baking powder are employed.

To insure to the American housewife complete leavening of her biscuits, cakes, muffins, etc., which is so important to perfect digestion, the pure food authorities found it wise to require a certain standard of leavening strength in baking powder.

To maintain this guaranty of digestibility—to insure minimum deterioration of leavening strength, baking powder is packed in tin. This prevents absorption of atmospheric moisture. Dampness produces premature reaction in the can—results in loss of leavening gas.

The food official, would properly condemn baking powder if packed in cheap sacks.

But what about self rising flour? It comes to the southern housewife from remote northern mills packed in porous bags. What happens to this mixture of baking materials and flour?

Chemical analysis shows that much of it has lost its leavening strength before it reaches the consumer.

Breadstuffs made with such self-rising flours cannot rise properly—they come to the table heavy, flat, and soggy.

Why don't the pure food officials demand that self-rising flours contain 0.5% leavening gas, the equivalent to the 12% required of baking powder?

Calumet Baking Powder is scientifically and legally correct—the last spoonful is as pure and sure as the first.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. H. H. Shaller, Baton Rouge.

The Sunday School Day program for this year, "Worshiping the King," is ready for delivery. This program was prepared especially for use in small schools. The program for the larger schools, "The Road to the King," is also ready. A postcard has been sent to each pastor, asking the question, "Will you observe Sunday School Day?" When the card is returned a sufficient number of programs will be mailed to the pastor so he can begin early and thus get ahead of other events that often hinder the observance of this important day.

The date set for the Greenville District School for Leadership Training to be held at Clarksdale is April 7-12. The Board of Managers has elected Rev. J. H. Pate as Educational Director and has appointed all necessary committees. As soon as the application for this school has been passed upon we will give the courses to be taught and the faculty.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth is to deliver four addresses the first two days of the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada, June 11-12. Dr. Norman E. Richardson is to teach the course, "Principles of Religious Teaching," and is to give lectures on Recreational Leadership several afternoons. We shall lay great stress upon Worship, giving programs of worship suitable for different age groups.

The Gilliam Sunday school of the Shreveport District is the first Sunday school to report its pledge paid up in full during "Pay-Out Week." Schools that have paid out in full their five-year Missionary Centenary pledge, are as follows:

First Church, New Orleans; Algiers; St. Mark's; Perdidoville; Keener Memorial; Robeline; First Church, Lake Charles; Natchitoches.

In the Monroe District, schools which did not make any pledge are now making a special offering for the Missionary Centenary Campaign. Oak Ridge's offering on January 27 for missions was $12; Oak Grove, $7.42.

Sunday School Day programs for 1924 have been published. The program for the small school is "Worshiping the King," price 30 cents per dozen, or $2 per hundred; the subject of the program for the larger schools is, "The Road to the King." Sunday School Day is the third Sunday in April, and falls on Easter Sunday this year, so we would advise schools to put on their programs before Easter Sunday.

Rev. H. L. Johns, of Cedar Grove, is teaching a course this week in the Houston Standard Training School.

Mrs. R. H. Harper, chairman of our Conference Elementary Council, will call a meeting of this Council during the Homer conference.

The study of a five-year period of the Methodist Episcopal Church shows that sixteen per cent of the members join between the ages of five and nine, and more than seventy-five per cent before they are twenty years of age. In this same church, the peak number is between the ages of ten and eleven.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

SENATOBIA OBSERVES "CENTENARY WORLD WEEK."

Following the leadership of the pastor, W. S. Shipman, this congregation followed very closely the program prepared and sent out by the church.

We had our all-day meeting, Sunday, Jan. 13, commencing at 11 a. m. We came back at 3 p. m., and that evening Colonel Randolph, who is now our pastor at Sardis, came up and delivered a most interesting address. Pastors, you would do well to get the Colonel to deliver that address to your congregations. We continued to meet in the ladies' parlor at the church at 7 except on Tuesday—We were rushed out that night to Sunday morning, Jan. 11, the Centenary had the right of way that evening we put on that very attractive and beautiful dramatization of personal "Safe America," by Miss Judd. At the close of this impressive scene one lady rushed up to her pastor and insisted on him to get his Centenary subscription next day.

Many of the dramatizations were of high order and would have done credit to many of the leaders of this great movement.

Of course, the Woman's Missionary Society was responsible for the service but to Mrs. R. T. Mitchell we give thanks for the wisdom she showed in the selection of persons and for the time she gave to the training of those thirty-odd who took part.

The pastor feels profoundly grateful for the splendid co-operation of his people. Men, women, and children entered most heartily into the work. Many said this is well worth while if it should not win a penny cash—the seed sown will bring forth fruit by and by. It is well worth the time and work we have given.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

FROM BUENA VISTA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are beginning our third year on this, the Buena Vista circuit, and the prospects are fine for another good year. Last year was the best of my ministry, and the report of this circuit to Annual Conference the best in the history of the circuit, "everthing in full."

We are serving a fine people, always ready to cooperate with the pastor in making the work prosper, and we trust that this year will exceed last year in every way.

A nice Christmas "pounding" was given us by the people of Pleasant Grove and Egypt, for which we give our thanks. A number of people from the other churches sent gifts that were highly appreciated.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, our new presiding elder, held our first quarterly conference on Jan. 22, preaching two fine sermons, morning and night, and won the affections of our people. We had a good attendance at quarterly conference. Every church was represented with a good report, and a fine spirit prevailed throughout the conference.

We accepted our quota of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and hope to carry out the plan adopted. Every item of the church work was given careful attention, and we hope to make progress along all lines this year, and have a report second to none at the Annual Conference this fall.

I am giving special attention to the church paper, and hope to send you a good list of subscriptions soon.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED.

At a meeting in the home of Rev. A. K. McLellan, at Lansco, La., Jan. 21, 1924, there assembled the following brethren: Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District; Rev. A. K. McLellan, pastor of the Methodist church at Barham; Rev. W. W. Perry, pastor of the Methodist church at Many; Rev. Floyd W. Dick, pastor of the Methodist church at Zwolle; Rev. R. T. Wright, pastor of the Methodist church at Hornbeck; and Rev. John Franklin, local preacher of Annacoco, and J. M. Mashburn, chairman of the official board of the Methodist church at Barham, for the purpose of organizing a Ministerial Association, to consist of all the pastors, local preachers, and other interested church workers in Sabine, Vernon, and Beauregard Parishes.

Brother Williams called the meeting to order, and Rev. R. T. Wright led in prayer, after which Brother McLellan stated the object of the meeting, which was to effect an organization of the ministers in the northern section of the Lake Charles District. Brother Williams then told of some things connected with a Ministerial Association, and called for nomination of officers. Upon nomination of Brother Perry, Rev. A. K. McLellan was elected president. Upon nomination of Brother Dick, Rev. W. W. Perry was elected vice president. Upon nomination of Brother Perry, Rev. F. W. Dick was elected secretary.

The president appointed Brothers Dick and Perry to draft a Constitution and By-Laws for the organization. The matter of selecting a name was left open until our next meeting.

It was agreed that the Association meet the first and third Mondays of each month. The first meeting will be with Rev. W. W. Perry, at Many, the first Monday in February.

Brother McLellan spoke of the vacant pulpits during the three Sundays that the pastors could not be in them, and suggested that the Association should do something to furnish more preaching in the rural communities. It was then suggested that the pastors use some of the good laymen to go out to different points and fill in on the Sundays that the pastor could not be there. The following names of laymen were suggested and noted as persons available for such work: J. M. Mashburn, Barham; Walter Mitchell, Many; S. H. Porter, Zwolle; also the following local preachers were noted: Rev. John Franklin, Annacoco; Rev. R. T. Wright, Hornbeck, and Rev. E. S. Williams, Carson.

Brother Perry was selected by the chairman to furnish a paper for the next meeting, selecting his own topic.

The meeting then adjourned and "went forth" to the dining-room, where we found one of the most delicious dinners, served by Sister McLellan and Sister Mashburn. Many thanks to those good sisters for that excellent dinner. Our good presiding elder, Brother Williams, and our good lay brother, J. M. Mashburn, surely did appreciate the dinner, as evidenced by their eating.

The Association invites all pastors, local preachers, and good laymen and laywomen to come in to our meetings and help us do some real honest work for the kingdom.

FLOYD W. DICK,
Secretary.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

THE SUPERANNUATE CAMPAIGN AND WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

"2. That in each Conference the Superintendent of Supplies shall be the director of the movement. She shall pass on to the Auxiliary Superintendents the Council plans and use every means of stimulating the interest and efforts of the Auxiliary. Wherever necessary, an Assistant Superintendent of Supplies shall be named by the Conference to share the additional labors made necessary by the campaign.

"3. That in each Auxiliary a committee be appointed to carry out the Council plans, and that the Superintendent of Supplies be the chairman of this committee.

"4. That during the months of January, February, and March, 1924, the claims of the Superannuate Fund be presented by this committee in the regular programs of the Society.

"5. That on March 16, 1924, the date for the financial drive, each Woman's Missionary Society, under the direction of this committee, shall canvass its membership for subscriptions for the fund, and that the pledge cards be held by this committee and collections pressed throughout the year. All money collected shall be turned in to the church treasurer for the fund. Auxiliaries, as such, shall not assume quotas to be paid collectively.

A LETTER FROM MANCHURIA.

Harbin, Manchuria,
Nov. 23, 1923.

Dear Miss Howell: At last we are just about settled in our new home, and like it better all the time. The place has begun to look like a real home now, and we love it very much. The furniture for our bedrooms is ready for use, and we will move in tomorrow—I mean into our bedrooms.

This is a wonderful country, and here you feel so well all the time! It is like a tonic, so cold and invigorating. Snow has been on the ground now two weeks, and still more falls. It is lovely here when it snows; it is very fine and misty, but is so dry you can't make snowballs, and neither can you make a snow-man.

Harbin is on the plains of China, and you can see for miles around. Off in the distance are some low hills which look like ant hills from our house. A beautiful view lies before you when you glance from the windows and doors of our dining-room; just now it is covered with snow, and, of course, is more beautiful than before. You can see so far that earth and sky finally become one and do not seem so far away. When people or cattle walk across this space they look like mere ants. I just wish I could make you see how lovely it is and could tell you how it fills the soul with thoughts of God and of beauty. When the sun comes up in the morning and floods this scene with its light, you cannot imagine the beauty of it. We love out here and the work we are doing.

We are studying very hard on the language now. Constance is making great progress now, and speaks well.

Last night we entertained two of our English classes and had heaps of fun. They could speak and understand English, and we wouldn't allow them to speak in Russian while here. It would have made you feel good if you could have seen how they entered into the games. They were a little slow in catching on, but, when they did, they entered heart and soul into them. Some of the guests were young people, some fathers and mothers, and some must be grandmothers, but, just the same, they entered into the games. It was lovely to see them and watch them. We served tea and cakes.

Our first game was progressive conversation. They could speak only in English about the subjects given. Some of the subjects were—weather, moon, why I like to travel, the study I like best, why I am studying English, why elephants have such large ears, etc.

The second game, we had letters of different words. Each letter was numbered, and they must find the other people who had the same number and get together. Then they must spell the word and act it out. Each group acted out the word, and it was fine. It seemed as if they dropped years and trouble from their shoulders. The words acted were train, battle, lion, donkey and skating. All were well acted.

Then we divided them into two groups, and gave to each a letter of the alphabet. Some had two. Then they spelled words we called for, and did it real well. This is called the human alphabet, and you know how that is played. Constance and I both said, as the door closed on the last one, "Well, it was a success!" We hadn't known whether it would be or not, and were somewhat fearful.

In many, many ways they are lovely people to work among, and we want to give them Jesus Christ. They know religion, but do not know a practical religion at all, and, of course, have not been taught to apply what they learn from the Bible. The

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan. — "My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."—Mrs. GUS VOGEL, 6603 Pelouze Street, Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

A Good Thing—DON'T MISS IT.

Send your name and address plainly written together with 5 cents (and this slip) to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des moines, Iowa, and receive in return a trial package containing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial "flu" and whooping coughs, and tickling throat; Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for stomach troubles, indigestion, gassy pains that crowd the heart, biliousness and constipation; Chamberlain's Salve, needed in every family for burns, scalds, wounds, piles, and skin affections; these valued family medicines are sold and recommended everywhere. —Adv.

Sick for Ten Years

Gained 60 Pounds by Use of PE-RU-NA

Read This

Mr. John Wick

No matter how long you have been sick or how much you have suffered, you must not give up hope. Mr. John Wick, of Monomonee Falls, Wisconsin, did not and is a well man today. In September, 1918, he wrote: "I have been a user of Pe-ru-na for nearly twenty years. I had catarrh of the stomach for ten years. Nothing did me any good. I grew worse until a friend advised me to try Pe-ru-na. While using the first bottle, I felt I had found the right medicine. I am entirely cured. My weight was down to 135 pounds and now I weigh 195 pounds. I have used very little medicine for the last ten years."

The condition known as catarrhal is not confined to the nose and throat. It may be found wherever there are mucous membrances and is responsible for a multitude of troubles. Coughs and colds are catarrhal as well as stomach and bowel disorders.

Do as John Wick did. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. It stimulates digestion, aids in throwing off the poisonous secretions, enriches the blood, increases the resistance to disease and promotes good health generally.

Insist upon having genuine Pe-ru-na in either tablet or liquid form. Your dealer has it.

CONSECRATED MONEY.

Never before have commerce, industry, statescraft, and the professions stood in such need of sane and sound thinking as they do to-day. Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, declared, commenting on the $3,000,000 gift of Mrs. Montgomery Ward and the $500,000 gift of Mrs. Levy Mayer to Northwestern University. The former judge declared that there was a significance in the fact that people of means should tend more and more toward placing their wealth where it will confer an untold and permanent benefit to humanity. Mr. Gary, an alumnus of the University Law School, recently gave $100,000 for a law library.—Associated Press.

Sunday school is growing each Sunday. The English class that was organized two Sundays ago has twenty-six members. Mr. Kemper, of the Y. M. C. A., is teacher, and is splendid. I go to this class. The house is full at night for the church service, and sometimes they can't all get in. Mr. Erwin is giving them some good practical talks or sermons right out of the Bible. They are so helpful, and he puts so much spirit into them.

Miss Howell, I wonder if you have ever seen a Russian funeral. Of course they are more like ours than the Oriental funerals. A man all dressed in white, with a big cross, leads the procession. Then if the person is rich or well known, some friends carry the lid of the coffin; it is usually filled with flowers. The relatives and friends walk behind this. Then more friends carry the coffin—it is a mark of respect to carry it—the person exposed to every one's view. Sometimes there will be a few flowers on the coffin. More people walk along, arm in arm. Sometimes they have a band and it plays as they march along. Then comes the hearse. The horses are covered with a white netting which makes them look like ghosts. A man draped all in white leads the horses. The hearse is just like a wagon—not so long—without the side boards and ends. From the four corners are the supports for the top. Some kind of frosty material (white) is draped around the top and hangs down about half way between the top and the bed of the hearse. Of course, there is nothing in the hearse, but, if the friends get tired, they put the coffin in it. Sometimes the flowers are piled in the hearse. Behind is a long procession of "drowiskies" with no one in them. The people will ride home, you see, after showing their respect to the dead by walking out to the cemetery. There are many churches here, and funerals pass often. I think there has been a funeral every day, and sometimes two.

Remember us to all the people in the Lambuth Building that we know. May the New Year be greater for the work than the last, and may all of you be given strength, health, success in your work, and joy, happiness and peace.

I was so glad to hear about Searritt and to know that it is to be moved to Nashville. I am sure it is going to prove a blessing to every one.

Best wishes and love to all.

Sincerely yours,

LILLIAN WAHL.

Epworth League.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Epworth League Presidents' Meeting.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been requested to give some account of the above meeting, which was held in Central Church, Meridian, Jan. 15-17, Bishop H. M. DuBose, President of the General Board; Dr. Fitzgerald Parker, General Secretary; R. E. Nollner, J. E. Ellis, O. E. Harbin, and Miss Cobb, representatives of the Central office; three other members of the General Board; most of the Conference Presidents and Conference Board Presidents, and a great many Presidents of City Unions made up the membership of the meeting. The President and the Treasurer of our Conference Board, who also have the same office in the Summer Assembly; five additional members of the Conference Board, four additional Conference Assembly officers, the presiding elder and pastors of Meridian, many of the Methodist people of the city, and Epworth Leaguers of the various Methodist churches were present as visitors or hosts.

The program was very interesting, even to a visitor, and much progress was made in planning and developing the work of the Epworth League for the coming year. The program on Tuesday night was a banquet, at which Bishop DuBose presided, and which was inspirational and enjoyable. Delegates from all over Southern Methodism were present and mingled with the finest possible spirit. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday were given over to a discussion of Epworth League problems relating to finance, co-operation between Boards and Assemblies, proposed revisions in Epworth League laws, plans and discussions of the Summer Assemblies, and similar matters. On Wednesday night Dr. Luther E. Todd spoke on Superannuate Endowment, and announcement was made of the gift of $50,000 by a layman of Meridian to this cause.

The entertainment was excellent, and everything possible was done by Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Rev. J. Loyd Decell, and others for the comfort and convenience of their guests. The Methodists have six churches in Meridian, more than in any other city of the State, and probably have more members here than elsewhere. All of the pastors seemed actively at work, with loyal support from their congregations.

FROM PEARL RIVER AVENUE.

Dear Brother Carley: Just thought I would send you a postal relative to a wonderful service the Lord gave us at Pearl River Avenue, McComb, Sunday, Jan. 27. We had sixteen additions—fifteen at the 11 o'clock service and one at night. Fourteen came to us by certificate, one by vows, and one by baptism. Almost every one of them was at prayer meeting Wednesday night following. Some of our regular "stand-bys" in prayer meeting now are men who have been genuinely converted recently from a life of awful sin to a life of righteousness and service.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE BIBLE IS NOT SECTARIAN.

We believe we are stating it mildly when we say that a decision of the California Court of Appeals a few months ago, to the effect that the King James version of the Bible is a sectarian book and should be excluded from the public school libraries of California for that reason, was received with amazement throughout the country. We thought at the time that the reasoning of the court was extremely faulty and that its decision would not stand the test of judicial review. We are glad to learn, therefore, that the Supreme Court of California has recently reversed the decision of the Court of Appeals, making, in its decision, the following statements:

"The fact that the King James version of the Bible was not approved by all sects of a particular religion, nor by the followers of all religions, would not class it as sectarian for library purposes. There is no religion that has found universal acceptance, and therefore no book of religion that has.

"The contention that the Bible in the King James translation is a book of sectarian character rests on the fact that there are differences between it and, among others, the Douay version; that it is of Protestant authorship, that it is used in Protestant churches, and that it is not approved by the Roman Catholic Church.

"According to such a test, the Bible in any known version or text is sectarian. In fact, until all sects can agree upon the manuscript texts that should be used, no English version of the Bible not 'sectarian' in this view can be produced.

"The mere act of purchasing a book to be added to the school library does not carry with it any implication of the adoption of the theory or dogma contained therein, or any approval of the book itself, except as a work of literature fit to be included in a reference library. For aught that appears in the instant case, the library in question may already contain copies of the Douay version of the Bible, as well as of the Talmud, Koran and the teachings of Confucius."

NO GAMBLING, NO RACING.

It is one of the contentions of those who favor horse racing that racing itself appeals to the sport-loving instinct of people and that it is not dependent upon gambling for its successful operation. That such is not the case, and that racing divorced from gambling is a failure as a commercial proposition, is clearly shown by a recent experiment. The following editorial from the Item, a daily newspaper of this city, calls attention to the experiment and its result:

"Proponents of racing call it a clean sport, 'the sport of kings.' The gambling phase, according to them, is but a parasitic evil that has attached itself to a noble sport. The sport itself, they say, is what attracts spectators, not the gambling.

"One Dick Ferris, of Culver City (California), believed that. He promoted and built a modern plant and track there, in a locality much visited by tourists. No bookies were there, no gambling allowed.

"The season opened on Christmas day. It closed thirteen days later, as a result of poor attendance. Ferris lost money and his quaint faith in the lure of betless horse racing."

The Item is to be commended for its opposition to what it properly calls "The Gamble."

ROMAN CATHOLICS BELIEVE IN READING.

In a recent number of the Morning Star, the official journal of the Archdiocese of New Orleans and the Diocese of Savannah, under the caption, "Need of Press Month Is Stressed by Archbishop Hayes," the following extract from the Archbishop's letter was given:

"You will recall that our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, in a recent Encyclical, presented to the Universal Church St. Francis de Sales as the Patron of the Catholic Press. The Vicar of Christ is most desirous that the spirit of St. Francis de Sales animate Catholic publishers, writers, and teachers, in their exposition or defense of Catholic doctrine and practice. But what purpose will be served by Catholic books, magazines, and newspapers, if the faithful, who are urged by the Supreme Pontiff to read the works of St. Francis de Sales, will not patronize and read Catholic publications?

"Every Catholic mind which thinks with the Church and every Catholic heart that warms to the faith must realize the serious harm, if not the out-and-out evil, caused by the anti-Catholic, unchristian, false and unclean literature of our day.

"A vicious and subtle current of erroneous teaching of unholy principles and standards, of immoral or loose propaganda—all undermining or destroying the spiritual and supernatural—flows through the reading matter in many a family circle. Constant feeding of a Catholic mind with such poison can have but its inevitable consequence, especially in the young.

"At the very least, an antidote should be provided. This will be found in any number of our excellent Catholic periodicals and newspapers."

The Roman Catholic Church is noted for its ability to seize upon those agencies that may minister to its welfare, and turn them to its own advantage. It is not surprising, therefore, that it should at this time be laying special emphasis upon the circulation of its own periodical literature. Every argument advanced by the Catholics for the circulation of their papers is likewise an argument why Protestants should cleave to and read their periodicals. They are wise if they act accordingly.

FAIR PLAY.

The press of the nation has given wide-spread publicity to the fact that Mr. W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in New York, has been convicted upon the charge of forgery and sentenced to a term of from one to two years in Sing Sing. An appeal has been taken from the decision of the court, and it is possible that a new trial, if granted, may result differently. If Mr. Anderson is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, he should, of course, suffer the penalty for his wrongdoing—we have no disposition to claim clemency for a violator of the law.

But we think it would be only fair play if some means could be found to convict in the courts those who are persistent and flagrant violators of the Eighteenth Amendment, which prohibits the traffic in intoxicating liquors. We read practically every day of violators who are "caught with the goods," and of the preferring of charges; but too often that seems to be the end of the matter. It seems to be a fact that all sorts of legal technicalities are in the way of securing a conviction; and when a conviction is secured, there seems to be a general feeling that a light penalty is adequate for the crime. We mean no disrespect to the courts—but if a few notorious bootleggers could be made to spend a year or two in the penitentiary, we believe it would have a wonderfully restraining influence upon others who are perfectly willing to pay a small fine for the privilege of trampling upon the Constitution of the United States. The nation is playing with fire in its inclency of dealing with criminals of the bootleg variety.

VIRTUES IN OTHERS.

It is a happy thing that the virtues we ourselves would fain possess are oftentimes readily recognized in others, and that they draw from us such commendation as we ourselves should be glad to receive for similar excellencies of character. It is unfortunate that oftentimes the virtues we thus admire and commend are the very virtues we ourselves are most lacking in. To commend a virtue that we do not possess, and that our whole course of life shows that we do not possess, is to give a cynical world the opportunity to say, "Physician, heal thyself." It is something in a man's favor, though, that he can recognize a virtue whether he possesses it or not.

THE TWILIGHT HOUR.

By Willie C. Page.

Through clustered pines the winds moan and sigh;
Little voices of the dusk are hushed and still;
Sodden, the faded leaves and fallen petals lie;
Wrapped in an icy robe, sleeps the singing rill.
Soft sandaled shadows shut out the light of day,
As sweetly call the church bells from across the way.

The leafless trees in lonely silence stretch afar,
They caught the glory of the setting sun;
O'er the dusky woods and fields, shines the vesper star;
Early the soft light fades—the winter day is done.
So must wane our lives to meet the eternal night;
Then let us work, serve, and love with all our might.

HARPS TURNED TO MOURNING.

By Edgar L. Vincent.

Just how much of a musician Job was, or whether he understood anything about musical instruments, we do not know. When he speaks of his harp being turned to mourning it may he he was using figurative language. This, also, may have been the case when in the same connection he says, "My organ is turned into the voice of them that mourn." It is evident, however, that Job was acquainted with these ways of making music and that he knew that they could be made to express sorrow as well as joy. And he surely had come to a time when trouble was the thought which was uppermost in his heart, and he felt like showing it even in the songs he sang and the music he made.

And yet, things were not as bad as they might have been with the man of Uz. The more he thought about it, recounting the blessings he still had in the hours of loneliness which had come upon him, the more plainly Job saw that he was wrong in giving way to faint-hearted lamentation; that at last he rose triumphant out of his sorrows, strong in the faith he reposed in God and ready for the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory that was in store for him.

In our day many a harp seems to have been turned to mourning, many an organ tuned to the voice of those that mourn. On every hand we find downcast men, men who are worried and troubled over existing conditions. To these good people it seems as if the world is on the road to ruin and fast hastening to that direful end. Never, so it seems to the souls of the troubled heart, was sin so rampant, the church so near to destruction, or humanity so surely tottering to moral bankruptcy. We hear it from the pulpit; it comes to us on the printed page; the lips of those we meet convey the same disconsolate message. And we can not help being more or less depressed by singers whose harps have been turned to mourning.

Are we wise to permit ourselves to take such pessimistic views of present conditions? Do we prove thereby that we have an abiding faith in the Almighty? Or do our words indicate a wavering trust in the Ruler of the universe, whose guiding hand is over all and in all to-day, just as it has been through all the ages? In fact, are we showing ourselves true Christians, or are we making to the world an exhibition of weakness such as ought never to be displayed by those who are saints of the Most High?

For myself, I believe that there are far more signs of the coming of the morning than we have ever seen since the world began. If we have eyes to see it, not a day passes when we are not able to note great signs of the advancement of God's kingdom in the world. If we listen, we shall constantly hear the stately steppings of His footsteps. This is now, as it always has been, His world. He is watching over it and leading it steadily out of the perfect day.

What we need to do is not to let the music of our harps he turned to mourning, our organs to utter the sounds of dismay, but to give them more and more to the expression of hope and joy and perfect faith. Every Christian should be animated by a noble confidence in Him with whom we have to do. Our countenances ought to be radiant with the glory from on high, our lips swift to speak the love we bear toward the Master and the assurance which actuates our every motive.

If we were to do this, it would surely not be long before this would be a far happier and better world.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

THE SUPERANNUATION OF REV. DR. GOODMAN.

By Rev. Lyman Carley.

Mr. Smith and Dr. Wise had been near neighbors for many years. They were members and stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Rosetown, and often consulted together about the church and other matters. Mr. Smith had just called to see Dr. Wise, when the following conversation occurred.

Mr. Smith.—"Dr. Wise, I have come over to talk with you about church affairs. You know that our circuit has not been doing well since Dr. Goodman has been our pastor. I think something ought to be done about it."

Dr. Wise.—"Well, what do you think ought to he done?"

Mr. Smith.—"I think we need a change of preachers. You know Dr. Goodman is getting old, and he just cannot do the work in this charge that needs to be done. He has not the physical strength to do the visiting and preaching that our people require. I think we need a change, and we need it badly."

Dr. Wise.—"But, Brother Smith, I am afraid none of us realize what a superior man Dr. Goodman is. He is a graduate of one of our best colleges and of the Theological Department of one of our greatest universities. Then he spent several years traveling in Europe. You know we have never had a more intelligent pastor. I am sure that he is the best informed man in our part of the State. I admit, though, that what you say is probably true, that his physical strength is not sufficient to meet the demands of this work, and that a change would be beneficial. However, when I think of the pulpits he has filled and the great work he has done, I feel thaht we were highly honored by his appointment to our circuit. I never did fully understand how it happened. You know this is not regarded in the Conference as a first-class work by any means. Really, when you take into consideration the small salary we pay, it is not more than a second-class appointment."

Mr. Smith.—"Yes, I am sure that we have never had Dr. Goodman's equal as a scholar, and all that. But must we let our circuit run down, our young people go off to other churches, and lose our congregation just because we love and honor Dr. Goodman? I think we need a change at Conference, which is only about a month off. Why, only last Sunday Dr. Goodman actually staggered as he came down from the pulpit, and if Brother Strong had not taken hold of him, he might have fallen."

Dr. Wise.—"But, Brother Smith, have you thought how it will hurt Dr. and Sister Goodman if they are not sent back here at Conference?"

Mr. Smith.—"Yes, I have thought about that, and it pains me very much when I do think of it. But as a steward of the church, I think the welfare of the circuit should have first consideration. I have talked with most of the other stewards, and they are of my opinion, that we need a change. They all say that it is very hard to collect his salary. We did not pay out last year, and I fear that we are going to fall farther behind this year."

Dr. Wise.—"But, Brother Smith, what will become of Dr. Goodman and his estimable wife? I do not think that he will be likely to get even as good an appointment as this is, on account of his age and infirmities, and then it is expensive to move."

Mr. Smith.—"I have thought of that, too, Dr. Wise, but we are not responsible for what the Conference may do with him. Our last quarterly conference for this year will be held to-night, and I think we should talk with the presiding elder about a change. By the way, yonder he comes now."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"Good morning, brethren, I am glad to see you. I trust that you have everything in readiness for the quarterly conference to-night."

Dr. Wise.—"I do not know so well about that. Brother Smith and I have been talking about the condition of our circuit. We are agreed on one thing, but we differ a little on another."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"Well, on what do you agree?"

Dr. Wise.—"On the fact that our circuit is not holding its own, and that our pastor, Dr. Goodman, is not physically able to do the work that needs to he done."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"On what do you differ?"

Dr. Wise.—"We differ somewhat on the question of asking for a change of preachers. Brother Smith thinks that we ought to ask for a change, but I have my doubts about it."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"I sympathize with both of you, and I have come to this last quarterly conference with my mind fully made up to ask Dr. Goodman to take the superannuate relation at the Annual Conference."

Dr. Wise.—"Neither Brother Smith nor myself had thought of that. That will really be a happy solution of our problem."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"It will be a solution, but I cannot say that it will be a happy solution. The superannuation of a worn-out preacher is often the saddest step of his life. The question of a living presents itself as it never has done before. Very few preachers accumulate much of this world's goods and when old age comes and they have to give up the active ministry by which they have been supported, they have nothing to fall back upon."

Mr. Smith.—"I have often heard it said that preachers were poor business men, and your statement, Brother Justice, seems to sustain that idea. It seems to me that it would he good business for a preacher to lay by something for his old age."

Dr. Wise.—"I have wondered myself why preachers did not show more foresight and provide for what they are bound to know must occur—old age. I suppose they get absorbed in their work and do not think about it. Lawyers, doctors and all other men, with few exceptions, are usually well provided for in their old age, and I do not see why preachers do not exercise the same forethought and get ready for superannuation."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"I am not a little surprised to hear you brethren talk that way. You will pardon me, but I thought you were better informed. There are some things to which I would call your attentlon.

"In the first place, the ministry is not a profession like that of law or medicine, but it is a divine calling. Before a young man can obtain license to preach he must give evidence that the Lord has called him to preach. That is not the case in any of the professions. Men practice medicine or law, or choose some business career, simply because they think those occupations are remunerative and will give them a field in which they may exercise their talents to the best advantage. You do not hear such men claiming a divine call to their work. It is true that men sometimes feel that they are in harmony with the purpose of God in choosing their life work, and, in a sense, they may feel that they have been divinely led to follow certain occupations. But a call to the ministry is different. It is a special call of Christ, the Head of the church, by the Holy Spirit, to preach. Men do not enter the ministry because they think it will be remunerative, or that it will afford a good field for the exercise of their natural or acquired gifts. Many of our most successful preachers did not feel when they entered the ministry that they had any talents for such a calling. They entered it because they felt as Paul did that 'woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel.' They feel that they are as much called of God to give their lives to the work of preaching as Jonah felt that he was sent of God to Nineveh. They do not feel that they can afford to turn aside to secular employments. The work of the ministry is too weighty and serious for the preacher's time to be given to anything else.

"I want to remind you of another thing. Our church claims all the preacher's time and the use of all his talents. If you will get your Discipline and read the ritual pertaining to the ordination of elders, you will find that this is so. I will make just one quotation from the ritual: 'We have good hope * * * that you have clearly determined, by God's grace, to give yourselves wholly to this office, whereunto it hath pleased God to call you: so that as much as lieth in you, you will apply yourselves wholly to this one thing, and draw all your cares and studies this way,' etc. This is what the church demands, and to do this the preacher agrees. So how is he to engage in any secular business and be true to his ordination vows? This is practically the requirement of all denominations. The Roman Catholic Church does not even allow its priests to marry and have the care of families. Protestants do not go that far, believing that priestly celibacy is harmful and not helpful."

Dr. Wise.—"I confess that I had never given proper thought to this matter. I am beginning to see now why the preacher comes to old age without necessary provision for his wants. I am glad, Brother Justice, that you have told us of these things. But there is one thing yet that is not clear to my mind. Where does the financial support of the superannuate come from? I know that a collection is taken every year in our churches for worn-out preachers, but I always thought it was just a complimentary contribution to make them feel good when they had to retire. Is that fund sufficient to supply their wants?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"By no means. It ought to be, but as a matter of fact it is not."

Dr. Wise.—"What is the average amount paid the superannuates?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"It differs in different Conferences. Some Conferences pay more and some less than others. In our Conference the amount ranges from about $200 to $440. To this is added an amount from the General Board of Finance that makes a small increase in the average amount paid. There is considerably more interest in this matter now than there was a few years ago. But still we fall far short of providing our superannuates with an adequate support."

Dr. Wise.—"But why does not the church make better provision for them? It has had the benefit of their service in the days of their strength; then when they are retired, it seems to me to be nothing but just that they should be properly cared for. I never paid much to that fund at any time because I did not know the necessity for it. I thought that if preachers were not comfortable in their old age it was their own fault. I see now that I was mistaken. I shall do more for them in the future. I understand that our General Conference meets next year, and I would like to know why it cannot be induced to give more satisfactory recognition to the claims of our retired preachers. I am getting interested in this matter."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"I have something to say about this to the quarterly conference tonight, and, if you will excuse me, I will tell you what I think at that time."

Dr. Wise.—"That will be perfectly satisfactory. I doubt not that there are others among us who need to have their eyes opened."

Mr. Smith.—"Brother Justice, you have told us some things that I confess I was ignorant of. But it has occurred to me that most of our worn-out preachers probably have children that are settled in business and prosperous. Why should they not take care of their parents in their old age and not allow the church to be taxed for their support?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"I will answer your question to-night. I just must go now and have an interview with Dr. Goodman and his wife before time for the quarterly conference. We meet, I believe, at 7 o'clock."

(To Be Concluded.)

THE ONION-COAT THEORY.

By Rev. H. W. Rickey.

Theory.

Edison's opinion of scientific textbooks was that "As a rule they were worthless, misleading in their statements, incorrect in their alleged experiments." The less common sense their authors possess, the bigger words they use, the more they sidestep facts, the larger titles and honors they accumulate, especially if they frame up some kind of plausible conjecture that appears to supersede Moses. The labor expended on discrediting Moses would build several pyramids of Cheopean size. The "Mistakes of Moses" are bagatelles compared to the colossal errors of thousands of trained and expert guessers. They are authorities on the Science of Bunk, changeable as the weather vane is.

Onion-Coat.

A. G. Werner (1749-1817), Freiburg, Germany, a devious Dutchman, concocted a queer notion that there were five sets or series or deposits of unlike rock-structures that make up the earth-crust and envelop the earth on the onion-coat plan. The earth grew rock-sheets as a tree grows wood-rings. The mineral make-up of these rock-blankets decides the age or epoch to which they belong.

A theology, or natural philosophy made in Germany draws its inspiration from the "spirits of alcohol" rather than the Word of God; from the subjective conjectures rather than objective realities. Werner's factless assumptions were unsupported by earth-crust structure evidence, and was all-inclusively erroneous. It is the error of setting up a local accident as a world standard form of procedure.

In England, William Smith; in France, Baron Cuvier, pecking around in their local habitats, unacquainted with each other, proposed to use fossils as time-markers of the inferred age or epoch in which rock-deposits occurred. They imagined that the same kinds of fossils were located in identically the same kind of rock-structure the round, round globe—one of thousands of like instances of palming off a speculative fancy as an "assured result of science." However, as the true knowledge of the make-up of the earth-crust became widely expanded, the Cuverian guess blew up.

The Wernerian notion and the Cuverian conjecture require preposterous time-periods, fabulously long ages, and the habit grew of slinging around lightly millions of years as an antidote to Moses.

Eighty largely-followed and highly-praised Cosmogonies are numbered among the Dear Departed, and these Two Guessers now rest beneath the weeping willows of the gracious Cemetery of Science, a giant of guessing. Then arose Sir Charles Lyell, a wholesale dealer in fabulous ages, whose hobby-horse was Uniformitarian Geology, who eagerly championed the fossils as geologic-age, time-measures. Such was the magic-spell this Scientific Munchausen cast over his ilk, the biologists fell over each other to join in a chorus of contempt for Moses. They had a pet project and sought facts to bolster up the pagan suspicion of ancient vintage that by virtue of natural causes, life, somehow or other, had climbed up from the one-celled stage to Man by slow stages and long ages without the presence of God. Being short on facts, they expanded enormously on time-periods.

Under the guidance of Darwin, the apostle of Imagination, a man of nimble-witted invention and the master of supposing, they set up a Trinity, three household gods or Penates—which were Father Time, old man Chance and a lively Imagination, and went forth to "Conquer Moses and the earth." They forced green Geology to marry a half-witted Biology, and called the mentally unbalanced child, Evolution.

The Humbuggery is labeled Modernism. It evicts God out of Nature and rids the Bible of Miracles, feeds its dupes on a light diet—East Wind of conjectures.

DEDICATION OF THE FRANCIS ASBURY MONUMENT.

The date of the dedication of the monument to Francis Asbury has been fixed by the Board of Trustees of the Francis Asbury Memorial Association, for Tuesday, June 3, 1924. The equestrian group has been cast and is in the bronze foundry ready for the pedestal. Contracts have been let for the foundation and for the granite for the pedestal, and will be completed in April, or May. The group, which has won the unanimous approval of the Federal Fine Arts Commission and evoked the admiration of such distinguished artists as Daniel Chester French (of whom our sculptor, Augustus Lukeman, was a pupil), and George Gray Barnard, and many others who saw the mounted clay model last summer in the Hispano Museum Park, in New York, will stand on a triangular plot at the intersection of Mount Pleasant and Sixteenth Streets, Washington, D. C., in the northwest section, looking down the Avenue of the Presidents to the White House and to the Washington monument.

The Board of Trustees has directed that invitations be sent to all Methodist churches in the world, to be represented at the dedication ceremonies, and also that all Methodist churches in the United States and Canada be asked to hold an Asbury Sunday service within two weeks before, or after, the day of the unveiling, at which hymns in use in Asbury's day shall be sung, and a sermon or discourse be delivered descriptive of the character and work of the man and his contemporaries, who laid the foundations of American Methodism. It is hoped the occasion will serve to revive the waning interest of ministers and laymen, generally, in the heroic labors and sacrifices of the early itinerants, and direct the attention of the youth of the church to a history which is fascinating in character, noble in accomplishment, and worthy of admiration.

It is quite probable that a reception and meeting for addresses will be held on the previous evening, Monday, June 2, in one of the Methodist churches in Washington, or in a public hall. Further information will be given from time to time.

H. K. CARROLL,
Corresponding Secretary.

WHY TRAIN PREACHERS.

No Methodist parent would hesitate about sending his son or daughter to college; no Methodist invalid would hesitate about securing the services of the best-trained physician he could afford; no Methodist litigant would hesitate about consulting an educated lawyer; and yet the great Methodist Episcopal Church has long hesitated to provide adequately for an educated ministry.

This situation is remarkable in view of the history of Methodism. John Wesley was a university man; and the very name "Methodist" was applied to the Holy Club at Oxford as much to ridicule its methodical plan of study as for any other reason. Further, the church has been singularly wise in maintaining an elaborate and excellent system of colleges and secondary schools. But theological seminaries have never been supported by the church at large, and have eked out their existence as best they could.

Methodism—A Pioneer Movement.

Strange and lamentable as the facts are, they can be explained. Methodism has been a pioneer church. Battling for Christ on the frontiers and in rural communities, wherever there was need or opportunity, Methodist preachers have been at work because there was work to do. In early days there were, of course, no theological seminaries for Methodists. The genius of Methodism brought with it rapid expansion. The result of these conditions is that seminary-trained men are a minority in almost every Conference in Methodism.

If theological education is to secure proper recognition and support in the church, it will come not alone from the splendid loyalty of seminary graduates, but also, and very largely, from a statesmanlike and impartial attitude taken by ministers who have not attended a theological school, and by the laity in general. The question before the church is not whether a man may not do noble service for the kingdom of God without full theological training. Of course he may. The question is rather this: Would it not be far better for the work of the church if every minister were theologically trained at a seminary?

Requirements for the Ministry.

The minister of Christ must first of all be a Christian, Christ's man. He must find that experience of Christ for which "Pilgrim" was yearning in a recent number of the Herald. It is not, however, enough for a minister to have an experience. He must be able to interpret it to the people. The layman wants help from his preacher. He does not, indeed, want to hear about Semitics or hermeneutics or epistemology under those names; but he wants with all his heart to understand his Bible and his faith and his duty.

The task of meeting the religious needs of the simplest folk on the simplest charge in the simplest language is one that calls on all the resources that the best-trained minister can muster. No preacher was ever too well equipped to meet the emergencies of any charge.

It may help us to see the value of theological education if we consider a few of the situations that might confront any Methodist minister on any day of the year.

"Brother pastor," a layman might say to-morrow morning, "there is a great deal said about evolution these days; will you suggest some good books for me to read that will clear the thing up for me? And my daughter in high school is somewhat troubled about the relations of science and religion. Will you mention one or two things that will help her?" A discriminating answer to these questions is not very easy to give; yet the minister is the natural person in the community to be asked such questions, and he should have the background that will permit him to answer them. Failure to meet the daughter's need may supply a clew as to why so many college students drift away from the church.

The next layman to seek this same minister might say: "Pastor, I love my Lord, and I am going to stand by Him; but I have heard so much talk lately that I am confused about the divinity of Christ. I have even come to doubt it. Can you help me?" Some preachers might be so heartless as to denounce the questioner; some might counsel him to forget his doubts in prayer and service; and some might be able to speak a word about Christ that would help the man to see his Lord more clearly. Which is the best sort of preacher?

The Fundamentalist Controversy.

Again, any layman might go to any pastor and say: "Brother, I will be frank with you. My friends and I are fundamentalists. We believe in the whole Bible from cover to cover, and we are looking for the second coming of the Lord in bodily form. Will you preach a sermon on these things?" The preacher confronted with such a request may or may not grant it; but in any event, he must face the [illegible] in his own thinking and in his leadership of the flock. The question of fundamentalism cannot be dismissed as unimportant. It needs to be dealt with gently, but firmly; in a spirit of brotherliness, yet with sure foundations of knowledge. To speak authentically on the subject, one needs Biblical scholarship and a well-thought-out philosophy of inspiration and of the immanence and transcendence of God. The interpreter of the fundamentalist [illegible] not only needs text and [illegible] he needs to have mastered a Christian [illegible] that will steer a course between the Scylla of [illegible] uralism and the Charybdis of [illegible] alism. The Christian minister needs all the training he can get if he is to cope with fundamentalism and modernism, Russellism and Christian Science, Spiritualism and Mormonism.

What Are the Social Teachings of the Bible?

It may be that the problem of the morrow for any minister—to-morrow will be quite different from those that we have discussed. Perhaps one of his prominent official members is an employer of labor; and perhaps his class-leader—if there are still class-leaders—is one of the employees of that official; and perhaps the class-leader is also leader of a strike against the prominent official member. In such a situation, what is the preacher to do? The preacher himself must decide; and all the training in social and industrial problems that the theological seminary can give will be none too much to guide him to his duty.

Or it may be that another war will threaten the country when to-morrow's papers are printed. The preacher will have to proclaim the Christian attitude toward war, as he sees it. Too often the preacher has beat the tom-tom for nationalistic militarism, without thinking seriously about the relation of war to the Christian faith. When a man decides what he regards as the Christian attitude toward war, he needs to know the thought of the best interpreters of Jesus, and of the great leaders in the Christian church of past and present.

Whichever way he turns, the modern minister finds himself called on to solve problems or to meet situations that require wide and sound information and training if he is to deal with them. The place of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the vanguard of social and religious progress depends in large measure on the number of trained men that the theological seminaries send out to the field; and the number of men sent out by the seminaries depends on the support that the church gives to the seminaries; and the support that the church will give depends on the wisdom of the coming General Conference.—Zion's Herald.

I took him to the country Sharon Grove Sunday afternoon, and the people have the privilege of hearing a good gospel sermon, and thereby get something out of the elder. The officials say we had the best quarterly conference, with the best reports, that this charge has ever made for the first quarter. These are good people, active and enthusiastic in all departments of church work.

They show their appreciation of the church and the pastor not only in word but in deed. We have some of the most consecrated and efficient women with whom I have ever worked. We thank God for these co-laborers in his vineyard, and for a place among them.

HOW PRAYERS ARE MEASURED.

An important lesson that Christians must learn is that our prayers are not measured by their extent but by their content. Jesus warned against the folly of those who think that they shall be heard for their much speaking, and he said, "Be not ye like unto them." There may be more of the real spirit of prayer in a brief, earnest cry to God than in a lengthy and carefully worded prayer with beautiful periods and well rounded sentences. It is not repetition that God wants so much as repentance and fervent faith in his power to do what we ask.—Christian Observer.

ARCANA.

"Never say that you know the last word of the human heart," says one whose name has been washed out of the record. I should like to ask him whether he was thinking up or down. Was he cynic or lover of folks? Times are when human nature seeks to sink lower than the brute; other times when an every-day brother reaches up and writes his name among the stars. If the materialists were right, one could write history beforehand. Given causes would produce assured results. But they don't. There is another element to be reckoned with. Men react variously to the same stimuli. Paul and Nero grew in the same Rome. Washington and Benedict Arnold drew from the same soil. Elwin and John Wilkes Booth nursed at the same breast. Not only so, but the sinner may right about face and become the saint. In every soul are the potentials both of angel and devil. Till the last word is uttered, you never know what it will be from the human heart. But Christianity believes most in the angel.—George Clarke Peck.

¶ The field is now ours to raise a crop for the Forgotten Man. Let us not lose a minute. Prepare the fallow ground to the widest edge. Plow from daybreak until dark---and plow deep. It is the period of cultivation, and every hour counts big.

1. A package, or packages, of the booklet, "The Call of the Forgotten Man," should now have been received by every pastor. If in any instance the shipment has not arrived, notify the Board immediately. Distribute booklets with care.

2. Now is the time to ring out clear and strong on this subject which has filled us so completely. You are no longer held in restraint—let go. Preach with soul aflame concerning the cause. Send Lay Minute Speakers everywhere. It is the opportunity of a lifetime.

3. Let doubting Thomases put their fingers into the service scars of the old veteran preachers and go to the task with a will to win. O, the call of these heroes! Don't you hear it? It rises from the earth and descends from the heavens. Heed it!

¶ To date (Jan. 19, 1924) 2728 Pink Leaf reports have been received, and 404 came during the week just ended---a record. There are yet 3672 charges to hear from on the Pink. If the entire Church responds 100 per cent on this vital matter, the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment will have $10,000,000 officially subscribed before the six weeks' period of cultivation shall have ended.

A LITTLE CHAP.

For his country and for you?
What can a little chap do?
He can play a straight game all through;
That's one thing he can do.

His soul he can brace
Against everything base,
And the trace will be seen
All his life in his face;
That's an excellent thing he can do.

He can look to the light,
He can keep his thoughts white,
He can fight the great fight,
He can do with his might
What is good in God's sight;
Those are truly great things he can do.

Though his years be few,
If he keep himself true
He can march in the quene
Of the good and the great,
Who battled with fate
And won through;
That's a wonderful thing he can do.

And in each little thing
He can follow the King—
Yes, in each smallest thing
He can follow the King.

—John Oxenham.

THE BEETLE'S SURPRISE.

The little water beetle was very well pleased with himself because he was so different from the rest of the beetle family.

He had a pair of wings with which to fly through the air and paddle feet for swimming under the water. He had a black waterproof suit that was as strong and shining as a suit of armor. He had a little balloon full of sunlight that he carried with him when he went downstairs to bed at night in the bottom of the brook. Yes, the little water beetle went downstairs to bed, and upstairs through the water to play in the morning.

There were so many pleasant things for the little beetle to do, and he could do them so much better than the other beetles, or the grasshoppers, or the butterflies, that he grew prouder and prouder.

He could fly from the brook to the bank on a chilly day when the grasshoppers sat, stiff with cold, beside the road, not able to hop. He could dive head first down into the brook and win a race with the other water insects because of his paddle feet. He was the only beetle with a balloon full of sunshine. When he tipped up his wee heels and dived down into the brook, he carried the bubble of air, that made his balloon go down with him. So he had it to go to bed by, and to bob about with among the water-weeds in the day-time.

But the greatest fun of all for the little beetle was his whirligig game. He could spin round and round, just as if he were skating in circles, on the top of the water, for as long as he liked, without growing dizzy.

"Look at the whirling beetle!" the bees hummed, and the crickets chirped, and the cicadas droned. "Is he not wonderful?"

So the little water beetle himself thought, and it seemed to him that he was the most important one of them all, and that nothing unpleasant could ever happen to him.

Summer was over at last, and all outdoors began getting ready for the winter. The willow sent her yellow leaves floating down to the brook. The chickadee found himself a snug hole in an old stump where he might be sheltered from the weather. A light snow fell, and in it could be seen tiny hurried footprints where the wild rabbit, the field mouse, and the quail had gone by looking for food.

"Decide now which you will use all winter, your wings or your feet," the older water beetles advised the little one. "You may stay in a crack in the bank if you like and come out on a mild winter day, but you must decide soon whether you will do that or stay down here in the mud."

It was hard for the little water beetle to make up his mind. All summer he had done just what he pleased. So he kept on playing his whirling game all day, although there was no one left to watch him, not even a spider.

"I shall be able to do just as I like, anyway," he thought in his little whirligig head. "What is the use of thinking about the winter?"

It was late in the fall when the little water beetle went down to bed one night. He was just barely able to take down the last ray of the sunset with him in his balloon. He stayed in the water longer than usual in the morning because he was sure he could go up whenever he liked. At last he decided to start.

"Here goes!" thought the water beetle, lifting his paddle feet for a leap to the top.

Oh, how he bumped his head! The brook had a roof of ice that the frost had built there in the night. It had been decided for the little beetle what he was to do. He had to stay in bed all winter long.—From the Outdoor Story Book, by C. S. Bailey.

BACK DOOR RECOMMENDATIONS.

"Which boy will you have?" asked Mr. Ames.

He was going away for a week, and he wanted to invite one of the neighbor boys to stay with Mrs. Ames, and be ready to run errands. Of course, he meant to pay well the boy who was selected.

"I think I'll have Jimmie White," said Mrs. Ames.

Mr. Ames looked surprised. Jimmie was the poorest boy in the neighborhood. There were others older and better looking and cleverer.

"You're wondering why," said Mrs. Ames. "I'll tell you. When Jimmie goes out in the back yard to cut wood for his mother, the cat comes and rubs against his legs, and the dog jumps all over him, the little neighbor girl comes to the fence to show her dolly, and Jimmie's own small brother comes running to help. Those are his recommendations. I know he has a kind heart, and I like that better than almost anything else. There was another boy I thought of, but I saw him kick his dog yesterday, and he torments the young children on the way to school. He slaps his little sister, and whines when his mother asks him to do an errand. He takes off his hat and speaks politely when I am calling on his mother, and, if he tried, he could be a splendid boy. But I've been looking up back-door recommendations, and he doesn't stand the test."

Mr. Ames then understood. "If boys and girls could only know that some one is often taking their measure when they are off guard!" he said.

Then he went over to ask Jimmie's mother if she could spare him for a week.

"Two dollars, mother, for just helping after school!" cried Jimmie. "I'd have thought it was pay enough to stay over there, and take care of the pony, and get a chance to look at the books and pictures in the evening. I wonder how they came to choose me?"—Selected.

HOW GOSSIP GROWS.

This story is an Italian legend.

In the old days, a peasant confessed to a priest that he had slandered an innocent man. The priest said to him, "For your penance do this now: take a bag of chicken down. Go to every yard in the town and drop one bit of down into each garden. Do not miss one yard. When you have finished, return to me."

The sinner believed his punishment was light. With his bag of down he made the circuit of the village and carefully dropped one soft feather into each garden. Then he reported to the priest, saying: "I have done my penance."

"No, my son," replied the old abbe. "You will not have done your penance until you take the bag, go again on your rounds, collect every feather you have dropped, and bring it here to me."

The gossip protested that it would be impossible: he could not find the bits of down in a lifetime; many of them had blown far away.

"So it is with gossip," replied the old priest. "It is easily dropped. But never again, no matter how hard you try, can you gather back the words you have so thoughtlessly scattered."—From the November Delineator.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Ainsworth has accepted an invitation to deliver a series of addresses, and the program is being perfected. It is earnestly hoped that the presiding elders and preachers of the patronizing Conferences—the Alabama, the Louisiana, and the Mississippi—will make no engagements that will conflict with the dates of the School. Dr. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city, was reappointed grand chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Louisiana at its meeting here last week. Judge Prentiss B. Carter, who was elected Grand Master, is an official member of the Methodist church at Franklinton, La.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, is assisting Rev. H. B. Thomason in a meeting at Colfax, La. Brother Thomas is open for further engagements for meetings in this territory.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir writes that his fourth year as pastor of the Eunice charge, Louisiana Conference, starts off with promise of being the best of the four, in spite of bad weather, bad roads, and much sickness.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday of last week. He was in the city on business. We were greatly pleased to note that he is apparently in fine health.

"The First Methodist Church Messenger" is the name of the new weekly bulletin issued by Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss.

Rev. G. P. Fikes, born and reared in the territory of the Mississippi Conference, and for many years a member of that Conference, is beginning his second year as pastor at Bono, Ark., in the North Arkansas Conference.

Material progress is being made in church work at Rayne, La., Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor. The parsonage has been repaired and painted and some new fencing built. The matter of a new church building is also being discussed.

Rev. John Brown and his evangelistic party will begin a union revival campaign in Columbus, Miss., on March 2. The meeting is under the auspices of the Ministers' Alliance of the city.

Rev. Joseph B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, and Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, presiding elder of the Sardis District, both of the North Mississippi Conference, are issuing district bulletins. They are interesting and helpful.

Mr. W. T. Holland, editor of the St. Helena Echo, published at Greenburg, La., attended the Masonic Grand Lodge meeting in this city last week. Brother Holland is a loyal Methodist, and he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while here.

Rev. W. M. Young preached a very inspiring sermon at the Methodist church in Amory, Miss., at the evening service on the Sunday the church was dedicated. Brother Young, who was formerly pastor at Amory, is greatly beloved by the people of that place.

Rev. Frank M. Neal, general evangelist, of Amarillo, Tex., will assist the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, in a meeting at Amory, Miss., beginning on March 9. Mr. Fred M. Poulter will have chargo of the music. Brother Neal held a great meeting in Holly Springs last year.

At the recent session of the Rayne Memorial quarterly conference, this city, action was taken looking toward the erection of a modern Sunday school building, to cost from $40,000 to $60,000. A committee was appointed to raise the necessary funds. Dr. W. L. Duren is the pastor.

Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., has resumed the publication of "Methodist Matters," the sprightly paper that was read with so much interest on the Coahoma and Lyon charge. It is now issued as the weekly bulletin of Central Church.

Dr. W. G. Cram, Directing Secretary of the Centenary Commission, spent last Sunday and Monday in New Orleans, preaching at the First Methodist Church on Sunday evening. He was accompanied by Rev. O. S. Welch, who has been appointed Centenary Secretary for Louisiana.

Rev. John F. Foster, of Lake Providence, La., and Rev. C. C. Wier, of Alexandria, La., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, were attendants upon the meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge in New Orleans last week. Brother Foster was made grand chaplain of the Royal Arch Masons.

The New Orleans District Epworth League Institute began its sessions at the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Garfield Evans and Miss Ida Mallory Cobb, of the Central Office, are in attendance. The Institute will continue throughout the week.

Rev. H. W. Rickey, our pastor at Natchitoches, La., writes as follows: "The Rev. W. E. Thomas, Louisville, Ky., and his singer, of Chicago, will begin a revival at Natchitoches, La., the first Sunday in March. The prayers of the Conference preachers and your readers are requested in behalf of this meeting." We are sure this request from Brother Rickey will be regarded.

Mr. W. C. Everett, for many years manager of the Dallas, Tex., branch of the Publishing House, has retired from that position to give all his time to a building and loan association that he was instrumental in organizing several years ago. Mr. Everett is well known among the preachers throughout the church, with whom he is deservedly popular. He is succeeded by Mr. P. L. Turner as manager of the Dallas branch.

In the sudden death of Dr. Paul H. Linn, while attending the conference of educators recently in Memphis, Tenn., the church has lost one of its most efficient and forceful leaders. Dr. Linn was president of Central College, Fayette, Mo., and under his administration that institution made great progress, both in the enlargement of its financial resources and in the increase of its student body. Dr. Linn was an active and influential member of the Commission on Unification, and a prominent member of the recent General Conference. The Advocate joins in the general sorrow over his passing.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, for four years Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, has resigned his position as Centenary Secretary in order to engage in private business. At the request of the Centenary Commission, he will continue to act as Centenary Treasurer. Mr. Thomas has done a magnificent work in the promotion of the Centenary cause in Louisiana, and his declination of another term is greatly regretted in the territory he has served so efficiently. He will be succeeded as Centenary Secretary by Rev. O. S. Welch, Montgomery, Ala., who will combine the work in Louisiana with his work in a similar capacity in the Alabama Conference.

Our Methodist congregation at Woodville, Miss., Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, pastor, are to celebrate, June 27-29, the one hundredth anniversary of the building of their house of worship. Steps are being taken to put the building in good repair. In the earlier days several sessions of the Mississippi Annual Conference were held in this building; and Woodville was made a station at the session of the Conference held in it Nov. 26, 1835, Bishop Joshua Soule presiding. The first pastor of the station was William Winans; the second, C. K. Marshall. Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, Ga., and Rev. Isaac Borders, of Kansas City, have accepted invitations to attend the celebration. All former pastors and presiding elders are invited.

A RADIO CHURCH.

By Rev. Frank H. Stevenson, D.D., Minister of the Church of the Covenant, Cincinnati, Ohio.

There is nothing remarkable in the friendly attitude of the church toward the radio. It is the business of the church to proclaim to the world what the Bible calls the "good news" of the Christian religion. To do this every available means has always been used by Christian people, and the church has been enterprising, determined, and resourceful in carrying out its great commission. Christianity has promptly seized every aid that commerce or science has provided. The first was the invention of the sailor's compass, which enabled ships to sail beyond the sight of land. This meant that missionaries could travel to the ends of the earth, which they immediately did. The second was the invention of the printing press and the publishing of the Bible in every language, dialect, and jargon spoken among men. This was a tremendous step forward. In the last two years we have seen a third acquisition and the beginning of a new epoch of Christian history. The radio has been perfected. The church has appropriated. Now the gospel saturates the very air and an old prophecy is literally fulfilled. "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

The Scope of Radio.

It is difficult to avoid extravagace of speech in describing the extension of religion as it is broadcast to the world by radio. It is instantaneous; it penetrates doors heretofore bolted and barred against any form of faith; it makes a fascinating appeal to the young, and the voice of one man may conceivably reach a million homes. Moreover, the church uses the radio on Sunday, the one day in the week when non-churchgoing men and women seek diversion, any sort of diversion; and, when after a late breakfast and the usual wading through the Sunday newspapers, they are inclined to tune in on their radio set and explore the air. If by chance they discover a religious service, by reason of its novelty they will listen for a time, and if it seems worth while they will hear it through to the end.

Radio is the modern Samson, bearing away the gates of the church and leaving the entrance wide open so that all may come in. It is as if a giant hand had taken the four familiar walls of the church building and planted them, one wall on the peaks of the Rocky Mountains and another out beyond the Bermudas; one wall in Texas and another in northern Canada. The visible audience remains in the old building, but in the new building there is an invisible audience that may comprise a considerable part of the nation.

Bad weather does not diminish the size of a radio church, but is apt to increase it; for what could be more pleasant than to sit by the fireside in comfort and hear the rich tones of a magnificent pipe organ, the singing of a fine choir, the good cheer of a gospel sermon? The ancient and deep-seated prejudice of sects and denominations does not limit the radio church. Why should it? Nine-tenths of the people of civilized lands believe much the same thing in their hearts. They are at least friendly toward the old story of Jesus and his love. And they are quite willing to know more of the resurrection and the life everlasting. Let the radio church be assured of this: in every block of the city, and in many cities, there are worshipers who need to be called closer to God and who want to be. Farmers in every fertile valley over an area of a dozen States are listening, and if the "foolishness of preaching" will save them, they can be saved. Even those who go down to the sea in ships, and the aviators whose ships plow the sky will hear. Did ever St. Paul in his journeys along the shore of the Mediterranean have such an opportunity? Did John Wesley have such a chance as he crusaded on horseback through England and Wales?

Temptations Present.

There are temptations that menace the radio church. One is the tendency of all churches to become dull and placid and easy-going—a fatal fault when services are broadcast. In the house of God a congregation is instinctively reverent, counting it a form of religious discipline to respectfully sit through the flattest music and the most insipid sermon. People will not walk out in the midst of a dreary anthem or a prolonged prayer or ill-prepared preaching. They know how to "suffer long and be kind" even according to the Bible command. But any radio listener finds it easy to shut off what he does not like whenever he wants to, and be troubled no more at least from one quarter. A serious effort must constantly be made to hold the invisible audience which the visible audience must learn to appreciate. Let a church gain the reputation for an indifferent service and its day as a radio church is done.

Another temptation is to strain the voice. As the minister speaks he thinks of some one who has written from Idaho, telling of the enjoyment last week's service brought to a lonely lumber camp. He visualizes the far-off place and begins to shout so that his voice will carry to Idaho. But he must persuade himself that a whisper on the radio will carry further than the detonation of a bomb, or he may become a ranter and destroy his effectiveness completely. Singers need this reminder, too.

Probably the chief temptation is the natural desire of every earnest minister to enter the field of controversy. Here is a foe to the radio church that must be held more than an arm's length away. The radio preacher dare not touch upon politics or international statesmanship or current issues that are open to debate. It is grossly unfair to take one side upon a question if the other side is denied a reply. It is offensive to good taste, too, and ministers whose sermons furnish sensations for the newspapers had better not throw their voices into the air. After fifteen months of broadcasting, the writer of this article has learned that controversy does harm and not good. On the other hand, everybody is interested in the Bible. It is the book of mankind. It contains the truth men long to hear. It pays to stick to it very closely.

Sending Apparatus.

In a large auditorium seating 1,500 people it is surprising that two little microphones, almost unnoticed, are enough to catch every sound. One microphone is placed ten feet on one side of the choir loft on the rail of the balcony in the rear of the church. The other stands on the pulpit about fifteen inches from the minister's right hand. Three operators work at the church, modulating or increasing the volume of sound and testing the results. A specially protected telephone wire transports the perfected product to Station WLW, the Crosley Radio Corporation, two miles away. It is one of the powerful sending stations of the country. Thence it is distributed to the world, and whosoever will may hear.

The number of people in a radio audience cannot be estimated. We hear from enthusiasts who take time to write or telephone, but most people hesitate to acknowledge the faintest adherence. This is to be expected and not wondered at. Probably the only way to count the listeners will be afforded when a census is taken of radio sets. Will not the day be here very soon when every home has one? Already nearly all public and semi-public institutions, such as hospitals, hotels, boarding houses, social clubs, etc., operate radios, and usually on Sunday. If there is an invalid in a home, it is safe to assume that a radio is there. Extremes meet in their interest in broadcasting, for the aged enjoy it, and boys and girls will not be satisfied until they can tune in on whatever the air may hold for them.

Some letters received are illuminating. The Government landholders in Montana have told of the church that has come to their cabins on the prairie, remote from any community that could support a church. Churches in rural districts, all but abandoned, have found it satisfactory to mount a loud speaker on the pulpit, and the congregation has sat in the pews, imagining the minister standing before them. One young man, typical of many, wrote that he sat in an attic room of a city tenement in extreme negligee attire, smoking cigarettes, but hearing the everlasting gospel; he accepted the radiance of it in his dark little life.

Many write that they are astonished to learn for the first time what a church really means. The infirm and disabled naturally have the best time. One lady insists that she be dressed in her Sunday clothes when the hour for worship arrives. In a prominent men's club several men, well known in the city, took up a collection one Sunday morning when the church offering was announced and sent it to the church by messenger. They wanted to help. One of the most appreciative groups of radio listeners are city firemen on their long and monotonous stretch of hours in the fire house.

Three letters were received last week from travelers. One was in Chattanooga, Tenn.; one in a little town in Missouri, and the other in Richmond, Va. Their home church had followed them. It has become universal!

Many times we are asked if the radio decreases regular church attendance. It has increased the attendance in the Church of the Covenant in Cincinnati, and so far as we can learn, it has stimulated churchgoing everywhere.

The radio is a successful enterprise, sending forth light and uplift into the world. If it fails in this service, it abdicates its opportunity. If it achieves it, it deserves the devotion of every friend of humanity.—Western Christian Advocate.

THESE HANDS.

By Frank Duryea Deats.

These hands, O God, would labor unafraid
In ministry that they were fashioned for,
So when the stubble mourns the fallen blade
They may knock boldly at the palace door
And bear unto Thy throne their sheaf of days
In confidence.

This then shall be their consecrated toil,
To rend the husk; to glean the heart's true corn
And sow the gold of it in richer soil,
So little children to My Kingdom born
May eat the snowy bread, and give Me praise
And recompense.

The subject of this sketch, GEO. W. PURCELL, was born March 28, 1846, and passed on to the great beyond Jan. 22, 1924. Brother Purcell had been a consistent member of the Methodist church for sixty-eight years. He was of a quiet disposition—said very little but let his life speak for God. He was a perfect gentleman in every respect. He was never heard to say anything detrimental to any one—he always tried to throw the mantle of charity over the unfortunate. He loved God and his church, though failing health prevented his attending church for some time prior to his death. He was married Sept. 20, 1870, to Mary McCroskey, and to this union there were five children born, two dying in infancy. The three living are: Ernest, of Glen Allen, Miss.; Annie, of Black Hawk, Miss.; Leverne, of Vidalia, La. They, with the companion and mother, have suffered a great loss, while it was Heaven's gain. Brother Purcell was more than fifty years in the drug business, and was out all hours, night and day, filling prescriptions when needed, exposing himself to all kinds of weather, going, never complaining; and when the summons came, he went to be with God, where there are no more prescriptions to be filled, but where he will wait the coming of his loved ones.

His pastor,

H. E. CARTER.

A TRIBUTE

To the Memory of Miss Laura J. Reames, Who Departed This Life on Jan. 28, 1924.

We are again reminded of the poem:

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower was born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Better known to the inner circle of the home than to the outside world, was the noble character of the loved one who left us for "fairer regions," only a few days since.

Having been happily converted and deeply conseerated, she at once went into active service. Organizing a Sunday school in a beech grove near her country home, preaching services were held every Sabbath afternoon. Soon a church was organized, and a church building erected by Rev. A. G. Miller, father of Rev. C. C. Miller, of Keener Memorial Church of this city, the pulpit being filled every Sabbath, alternately by Brother Miller, President D. M. Rush, of Centenary College, and the young students studying for the ministry. Some years later she moved to West Baton Rouge. Her home was the preacher's home.

Soon she organized another Sunday school, out of which grew the little church, known as "Reed's Chapel."

After a short period her church activities came to an end, and home duties made it compulsory for her to lead a retired life, only attending upon religious services whenever conditions permitted. Yet, with all these difficulties, handicaps, adversities, her faith was unflinching, her love for her Lord unabating, and her loyalty for her church unwavering.

She was a Christian of the real type. Bible reading was her daily habit. It was her custom each morning and at night before retiring (no matter how weary with the toils of the day) to open and read from God's holy word, the source of her strength. On account of ill health she was deprived of all church privileges for many months, and being confined to her bed three long months and more, there was never a word of murmuring or impatience. "Let us follow her as she followed Christ."

A SISTER.

WILLIE F. TEXADA—AN APPRECIATION.

WILLIE F. TEXADA, born June 18, 1855; educated in St. Louis and at the old L. S. U.; married to Miss Kate M. Texada, March 31, 1880; deputy assessor and assessor of Rapides Parish for many years; father of six living children: Mrs. Paul Borron, of Plaquemine; Mrs. Maek Dunnam, of Boyee; Mrs. Albert E. Hunter, of Boyee; Mrs. T. L. James, of Alexandria; Mrs. C. B. Riffle, of Alexandria, and Mr. T. J. Texada, of Alexandria; an aetive participant in reeonstruction; a leader in the anti-lottery fight; a lifelong Demoerat; a constant member for many years of the Methodist Episeopal Church, South; a successful planter; died Jan. 17, 1924; buried in the ancestral burying ground on old Castille Plantation.

Such in epitome was the life and passing of one who was very influential among the people with whom he lived, and who was much loved by all who knew him.

But much more can and should be said of him.

He was of that class, more worthy than "belted knight" or "gartered earl," who bore "the grand old name of gentleman." He was a gentleman born, and deseended from distinguished ancestry. His great-grandfather, Manuel Garcia de Tejada, married Mahala Trivillion, was sent to the United States to represent the Spanish Governuent, and settled at Natchez, Miss. There he built the first brick house ever constructed in that city. To them were born two sons, John A. de Tejada and Joseph de Tejada, and to John A. were born three sons. They dropped the prefix "de" to the name de Tejada, and afterwards spelled it "Texada." The father of Willie F. Texada was the Hon. Louis E. Texada, signer of the secession ordinanee of Louisiana, and member of Congress from this Congressional District. His mother was Miss Pleasance Hunter, of like old and distinguished family. He was a gentleman in eonduet, brave, chivalrous, ready to resent an insult, generous to forgive an enemy. His hand was ever ready to help a weak or erring brother, his purse open to relieve distress. He was a son of the Old South with its kindly and hospitable traditions. He was a son of the New South with its ideas of industry and progress.

He was a son of the soil of old Rapides, and could truthfully say:

"O peerless land of tears and smiles,
Of fragrant blooms and golden hours,
Where summer's hand with endless wiles,
Entwines the feet of Time with flowers,
Howe'er the tide of fortune flow,
Thou hast my heart, where'er I go."

He saw the passing of the old day, and the birth of the new. Many strong men went down with the shattered fortunes and destroyed industrial system of the old civilization; but he realized and acted on the principle that:

"To every man there openeth a way,
And the bigh soul takes the high road,
And the low soul gropes the low.
And in between on the misty flats
The rest drift to and fro;
But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low,
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go."

He was a leader in his eommunity, and was in the forefront of every reform movement. He endorsed "whatsoever was true, whatsoever was pure, whatsoever was of good report." His influence and leadership will be greatly missed.

He was a kind neighbor and a loving friend. Like Abou Ben Adhem, it could be written of him that "He loved his fellow-men." And likewise it could be said that his fellow-men loved him.

As husband and father he was an exemplar of all that those holy relations imply—indulgent, kind, eonsiderate, loving, provident.

To his serroving loved ones we say in sympathy:

"I never stand above a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well loved face,
But that I think 'One more to welcome me,
When I shall cross the intervening spaee,
Between this land and that one "over there,"
One more to make the strange beyond seem fair."

He was laid to rest by loving hands among the graves of those whom he had loved "a little while" and who had "gone on before."

We say of him in parting:

"Sleep thou there 'mid kindred ashes,
Of the noble and the true,
Hands that never failed their country,
Hearts that never baseness knew."

A leader has fallen, but his influenee goes on; for the memory of his useful life and of his good works abides with us.

RELIGION.

The only enduring basis of morals is religion. A morality built on expediency is rotten. Men must swear allegianee to a righteous God, and recognize that what is immoral for the individual ean never be moral for the nation, and what is wrong for a man can never be right for a world. Christianity has an inexorable eode of morals. Its God is holy. It is therefore at work on a civilization in which the weak are as safe as the strong, and where rights are determined not by force of arms, but by the eternal principles of truth and justice.—Dr. James J. Vance.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL IN THE COURTHOUSE.

Funny things happen—no one could ever dream that, through a civil case and a priest's testimony, the Gospel would find its way to a score of people. This is the way it happened:

A will was contested on account of its language, the testator being a Sicilian and the will being written in Italian. However, both the Sicilian dialect and the Italian language are very closely related. The need was for a man who would testify as to the pronunciation and definition of every word in the will, showing the court the relation of both languages, and that a Sicilian and an Italian, with facility, could understand each other.

I was called by one of the attorneys for defendant, and later took the stand; but during the three days which I spent in and out of the court this great opportunity presented itself.

About twenty or more people, all interested in the case, some of them being witnesses, mingled together in the corridor; therefore, I thought of no better opportunity than that to preach to them, and I did, as follows: First, by placing in the hands of every one a portion of the Gospel, and other fine tracts; and, secondly, during recess of the court, in waiting room, while all of us were waiting for the reopening hour in that room, taking for a text the thirty-third verse of the fifth chapter of Matthew. For nearly an hour, my congregation of witnesses and friends heard the first sermon in their lives.

During this time practically every one promised to come to church. My prayers at this time are, "God bless thy Gospel among those people who heard it, for the first time, in the corridor of the courthouse." The Lord will bring forth a great harvest.

THE FRIENDLY WASTE-BASKET.

The fine art of juggling six balls at one time is a skill of the circus clown. It is amusing but distracting also. Come now increasingly the advertiser's appeals, artistic visualizations of myriad corporations, enterprises, programs, campaigns, impending crashes and calamities, cries of the dying, clamant philanthropies in endless procession day by day. Armistice Day, Peace Day, Milk Sunday, Education Day, Family Welfare, Hospital Day, Golden Rule Sunday, etc. Behold the endless concatenation of would-be milkers of the church-cow, each with a pail in hand, waiting his turn to milk the beast, whose lean ribs show the failure to keep the supply of beneficence up to the insistent demands of persitent seekers. When can the preacher enjoy the liberty of prophesying for which the fathers strove? The gospel has a hard time in its own pulpit in these days when the church is known to be a possible source of revenue. The Friendly Waste-Basket is the ally of the distracted man at this time of need. Into its capacious mouth we dump the tons of paper and sigh with relief over our emancipation. Unless the guile of the publicity man excel our skill in discernment we hope to feed the basket and save our souls.—Washington Christian Advocate.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

"More Important is Internal Cleanliness"

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only, at the expense of permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Some laxatives, according to an intestinal specialist, contain poisons which affect the stomach and intestines, resulting in grave disorders. Certain laxatives are a direct cause of piles.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, will deliver an address at the State-wide Sunday School Conference at Homer, March 18, at 7:30 p. m.

The names of the delegates to the Homer Conference should be sent to Mrs. W. A. McKenzie, chairman of the entertainment committee, Homer, La.

About seventy-five members of the Alexandria Sunday school took credit last year in the Standard Training School. The pastor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, and the superintendent, Mr. T. W. Holloman, have organized a training class, to meet every Wednesday night after prayer meeting. Their goal for enrollment in this class is 150. The textbook used is, "The Methodist Church and Its Workers," by Tippy and Kern. Mr. Holloman will teach this text.

Every Sunday school that has a Program of Work Chart placed should have these charts checked up before the Homer Conference, so that they may know their official standing. The following Sunday school workers have been approved: In the Alexandria District, Conference Superintendent, Rev. C. D. Atkinson; in the Baton Rouge District, Mr. O. H. Cline; Lake Charles, Rev. Alonzo Earl; Monroe District, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt and Porter Cartledge; Ruston, Rev. K. W. Dodson, Rev. L. W. Smart; Shreveport, Dr. A. S. Lutz, Rev. H. L. Johns, and I. L. Knapp; New Orleans, Mr. H. P. Wall, Dr. J. H. Carter. These men will visit any Sunday school which will notify them of the date of their teacher training class before which they will be glad to check up the Sunday school work.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Rochelle circuit writes: "I am planning to be at Pleasant Hill next Sunday. We had what these people say was the best day they have ever had in their life. Had ninety-two present at Sunday school. Brother Wier, presiding elder, was with us and preached two good sermons. I hope to see more than ninety-two in Sunday school in the near future. Don't forget we want some help from your office, the fifth Sunday in March, at our fifth Sunday Sunday School Institute.

The Montgomery Sunday school of the Colfax circuit, voted last Sunday to enter into a circuit Sunday school organization, meeting on the afternoon of each fifth Sunday of the year. Mr. W. P. Williams is superintendent of this small but interesting Sunday school. Brother McCain, father of our Rev. L. I. McCain, of Lafayette, is teacher of the Adult Bible Class.

Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Character Builders' Class of Capitol Street Methodist Church is now studying "The Worker and His Bible." This gives Capitol Street forty more in teacher training.

The Harrisville circuit had two classes this past week, one at Poplar Springs and one at Harrisville. There will be about 12 units from the two classes. In spite of the rain and bad weather and a sick Ford, we had a great time. Brother Sells is doing mighty well, and the work is responding very nicely.

We visited two of the public schools on the work and enjoyed being with the children more than words can say.

The Centenary Specials are most attractive, and we need more to respond. If your school has not paid out its Centenary offering, won't you please take one of our Specials and help us out? Rev. W. J. Purcell has a share; Pelahatchie has two shares; Richton has taken four shares; Poplar Springs, on the Harrisville circuit, has taken one share.

We have twenty-nine shares of the salary of Brother Charles Asaf. He was the means under God of getting 20 to join the church last month; 78 shares are left in the Wesman Christian Hospital, and 91 shares in the work in Belgium [illegible] ging. Now, will the Sunday [illegible] of the Mississippi Conference [illegible] nearly $9,000 to Missions, [illegible] it undirected, allow [illegible] have been assigned to [illegible] more than apt to go [illegible] if [illegible] not rally to them, fail to [illegible] missionary offering [illegible] these important claims [illegible] the same time help the Centenary?

God is wonderfully blessing us. We are looking forward to great things. Encouragement is coming to us from all sides. Please pray earnestly that the Lord will lead in it all.

The following County Institutes have been arranged for with Mr. M. W. Brabham to lead us. Mr. Brabham is the head of the Department of Sunday School Administration and has been studying the rural conditions. I trust the Sunday schools will support these meetings:

Forest, Feb. 18, 10 a. m., for Scott County.

Brandon, Feb. 19, 10 a. m., for Rankin County.

Mendenhall, Feb. 20, 10 a. m., for Simpson County.

McComb, Centenary Feb. 21, 10 a. m., for Pike County.

Richton, Feb. 22, for the area adjacent to the town of Richton.

Biloxi, Feb. 24, 2 p. m., for Harrison County.

Boost these meetings and give us a real hand.

Brother Hull is doing a great work. Pray for him and open the way and use him.

Yours in Him.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It is said that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has about one thousand and ten foreign and native missionaries in the different fields working to establish the kingdom of God. Of this number the orthodoxy of five has been questioned, two men and three women. The two men have been relieved of their positions, one woman has been exonerated, and two are at home on an indefinite furlough. Our leaders are true to Jesus Christ and are keeping faith with the church at large.

Why does the church desire to train her leaders? What is the underlying purpose of the Sunday School Board in organizing training classes in the local churches, schools in the districts, and a school for workers from over the Conference? The object is to make evangels of the women and men who are called to deal with the children, the young people, and the parents in the church and out of the church in such a way that they shall be led to know Jesus Christ, to worship and serve him more perfectly, that the kingdom of God may come in power upon the earth. Why any sane man should be indifferent toward this worthy aim, or why any good man should oppose it, is more than a mystery. That church that is doing most toward training its teachers of religion to teach intelligently the rising generation, is the church blessed of God. The more teachers we train and the better we train them, the sooner will we establish the Kingdom.

The Board of Managers of the Conference Leadership Training School met at Grenada Thursday and organized by electing Rev. John A. Randolph, of Sardis, chairman; Rev. J. E. Stephens, of Grenada, Secretary. After organization, the Publicity, Fol[illegible] and other committees were appointed. The following members were in attendance: Mr. Whitman Davis, Starkville; Mrs. J. B. Reynolds, Booneville; Rev. Melville Johnson, Grenada, and Miss Martha DuBerry, Tupelo. The Board is planning to have 250 in attendance at Grenada, June 11-18. The Board passed a resolution to the effect that those who desire a room in the college must send one dollar to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, for such reservation.

Often teachers ask, "What is the best help in the preparation of the lesson?" No one periodical meets the needs of every teacher. It would be hard to find writers who interpret and apply the lessons better than the contributors to the Adult Student and the Magazine. In the Magazine, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth gives the historical setting and lesson notes; Dr. F. N. Parker, the exposition and application of the lesson, and Dr. L. W. Crawford, the teaching plan. I do not know three men better qualified to teach the truths of the Bible to our people. Should a teacher feel the need of other helps than the above, I recommend Snowden's Notes of the Sunday School Lessons. Any help in the way of books can be supplied by Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn.

GAVE CARDUI TO DAUGHTER

Alabama Mother Had Thorough Confidence in Cardui, as a Result of Her Own Long, Successful Use of It.

Gadsden, Ala.—"My back and hips gave me a great deal of trouble before my first baby was born," Mrs. W. J. Daugherty recently told a visitor at her home on Route 2, here.

"When I became . . . the second time," continued Mrs. Daugherty, "I had the same trouble, only worse . . . Medicines did me no good at all; in fact, I got worse instead of better. Finally, when I had given up hope of getting well, a neighbor told me about Cardui. My husband got me a bottle and I started on it at once.

"Immediately I began to improve. I have taken Cardi ever since, when I get puny . . . For female trouble it can't be beat. I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen.

"I took it because I suffered so from aching all over—arms, legs and head. My head would ache for weeks at a time. After taking Cardui I have completely recovered."

Cardui is a perfectly harmless, mild, purely vegetable extract of medicinal herbs. One of the ingredients of which it is composed has been known to medical science for over six hundred years and has been recommended by medical writers as being of great value in many female ailments. Sold everywhere.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

Letter from the Louisiana Superintendent of Supplies.

I would call your special attention at this time to the program laid out by the Woman's Missionary Council in regard to the Superannuate Fund. You had the plan presented at your January meeting. A story published in the Missionary Voice is to be used at the February meeting. Also leaflet is to be presented at the March meeting.

I would urge that all of this literature be used as planned, and that a committee be appointed and instructed in accordance with item three of the Council plan that all may be thoroughly instructed and ready for the financial campaign. Please study each item of the plan and enter whole-heartedly into this larger service we have been called upon to render. The following is the plan outlined by the Council:

"1. In view of the fact that the Supply Department has always served the needs of ministers of our church, we recommend that this department be given the direction of the cultivation and activities of the societies during this campaign.

"2. That in each Conference the Superintendent of Supplies shall be the director of the movement. She shall pass on to the Auxiliary Superintendents the Council plans and use every means of stimulating the interest and efforts of the Auxiliary. Wherever necessary, an Assistant Superintendent of Supplies shall be named by the Conference to share the additional labors made necessary by the campaign.

"3. That in each Auxiliary a committee be appointed to carry out the Council plans, and that the Superintendent of Supplies be the chairman of this committee.

"4. That during the months of January, February, and March, 1924, the claims of the Superannuate Fund be presented by this committee in the regular programs of the Society.

"5. That on March 16, 1924, the date for the financial drive, each Woman's Missionary Society, under the direction of this committee, shall canvass its membership for subscriptions for the fund, and that the pledge cards be held by this committee and collections pressed throughout the year. All money collected shall be turned in to the church treasurer for the fund. Auxiliaries, as such, shall not assume quotas to be paid collectively.

"6. That a full report of the pledges and collections be made regularly to the Conference Superintendent of Supplies, who shall, in turn, report to the organization secretary.

"7. That the participation of the Woman's Missionary Societies, as such, in the campaign be limited to the year 1924, and that at the close of that year the subscription cards be turned in to the church leaders of the campaign.

"MRS. F. H. E. ROSS,
"MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB."

In regard to destination of supplies for the first quarter, as our annual meeting does not convene until April, we will use the plan suggested last year. Auxiliaries in Alexandria, Lake Charles, Monroe and Ruston Districts will send their boxes or cash contributions to McDonald-Wesley House. Houma, Miss Ella K. Hooper, deaconess.

Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Shreveport Districts will send their boxes or cash contributions to St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, Miss Bertie Ellison, deaconess.

REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF, MISSIONARY EVANGELIST, MONTH OF JANUARY, 1924.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences.

Dear Brethren: I have preached in the following churches this month: Harrisville, Poplar Springs, Galloway Memorial, Beauvoir, Old Soldiers' Home, Flora, and Canton; twenty joined the church and one joined the Epworth League this month. I have held fifteen services.

One Mohammedan, eight Chinese and one negro joined the church, one of the old soldiers joined the church, and twenty-five of them gave their hearts to the Lord, and promised to lead a better life. One Italian and one Syrian also joined the church; eight Americans also. I especially want to thank the brethren who have been kind to me, and the people who have given me a hearing. The Lord has helped me to do the work, and opened the hearts of the people to hear me.

Pray for me and the work God has called me to do. I am still looking for your call. Call and open the way for me. May the Lord bless you in your work.

Your brother in the Lord,
CHARLES ASSAF.

P. S.—While preaching in Flora, I was asked to preach for the colored people after the service Wednesday, at 7 p. m. We went to the colored church, where we had a good service. The Methodist church janitor joined the church.

THE GALLERY OF ART.

By John G. Cronbach.

Art is a being with changeable phases,
Bright colors and tints, and various faces;
Now happy and glad, or forlorn and sad,
Arrayed in rich garments, or scantily clad!

Choice flowers and fruits, or bountiful fare,
Palace or hovel, or sane Christian in prayer;
Now angels and saints, or martyrs and beasts—
Or people enjoying their various feasts!

A mountain or hill, or meadow and vale,
Or storm-tossed bark in an ocean's gale;
Or an eagle soaring through clear or dark skies;
On hill or green meadow, some deer it now spies—

The hunters and hounds, and swiftly is speeding
To shelter and brook! Or, o'ertaken and bleeding,
It yields up its life to the hunter's sharp knife,
Or beasts of the forest in conflict and strife.

Now monster, or beauty of the deep and blue sea—
Caught in the meshes or graceful and free!
Now peace, now strife; now horrible wars,
Or heavenly Being with mantle of stars!

Now lightning and fire, debauchery, plunder—
Or wild beast a prey is tearing asunder;
Now sunshine, or rain, or beautiful snow,
Or thief or assassin dealing death's blow.

Sickness or famine, or poverty's vale,
Grief and despair, or ships in full sail!
The End of the World; but, what more shall I tell—
The last day of Judgment, or Heaven or Hell!

The great secret of success in life is for a man to be ready when his opportunity comes.—Disraeli.

Health Is the Most Precious of All Treaures

Here Is How to Take Proper Care of It

Pensacola, Fla.—"About the time that I arrived at the age of womanhood I became so delicate and frail my parents thought I was going into consumption. Acting on the advice of a friend they began giving me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery. I picked right up in a few months, and became as stout and healthy as anybody. Since I married I have taken the 'Favorite Prescription', and my husband has taken the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' We know the 'Favorite Prescription' is all and more than is claimed for it as a woman's tonic, and that the 'Golden Medical Discovery' is the best blood medicine and general tonic."—Mrs. H. J. Kage, 200 Church Street.

METHODISM IN JACKSON.

By Rev. F. L. Applewhite.

Jackson, Miss., has had phenomenal growth the past year, ranking third among the cities of the nation in the matter of proportionate material progress. It is noteworthy that a great spiritual revival preceded this business advance, and our newspapers are frank to say that it has been a by-product of the revival. The citizens of Jackson are proud of their city's growth. Christian people rejoice over the manifestations of religious progress and of civic and social righteousness. That the millennium has by no means arrived we know quite well, and that there are evils to reckon with is very evident. It is very clear, also, that substantial progress, material and spiritual, has been made. One evidence of this is the fact that the churches have helped swell the building boom, as almost every church has built or is planning to build extensive additions to the present church structures or to build new churches outright.

Our Methodism, characteristically, has been militant in the forefront of this advance movement, and it has occurred to me that some one should sketch for the Advocate readers some account of the churches and the institutions of our church here as well as the men who are "carrying on," for this is "news" which should be of interest to Methodist readers.

At the head of the Methodist forces here is Rev. M. L. Burton, our presiding elder, far-seeing, wise in counsel, aggressive and positive in the type of his leadership. Brother Burton has shown himself a patient, forbearing, diligent and helpful presiding elder, who has kept himself at his task despite bodily suffering which would have daunted and conquered a less determined man. When his quadrennium shall have closed at the end of this year, few will deny that he has wrought well, not only in Jackson but throughout the district.

Galloway Memorial stands first among our churches. Its membership exceeds 2,000. The various departments of its work are thoroughly organized. It has a great Sunday school, departmental in its organization, having more than double the membership it had a short time ago; $10,000 improvement has recently been made to the Sunday school annex, and in these larger quarters the school continues to spread, threatening to spring the substantial walls by its increase. This is the largest Sunday school in the city, and equal to the best in point of organization and administration. Mr. J. C. Covett, who for many years has been its superintendent, is widely known for his lovable and gracious personality. Other features of the work are as follows: Men's Bible Class support a ministerial student in Millsaps College and care for a boy at the Orphanage; the Woman's Missionary Society is supporting a young woman student volunteer in Millsaps; the Young People's Department supports a foreign missionary, and the Working Girls' Class, a Bible woman. The church makes a substantial contribution to the Rankin Street Mission.

Rev. E. K. Means, the pastor, is loved and honored by all Jackson. A scholarly gentleman, author of national reputation, eloquent preacher—a church is fortunate to have such a pastor.

Capitol Street is the church with a great present, but a greater future. Because of its admirable location, it has for its field of operation a large and rapidly developing residential section. Its membership nears 2,000, and will soon go beyond it. The congregation is zealous and aggressive, and covers its field with intensive labor. The Sunday school has greatly outgrown the present quarters, and temporary quarters have been improvised until their plan for a great annex is realized. This we hope will be speedily accomplished. The superintendent is Mr. M. S. Enochs, well known Christian business man, who brings to the kingdom the efficiency and sound judgment for which he is noted in the business world.

Dr. H. F. Brooks, the pastor since the last Annual Conference, has already captured his people and has stirred the city with great evangelistic messages. More than fifty have been received into the church, a large number of these on profession of faith.

The Men's Bible Class is very active. Besides paying a large part of the Mission and Orphanage special they are sending two of the girls from the Orphanage through Grenada College, paying all expenses. The Character Builders' Class is sending one girl from the Orphanage through Grenada College. This is a young ladies' class.

Other features of the work are: They have assumed a missionary appropriation for the Harrisville circuit as a Home Mission Special, and the support of Rev. J. L. Neil as a Foreign Mission Special; an Intermediate League has been organized with a membership of 150; an attractive Bible study program, conducted by Dr. Brooks, is drawing large crowds out to the mid-week prayer meetings.

The two smaller churches are Millsaps Memorial and Rankin Street. Dr. B. E. Mitchell, professor of Mathematics in Millsaps, is pastor of the former, and your humble scribe of the latter.

Dr. Mitchell is doing a good work in his church. Millsaps Memorial is the only church in that particular section, and people of several denominations rally to it and enjoy its services. Like Metropolitan, as usual, exerts an influence for good beyond its denominational bounds. This congregation has specialized on music, and for a small church has developed an unusually fine choir. This church serves the vocational students of the Insane Hospital, and offers to this fine group of workers to these most unfortunate of unfortunates the means of grace they need.

We still call our church Rankin Street, and will continue to do so until we settle finally on a name. The old church has been sold and a new building nears completion, on the corner of Union and Winter Streets. The new location is about six blocks northwest of the old site. We have a choice lot here and an additional lot on which to build a new parsonage. The church is of brick veneer construction, having ten Sunday school rooms and a spacious auditorium. It is a beautiful church, of which the congregation and pastor are proud. Our membership is increasing in a gratifying way, being about double what it was three years ago. As soon as we get over moving, we expect to organize our forces in a better way for greater accomplishments. Rev. Earl B. Moll is to hold a meeting for us beginning the middle of April.

In another issue of the Advocate I shall write of our other workers and institutions here. This will do for this time.

It is a privilege to be a reader of this paper and to let our advertisers know it. When answering advertisements, mention this paper.

HOW THIS WOMAN GOT STRENGTH

Put Up 300 Quarts Fruit, 500 Glasses Jelly and Took Care of Four Children

Norwalk, Iowa.—"I have been meaning for some time to write and tell you how much good your medicine has done me. When I started to take it I was almost bed fast and would have been in bed all the time if I had had any one to care for my children. There was so much swelling and pain that I could hardly take a step. I took seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and found that so healing. I am not entirely well yet for I was in bad shape when I started your medicine, but I am so much better that I am not afraid to recommend it, and I think if I keep on taking it, it will cure me. I have done my work all alone this summer, caring for four children, and I canned 300 quarts of fruit and made 500 glasses of jelly, so you see I must be better. I feel pretty good all the time and I am glad to tell others about the medicine."—Mrs. C. J. WENNERMARK, Box 141, Norwalk, Iowa.

SALT.

The world is held together by the mass of honest folk who do their daily tasks, tend their own spot in the world, and have faith that at last the right will fully come to its own. These are the salt of the earth; they constitute that saline solution which is forever reviving a moribund world. They believe that right motives make right conditions, that if their faces are turned toward the light they cannot miss the road, and all right-minded men desire to see this true faith of the people vindicated. This is our truest basis of prosperity. It is the essence of all our progress. If this faith should be lost from any considerable group of society, it would constitute a loss equal to that of all the material wealth we possess.—Dearborn Independent.

To receive a little child in His name, to welcome the humdrum duty as a sacred mission, to regard a lowly office as a holy trust, to make a commonplace uncommonly noble and beautiful, this is the beginning of greatness.—J. H. Jowett.

Is Iron Hunger Starving Your Blood

Keeping You Weak, Nervous, Irritable and Run-down?

WHAT TO DO

ANY doctor will tell you that if you expect to be strong and well, your blood must get iron just as your stomach must have food and furnace must have coal. Iron is the food which keeps the blood working for you day and night. Only by satisfying this iron hunger of the pale, thin, watery blood can you build up rich red corpuscles that repair wasted tissue, renew the vigor of your body, and ward off germs of disease. Once you supply this red blood food in the form of organic iron—NUXATED IRON—a most amazing change often quickly takes place.

Nuxated Iron contains iron like the iron in spinach, lettuce and apples, and like the iron in your blood. It acts as a powerful strength and body builder, stimulates the nerve cells deep in the cheeks and sets a-tingle in your step. It helps make strong, vigorous men and healthy attractive women.

When you get up feeling tired in the morning; when you find yourself nervous, irritable and easily upset; when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night; pains across the back and your face looks pale and drawn, do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease. Simply try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks and note the amazing change in your health, vigor, energy and endurance. You should be astonished at the results in even a few days' time. Successful guaranteed or money refunded. At all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD—GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

FROM SATARTIA, MISS.

On the 28th of November, at 3:30 p. m., we arrived in Satartia. Soon after we got here, a number of the good ladies came, and soon they had a dinner or early supper prepared that would have tempted the appetite of a king; and you can imagine what this preacher did for it after driving all day in the rain, and over such roads as one will find from Bentonia here after a day's rain. We found a table in the dining-room groaning under the load of groceries it was carrying, that was brought here the eve before. Brother Carley, we didn't have a hog to kill, but we have had plenty of backbone, spare ribs and sausage to eat; now, who wouldn't like to serve the Satartia charge? And, too, old Santa Claus remembered us on Christmas Eve night with two nice boxes of fruit, candy, nuts, and groceries.

Though we have had some extremely bad weather, we have been able to meet all our appointments. We had our first quarterly conference during that awful freeze the 1st of January. We had a real good one; all the churches were represented, and from this place let me say all the stewards were present, with good reports. We assumed our quota for the Superannuate Endowment Fund and sent in the pink leaf immediately following.

We find some of as loyal people on this work as you will find anywhere. We want to thank Brother B. H. Williams, our predeeessor, for the good work he did while here; these people certainly love him. We are to begin work on our parsonage at once, and when completed we will have a real nice five-room bungalow, with two screened porches; when you come to Satartia, come to see us. Everything looks encouraging for a real good year in the true sense of the word. We ask an interest in the prayers of the brethren.

M. W. PORTER.

TRAVESTY OF WAR.

Sometimes when a man talks against war, he faces in rebuttal a question such as this: "Wouldn't you go to war to protect the weak?" The answer seems plain. A modern war to protect the weak—that is a grim joke! Look at the facts of the last war. This is the way it protected the weak: 10,000,000 known dead soldiers. 3,000,000 presumed dead soldiers, 13,000,000 dead civilians, 20,000,000 wounded, 3,000,000 prisoners, 9,000,000 war orphans, 5,000,000 war widows, 10,000,000 refugees. What do you mean—modern war protecting the weak? The Turks have slaughtered Armenians with an abandon and freedom not known before, since we fought a war to protect the weak. This is the conviction that grows in modern minds—war is no way to protect the weak. A world court might help to protect the weak. A League of Nations might protect the weak. An international mind, backed by a Christian conscience that would stop the race for armaments and forbid the nations to resort to violence—that would protect the weak. But there is no covering for the shame of a man who stands on the corners of the street to-day and talks about modern war protecting the weak. It is the weak who die by millions in every modern war.—Henry Emerson Fosdick.

It is better to say, "This one thing I do," than to say, "These forty things I dabble in."—Washington Gladden.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT MAKES THE LIGHT.

We go into a dark room, feel around till we find the electric light switch, press the button, and instantly the room is flooded with light. Why? We say that the current was cut off until we pressed the button, pressing the button turned the current on, and the light shone. We know that the house is wired for electricity, and that the wires are connected somewhere with a power house from which the current can be drawn as desired. But we have to press the button before it becomes available. So it may be with divine grace. We know that God is the source of all spiritual strength, and we know that we can get from Him the help we need. But the condition of our getting that help is that we pray. Just as we might wander around in darkness all night in the room if we did not press the button, so we may remain out of touch and communion with God if we will not pray. Too many Christians are in spiritual darkness because they will not "press the button."

THE FALLACY OF FIGURES.

We sometimes almost wish that the church would not be called upon to make a statistical report of its work for a whole year. People like to know what is being accomplished, of course, but the emphasis that is usually placed upon figures often has the tendency to center attention upon appearances, rather than upon the things actually accomplished. Figures are the boast of some individuals and organizations, just as they are the embarrassment of others. It is not infrequently the case that figures are misleading, anyway. If we could go ahead with our work, doing the very best we could, regardless of what the figures would "show," it is possible that a spiritual interest would be developed that would accomplish more than the best "report" that could possibly be drawn up. "Everything in full, Bihop," sounds mighty fine—but it does not always tell the whole story.

PROMOTING INTER-RACIAL GOOD WILL.

The expediency of maintaining inter-racial good will commends itself to every one who gives any consideration whatever to the matter; but the chief argument in favor of such good will is the obligation that rests upon the eternal principles of proper relationship among men as taught by the gospel. The present widespread and influential movement for a better understanding between the white and the colored people, especially in the South, is based upon the realization by the right-thinking leaders of both races that the application of common sense, justice, and a spirit of mutual understanding is as desirable and as possible beween the races as it is between groups of the same race. The coming together, therefore, of those of both races that they may discuss in a friendly way matters that are of vital interest to all, is both desirable and feasible. Racial good will is an indispensable accompaniment of industrial prosperity and social peace.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Practically throughout the church at this time pastors and people are thinking about and praying for revival meetings to be held during the spring and summer. They could not be thinking about and praying for a more important interest of the church. Not only are there multitudes of unsaved people that need to be reached with the gospel and brought into the Kingdom of God, but those who already profess to be Christians also need to be brought to greater consecration and more faithful service. The revival meetings will accomplish both these results.

In preparation for these meetings, everything ought to be done that can be done to make them as profitable as possible. In this connection, we commend the simple suggestions recently sent to the pastors of the Louisiana Conference by Rev. Henry T. Young, the chairman of the Conference Commission on Evangelism: "1. Plan early for the meeting; 2. Plan very thoroughly; 3. Plan to hold the meeting long enough to conserve results; 4. Plan to use every part of the local church in the campaign; 5. Make a survey of the field; 6. Report all progress to the church press, so as to encourage others."

After all, assuming that preachers and people alike are in earnest about having a good meeting and that they are willing "to spend and be spent" in promoting one, is it not largely a question of adequate preparation to insure success? Everybody can plan, work, and pray. Let us have a great season of revivals.

PROHIBITION IS HERE TO STAY.

The industrial advantages of national prohibition are too great for this nation ever to repeal, or even to modify, the requirements of the Eighteenth Amendment. In spite of the loud-mouthed protestations of those who claim that the laboring man wants his wine and beer, we have the testimony of these men themselves that they do not want to return to the conditions of pre-prohibition days. In a recent address, Mr. Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineeers, made the following significant statement: "Ten years before the churches began preaching prohibition, years before even the railroad officials began issuing orders about drinking, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were fighting the drink evil. A law of the organization that has been in effect during the twenty years I have been the executive, reads as follows: 'The use of intoxicating liquors either on or off duty is prohibited. It shall be the duty of his division (lodge) to investigate any violation of this rule, and if the member is found guilty he shall be expelled. Any division (lodge) failing to enforce this law shall have its charter suspended by the Grand Chief Engineer.' * * * The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at their International Convention in 1918, with 902 votes present, by a unanimous vote of all delegates, declared in favor of nation-wide prohibition. * * * There are some people laboring under the delusion they are going to have the prohibition law modified or abolished. Some one should wake them up from their Rip Van Winkle sleep. * * * We are not going back to the old condition of things, with their misery, want, and poverty. Never again! Prohibition has come to stay." Well put, Mr. Stone.

BACK-FIRE.

One thing is sure—the devil is glad when anything causes the forces of righteousness to falter in their attacks upon the strongholds of sin. It makes no difference to him what causes the faltering—it helps him to press the battle from his side and win victories where otherwise he would be vanquished. If the Christian forces of this country and of the world fall out among themselves over the proper pronunciation of "Shibboleth," the casualties will be more than "forty and two thousand"—and the devil will greatly enjoy the conflict at the "passages of the Jordan."

AFTER THE MONEY.

A recent news note was to the effect that of the 2,750 bills introduced in the House of Representatives on its first legislative day, 2,475 were measures appropriating public money or property for favored individuals, groups, or localities. It is evident, if this statement is true, that the representatives of the people are immensely interested in the pecuniary welfare of themselves, their friends, their constituents—or somebody. The lure of the lucre seems to be almost irresistible. The present scandals in public life show that, in many cases, money means more than manhood. The Master was manifestly right when he said, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

"ADDRESS PLAINLY."

The Post Office Department of the National Government has recently issued a circular calling attention to the fact that it pays an annual toll of $1,740,000 because people persist in mailing letters and packages with incomplete, inadequate, or incorrect addresses. This is just one of those "little things" that seem to be so insignificant as not to be worth noticing, that in the aggregate amount to a great deal. Address your mail carefully—yes, and do whatever else you do in the very best way you know how to do it.

THE SUPERANNUATION OF REV. DR. GOODMAN.

By Rev. Lyman Carley.

(Concluded from Last Week.)

Promptly at the appointed hour the quarterly conference was called to order by the presiding elder. There was an unusually large attendance of officials, for the reason that many believed a change of preachers was going to he asked for, and it was thought that the request, to have weight, would need to be presented hy as large a numher of officials as possible. The business of the conference was transacted promptly, but not hurriedly. The collections for the pastor's and the presiding elder's salaries were not as large as they had hoped for. The other collections were also quite small. Just as the most of the routine business was disposed of, Dr. Goodman was sent for to visit a young man who had heen hurt hy the falling of a tree and was supposed to he dying. He was excused and the conference was soon ready to adjourn. At this point, the presiding elder arose and said:

"While Dr. Goodman is absent, I wish to say a few things to the quarterly conference. I understand that the sentiment in favor of a change of preachers is just about unanimous. I have heen aware for some time that Dr. Goodman is too old and feeble to do efficient work. So I have asked him to allow me to present his name to the Annual Conference for the superannuate relation."

Dr. Wise.—"Did he consent to it?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"When I mentioned the matter, he and his wife broke down and cried. This was nothing more than I expected, for superannuation is an ordeal through which our preachers, as a rule, pass with great reluctance. To Dr. Goodman and his wife the future is very dark. He has no home to go to and no one to look to for support. He knows how small the collections are for superannuates, and the situation is very sad. If all his salary could he paid, it would be some relief to him. You stewards know how great the deficit is, and I hope that in view of his superannuation, you will make the strongest possible efforts to collect it. One reason so many old preachers hold on to the active relation, when they know that they cannot do efficient work, is the dread of an uncomfortahle life during the days of their superannuation."

Mr. Smith.—"I think Dr. Goodman has two sons who ought to give him a home and take care of him."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"He spoke of his sons, but said they could not help him. One of them has a very large family that he can hardly support, and the other's wife is an invalid and not able to take care of the home.

"And right here, Brother Smith, I will try to answer the question you asked me this morning. As a matter of fact, there are many sueranuates who are heing taken care of hy their children. And it would he an unnatural son or danghter who would not be willing to do this. But, after all, is it not just as criminal for the church, which has been the object of the preacher's solicitude, prayers, labors and sacrifices during the greater part of his life, and that has been built up from a weak, struggling organization to be one of the great Christian denominations of the world, to refuse or neglect to award him a reasonable pension in his old age?

"What would be thought of the United States Government if it did not care for the disabled soldiers who have come home out of the late world war? Would it be right to say, 'Let their relatives take care of them'? Would such a thing be creditahle to a great and strong nation like ours? No people on earth would be guilty of such ingratitude. Is it creditable to a great and strong church like ours to leave its worn-out preachers to shift for themselves the best they can? Our wounded and helpless soldiers, hy heroic service, for a short time protected our material interests, while our old preachers have spent the best part of their lives in safeguarding our spiritual interests. If the soldier is entitled to the gratitude of a nation, a pension and a bonus besides, surely the Christian preacher is entitled to some consideration in his old age."

Mr. Smith.—"Your answer to my question, which I now know to have been a foolish one, is more than satisfactory. I am heartily ashamed that I ever entertained such sentiments. If I had been hearing talks like yours along through my life, I would not be so foolish and ignorant as I am. Is it a mistake for me to think that our preachers are somewhat to blame for our lack of information along these lines?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"Possibly, Brother Smith, you have struck the keynote to this whole matter. If during all these years our preachers had given the people the needed information, it might be that to-day we would be giving our superannuates the compensation to which they are justly entitled. I do not attribute the failure of our preachers at this point to anything but their modesty. Preachers do not like to press collections for themselves. Every preacher knows that he will probably some day be a claimant on this fund, and for that reason he dislikes to press this matter home to the conscience of the people. When the laity come fully to the front, as they are beginning to do, the preachers will be relieved of this burden and then conditions will be different."

Mr. Smith.—"To me a new light has sprung up, and I feel that I understand my duty better than ever before. I shall not be as indifferent about this fund any more as I have been in the past."

Presiding Elder Justice.—"Now, Dr. Wise, I wish to say a few words about your question. You want to know why the church does not make better provision for the support of its superannuates. We have had the machinery for this all along. Collections have been taken for this cause from the beginning, but the want of liberality on the part of the people has resulted in a comparatively small sum of money being available heretofore for the superannuates. But I hope that a better day is dawning. Some of our Annual Conferences are raising an endowment fund to supplement the usual collections, and this is doing much good. A general Board of Finance, whose special duty it is to look after raising an endowment fund for the superannuates and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers throughout the whole church, has been organized. Dr. Luther E. Todd is the Secretary of that board, and his entire time is given to its interests. He has succeeded in raising a considerahle sum for this cause during the quadrennium just now drawing to a close. According to the Secretary's last report, which was for 1921, the Conference Boards of Finance paid the claimants for that year $473,952, and the General Board paid them $33,288, making in all $507,221. There are now 133 superannuate homes valued at $359,560."

Dr. Wise.—"Brother Justice, will you allow me to ask how many claimants upon this fund there are in the entire church and what each one receives annually?"

Presiding Elder Justice.—"I am glad that you asked that question. The number of claimants varies from year to year. Some are removed by death and others are added to the list. Dr. Todd, the Secretary, says that for 1921 there were 860 superannuates, and 1,332 widows of preachers, making a total of 2,192 claimants. This does not include the orphans. He says also that the average per capita received by superannuates was $283, and the average per capita received by widows of preachers was $186. So you see that we are falling far short of providing anything like an ample support for our superannuates and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers.

"Our leading ministers and laymen are contemplating the collection of an endowment fund of $10,000,000. If this can be done, our superannuates will be paid enough to make them comfortable in their old age.

"Another thing that I wish to say is that in all probability the small number of young men entering the ministry is due largely to the prospect of an uncomfortable old age. They turn aside in spite of the call of God and engage in other more remunerative occupations. We pray that God will send forth laborers into the harvest, and when they are called they refuse to respond. I have personal knowledge of several such cases. The situation is really appalling and calls for great searchings of heart.

"Still another aspect of this matter is the question as to whether we can call ourselves really honest and not pay the debt we owe to our superannuate ministers. Just think what the ministry has done, not only in building up our church, but in promoting the civilization of the world. Take as an example the ministry of our Dr. Goodman. He has kept a record during his entire ministry of what he has been enabled to do. Here is some of it: Received into the church 5,893 members; 38 young men called te preach under his ministry; married 2,000 couples; baptized 6,593 children; built 37 parsonages and 83 churches; ministered at 3,061 funerals; collected for the various enterprises of the church $86,300. Making allowance for his superior ability and success, we may take his record as a fair sample of the work done by our present day superannuates. What a debt we owe them, and how glad we ought to be to pay it."

Dr. Wise.—"We have heard strange things to-night, and things that have stirred our hearts. Why have not our preachers told us these things before? I am sure that I owe not less than $2,000 to the superannuates myself. I have paid a shamefully small sum to this fund each year for the past forty years of my life, when I should have contributed much larger sums. I am heartily ashamed of myself. If you think as I do, brethren, let us remove the dark cloud from Dr. Goodman's sky. Let us pay every cent of his salary. We can do it, if we will. What say you, brethren?"

A chorus of voices was heard saying: "We can and we will." Check books were drawn from the pockets of the brethren, and in a few minutes the salary was paid in full.

Dr. Wise.—"Here, Brother Justice, is a check for $2 000 to be used in buying Dr. Goodman a home. I have right now $75,000 in the bank, and what I am giving does not hurt me at all. I have been a delinquent all my life, but I am determined to pay up."

Mr. Smith.—"Let me add $1,000 to that fund. I do want to be honest, but I see now that I cannot have a clear conscience and withhold what I realize now belongs to the Lord."

In a few minutes the sum of $5,000 was raised and the checks turned over to the presiding elder for Dr. Goodman.

Just then Dr. Goodman returned from his visit to the young man who had been hurt, and reported that he would probably recover. But the best news was that he had been converted and was ready to join the church. This caused general rejoicing, for he was very popular in the community.

Presiding Elder Justice.—"They shall still bring forth fruit in old age."

"Dr. Goodman," said the presiding elder, "we have been considering your case, and the brethren have not only paid your salary, but have given checks to the amount of $5,000 to buy you a home and to support you and your good wife for the next twelve months."

For several minutes Dr. Goodman stood speechless and then fell into the arms of Dr. Wise. Finally he said, "Let me go and tell Mary the good news."

The business of the conference having been finished, the presiding elder said: "Let us sing the Long Meter Doxology." This was done, and then somebody started, "'Tis the old-time religion." Some of the neighbors were attracted by the singing and came over to the church and joined enthusiastically in the song. There was old-time Methodist hand-shaking. Dr. Wise became happy and shouted, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

The presiding elder said: "This must be, in part at least, what God meant when he said in Malachi, 'Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.'"

At a late hour the benediction was pronounced by the presiding elder, and the people went home saying that this was the greatest quarterly conference ever held in Rosetown.

The Annual Conference came and Dr. Goodman was given the superannuate relation. He gave a brief review of his career as a Methodist itinerant and closed by saying that he was the happiest man on the Conference floor.

HOW WALLACE CAME TO WRITE BEN-HUR.

By E. A. Robertson.

Fortunately the Christian religion is not a matter of mental calisthenics; it is a living experience. Two great facts stand out as an insuperable obstacle to those who would destroy the vitals of Christianity and leave nothing of the Christian church except a chain of ethical clubs or societies, whose principal cohesive force would be mutual admiration and whose main function would be to provide high-class entertainment in competition with the public forums and the motion picture shows. Modern skepticism will beat as vainly against these two facts as the angry tides beat against the stoutest sea wall.

The facts are conviction of sin and conversion of sinners. These facts attest the presence of a living Christ (not a dead Jew) in the world today; they prove his resurrection, not by historical data, which anybody is privileged to doubt, but by current experiences of living souls, at which the unregenerate may sneer, but of which those subject to the experience are as sure as they are of their existence as human entities.

Nothing that is said of the birth of Christ in the New Testament is any more miraculous than his continued rebirth in human hearts. No greater miracle can be named than the transformation of human nature, the rebirth by grace.

Meeting a Big Question.

Real study of a great problem is rare. Most people meet an important question in one of three ways. They ignore it; they depend on the opinions of others in making a decision; or they reason superficially far enough to arrive at a prejudice which they adopt as a conclusion. The personal attitudes of millions of men and women toward the religion of Jesus Christ fall severally under one or another of these classifications. But Christianity has ever been distinguished among religions by its capacity to respond triumphantly to the most searching study and to convince those who have sriously and persistently turned their minds to it.

An illustration is found in the story of the way General Lew Wallace came to write Ben-Hur, as it has been told by Willis E. Lougee, in the Congregationalist. In the course of a conversation with General Wallace one time, Mr. Lougee asked how Ben-Hur came to be written. In reply the general said that he had been an infidel and a close friend of Robert G. Ingersoll. After serving a term as Governor of Arizona, he was returning east in company with Ingersoll. Noting from the train some church spires in a village, the famous agnostic expressed his contempt for those who believed what was taught in the churches, and suggested to General Wallace that he ought to write a book to show that Christianity was false and that Christ never lived.

Idea Takes Root.

The idea took root, and for years General Wallace collected historical data both in America and in the Old World, and finally began his book, from the outset disapproved by his Methodist wife. By the time four chapters were written, the author had become convinced by his study that Christ was a historical character. As quoted by Mr. Lougee, General Wallace described in this way his experience after that discovery:

"I was in trouble. I had started out to write a book to prove to the world that no such person as Jesus Christ had ever lived on this earth; now I was faced with irrefutable evidence that he was as real a personage as Julius Caesar, Mark Antony, Virgil, Dante and a host of others who had lived and taught in those early days. I looked the matter squarely in the face, and reasoned that if he was a real personage (and there was no doubt about that) then was he not the Son of God and the Redeemer of the world?

"A feeling of uneasiness and a fear that I might be all wrong began to trouble me. A growing conviction began to take ground, that as Jesus Christ had been proven a real personage, then perhaps he was all that he claimed to be. This conviction grew stronger until, on one never-to-be-forgotten night, in my study at my home in Indianapolis, this conviction became a certainty.

"Dropping down upon my knees for the first time in my life for such a purpose, I prayed to God to reveal himself to me, to forgive my sins and to help me become one of his real followers. The light came into my soul early in the morning, about 1 o'clock. I went downstairs where my wife was sleeping, and awaking her, told her that I had accepted Jesus Christ as my Savior and Lord. You ought to have seen her face as I told of my new-found faith. 'Oh, Lew,' she said, 'I have prayed for this ever since you told me of your intentions to write this book—that you might find him in so doing.'

Kneel Together.

"We knelt together by the bed in that early morning hour and together thanked God for his mercy and care in guiding me to know him. I do not believe that heaven has any sweeter joy than we found that morning when, after years of wedded life, we had been joined together in the bonds of Christian fellowship.

"Then I asked: 'What shall I do with all this material that has been collected at so much expense and labor?' 'Why,' replied my wife, 'just change the four chapters you have written, finish the book and send it out into the world to prove from your own study and research that Jesus Christ was all that he claimed to be—the Son of God and redeemer of the world.'"—Indianapolis Morning Star.

WHO WANTS TO HELP?

Many of your readers are interested in the success of our French Mission work in Southern Louisiana, and no cause has a more sacred claim on our people, especially in Louisiana, than this truly mission work within our bounds. It is therefore proper that they should be informed of its progress and its needs. It is constantly facing new needs which are the results of new providential opportunities. One of these needs was presented during our last Conference session and met with a liberal response, but was not entirely provided for. It had become necessary to equip several of our preachers with cars to enable them to cover the large territory assigned to them. One gentleman generously gave one car. About half the price of another was provided by the congregation. We still lack about three hundred dollars of having enough to pay for the three cars that had to be provided and are now in the service.

For several years we have been trying to secure property for a church and graveyard for a new French congregation in Lafourche Parish, which cannot make progress till these necessities are provided. Some money has been contributed by friends toward this undertaking, and the Mission Board will give some help, but we will probably need at least $300 more to secure a property which will exactly fill our needs and, besides having abundant room for a graveyard, has a house on it that will serve us for a church. The opportunity to buy this property is now put up to us, and if we do not buy at once, we may not soon find an available property. If friends who are interested in this great opportunity will contribute $600 now to these two immediate needs, we can invest it so as to bring incalculable results in this work. Those who are willing to make any contributions are requested to send to me at 1431 Octavia Street, New Orleans, La., as quickly as possible.

THE EDUCATIONAL MEETING IN MEMPHIS.

My Dear Brother Carley: Just a word about our educational meeting in Memphis, Jan. 29-Feb. 2. We had a great program, and the session throughout was very instructive. Jan. 29 was set apart for work and plans by the Associate Secretary, Dr. H. H. Sherman, and the Secretary-Treasurers. Every phase of our work was discussed, and plans made for more intensive collections. Dr. Sherman has the work fully in hand.

Throughout the conference, by representatives of our schools, was sounded the keynote of a deeper consecration to Christ and his cause. Not a word was spoken, so far as I heard (and I heard about all) that was not sound and showed that our leaders in our schools possess an abiding faith in Christ. Dr. Linn's words seem now prophetic. Again and again he spoke of his concern about the salvation of the student body. I think that the Secretary-Treasurers each went back to his task with a new conception of his duty to God and the church.

Our representatives from the Mississippi Conference, Dr. Robert Selby, of Crawford Street, Vicksburg, and Dr. Joe Cook, of Hattiesburg, acquitted themselves well.

I don't think that any one need hesitate to patronize any of our schools. Drs. Key and Bowen, of Millsaps; Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth, and Dr. Hogg, of Port Gibson, were present and helped to make the conference a success.

I spoke twice in Meridian yesterday, in the morning at Hawkins Memorial, with Brother J. M. Lewis, and at night at East End, with Brother W. H. Lewis. This writer is under obligation to these brothers and their good wives—blessings on them. At 3 o'clock I had a conference with the collectors.

Brothers Decell and Linfield each asked me to preach for them; and here and now I wish to thank the presiding elder and preachers. I have not been denied a pulpit since I have been in this work. The collectors have as a rule been faithful. We have collected about 47 per cent of the amount subscribed at a cost of 11½ per cent, which includes our part of expense of the Nashville office and all expenses of the Jackson office.

J. M. MORSE, Secretary.

Feb. 11, 1924.

"If there be lying before you any bit of work from which you shrink, go straight up to it. The only way to get rid of it is to do it. In every piece of honest work, however irksome, laborious and commonplace, we are fellow-workers with God."—F. B. Meyer.

NOTES FROM COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We bave finished our first round of quarterly conferences and are glad to report that the work in a general way is moving along nicely. Despite tbe fact that we have had some very unfavorable weather and road conditions, we feel that the work bas made a good beginning for a great year tbroughout the district.

Every charge in the district accepted the quota for Superannuate Endowment, all but one charge accepting plan number two for raising this fund. Starkville put the amount in the budget and will raise it along with the rest of the budget. Several of the charges will likely do this next year. I hope all the "Pinks" have reached Dr. Todd and that Columbus District will soon appear on the honor roll as 100% pink.

Brooksville and Kosciusko are making their plans to build new churches this year. At the first quarterly conference, building committees were appointed at both places, and everything looks bright for the early erection of modern churches at tbese places. Tbe nice brick church at Wier has been fully completed since Conference, giving to this wide-awake congregation a well equipped plant for their work.

Brother and Sister Storment have just moved into their handsome bungalow parsonage at Ackerman, Ackerman and Wier charge. When fully completed (wbich it will be before work stops), tbere will be no better preacher's home in the district; and I feel safe in saying in the Conference. It is as complete as any home needs to be, and will be nice enough for a king. One good feature about the building of this parsonage, when finished it will be paid for. They are paying as they go.

In view of the increases in pastors' salaries throughout the district during tbe past three years, we did not expect many increases this year, but we are glad to report the following increases this year: Brooksville, $500; Columbus, Central, $300; Kosciusko station, $250; Noxapater, $250; Mayhew and Sessums, $100. Noxapater will show the same asssessment as last year, but two churches are being served this year by a junior preacher, and the other four churches made up tbe amount that would have been paid by these two churches, making Brother Goudelock's salary the same with two less churches.

Special emphasis is being placed on the evangelistic campaign for the year. Gipsy Smith's campaign at Macon in January was a wonderful success. Macon and Noxubee County will never be the same any more. John Brown begins a three weeks' campaign at Columbus, March 2, and from tbe interest now manifested in the organization and plans for the campaign this will be another great meeting. Burke Culpepper begins with Brother Woollard, at Starkville, Feb. 17. We have tentative plans for two county-wide meetings at Ackerman and Louisville, for Choctaw and Winston Counties, with George Tucker, the R. R. evangelist, to do the preaching. Cooperating with Brother Campbell, our missionary evangelist, we are planning to begin our rural evangelistic campaign early in the summer. These plans will be more definitely worked out and announced later.

We have just about completed plans for holding all-day rally services in most of the rural churches, beginning about March 20 to May 4. It is our purpose to go to as many of our rural churches as we can reacb during tbis period of time, and put on an all-day program, carrying a strong team of speakers, and discuss many phases of the work, more especially as it relates to the local congregation. A more definite plan will be worked out and announced later.

Our Preacbers' Institute at Starkville, Jan. 15-16, was cut sbort by tbe presiding elder's being called away to attend a funeral. But the two sessions held the afternoon and night of the 15th were interesting and helpful to all present. Most of the preacbers were present.

Brotber J. H. McKinnon, our District Lay Leader, held two very inspiring services for the laymen, Feb. 7, at Ackerman, and the 8tb at West Point. Our laymen did not attend as we bad hoped they would, but the meetings were interesting and very helpful. Brother McKinnon is anxious to see tbe Laymen's Movement move, and if we will give him our assistance and encouragement, he is going, to make it MOVE.

So far as the "elder" can find out, all the preachers and people are pleased over the new appointments for the year and all the machinery is running without friction anywbere. Praise the Lord!

PAPINI'S LIFE OF CHRIST.

By Artbur Madison Shaw.

When Dr. John A. Rice's book, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-Day," first came out, while Dr. S. A. Steel was reading it be wrote, "I would sell my shirt to buy a book like this, and lie in bed to read it," wbich just praise led me to buy tbe book. If any book of recent date would justify such a sacrifice, "Papini's Life of Christ" is such a book. Not only was it the "best seller" among religious books in 1923, but it is doubtless the most engaging narrative that was ever written on this theme. I, however, was not forced to make the sacrifice, for my former genial presiding elder, W. L. Doss, loaned me tbe book; and altbougb I read it hurriedly, I read it twice. It may not be true, as is so often said of books, that it is "indispensable to preachers," but certainly any preacber or thoughtful layman wbo reads it will be greatly enricbed in mind and heart.

Of course, blemishes are easy to find, and many just criticisms can be made. A man who is even moderately free in judgment and critical in tbought will not accept, for instance, tbis statement: "He who accepts the four gospels must accept tbem wbolly, entire, syllable by syllable, or else reject them from the first to the last and say, 'We know nothing.'" The assertion that "tbe most famous New Testament authorities agree on only one tbing, tbat tbe church was able to select in tbe great mass of primitive literature the oldest gospels thougbt up to that time to be the most reliable. No more need be asked,"—is equally unacceptable. His claim that Jesus requires us to hate ourselves misrepresents the teaching of Christ; and the theory tbat money is essentially evil, and that Jesus would never even touch it, is an exaggeration, not to say a perversion, of the doctrine of tbe Son of Man. Yet, when it is remembered that be is a Roman Catbolic, this viewpoint will be allowed for. Literalism belongs to Rome.

On the other hand, the excellencies of tbe book are very many. Written in Italian, the translation makes a piece of English literature hardly excelled among our religious classics. Written by a man who until recently was an avowed atheist, it not only shows an earnest faitb and a penetrating spiritual interpretation of Christ, but it accepts the issues and implications of the Master's teachings with greater frankness than is shown by many theologians. Written by a Roman Catholic, it breathes an evangelical spirit that many Protestants might well covet. Disclaiming any scbolarly purpose, the author has the resources of scholarsbip at his command to an extraordinary degree.

Furtbermore, altbough the author writes from tbe standpoint of staunch traditionalism, many of his conclusions smack of modern criticism. For instance, in citing the saying of Jesus, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and tbere shall be no sign given to it but the sign of Jonab tbe propbet," he adopts the Lukan version as tbe correct one, and affirms that the application of tbe figure given in Mattbew—"For as Jonah was three days and tbree nights in the belly of the whale; so shall the Son of man be three days and tbree nights in the heart of the earth"—is a mistaken attempt on the part of the apostolic writer (not, mind you, on the part of copyist or commentator!) to explain a saying of Christ wbicb he bimself did not understand. Wbether this manner of disposing of that clause —which certainly cannot have been the utterance of Jesus—is correct or not, the author's explanation that "the sign of Jonah the prophet" has reference to the effectiveness of the prophet's message and the response of the Ninevites, is evidently correct, and is borne out by the context. (See Matt. 12:41.)

Another merit of this excellent book is, that, while tbe most transparent clarity and simplicity characterize the author's style, it also abounds in a pleasing rhetoric, moving eloquence and poetic imagination. This, from the scene of the trial before Pilate, is a good illustration: "His friends were not tbere, were hidden; all his people wished to pierce his flesh with nails, and only a foreigner, an idolator, defended his life . . . He loved, and it was fitting that he should be hated; he brought men back from death, and it was fitting that he should be killed: be wished to save others, and it was fitting that all men should wish to destroy him; he was innocent, and it was fitting that he should be sacrificed!" Could words contain more force or beauty?

But perhaps the highest merit of the book is the masterly analysis and synthesis of the Gospel materials; the orderly sequence in which event follows event in the author's construction of the Life; the logical groiping of the teachings, and the author's marvelous instinct for interpretation and application. Every scene in the Life, and every phrase in the teaching, is made to mean something. I know of but few more useful modern books that could be placed in the Christian's home than Papini's "Life of Christ."

IGNORANCE OF BIBLE FOUND IN SCHOOLS.

Startling revelations of ignorance of the Bible and misconception of Biblical teachings are contained in a survey of the Bible education of students in high schools and colleges in Missouri, issued Thursday by Prof. George R. Crissman, of the college.

The survey is the result of scientific tests for Bible knowledge, made with 100 students in the Warrensburg College, and with 1,800 high school students at Holden, Centerview, Odessa, Warrensburg, Jefferson City, and Sedalia. Different sets of examination questions were given the college students and those in high school, an endeavor having been made to prepare each on a basis suitable to knowledge that might reasonably be expected from students of different ages and degrees of training.

Here are some of the results as given in a report by Prof. Crissman:

"Sixteen per cent of the high school students neither knew where Christ was born nor the name of his mother. Sixty per cent knew not that Peter, James and John enjoyed the larger confidence of Jesus. Seventy per cent did not know wbat to call the Sermon on the Mount. Sixty per cent did not know what Christ said about loving one's neigbbor. Twelve per cent did not know tbe first clause of the Lord's Prayer. Sixty-five per cent did not know the Golden Rule. Thirty-five per cent tbought that the Book of John was located very close to Revelations. In the following quotation from Lowell's 'Irene,' 'No want of faith that chills with side-lone eye hath she; no jealousy, no "Levite pride" that passeth by upon the otber side,' 80 per cent did not know what story is bere referred to in the Bible.'

Tbe following are a few of the hundreds of humorous and pathetic examples of Biblical ignorance:

Forty per cent thought Paul "a book of the Bible."

Twelve per cent thought Pilate "a book of the Bible."

Twenty-five per cent tbought Pilate "an autbor of the Bible."

Twenty-five per cent thought James " a river."

Forty-five per cent thought Galilee " a river."

Seven per cent thought Agrippa "an apostle."

Thirty per cent thought Jude " a king."
Three per cent thought Herod "an apostle."
Six per cent thought Mark "a king."
Nine per cent thought Samaria "an author."
Twelve per cent thought Peter "a king.'
Nine per cent thought Peter "a priest."
Six per cent thought Revelations "a province."
Six per cent thought Caiphas "an apostle.'
Twelve per cent thought Ephesians "a province."
Six per cent thought Martha "a book of the Bible."
Twenty-four per cent thought Allelulia "a blesing."
Twelve per cent thought Allelulia "a loud noise."
Nine per cent thought amen "an applause."
Fifty per cent thought amen "a stop."
Thirty-three per cent thought centurion "a century."
Fifteen per cent thought centurion "the middle point."
Nine per cent thought elders "bushes."
Thirty per cent thought Gethsemane "a city of Egypt."
Twenty per cent thought immortality "death."
Nine per cent thought immortality "breath."
Twenty-five per cent thought resurreetion "the building of the temple."
Forty-five per cent thought Scriptures "quotations."
Eighteen per cent thought scribes "bad men."
Nine per cent thought tithes "things fastened together."
Twenty-five per cent thought tithes "missionary money."

"It is interesting to note," says Prof. Crissman, "that nine per cent of the students defined sin as 'debts.' Could it be posible," he asks, "that the churches which recite the Lord's Prayer using 'debts,' unwittingly teach this definition of sin?" Another discovery from the survey, which may shed a great deal of light upon illteracy and upon the halting of education in intermediate stages if subsequent investigation confirm it, is that there seems great reason for believing that a much larger percentage of the high school freshmen who have had regular Sunday school attendance continue through the high school than of those who have had but irregular Sunday school attendance or none at all. This was developed by a phase of the investigation which sought to explain the great difference in average scores made in the examination by freshmen and seniors in high school.

Some of the interesting results of the preliminary try-outs are the following: 1. Among the college students the facts thus far obtained show that on the basis of a grade of 100, the medium score for the men is 64, the medium score for freshmen in college is 55.7, for sophomores 65, for juniors 68, for seniors 69.5, for students who have little or no Sunday school attendance 52.5, for students with irregular Sunday school attendance 63, for students with regular attendance 70, for students having college credit in Bible 84.

In the high school the results are quite similar. It must be remembered that the results given here are based upon a wholly different set of tests from those given the college students. They are much easier and somewhat different in content. The medium score for freshmen is 56.7; the medium score for sophomores, 64.3; for juniors, 76.8; for seniors, 78.6. The medium score for those having no Sunday school attendance, 35; for those having irregular attendance for less than five years, 53; for those having irregular attendance for more than five years, 63; for those with regular attendance for less than five years, 68.2; and a regular attendance for more than five years, 83.7; for boys, 52.3; for girls, 70.5; for whites, 68.1; Negroes, 50.4

The tests were originated by Prof. Crissman and have been approved by the National Survey Committee of the General Educational Board of the Religious Educational Association of America and by the Research Committee of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education; and it is the aim of the originators so to show lack of Bible information among students that greatly improved Bible study courses will be stimulated throughout the country.

Material for the tests was determined upon by a careful analysis (1) of the contents of four of the most extensively used courses in Bible study published in this country; (2) an analysis of courses of study used in the International Sunday School lessons; (3) a collection of statements of the essential facts and principles of Christianity obtained from ten of the leading authorities representing the five largest Protestant churches, the Jewish church, and the Catholic church of America. This method of procedure, as well as the authorities themselves, were approved by the Research Committee of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education.

The following are some of the people who have been co-operating with Prof. Crissman in the preparation of these tests: Dean F. G. Kelley, recentiy of Kansas University; Dean Raymond A. Schwegler, of the University of Kansas; Dr. A. G. Capps, of the University of Missouri; Dr. George Melcher, assistant superintendent of Kansas City; Miss Pauline Humphreys, of the College; Dr. Hugh S. Magill, general secretary of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, and Dr. W. W. Charters, chairman of the Research Committee of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

MEETING OF SECRETARY-TREASURERS, MEMPHIS, TENN., JAN. 29 1924.

The annual meeting of the Educational Secretary-Treasurers was held in Memphis, Tenn., Tuesday, Jan. 29. The attendance was 100%. Careful consideration was given to the various phases of the work of the Christian Education Movement. The reports showed that between four and five million dollars have been collected to date, and about an equal amount is due and unpaid, a large part of which is the third payment which fell due Nov. 1, 1923. Many of the Secretary-Treasurers reported large sums of new money subscribed to the various institutions, amounting to about $5,000,000 to date. Special campaigns are being put on for several of our schools, and others are being planned. The movement has sown many fields with good seed which will bear large harvests for years to come.

All were agreed that the special period assigned to the movement for last year, namely, August to November, inclusive, was a very unfavorable time, since this is also the time of the meeting of the several Annual Conferences, and but little can be done on these special movements for a month before or after the Annual Conference. Accordingly, they selected the period from Nov. 1, 1924, to April 1, 1925, for a special intensive effort to collect the fourth payment and the balance due on previous payments. This will give the cause its first really good opportunity, and will bring, it is thought, large results.

The exhibit showed that substantial reduction had been made in the percentage of cost in carrying on the movement, which was very gratifying. Emphasis was placed on the work and importance of the local collectors as the key-men, and plans were suggested to help them become more efficient.

The district conferences were stressed as favorable opportunities to get our cause before the church leaders, and it was suggested that wherever practicable a special hour be arranged for the Christian Education Movement. All the organized and special agencies of the church were requested to continue their co-operation.

The note of optimism and hopefulness prevailed. We continue our task with "a faith that laughs at impossibilities and cries, IT SHALL BE DONE."

The meeting bagan on Sunday, Feb. 17, and will continue through the entire month of March. Services will be held at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. each day, except Monday, when no services whatever will be conducted. Visiting preachers can secure special tickets entitling them to platform seats.

Whosoever is really earnest for divine direction, more anxious to know what the Lord would have him do than to know what is for his own present ease or worldly interest, and who confides the case to Him who giveth wisdom liberally, and upraideth not, may count on it very confidently that the Lord will send forth his light.—James Hamilton.

THE BEST EVANGELISTIC HELP

Any evangelist whose work is born of the Spirit, who does Holy Ghost preaching in a Teaching way.

What will be expected of sinners after conversion should be visioned in the preaching that saves them. Then they will build churches, support pastors, and do everything they were taught. People are easily led when shown a vision. Weak stations become strong, communities and towns become half and whole stations. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Spasmodic revivals are temporary. Deep spiritual constructive revivals are permanent. I have described the most valuable class of help for pastors and churches. Untrammeled, I will give this class of services anywhere. Also I would guarantee to teach young preachers, itinerant or local, how to do revival work successfully. Write for my pamphlet free.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

When the Roll is Called in St. Louis

Bishop John M. Moore writes: "Inclosed find check for $1,000 from Mr. Royal A. Ferris, a citizen of Dallas. For many years he was the President of the American Exchange National Bank and later became chairman of its board of directors. He is the grandson of a Methodist preacher. His wife is the daughter of the late Charles E. Brown, of the Central Texas Conference. He is greatly interested in the Superannuate Endowment Fund and shows his interest by making this gift, which is in honor of Brother Brown, whose memory he cherishes."

'Way Down South in the Land of Cotton.—Rev. R. J. Blunt, pastor at Portageville, Mo., sends the pink leaf report from his charge, showing that his people have agreed to raise $1,129 for Superannuate Endowment in five years, and writes concerning the plan for raising it, as follows: "Mr. H. W. Smith, who is the President of our Special Effort Committee, has volunteered the use of a piece of land which he has been renting for $75 per year. We are to have it free of rent. It is to be planted in cotton and cultivated for the Superannuate Endowment Fund until the total amount is paid. I feel that we are assured of raising the full amount, and that we will do it in less than five years."

A Lively Baby Station.—The pink leaf report of Dill charge, Mangum District, West Oklahoma Conference, is before me. The pastor is Rev. J. B. McCombs. He not only sent us the pink but also the gold. For his letter contains a check paying the total amount due on his charge's quota for the first year. This is a brand-new station, and it is running full steam ahead, as evidenced in their paying the pastor and presiding elder in advance up to February 1, 1924. This is the first charge of the West Oklahoma Conference to pay its first year's quota on Superannuate Endowment in full.

This Boy Couldn't Possibly Wait.—One of our St. Louis Conference preachers, Rev. E. F. McDaniel, is now pastor of the Henderson charge in Tennessee. He was so eager to get started on the Special Effort that he could not wait for his presiding elder to come around and head up the organization. He writes: "My first quarterly conference has not been held. When it is held, we will announce that everything concerning the organization of the Special Effort has been attended to, committee appointed, quota fixed upon, and the amount due on the quota for the first year ($400) paid in cash. We will send you the pink leaf report just as soon as the quarterly conference is held. Please send me that crazy negro story."

Fine, Mac! The St. Louis boys are proud of you. Of course you shall have the "crazy negro story," and I will send it to any other pastor desiring it who pays in full the amount due the first year on his quota.

Some Samples of Special Effortitis.—A letter from Dr. C. M. Hawkins, pastor of First Methodist Church, Muskogee, Okla., reveals the fact that said charge increased its minimum quota $800, making the total amount $5,000 that the charge will raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment.

The pink leaf report from Rev. J. O. Grogan, pastor of Tallahassee charge, Florida Conference, shows that the first quarterly conference added $878 to its minimum quota, making the total amount $5,000 that the charge will raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment.

The pink leaf report from Rev. H. H. Humble, paster of Hay Street Church, Fayetteville, North Carolina Conference, shows that the first quarterly conference added $1,068 to its minimum quota, making the total amount $5,000 that this charge will raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment.

Korea! Korea! Korea! All Hail!—One of the most thrilling letters out of hundreds that stir my blood is one from Rev. J. L. Gerdine, presiding elder of the Songdo District, Korea Conference. He writes that this foreign Annual Conference voluntarily accepted 20,000 yen ($10,000) as its quota to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment. This was done notwithstanding the great strain the Conference is under at the present time to reach a point of self-support and no longer be dependent upon subsidies from the Board of Missions.

Bishop H. A. Boaz personally subscribed one-eighth of the Korea Conference quota for Superannuate Endowment and secured a like subscription from the great layman, Mr. T. H. Yun. Other individual subscriptions were secured and a special assessment on the Conference added, and there was still lacking nearly one-third of the quota to be provided for. Then came a preacher's institute at Seoul, and about half of the preachers of the Korea Conference in attendance upon that institute unanimously and enthusiastically pledge each one-twetieth of his salary for the next five years on the Conference quota, thus making the 20,000 yen fully subscribed.

I do not know what could be written on this page more powerful than this in its urge to faithful service in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. If those preachers beyond the sea who are working in foreign mission territory can do such a thing as stated above, those of us in the Conference of the States should be moved to greater and more faithful work for the cause than we have as yet decided upon.

THE CURIOUS CASE OF BETSY BURR.

The curious case of Betsy Burr
Is known throughout the city,
And other girls all speak of her
With mingled praise and pity.

You see, it seems to be the height
Of her daily wishes
To lend a hand at morn and night
When mother washes dishes.

Before she starts away to school—
So well does her mother trust her—
It is her fast, unfailing rule
To use the broom and duster.

And in her little room upstairs,
Her ribbons, shoes, and laces,
And all the things that Betsy wears,
Are always in their places.

You must agree that Betsy Burr
Is not a common maiden;
Yet every day that comes to her
With happiness is laden.

OBEDIENT JACK.

Jack was a big Scotch collie who was very fond of children; and when his mistress, Jamie and Janet's mother, found that he could be trusted to go with her boy and girl to school every day, she was very glad, for father had to go to his office so early that he could not go with them.

When the three, Jamie, Janet, and Jack, returned from school at noon (for Jack always went for them at twelve o'clock), mother would give Jack his dinner as soon as they arrived, and then she would pat him on the head and say: "Good old dog!" Jack would wag his tail and give a pleased bark.

The teacher knew Jack's bark; and if the children were kept in and he did not see them with the others, he would go around to the windows where they sat and bark, and she would say: "A little late to-day, Jack. Be patient." He never came until school was out, although I think he would have enjoyed coming at recess and romping with the scholars.

When the town clock struck twelve, mother would say, "Go to school, Jack," and off he would run.

One day mother was talking to a friend in the sitting-room, and she was telling the friend what a good dog Jack was, and she said, "I just say, 'Go to school, Jack,' and off he goes."

Now, the friend was a little deaf, so she had to repeat it several times; but she did not notice that Jack was outside wagging his tail. After her friend had gone mother went into the kitchen to make a pie. Passing through the hall, she saw that it was only eleven o'clock, so she knew she had plenty of time. She was just putting the pie in the oven when she heard children's voices, and there at the gate stood Jamie and Janet and Jack.

"Why, children!" mother exclaimed. "What are you doing home? It is only half-past eleven."

"Oh, mother," they answered in the same breath, "Jack came and barked under the window, and Miss Morse said we might go home!"

"Where was Miss Jenkins, your regular teacher?"

"She is sick," said the children, "and we told Miss Morse that you always sent Jack when it was time for us to go home."

"Well, well!" said the mother. "But what made Jack go for you? I did not send him."

Here Jack looked up at her so wistfully that she had not the heart to speak sternly to him.

Then suddenly as she stood there looking at the trio, who were as much surprised as herself, mother remembered her deaf friend and how she had told her about Jack and had had to repeat it.

"It's all right, children," she said, laughing. "Mrs. Burke was here, and I told her how I sent Jack to school for you, and I had to say it so loud that Jack must have heard me say, 'I just say, "Go to school, Jack,"' and thought I was talking to him, for he was evidently out on the porch."—Exchange.

AN OLD-TIME NURSERY RHYME.

In the interesting History of the Catnach Press, a literary venture that lasted in London from 1769 to 1841, there is an account of "the tragical death of an apple pie." Most boys and girls know the first part; many were brought up on "A was an Apple Pie, B bit it, C cut it," and so on down to "XYZ and &, who all longed for a piece in hand." But, says a writer in Boys and Girls, how many know the curious discourse that passed between the twenty-five letters at dinner time?

Says A, Give me A good large slice.
Says B, A little Bit, but nice.
Says C, Cut me a piece of Crust.
Take it, says D, 'tis Dry as Dust.
Says E, I'll Eat it fast, who will?
Says F, I vow I'll have my Fill.
Says G, Give it me both Good and Great.
Says H, A little bit I Hate.
Says I, I love the juice the best.
And K the very same Confess'd.
Says L, There's nothing more I Love.
Says M, It Makes your teeth to Move.
N Noticed what the others said.
O Others' plates with grief survey'd.
P Praised the cook up to the life.
Q Quarreled because he had a bad knife.
Says R, It Runs short, I'm afraid.
S Silent Sat and nothing Said.
T Thought that Talking might lose Time.
U Understood it at meals a crime.
W Wished there had been a quince in.
Says X, Those cooks there's no convincing.
Says Y, I'll eat, let others wish.
Z sat as mute as any fiish.

CLEVERNESS OF A SHEEP DOG.

Some years ago there was a terrific storm in Scotland. The snow lay in great drifts many feet deep.

The farmers were very anxious about their sheep, for there were hundreds of them unsheltered on the hills at the time. In one farm no fewer than three hundred were missing, and the farmer, with his men and faithful dog, Rough, started to search for them.

When they reached the fields, nothing was to be seen but great masses and drifts of snow, many feet thick, under which the sheep were buried. The men tried to get through the snow to the animals, but it was next to impossible, for they could hardly tell when they came across a sheep.

The snow was still falling fast when Rough came to the rescue. He understood what was to be done, and, running over the snow, with quick, short barks, he dug with his paws little holes in various places.

The men went to work under these marks, and under each they found a sheep. Thus they worked hard all night, Rough showing the men where the sheep were buried, and the men digging them out. Most of the sheep were saved.

The farmer was very thankful to his clever dog.—Little Folks.

A CLEVER FOX.

Here is a fox story as related by a contributor to the Youth's Companion. A certain family in Colorado caught a young fox which they kept chained to a kennel. They fed the little fellow a great deal of bread. Presently they began to miss their chickens. They thought first of the young fox, but it did not seem likely that he could get at them, chained as he was. Nevertheless several members of the family concealed themselves and watched. They saw the fox take his bread to the end of the chain, then walk back a few steps and drop it on the ground. After that he retired to his kennel and lay down.

Sooner or later the chickens saw the bread and gathered for a feast. At the right moment the fox sprang among them and had a chicken for dinner. The moral, says the writer, is plain: all of us like variety in our diet.—Selected.

"There is not such a great difference between grace and glory, after all. Grace is glory begun; and glory is grace perfected. It will not come hard to people who are serving God down here to do it when they go up yonder. They will not change employments."—D. L. Moody.

A note from Rev. E. L. Cargill, our pastor at Boyce, La., gives the sad news of the death of Mrs. W. F. Texada, the funeral taking place on Feb. 11. It will be recalled that Brother W. F. Texada died on Jan. 17. The family and the community are in great sorrow by reason of this double bereavement. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing ones.

Among the presiding elders from whose districts every pastoral charge has sent in the "pink leaf" reports concerning the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, we note the name of Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississipppi Conference. Of course the first round of quarterly conferences has not yet been completed in all the districts.

The largest distribution of the Scriptures ever made in the history of this country in a single year is reported by the American Bible Society for 1923. More than 2,395,000 copies in over 100 languages and dialects mark this high record. All these volumes were actually circulated in the United States, and do not include books manufactured but not yet put into circulation.

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, our pastor at Arcadia, La., requests us to announce that Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will preach the opening sermon in the new church on Sunday morning, March 16. Former pastors and neighboring pastors are invited to be present on that occasion. The editor of the Advocate greatly appreciates a cordial invitation to be present and preach at the evening hour.

The addition to the Epworth Church, New Orleans, enterprised by the newly-organized Men's Club, is nearing completion. It is being built by volunteer labor. One of the daily newspapers of the city made a feature story of this undertaking one day last week. The building of the annex will not interfere with the plans for the erection of a new church, funds for which are being raised.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McFarlin, of San Antonio, Tex., have given $325,000 to Southern Methodist University for the erection of an auditorium on the campus as a memorial to their parents. The auditorium will seat 3,500 persons, and it will be completely equipped and furnished by the donors, inciuding a pipe organ to cost approximateiy $25,000. This is the largest single gift ever received by the University.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, our pastor at Como, Miss., quietly went among his people presenting the Special Effort for Superannuates and asking for contributions. As a result, he secured the first year's quota in full, and the money is already in the hands of the Board of Financc. Wc beartily congratulate Brotber McCorkle and his fine people. Where there is a will, there is a way to secure all thc money needed for this sacred cause—and Brotber McCorkle has hit upon a fine way.

The Big Brothers' Ciass of Greenville, Miss., is offering prizes for the best answcrs from its members to tbc foliowing questions: "By wbat method can we increase attendance, and hold it, of old members?" The prizcs are, in the order of tbe questions: A pair of gold cuff links; a leather bill foid; a siik tie; a pocket-knifc.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conferencne, reports that aii the preachers of the district are busily at work in their appointed places. Bad weather, and, in some cases, sickness, bave interfered somewhat with tbe work, but the outlook is encouraging. Some gracious meetings have been held, pastors' salaries have been advanced in some places, and a few chargcs have assumed more than the minimum quota for Superannuate Endowment, one church agreeing to pay the full amount the first year.

We announce with deep sorrow the death of Rev. A. W. Bardin, of this city, early on Tuesday morning of this week. Brother Bardin was a local preacber of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding membership in the Felicity Methodist Church. He was a patient student of the Word of God, a faithful Christian man, and an active worker for tbe establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth. Although a great sufferer in his last days, he was patient and submissive. He leaves to his loved ones the heritage of a spotless life and a noble character. His faithful and devoted wife preceded him to the better land by a few weeks. The Advocate extends to his devoted family and loved ones sincere sympathy in their sorrow.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of New Albany, Miss., gives us this sad news: "Our good pastor, Rev. J. D. Wroten, and Sister Wroten are in great sorrow. Little Carroll Edward, their fourteen-months-old babe, was taken seriously ill on Wednesday afternoon and died Friday morning. Colitis, with congestion and pneumonia, proved fatal. Everything possible was done to save the fine baby, but without avail. The good people of New Albany have shown every kindness and given every expression of sympathy for their pastor and family, whom they love so much. This is the first great sorrow that has come to their home, and while with beautiful spirit they yield to the will of Him who knows, yet they are almost overcome with their grief. May the dear Father be ever near to them in this great sorrow." We tcnder our deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents in their sore bereavement.

MEETING OF THE SOUTHERN METHODIST ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES.

The meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities was held in the Chisca Hotel, Jan. 30 to Feb. 1. There were about eighty representatives of schools and Conference boards. The meeting was presided over by Dr. John H. Reynolds, President of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark. The general theme of discussion for the three days was Christian Education in our schools. Every phase of college life was discussed from the standpoint of the Christian element in the life of the young people. A deep spirit of reverent, earnest spirituality was dominant from the first session to the last. The one thing that stood out above everything else was the earnest desire and purpose of these collego men to find and be able to give to the young people entrusted to them the very best spiritual cuiture and training in Christian character. They are manifestly interested in everything that touches their life in the class room, curriculum, on the athletic field, in the dormitory, in the chapel, and in the local church.

Representatives from our two great universities, presidents of our colleges, heads of the Departments of Religious Education of our schools, and a few representatives of Boards of Education were on the program. Each one made a definite contribution toward the solution of this great problem. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University School of Religion, made a profound impression on the entire conference. No one could see the earnest faces of these men and hear their pleas for a more thorough Christianizing of all life, using the educational institutions and processes to the fullest extent, and see the dedication of their lives to this supreme task, and go away feeling other than that the youth of our church are in safe hands, and that the foundations of Methodism are being builded safe and strong. The forcible expression of Dr. Richardson, which re-echoed throughout the conference, that we must find a way in every process and in every place to give full expression to the old, fundamental and profound experiences of spiritual Christianity, found a hearty amen in the hearts of this body of intellectual and consecrated men. This was the most far-reaching and most successful conference that has been held, because it dealt with the most vital objective of school life.

Dr. Snyder, President of Wofford College, was elected president for the new year. Dr. Countiss, President of Grenada College, Mississippi, was elected vice president, and Mr. Hogan was elected secretary-treasurer. The sudden and untimely death of Dr. Paul Linn, one of the most active men in the Association, and one of the strongest men of the church, has brought a great sorrow to our church. His genial manner, his intense earnestness and spirituality impressed every one with the greatness of the man.

The meeting of the Association of Church Colleges of the South, constituted of the representatives of the Presbyterian, the Baptist, and the Methodist churches of the South, on Thursday afternoon and evening, was, in the language of Dr. Robert L. Kelly, General Secretary of the Church Boards of Education, the most significant event in the history of denominational education in the South. He said he had not witnessed anything like it before. The general survey given by Dr. Kelly and the survey given by the General Secretary of each church, revealed an era of unprecedented prosperity, and that Christian Education as sponsored by the churches is entering the widest phase of usefulness and service. It is deeply impressing the public mind as it makes its distinct contribution to the building of the Kingdom in the society of to-day.

The tremendous success of the present day movements, the growing interest in distinctively Christian education is heartening to the whole church.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A strong conviction is growing in the minds of serious people that Christian Education is the outstanding need of the hour.

Our great church has led out in a program of religious education which will bless our country for generations to come.

The voice of the preacher has been heard like the prophets of old, telling of the new day that is at hand, as the nation undergirds herself with "the fear of the Lord as the beginning of wisdom."

It is a compelling motive that has moved the church to an organized effort to save the present generation from falling into blatant materialism. To give a fresh interpretation of the signs of promise to the people, will ever be the supreme task of the man of God.

We stand in need of a leader like Moses, who can impress his day and generation and then set things in motion for the ages to come.

To arouse the conscience of the church to the full meaning and significance of the Christian Education Movement, is no small task.

Our Louisiana Conference Board of Education has been taking care of the insurance and the bonded indebtedness on Mansfield College. We always retire one bond a year; sometimes we are able to retire two, and in this way save interest.

Our immediate objective for Mansfield is to retire these debts and begin on the new building. This can be easily done. A good strong pull and a pull all together, will move us up a notch or two in the direction of complete success. The Greater Mansfield Female College is a thing of reality. Help us achieve it.

Information has reached us that the town of Biloxi, Miss., wishes to lay hands on thirty-one acres of ground belonging to the Seashore Campground School and use it for park purposes. They claim it is next to a Naval Reserve and will be the back portion of the grounds. In the name of the faithful brethren of Louisiana, who held this ground for the Methodist Church through thick and thin, we wish to protest. The church, through having no money to fight the case, will more than likely sit down and do nothing. We ought to have a great school on the Camp Grounds as a feeder to other colleges. This ought always to be a great center for religious activity of every kind. Louisiana wishes to hold on to her one-third interest.

Let every effort be made by our collectors to get in hand the unpaid educational pledges. We want to be up to date with these payments. Pay out in full if you possibly can. The ever-ready call of our colleges urge us on. The challenge comes. It is our outstanding opportunity. Pay it all.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

ROMAN AMBASSADORS PREDOMINATE IN WASHINGTON.

Great Britain has established an uncommonly interesting precedent by appointing to Washington a Roman Catholic as her ambassador. That England, after the appointment of Protestants to this country during the entire history of the United States, has broken that custom caused much comment in the National Capital. Inasmuch as it was the English Protestants who founded this country, it was but natural that England should have observed the fundamental religious characteristic of Americanism.

The Right Honorable Sir Esmo William Howard is the newly appointed ambassador. He has spent most of his life in diplomatic service and held posts in various countries, his first appointments being in Ireland and Italy. In 1898, he married the daughter of Prince Giustiniani-Bandini.

This recent appointment has brought up the question of the religious affiliations of the diplomatic agents of various governments to the United States. How fundamentally these affiliations affect men's acts was proved when the Pilgrims crossed the Atlantic, with all the attending hardships, for the sake of religious freedom. We congratulate the Roman Catholic Church upon its success in weaving its political designs in so able a manner in and about the Capital of the United States. Only an ably executed plan could have mustered such forces from without and within. To-day, with but two exceptions, all the foreign ambassadors at Washington are adherents of the Church of Rome. The two exceptions are Germany with a Lutheran ambassador, and Japan. The Roman Catholic ambassadors include M. Jusserand of France, the dean of the diplomatic corps, and the representatives from Italy, Belgium, Spain, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, and Peru. These countries are mostly representative of the Latin civilization. Mexico at present has no ambassador in this country.

Among the ministers to this country, there are more exceptions, although the Roman Catholics predominate. Bulgaria has a Baptist representative; Norway and Sweden, Lutheran; Switzerland, a Calvinist; and a number of countries have Greek Orthodox. A few countries, also, are represented by adherents of the Eastern religions.

Great Britain's ambassador is said to have been appointed hurriedly by a retiring ministry, and may not be so heartily approved by the new labor ministry which has just been formed. Perhaps this break of a century-long custom was made in order to have in Washington a British diplomat bound to be persona grata to the influential Irish Catholic element in the United States.—The National Methodist Press.

There is a large room for reformation among church users in the matter of taking people down the aisles while the Bible lesson is being read, while the ritual is being executed. Our congregations might get some points from other sorts of assemblages, which take care that the program shall not be disturbed by late arrivals. It would be an easy matter for ushers to hold the late comers about the door until ap opportune moment comes to take them down to seats. It would add much to the dignity of the service and to the impressiveness of the hour.—Methodist Advocate.

And then when I reflect that some of these poor people would have been nobler ladies and gentlemen than all but two or three I know if they had only had the opportunity, there is a reaction toward the poor, something like a feeling of favor because they have not had fair play. —George MacDonald.

MARY ADLINE DICKINSON, daughter of John and Mary Ann Dickinson, was born in Marion County, Ala., July 16, 1845, died at her home near Golden, Miss., Jan. 19, 1924, and was buried the following day at the Ridge Cemetery. She was married on Dec. 13, 1866, to William Flutcher Bostick, and afterwards, with her husband, moved to Tishomingo County Miss., where she spent the remainder of her life. Ten children were born to this union, all of whom, with the exception of one daughter, still survive her. Mrs. Bostick is survived by her husband, W. F. Bostick, and six children: J. F. Bostick, W. A. Bostick, and Birk Bostick, Dennis, Miss.; Dr. A. E. Bostick, Delphus Bostick, and Mrs. W. F. Epps, Golden, Miss.; D. F. Bostick, Shawnee, Okla.; Mrs. J. W. Gurley, Dorsey, Miss., and Mrs. C. A. Northington, Crenshaw, Miss. Sister Bostick had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for thiry-five or forty years. She was a quiet, unassuming lady, but her faith was firm and sure. She knew in whom she had believed, and her faith was without wavering. The close of life has come and the wife, mother, friend, and devont Christian has gone to her reward and is waiting to welcome her loved ones when they reach the other side.

C. WESLEY BALEY, Pastor.

MRS. CLARA LAVINIA MILLSAPS JOHNSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuhen Millsaps, was born in Copiah County, Miss., April 6, 1853. She was the youngest child of a notable family. Two brothers were ministers, Revs. W. G. Millsaps and J. J. Millsaps, the latter a chaplain in the Civil War. Major R. W. Millsaps was another brother. Other members of the family were Frank Millsaps, Mrs. Joe Buie, and Mrs. Rebecca L. Bowen.

Mrs. Johnson was very young when her parents died, and during her childhood lived with her brother, Rev. W. G. Millsaps. She gave her heart to God in her tender years, joining the Methodist church when six years of age. She was always an active member of her church and a consecrated Christian. On Dec. 25, 1873, she was married to L. B. Johnson, near Union Church, Miss. Last Christmas marked the fiftieth anniversary of this marriage. What a benediction it was to be with this couple who were so happy in the Lord! Mrs. Johnson is survived by her husband, L. B. Johnson, and the following children: C. W. Johnson, now of Waterproof, La.; Mrs. T. M. Dye, of Clarksdale. Miss.; Mrs. L. O. Rucker, Memphis, Tenn.; Bradford Johnson, McComb City. Miss., and Millsaps Johnson, of Harriston, Miss. She died of influenza, Feb. 7, 1924. On the following day a large crowd of relatives, neighbors, and friends gathered at the Harriston Methodist church. The pastor was assisted by Rev. J. L. Smith in the last sad rites. Interment was made in the cemetery at Fayette, Miss. Floral offerings covered the new-made mound, and all that loving hands could do was done. We know where to find Mrs. Johnson. All her days she served her Master. Her children rise to call her blessed. One who delights to make glad the hearts of his own has prepared a heavenly home for her.

B. M. HUNT, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Shaw, Miss.—

Your Committee on Resolutions beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas, our gracious Heavenly Father has seen fit again to enter our ranks and bear home one of our older and loved members, in the personage of MRS. E. E. MONTGOMERY;

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we lift our hearts unto him in grateful thanksgiving for his loving guidance and tender watch-care during her life and her walk through the valley. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

2. That the Auxiliary and the Methodist church have lost a loyal supporter, and we, a beloved friend. After a well spent and beautiful life, she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus.

3. That our tender love and deepest sympathy are herewith extended to her devoted daughter, Mrs. G. W. Faison, and all sorrowing relatives.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be kept on our records, published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Cleveland Enterprise, and also a copy to be sent to the family.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. H. S. Hanks, Mrs. M. L. Peacock, Mrs. T. J. Burke.

ENDURING.

Usually, at the commencement of our Christian discipleship, there is an ardor and a glow and a passion in our souls that make obedience a delight. But when that early glow cools down, then comes the tug of war, for then we begin to realize that being Christ's soldier means enduring hardness, and in contrast with our experience of hardship and self-denial ease and comfort appear singularly alluring. When the narrow way is rough and steep the broad way seems the more attractive by contrast. That is why Christ laid such stress not upon starting but upon enduring.—J. D. Jones.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nauseless calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

Why Are Drugs Standardized?

They are standardized in order to bring about uniform therapeutic efficiency to the patient whenever required. This efficiency is most needed in the sick room—not merely in the laboratory.

What is true of drugs must be true of foods. Purity and efficiency in the can is only part of the problem—purity and efficiency in the kitchen is the true test.

The law requires that baking power contain 12% leavening gas at the time of sale to the consumer. This measure insures uniform leavening efficiency and protects the health of the public.

In order to comply with this fixed standard for baking powder, manufacturers must produce and pack their product so as to avoid the deterioration which may result from absorption of atmospheric moisture.

Baking Powder manufacturers to avoid violation of the law, also spend thousands of dollars yearly in testing grocers' stocks and removing "spent" goods from his shelves, in spite of the fact that every possible precaution had previously been taken against deterioration.

With the exception of Texas, the pure food laws are not applied to baking powder mixed with flour at the mill and sold in bags as "Self Rising Flour." There is no penalty on the manufacturers if this fails to "self rise"—the consumer is the "goat"—he is the one that pays the penalty through indigestion and ill health that comes from eating bakings that are not properly raised. The standardization of baking powder is a protection to both the consumer and the manufacturer—who welcomes such laws and co-operates in every way possible. But!

Not so with the self rising flour manufacturer—he resents such laws and fights such legislation. Why? Because a standardization of self rising flour would require moisture-proof containers instead of cheap sacks—because low grade "clears" could no longer be sold as "fancy patent flour." It would also mean he must maintain expert chemical control such as is now maintained by baking powder manufacturers.

Calumet Baking Powder contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the U.S. Food Authorities.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Miss Virginia Thomas, graduate of Grenada College and student of Northwestern University, who has been employed by the Sunday School Board as assistant to the Conference Superintendent and Conference Elementary Superintendent, will have her office at Grenada for the present. Miss Virginia offers youthful enthusiasm, a well trained mind, and a Spirit-filled heart to the mothers and teachers of little children in our Conference. Write to her and tell her you are glad to have her help.

A Leadership Training School is being conducted for the benefit of the workers in our two churches at Columbus. The enrollment is fifty. "The Pupil' is taught by Mrs. J. B. Randolph; "Principles of Religious Teaching" by Miss Virginia Thomas, and "The School," by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. The two pastors, the two superintendents, and other leading men are students in these classes. One of the superintendents stated publicly that he was thoroughly convinced that a teacher must have as much or more training to teach the child religion as the teacher who teaches that same child how to read and write.

Revs. A. T. McIlwain, E. S. Lewis, Del Longgrear, J. S. Billups, and Clinton Van Pelt are planning to have a standard school for the benefit of the workers in the Columbus District, June 22-28, at Columbus. God is depending upon the preachers and laymen to establish his kingdom. His kingdom will not come ahead of the leaders in his church.

The first book in the course of study one should take is "Organization and Administration," by Cunninggim and North. Price of the book, 80 cents. This book deals with principles rather than programs. After the principles are mastered, one can supervise any type of school. We are working to the end that we may have 100 pastors and 200 superintendents either study or read this book during the year 1924.

LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

"District Night" at the Homer Conference promises to be one of the most interesting and educational features of our State-wide meeting.

Mr. W. M. Kent, superintendent of the Louisiana and Northwest Railroad Company, writes: "To accommodate the delegates who may arrive at Gibsland on either the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific trains 9 or 6, we will operate a train leaving Gibsland at 10:30 a. m., arriving at Homer at 11:30 a.m.

At each of the District Council meetings great interest has been shown in making the Sunday school district meetings of 1924 worth while. Most of the district meetings in 1923 were an improvement on 1922, and were held in connection with the regular district conference. Wherever the district conference holds over on Sunday, this day has been turned over by the presiding elder to the Sunday school cause.

In the New Orleans District, Sunday, April 27, at Homer, La., will be Sunday School Rally Day.

Most of the district council meetings are accepting their portion of the Conference Sunday school goals for 1924.

One of the district workers writes: "The district visitation begins next Sunday, when we go to Oil City for a 3 o'clock meeting with all the churches of the northern section. * * * The following Sunday afternoon we go to Pelican for a meeting with several schools down there."

It was the pleasure of the writer to visit Arcadia last Sunday, and while there saw their new church, which will be completed soon. The pastor, Brother Ledbetter, has kept in mind the Sunday school interest in building this beautiful church.

The Sunday school superintendent at Jonesboro, Mr. E. L. Walker, writes: "I am no longer superintendent of the Sunday school at Jonesboro, having moved to Ruston January last. Mr. I. C. Strickland is now the superintendent there, and a mighty good one, too."

Miss Ella Hooper, the head deaconess at the Houma Wesley House, and member of our Conference Sunday School Board, in reference to the Homer conference, writes: "I should be glad to attend and think I can arrange my schedule."

Rev. W. W. Drake, Conference Superintendent of Missionary and Education Extension, will be at our Homer Conference, and will look after this department of our work. Concerning our missionary plans for our Conference, the Central Office writes: "I feel confident that if you follow the plans that you have laid down, worth-while results will come from your efforts in firmly entrenching missionary education in the Sunday school."

Let each Sunday school superintendent keep in mind that the Sunday School Day programs are now published. They can be bought at 30 cents per dozen, or $2 per hundred.

Rev. K. M. McLelian, the wide-awake pastor at Barham, writes: "I am glad you can be with us on Sunday, 17th. We shall look forward to that time, and have everything in readiness for your coming."

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

BAY SPRINGS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines to let you know that we are on the job at Bay Springs. We arrived here on Friday, Nov. 23; found a number of ladies at the parsonage who had prepared a sumptuous dinner for us. After being here only a few days Rev. Jas. V. Bennett knocked at our door, came in and told me he was en route to Sylvarena to hold a meeting, and, too, told me Sylvarena is a thickly settled community with a large consolidated school, but no Methodist church, and is situated on no man's land, as it was on the dividing line between Bay Springs and Raleigh charges. So there was nothing for me to do but let him pass. He was there about two weeks. I had the privilege of preaching for him part of the time. As a result of this meeting, a church was organized with 34 members, and since the meeting a Sunday school and W. M. S. were organized and several more members added to the church. We hope to build there this year, as we feel that we have there a great opportunity.

In January, Brother Bennett was with us in a two-weeks meeting here at Bay Springs. We are told by some of the older citizens that Bay Springs has never had such a revival. As a result of this meeting, a Business Men's prayer meeting was organized which meets Wednesday p. m.; two women's prayer meetings that meet weekly, and one Sunday school and weekly prayer meeting attendance increased many fold, and 25 names added to the church roll. There have been 72 names added to our church rolls this year, 38 by baptism or vows. Eternity only will reveal the good accompliished by Brother Bennett on Bay Springs charge. This year the Lord is wonderfully using him. We are hoping and praying for a great year along all lines. Our presiding elder is awake and on the job. Come to see us. Cordially yours,

PAUL H. GRICE.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT OPENS ITS NORMAL SCHOOL TO CHRISTIAN TEACHERS.

The Chinese Government now permits Christian teachers to hold Bible classes in its government school for teacher training. This is an innovation and another open door for the missionary. Writing under date of Nov. 28, Mr. Peter Shih, now teaching in Soochow University, Soochow, calls attention to the importance of this work:

"I want to call your attention to the significance of these Bible classes at the government institution of teacher training. Years ago we were not allowed to go in there to conduct any sort of meeting. A few years ago they let us in, but not to talk on the religion of Christ. His name was not supposed to he mentioned. There was not even one Christian in that school. But this year for the first time they open wide their gates and welcome us into their midst to conduct voluntary Bible classes for their students in their own class rooms. Christian songs are being sung in their auditorium, where only last year the worship of Confucius alone was tolerated. There are a few Christians among them now. Only two weeks ago I heard that one of the students wanted to join our church at Hongkong.

"I am taking Jesus the Master Teacher. All the boys in my class, numbering about fifteen, seem to enjoy the Bible immensely. Pray for us, that we, all of us, live Christly lives among our non-Christian people. Pray that this work we are doing may be done to his glory and honor and that his church may be made a reality in China as it should be everywhere."

If you have so much business to attend to that you have no time to pray, depend upon it you have more business on hand that God ever intended you should have.—D. L. Moody.

TRUE.

If there is to be increasingly a better feeling between the races, the basis for it must be laid in the education of the children of both races. Speaking particularly for the negro, the time has come when more caution should be used by parents and older people generally about loading up their children's minds with all the doubts, fears, suspicions, prejudices, and dislikes of former generations So, too, the habit of bringing home daily the bitter racial discussion in the presence of children who little understand, yet take in the difficulties so current, should be discontinued. The height of parental ambition should be that the negro child grow up healthy in body and mind both as concerns himself and his fellow man. —Indianapolis Freeman.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

IMPORTANT SUMMER CONFERENCE AT VASSAR COLLEGE.

One of the important features of the meeting of the Federation of Women's Foreign Mission Boards of North America, held in New York City early in January, was the discussion of plans for a world federation of Christian women. In this connection, Mrs. John W. Blodgett, trustee of Vassar College, made the announcement for the college at the meeting that during the ten days, June 14-23, 1924, an institute of International Relations on Christian Basis would be held on the campus of Vassar College under the joint auspices of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of Women for Home Missions of all evangelical denominations, the National Y. W. C. A., the American Federation of University Women, the Student Volunteer Movement, and Vassar College.

The attendance will be limited to one thousand, and the entire plant of the college will be available for the purpose of the assembly. It is expected that women from all over the United States, representing all faiths and denominations, will be in attendance. No limitation of any kind will be placed upon registration up to the time when accommodations are filled.

The purpose of this institute, as announced by Vassar College, will be to study the practicability of the application of Christian ideals to changing national and international aims and conditions, and to initiate research into the problem of readjustment of present agencies under Christian auspices in the light of this realignment of ideals in world service.

It is expected that the program of the sessions will be made public shortly after March 1. The central committee, responsible for drafting the program and issuing invitations to speakers, is composed of members of Vassar College, Board of Trustees, faculty, and alumnae, members of the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America, and the Council of Women for Home Missions, National Board of Y. W. C. A., and the Student Volunteer Movement, with one from the World Alliance for International Friendship and other kindred Christian organizations, with an advisory committee from the women's colleges which have been invited to appoint members.

President MacCracken, of Vassar, in a statement regarding the meeting in June, said: "Diplomacy and statecraft have thus far failed to give us a basis of enduring peace acceptable to the world. It remains for religion and education to attempt the task of creating throughout the world a public opinion and a fervent faith consecrated to the development of a just and lasting peace. The World Conference on Education at San Francisco last summer, at which hundreds of school teachers from all over the world considered the problem from the point of view of education, is now to be followed by the Vassar Conference, at which women of all denominations will consider the problem from the point of view of religious duty. Out of such Conferences, there ought to grow a program for the future to build upon."

REQUESTS FOR TRAINED WORKERS.

Requests are coming almost daily from different Conferences asking for trained deaconesses and missionaries to organize new work. North Arkansas is asking for a rural worker for Batesville District, which, if supplied, will make three rural workers the North Arkansas Conference is supporting. Crossett, Ark., asks for a deaconess who can organize and carry on a junior church, fill the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, visit at the Crossett lumber camp, and speak to the hundreds of men employed there! Middlesboro, Ky., is asking for a deaconess to work in the mining section. Dallas City Mission Board is asking for two additional workers. Government Hill Church, San Antonio, reports that prospects are bright for a Daily Vacation Bible School, if a deaconess could be had to promote the work.

All of these requests cannot be granted because of the shortage of workers. Sixteen new home mission workers will be consecrated and sent out next April, yet the demand for more workers continues. No greater work for the Master could be done by our splendid young people if they would dedicate their lives to definite Christian service in the homeland.

And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father of him.—Colossians 3:17.

What Kind Of Blood Have You?

Thin, Pale and Watery—Keeping You Weak, Nervous and Rundown, or Rich, Red Healthy Blood With Plenty of Iron in it To Give You Strength, Energy, Power and Endurance?

IRON IS RED BLOOD FOOD

Says Physician

How NUXATED IRON Puts Roses into the Cheeks of Women and Helps Give Renewed Strength to Men.

Plenty of Iron makes rich, red blood corpuscles like these.	Lack of Iron makes weak, pale blood corpuscles like these.

It's not always the youngest woman that is most sought after—there is an indescribably alluring fascination in the rosy cheek, the inviting lips and sparkling eyes of a woman whose blood is filled with iron. You may be afflicted with iron starvation of the blood and not know it, just as thousands of other women are.

IF you tire easily, if you look pale, haggard and worn, if you feel generally weak, nervous and run-down it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under a powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood—rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of iron.

For want of iron you may practically be an old woman at from 30 to 35, weak, downhearted and "all fagged out." You may be in such a highly nervous, irritable state that you "go all to pieces" on the slightest provocation, while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in your blood, you may still be young in feeling and so attractive and full of life as to defy detection of your real age.

"Iron is red blood food," says Dr. E. Sauer, "and organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps to build up the red blood corpuscles and give increased power and endurance."

Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating half a quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using NUXATED IRON. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It often increases the bodily and mental vigor, strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" folks in two weeks' time. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Nuxated Iron comes in tablets only—never in liquid form. Always look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD-GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

THE SMOKE OF BATTLE.

By Dr. W. G. Cram.

It is only when the smoke of battle has cleared that we can estimate the extent of the victory. We cannot fully realize now what the Missionary Centenary has accomplished through the magnificent offering the church made in 1919. On that pledge of $35,000,000, despite periods of stress and storm in financial and economic fields, the sum of $13,535,598 has been paid.

Like Joseph of old, who provided during fat years for lean years to come, the Centenary, with its ten per cent returned to the Annual Conferences of over $1,600,000 to date, has enabled our church everywhere to move up all along the line.

But we are not through yet. Great as have been the Centenary years that have passed into history, still greater victories are ahead of us. There is more terrain to be taken; more segments are to be consolidated. Not a half-peace nor a partial victory, but a sweeping conquest of triumph, is the slogan, as we move forward calling on the church people everywhere to rally with loyalty to the completion of the task to which they pledge their money and themselves.

WANTED—AN EDUCATION.

The picture given herewith is of Lawrence Neal, a French boy in his first year in our French Mission School at Houma, La. Lawrence is a splendid type of French-American boy, who is eager for an education and training in Christian work. He has no parents to give him an education. It will take $150 a year to feed, clothe and educate him. Rev. A. J. Lamar proposes to give $25 to this cause. Who will add to this amount? Some Epworth League, or Sunday school, or individual could take amounts sufficient to educate this lad so that he might become a Christian worker among his people, of whom there are so many who have never seen a Protestant minister and do not know what real Christianity means.

Send all contributions to the undersigned, and Lawrence and I shall greatly appreciate it.

FROM HALL SUMMIT, LA.

Brother R. V. Fulton, pastor of the Methodist church at Hall Summit, La., called a meeting of the board of stewards Jan. 27, also inviting their wives and any other members interested to come and help discuss plans of the church for the year. All the stewards and a number of others interested responded, and a very interesting as well as profitable evening was spent.

The first thing discussed was the preacher's salary, which was raised $130 over last year.

The next thing was a new church building. Every one present showed a great interest, and a number of splendid talks and suggestions were made. The lot has already been secured and a building committee appointed. We hope to have a new building under construction within the next few months.

Even though our membership is small, we feel encouraged over our work here, and hope to make this a banner year.

MRS. SCONYERS.

METHODIST CHURCH.

No other agency in America was more active in bringing about liquor prohibition than the Methodist Church. This we were told would wreck the church. Nevertheless the Methodist Church has been sweeping forward in membership in a way "that is the astonishment of the organizations of the Christian world." It has attained a net increase in membership in one generation that is greater than the total membership today of any other denomination in America, except the Baptist and Catholic.—Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY

For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska. — "My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. DORA PHILYAW, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

THE GOSPEL OF EMANCIPATION.

The world to-day is concerned with fundamental principles and essential elements, rather than with incidentals and things of minor importance. In every realm of human activity there are the desire and the steady effort to get beneath the accumulated debris of centuries and to bring to light the great foundation stones upon which our highest attainments must be based.

In the study of history, for example, it is no longer the memorizing of names, dates, and isolated facts that concerns the student; but it is the study of primary causes, the tracing of influences from their genesis to their consummation, the weighing of tendency against tendency, and the deduction of general principles of human development from these facts.

It is fundamentals we want to-day, rather than accidentals.

In the realm of religious thought, the tendency to-day is, and rightly so, toward the greatest liberality and toleration for differences of opinion as to the smaller things of individual belief, in order that there may be unity in regard to the basal principles of Christian life. To be sure, there are still some whose intellectual and spiritual horizons are so contracted that they can imagine nothing good outside ther own small circle; but happily these are as the driftwood in the river, which, caught in an eddy, is borne up stream, only to be drawn again into the current and carried on toward the ocean, or is thrown on the bank to whiten and decay, while the great stream sweeps on as before. Narrownes in religion is an anachronism in the twentieth century—that stage in religious development was passed some hundreds of years ago.

It is the duty of the minister of the gospel today to preach principles rather than particulars. There is a difference between discussing the question, whether or not a spirit, in going from one point to another, must pass through the intervening space, which is a particular, and tho question as to whether or not pure being is conditioned by space—though one may follow the other. The great doctrines of morality and religion ought to be proclaimed in burning words from every pulpit, and their meaning enforced by precept and example; but it is not the place of one to whom tho oracles of God have been committed to wear out his life with ceaseless insistence upon trivialities.

The stages of the world's progress may be traced by the triumphs of principle over prejudice. The great reformations of history have been wrought by the power of slowly emerging truth to conquer every form of opposing error. The triumph of truth is not yet complete—but reformations are not yet ended.

Truth never loses its power—"though crushed to earth, it will rise again." It may, for the time being, be overwhelmed by the combined forces of error, but, like the seed cast into the ground, it will spring up again, and flourish more gloriously than before.

Truth never changes its power. It is not a variable quantity, and its failure to accomplish results that have followed its application in the past is due, not to a loss or a change of power, but to changes in circumstances under which it operates. The knife that easily cuts a soft wood may make little impression on the knotty oak. If the "old" truths have lost their power, it is not because they have changed, but because the conditions under which they are applied have changed. "New" truths may be necessary to achieve results, but they are new only in the matter of their apprehension and their application.

As the world grows, methods change. Life develops only as it becomes more and more receptive; and its development is in proportion to the extent and character of what it receives. The enunciation of "new" truths and the promulgation of "new" principles of right are the great events in history, for they guage the advance of mankind.

History has personal centers. The past is known by its men, rather than by what they did. Plato means philosophy; Alexander means war and conquest; Demothenes and Cicero mean ancient oratory at its best; Caesar means Rome and Rome's greatness. In every age, some one man or some group of men stands out preeminently as the embodiment of what the age stands for.

Christianity is the central event in all history. Time measures to and from its introduction. In all the past it is the chief theme, and in all the future it will inevitably be the chiefest fact.

In this central event of history, Christ is the chief figure. The doctrines that he taught were not altogether new. They had been dimly perceived by the prophets before him and at times had been proclaimed in the hearing of the people, but they had fallen on unheeding ears and had produced but little permanent effect. But Christ put a new life into them—his own life—and the effect was marvelous. The fullness of time had come.

At this "fullness of time," Jesus began his ministry; and the influence of his teachings, great from the beginning, is growing in power as the centuries roll by. The secret of this is to be found in the fact that he was preaching the Gospel of Emancipation.

But before he begins to preach his gospel, Jesus makes a significant statement—"the Spirit of the Lord is upon me." The presence of the Spirit was a necessary part of his fitness for the work he was to do, and he begins his ministry by giving his reason—his authority—for his words.

What the world needs to-day is men upon whom the Spirit of the Lord is resting. There are men who are brilliant enough intellectually; there are giants of industry and princes of commerce who are potent factors in the material development of the world; but where are the men who can sway an empire for righteousness and lead the armies of the Lord to victory over the combined forces of evil? The one great, vital, abiding need of this age is men upon whom the Spirit of the Lord is resting mightily!

Jesus gives the heart of his message in his first pronouncement: "He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor: he hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, and recovery of sight to the blind; to set at liberty them that are bruised, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

The keynote of Christianity is found in these words—Liberty, Freedom, Emancipation! Christianity is not the imposition of fetters. Christ did not come to bind men with the chains of ceremonial observances, but to free them from every vestige of bondage. This keynote is sounded in that other saying of his, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Anything less than perfect freedom is not all of Christiaity, no matter what else it may be. Slaves do not constitute great nations; and any religion that puts shackles upon its subjects is, by so much, less than the religion of Christ. Thank God for the gospel of emancipation!

COLLEGE TRAINING FOR BUSINESS.

Even if Mr. Edison does not think very much of a college education as a preparation for business, that is no reason why our young men and women should forsake the halls of learning. As a matter of fact, we believe Mr. Edison stands largely alone in his position—if it really is his position that a college education is not of much practical value. There may be some things studied in the usual college course that are not worth the time and labor expended upon them—we rather think there are—but college training itself is greatly to be desired. A past president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards was in New Orleans recently, and while here he gave out an interview expressing the opinion that the time is not far distant when a young man who desires to enter the real estate profession will first have to pursue a four-year college course in preparation. As a matter of fact, he stated, some leading educational institutions of the country have already promised to include courses in real estate in their curriculums, and those courses are now being prepared in textbook form. If real estate men are going to insist upon college training as a condition of entrance into their profession, all others might as well fall in line—unless the real estate men are, to possess the earth.

THE APPOINTED WAY.

Thou comest not to thy place by accident,
It is the very place God meant for thee;
And shouldst thou there small scope for action see,
Do not for this give room to discontent;
Nor let the time thou owest to God be spent
In idly dreaming how thou mightest be
In what concerns thy spiritual life, more free
From outward hindrance or impediment:
For presently this hindrance thou shalt find
That without which all goodness were a task
So slight, that Virtue never could grow strong:
And wouldst thou do one duty to His mind,
The Imposer's—over-burdened thou shalt ask,
And own thy need of grace to help, ere long.

—Richard Chenevix Trench.

A DIREFUL DILEMMA.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In a recent issue of "The Dearborn Independent" (Mr. Henry Ford's paper), a most interesting article appeared under the captlon, "Zero Hour Striking for College Athletics."

It was written by a coutributor described as "A Veteran Sports Writer;" and evidently he wrote with exact knowledge of the facts of college athletics. Whatever one may think of the remedy he proposes for the evil of these "sports that kill," the accuracy of his statements will not be questioned.

He does not attempt to deny, or defend, the prevalence of eommercialism in inter-collegiate athletics, but seems to accept it as an ineradieable element which cannot be eliminated from these games by any rules or regulations whatsoever. Indeed, he pleads for the modifieation of the rules against professionalism and commereialism, contending that they engender and encourage "hypocrisy and deceit."

The drift of his article may be gathered from the following extract:

"College athletics are showing a growing tendeney toward commercialism. Many educators are alarmed over the condition. They are giving public expression to their fears. They are discussing many and varied remedies, and agree that something must be done about the matter.

"Conditions in college sports have not improved in recent years. The path has led downward, rather than upward. The lure of gold has become greater and the spirit of sport has been losing ground.

Each football season there are numerous charges of professionalism. The finger of guilt is pointed in all directions. The accusations frequently reach the public ear. The college baseball season is a repetition of the football season. Here, again, come the charges of professionalism.

"The time for reform is here. The structure of college athletics is swaying, and unless action is taken there will be a collapse. Year after year has come an avalanche of words upon the subject, but words will no longer suffice. Action, long delayed, is needed.

"If there is to be a reform in college athletics, and it is certain that one must come, then the reform cannot arrive in new laws, rules and regulations, as so many suggest, but in the abandonment or moderation of some of those that exist.

"Legislation will not stamp out the professional tendeney in college sports. Some of the gentlemeu in charge of the situation believe that the ouly solution lies in stricter laws, but one of the chief faults of the present system is an overabundance of rules, excessive legislation. What is needed more than prohibition is temperauce.

"Those high in the councils of collegiate pastimes have suffered from what is more or less of a national sin. They have gone to extremes, and, having gone, insist on seeing the rules through, refusing to compromise or tamper with the laws of the book.

"Amateurism, in the strict sense of the word, is impracticable in the United States. To demand that athletes live up to the strict letter of the law means the encouragement of hypocrisy and deceit. And in this hypocrisy and deceit there is far greater danger to the athlete than in the taking of money for his services. It is destructive to the moral character of the man."

He shows from the sport pages of the daily newspapers that the colleges and universities, which permit and promote inter-collegiate athletics, are themselves so iufected with commercialism that they infect their students, especially those on their teams, with the same foul spirit. He says on this point:

"There, on the same pages, we discover that one uuiversity is completing a stadium costing two million dollars; that another university is starting one that will cost at least as much; that another university is planning to build one more expensive than any of the others; that certain universities are going to extend the seating capacity of their stadiums to get bigger crowds and bigger receipts; that such and such university exeeeded its previous football profits by many thousauds in the past season; university football teams playing for $50,000 guarantees; universities engaging football coaches for salaries in five figures; university football teams taking trips across the country to engage in holiday games; universities charging five dollars a seat for football games.

"If the athlete reads the sport pages as carefully as he is credited with reading them, he certainly will read the news of the college sports, since he is vitally interested in them. If he is deeply impressed with the monetary advantages of profcssional sport, how much more is he impressed, then, with the commercial value of his own college sports. It is only natural for the athlete to assume that, since the apparent object of college athletics is to seeure as many dollars as possible in the athletic treasury, his services should be rewarded with something more substantial than a letter. He feels that since he is bringing such tremendous revenue into the treasury, he is entitled to a small share of it. That is only human.

"Colleges and universiites have more and more developed the commercial tendency. The gate receipts have been uppermost in mind with those at the head of college athletics. The football schedules (and football is the great paying college sport) are so framed as to provide the greatest revcnue. The team that is in the greatest demand is the team that can guarantee the largest crowd. Teams that are drawing cards are the teams that will find favor over the traditional and poorer rivals.

"The athlete readily understands the purpose of it all. Being young and impressionable, he catches the flavor of the thing. He decides, after a while, that since he is instrumental in providing these big reccipts he should share in them. The frame of mind of a college athlete is, after all, merely a reflection of the condition that has arisen in the battle for the dollar at the gate."

Then, hc goes on to show that this infectious commercialism leads many college students to hypocrisy and falsehood in order to escape the athletic rules which have been adopted to exclude professionalism from inter-collegiate games. Concerning this he says:

"To be an amateur athlete a boy must never have received money for his services. That is the strict interpretation of the rule. A great many boys havc reccived money for playing ball, playing football, running in races or appearing in some other form of sport where they took pay for their services.

"Summer baseball offers one of the simplest methods of earning money. Many of thc men engaged in varsity athletics have playing ability on the ball field. They can get with ease positions on semi-professional teams or some of the minor league teams in the summer months. Many young men have used this means of employment to pay their way through college. After school opens they engage in some form of college sport. To do this they must appear as amateurs and deny that they ever reeeived money. To evade the penalty attached to taking money, which in the case of colleges means being barred from athletics, they deny ever having received money. To cover up the evidence, they play under assumed names.

"Here we have the greatest evil resulting from the amateur rule. The boy's love of athletics causes him to play under a name other than his own, and later on deny that he played for money. He practices deceit aud hypocrisy. The practices that he indulges in are ruinous to his moral character."

These statements were amply confirmed in a meeting of college presidents held in Washington, D. C., a few weeks ago. An attempt was made during the meeting to exclude from the Association two institutious which were charged with infraction of the rules in exactly the manner described by the writer. Pending the discussion of the motion of exclusion, one of the most promlnent and honorable college presidents in the South frankly and honestly said: "We are all tarred with the saune stick." And everybody knows he spoke the simple truth. This form of deceit and fraud is found in all the institutions in which inter-collegiate games are allowed, and in most eases the college authorities wink at the "hypocrisy aud deceit" thus practiced.

The writer who contributed this article to the columns of "The Dearborn Independent" insists that the evil is incurable except by the modification of the rules against professionalism. He flatly and unequivocally asserts this in the following candid conclusion of his paper:

"Colleges are not going to quit trying to get as much as possible in sports. They will continue planning for the largest possible revenue. They will, unintentionally, continue encouraging the professional tendencies in the athletes. They are ever associating the dollar with college sports, planning their schedules so that the highest profit can be derived, and it is but natural that the college athletes will continue associating the dollar with the game, and the athlete will be inclined to make the varsity aim his own and individual aim. This is the natural effect of the condition that exists.

"Permitting summer baseball, as several universities already do, will in a measure relieve the situation. There is, as has been pointed out, nothing dishonorable in getting money for playing baseball in the summer months, while there is every dishonor in playing under a fictitious name and making a flat denial later on so that the player can retain his eligibility.

"New rules will only muddle up the situation more and more. What is needed most of all is moderation of the existing rules. The boys cannot be expected to ignore the lure of the professional aspect when it is so appealing to their masters. And the masters do not seem able to overcome it."

This, then, is the conclusion of one who claims to know the facts in the case, and who makes good his claim: The institutions which allow and encourage inter-collegiate games are shut up to the alternative of allowiug professionalism among their students, or of encouraging deceit.

Truly that is a direful dilemma.

It means that the Alma Mater of a student—his educational mother—must choose between corrupting him with the virus of commercialism, drawn from her own breasts, or infecting him with the pus of hypocrisy and the poison of deeeit!

Is that the dreadful end for which costly institutions have been erected and endowed?

No false alarm is raised when one says Inter-collegiate games are defiling and defeating much of the higher education of the United States.

The evil has already spread to a most dangerous degree. A generation of college gradnates has been contaminated by it already.

In the faculties of not a few institutions are many of these college-bred gamesters. Of course, they clamor for these polluting sports and resist all efforts at reform.

And among alumni who are not members of faculties, are men who promote the evil with both personal influence and financial support. A candid president of a game-cursed institution of considerable prominence said to me recently: "Our alumni embarrass and dishonor the university by their unwise and hurtful support of inter-collegiate athletics."

To extricate many colleges from this direful dilemma of promoting commereialism or encouraging dishonesty will not be an easy task, and the governing boards of such institutions cannot undertake it too soon. The delay of the reformation will only make it more difficult.

The time has come when faculties should be purged of gamesters, and colleges should be delivered from the damaging dominion of alumni who, for the sake of sport, are ready to dishonor their educational mothers.

"TOTE FAIR."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

This title may be neither perfectly grammatical nor very elegant; but it is a rugged Americanism that we all understand and most of us very heartily endorse.

Our Bishop DuBose calls attention to the fact that the so-called "Higher Critics"—the miscalled "Modernists"—reason "subjectively"—i. e., "They come to the study of the Scriptures with preconceived theories and hypotheses." As Dr. Robert Dick Wilson—evidently the most learned Orientalist in America to-day—says: "Without any evidence except theory of how it ought to be, they charge that the original text (of the Bible) has been changed, * * * Such procedure is contrary to all the laws of evidence, fairness, and common sense." They will not tote fair. Without a shadow of evidence they tell us that Genesis is inaccurate, that the whole history given in the Pententeuch is unreliable; and adduce as proof of their wild contentions, that such are "the assured results of modern scholarship." We, who are seeking "assured results" very earnestly, desire proof; but they give us none whatever. We demand proof; and they prate about "assured results of modern scholarship." This the most erudite scholar in this field of learning, denounces all this prating about "assured results of modern scholarship" as "contrary to all the laws of evidence, fairness, and common sense." These so-called "Modernists" will not tote fair. Why? Is it because they lack "common sense"? I do not know.

I am not over-stating the case. If some book of the Bible claims to have been written in a certain era, and these folks, to prove their contention, wish to place it in another era to fit their theory—of evolution, for instance—they ignore the fact that this book contains words borrowed from other languages which could not have been borrowed at any other time than that indicated in the book as the time in which it was written. They throw facts away, and present their unprovable theories.

Another instance of unfairness is indicated in a tendency to complain that we should not charge their theory of the evolution of man as teaching that man descended from apes or some other race of monkeys. At least one or more declared that Darwin did not so teach. These have never read Darwin's Descent of Man; for three times in that book it is clearly and unequivocally declared as Darwin's belief that man descended from "monkeys" or "some ape-like creature." Why are these people so averse to being thought of as "sons of apes"? Would they prefer to be sons of horses, or goats, or donkeys? If man was evolved from any brute at all, the process of such proceeded, stair-case fashion, from one race of brutes to another, and skipped no grade or step. The brute grade next to man is the simian or monkey race. If man ascended by evolution, he could not skip this step in the upward going. Why not tote fair? If you are going to put some brute in your ancestral line, why not a monkey as well as a donkey. As for me: I claim neither: but as Luke puts it, I am a son of Adam who was "the Son of God." Luke 3:38.

They who teach the evolutional origin of man, say that science teaches it. They ought to know that science, which is "classified knowledge," does not teach it. Science does not present a single fact indicating that "the evolution of species" is anything other than a mere hypothesis, i. e., an unproved guess. For sixty-odd years men have been promising to find a "missing link" between the monkey race and the human; but they have never found one. In these latter days, flinching under the jibes of sane common sense folks, they have built a few figures made of plaster with some sort of bone or piece of bone or two in each, and have said: "Here is your missing link." But the claim, as every real scientist knows, is utterly false. No one of these plaster casts approximates a half human and a half monkey, or any other sort of half-human.

P. S.—I would call the attention of the preachers, especially, to Bishop DuBose's "Aftermath Series." Four numbers have already appeared. The last, "Is the Higher Criticism Scholarly?", has just been issued by Robert Dick Wilson, Ph.D., D.D., who is master of twenty-six or more of the languages of the ancient past. He writes from the standpoint of one who knows, and does not deal in guesses and "the assured results of modern scholarship" so-called; but in great, unquestioned facts. This No. 4, like the others, costs only twenty-five cents. It is well worth a dollar.

The Hindenberg Line Shattered.

A. R. Wallace—Man's Place in the Universe, 1911—presents six crushing arguments, backed up by the latest star-studies, finds that our sun is the astronomical center of the universe; that its position as such is permanent; that our central sun-position is indispensable to generate our earth's exceptional characteristics among the planets so as to render living conditions on this globe realizable; that no other planet is habitable; that man is the coronation of the organic life and that the lower forms of life led up to and prepared for the advent of Man. Mr. Wallace began as a co-discoverer of Darwinism, he reached a phenomenal age, and as a super-eminent master of science devoted the last years of his rare gifts to establish that the universe was made for the sun, that the sun was essential to make our earth habitable, and the earth to make man an accomplished fact, and that these conclusions are the results of the ablest stellar-studies.

The Return to Reason.

He sees clearly because he sees truly. He reviews the grandeur of design, the vastness of the scale, the stupendous forces engaged, the myriads of processes at work, the earth's unique sky-situation, the magnitude of the harmonizing adjustments for space purposes, and facing the converging facts on the point at issue, decides that the cosmic-workshop is working together for the good of the earth, organic life and the ultimate—Man. Science is setting man in our midst as the reason and explanation of the existence and continuance of the material universe. They are in haling distance of the incomparable Moses.

Vanishing Atheism.

Atheism is now scientifically unworkable, philosophically untrue, and ends in moral suicide. By a widespread rebellion and the sturdy knocking the props from under, Science is sending to the junkshop the premature Evolution of the nineteenth century that challenged so blatantly the original idea of a literal Creation. The only thing an enlightened Evolutionist can be certain of is that now he can not be certain of any of his arguments. They are like Confederate Veterans, in annual reunion—a rapidly decreasing host—who celebrate the memories of a Lost Cause. Alas, my brother! Doctor Ates Hrdlicka, Dec. 31, 1923, uttered the ghastly confession before the A. A. for the A. of S., when he said: "The distance between the lowest man and the highest ape is too great to be passed even by mutation." It is all over except the funeral and the momentum of prejudice against miracles.

Fact-Proof Minds.

Prejudice renders some minds incapable of receiving the love of the truth. The result is the same as if their brains were removed and the cavity filled with concrete. It is like rain falling on a metal roof. We recall the sarcastic estimate of the redoubtable Tyndall: "These evolution notions are absurd, horrible, monstrous. They are only fit for the intellectual gallows." Higher criticism rests upon non-miraculous evolution: If the foundation be destroyed, what can the higher critics do?

Incontestable Facts.

No non-miraculous natural development can span the abyss between matter and nothing. It cannot achieve electrons by mere force without a manufacturing mind. It cannot bridge the chasm between the animal and the vegetable world, the nine grand orders of the animal kingdom, between man and the creatures beneath him.

Moreover, if life is not now and has never been created by lifeless matter; if no new species are now appearing by any process, considering the facts of the extinction of enormous numbers of species and the sad degeneration of as many more, evolution has gone into bankruptcy. It is no longer possible for a geologist, on account of the paralyzing contradictions of rock formation and fossil-mixups, to learn that any species predated any other species. No living expert can prove by appeal to fossil-beds which type of fossil is "younger" or "older" than another or man himself, and as man is the fosil-companion of extinct species, evolution has wrecked itself against rock-facts. No dependence whatever can be put on rock-beds or fossil-position in deciding their relative age. Such is the hopeless mixture of the facts and evidence that the New Geology provides that there is no other credible hypothesis that fits into rock-composition and fossil-facts save that of a literal Creation.

The once firecely contested debates as to how long ago or how much time it took is no longer of any value. We are on our knees, before the Creator, looking out the window of science.

HUNTING WITH ONE'S EYES.

There are several ways of hunting, but the man who hunts for wild life with his eyes is the one who is best rewarded. Archibald Rutledge, writing in Field and Stream, tells of a sight that pleased him, and even second-handed ought to interest our readers:

I was walking down a trout stream one October afternoon when the sun was low. On either side the laurel and rhododendron bushes so overhung the water that farther progress was difficult, and I had almost given up trying and was stepping from a stone to shore, when I saw an unnatural sheen coming from some object thirty yards downstream. Crouching on the rocks, I peered through the laurels. There, lining either side of the stream and taking their sundown drink, were thirty-two wild turkeys! I could count them readily. They drank in peace and departed in peace, for I never showed myself.

One such glimpse of wild life as that is worth many a day of effort. You can remember such a picture with pleasure long after you have forgotten things that are far more "important."—Selected.

CHRIST'S LOVE.

If we miss the lesson which, by his words and his life, Christ would teach us, we must be blind indeed. It is not only the lesson of love. It is not even the lesson that he loved as man had never loved before; but it is that he loved those whom none had ever loved before. . . . Everywhere and always he saw what the world never sees—the soul of goodness in things evil. The way of the world is the very opposite. . . . They know nothing of the sun but its spots. . . . Does a good man commit one fault? They do their best to make him known forever by nothing but that fault. . . . Oh, world, such is thy Saviour, and, oh, world, such art thou!—Canon Farrar.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI MISSION PASTORS' CONFERENCE.

The pastors of mission charges, on the east side, met in a most helpful and inspiriug conference in Tupelo, Feb. 14 and 15. It was a uhique little conference, all to ourselves. Our leader was Rev. V. C. Curtis. We expected to furnish our own entertainment, but the good Methodists of Tupelo would have none of it—they took us home with them in good old Methodist style. We did intensive work and covered the field. Some illuminating facts were brought out. The vote was unanimous to have a like meeting next year. There were twenty splendid men holding the hard places in the line. There was not a word said about small pay. The one common thought was to do better work and advance the Kingdom of Christ. The conference closed with a testimony and consecration service that was great. One of the Tupelo stewards got up and said: "You fellows come back next year—these townfolks need to hear more of this." We went home with clearer and broader visions, both Board and pastors understanding one another better.

The conference gave strong endorsement to the bill to be introduced in the present Legislature creating a State Board of Censors for moving pictures, and would like to have all who will, write to their representatives to vote for the bill.

Below is the report of the Committee on Resolutions.

W. M. LANGLEY, Secretary.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

We, your Committee on Resolutions, submit the following report:

Whereas we, the pastors of mission charges in Northeast Mississippi, have been called in conference by the Board of Missions, through its efficient and active president, Rev. V. C. Curtis, and have met in pleasant and profitable session; and have had helpful, illuminating and inspiring round table discussions of our many, complex and common problems; and have had the wise and kindly counsel of our president and leader, Rev. V. C. Curtis; B. P. Jaco, Conference Missionary Secretary; W. M. Campbell, Conference Missionary Evangelist; J. A. Randolph, President Conference Board of Evangelism; A. T. McIlwain, Presiding Elder Columbus District; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we express our appreciation of the spirit of helpfulness and co-operation on the part of the Board of Missions in the solution of our problems, and our appreciation of the presence, leadership and counsel of V. C. Curtis, B. P Jaco, W. M. Campbell, J. A. Randolph, and A. T. McIlwain; and our belief that this conference has been timely, helpful and inspiring.

2. That we as pastors study in every way to make ourselves more efficient, by reading good books and, as far as posible, outlining and pursuing a definite course of study; by informing ourselves on the present and changing thought in rural and farm life that we may contribute something to the development and prosperity of the country, as a prosperous community is necessary for a prosperous church.

3. That we work to encourage and develop leadership in our church, by giving the laymen a larger part in the activities of the church, and being on the lookout for leadership material.

4. That we organize, help and lead the young people in church work, and in every way keep in touch with the young life of our charges, keeping in mind that the young people of to-day will make the church of to-morrow.

5. That we give special effort to the development of the Sunday school by striving for the all-year schools, attending Standard Training Schools, taking credits, and encouraging our teachers to do so.

6. That we be a friend to the county demonstrators and their economic clubs and keep in intelligent, sympathetic touch with all movements for the betterment of rural life.

7. That we give more thought and effort to the arranging, planning and preparing for revivals, and as far as possible make complete surveys of churches and charges.

8. That we distribute tracts, take subscriptions to our church periodicals, and in every way strive to educate our people in the doctrine, polity, and work of our church, giving special emphasis to stewardship and tithing.

9. That we work to improve our church finances by studying financial systems and plans, select some workable plan and work it.

10. That we, above all, give diligent heed to our personal lives that we may be good examples, keeping in mind that a pastor's life is his greatest sermon; that we, with our multitude of duties, do not lose sight of our own spiritual and devotional lives that we may preach the plain, simple gospel out of a deep personal experience.

MUSINGS OF A MENTAL RUMINANT.

By Arthur Madison Shaw.

Drummond wrote a book entitled "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," and in one of the first sentences he asks: "Is the supernatural natural or unnatural?" If I discussed the same theme to-day, I should call my book "Spiritual Law in the Natural World," and raise the question, "Is the natural natural or supernatural?" For the natural comes from the spiritual; and nature is but the manifestation of the supernatural. They are two aspects of the same Infinity; and science is the key to the one as religion is the key to the other.

To attempt to array the scientist against Moses is sheer folly; and to scoff at men who estimate the age of the earth in millions of years as mere "guessers," is worse. If a conclusion that has not been proved to a certainty is a mere guess, then nearly all the verdicts of juries and judgments of courts are only guesses. In criminal cases, even when life and death are involved, the juror is only required to "believe beyond a reasonable doubt" in the guilt of the accused, to justify a conviction. Not even so much is required in the most important civil cases; but only that the verdict be based on a "preponderance of evidence." Is that a mere guess?

Try the authorship of Genesis by the "No-guessing" rule. Many hold that Moses wrote it; but is that or is it not merely a guess? Genesis nowhere states that Moses wrote it: nor does any subsequent inspired writer declare its Mosaic authorship. I should gladly accept evidence of it, but, so far as I know, not a shred of credible evidence exists. Only a tradition exists, and it is largely discredited. Our theory that the tradition is true, is little better than a "guess."

But our concern is not primarily with the author, but with the contents of the book. A recent writer in the New Orleans Christian Advocate says that "the habit grew of slinging around lightly millions of years as an antidote to Moses." But is the theory that the earth is millions of years old in conflict with Moses—or, if you please, with Genesis? The Genesis account of creation is in the first chapter, giving six days as the time consumed, and assigning different works to the several days, as follows: First day, Light; Second day, the Firmament, or sky; Third day, Plant Life; Fourth day, Sun, Moon and Stars; Fifth day, Fishes and all sea life, and the Birds; Sixth day, Dry-land Animals and Man. Incidentally it may be noticed that the division of waters, the formation of seas, and the fact that life began in the waters, are mentioned, but no account is given of the creation of water or its elements. The time embraced in a "day" is sufficiently clear: "evening and morning" made a common day as the Hebrews knew it. Our present knowledge all points to an immeasurably longer period; and intelligent Christians—even the most conservative—admit that the time was longer.

Some seek to "harmonize" the theories by interpreting each day as a thousand years. Others say there were six "periods" of unknown length. But this has two disadvantages for the literalist. It surrenders all that the time-element in Genesis means; and it overturns literalism completely. If "six days" is not to be accepted, then we have no "Mosaic" theory of time. If six days can be stretched to six thousand years, who shall say that the phrase may not mean six millions—or six hundred millions?

But some contend that this "puts God a long way off!" Well, if God made the universe and left it six thousand years ago, he is a long way off in time! But if he is still working in it, guiding and controlling it, he is just as near, though he began it a billion years ago, as if he had made it all yesterday! Astronomers claim to have discovered a new "Universe" or system of stars, some four or five quintillions of miles away. That may seem to put God a long way off in space; and so it does if he cannot be both there and here. But if God is not great enough to work throughout infinity, what basis have we for our faith that he can live and govern throughout eternity?

Since, therefore, revelation indicates no literal definite time, we are at liberty—nay, we are compelled—to allow as much time as scientific evidence seems to call for. Scientific men do not attempt to date geologic or cosmic events. A given stratum of the earth's crust may have been formed fifty thousand years ago—or it may have been five hundred thousand! It was certainly many millenniums.

This at least makes one problem less baffling. How many readers have wondered what God was doing in the eternal cycles of the past, if he only began his mighty works six thousand years ago? To say that he has made and destroyed other universes could be but a fanciful "guess." Perhaps he has been eternally at work. He is "the Living God." No doubt his life has been flowing in creative energy—always! "God is a Spirit." No doubt the all-wise, all-powerful Spirit has been bodying forth his thought in an eternal stream of created being. And is he not at it still?

Where, then, is the war between the supernatural and the natural? Who honors God most, who has the purer faith: the man who sees God in nature, or one who can see him only in the supernatural? Do we know that any miracle is not in accordance with some perfectly natural law—which may be known to God only? Indeed, if Jesus was God, was it not natural that he should assert supremacy over nature, disease and death? We know now that the miracle of the rainbow is so natural that we may make one ourselves. Do we know that the miracles of Jesus were not according to some natural law which he has not revealed to us? On the other hand, is not the perfectly natural coming of a new individual life into being, a supernatural event? Explain it without God, if you can! Some scientists have declared themselves atheists (meaning, I think, that they could accept none of the common conceptions of God); but before the mystery of life they all bow their heads!

A Christian may be a narrow bigot, or merely a presumptuous ignoramus, and scoff at scientists; a scientist may be a rationalist, or a blatant agnostic; but the humble spirit who can go with science, back to the dim twilight of an almost infinite past, and forward to run-down worlds and dying suns; who can look down to the infinitely small—in atom, ion and electron—and up and away to the infinitely vast, beyond the flight of the wildest comet, and can see the Creator's touch in star and molecule and hear his Father's voice in the "song of the spheres" and the chirp of the cricket, can say with meaning, "The heavens declare the glory of God," and can worship the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, as no other can.

HOWARD WILLIAMS AT BILOXI.

Dear Brother Carley: A great religious awakening is taking place on the Mississippi Coast now as well as in other parts of our great State. The man that God is using to arouse the people to a sense of their need of salvation through Christ is Howard Williams, of Hattiesburg, formerly editor of the Hattiesburg American. In the past few months he has held revivals at Bay St. Louis, Gulfport, Bay Minette, Ala., and at Biloxi, closing out a thirty-three days' campaign at Biloxi last Sunday night. He goes to Pascagoula next.

As a rseult of these meetings, hundreds of hardened sinners have been redeemed and made into new creatures, some cases being as miraculous and interesting as the accounts given by Begble in "Twice-Born Men," or those related by Hadley in Jerry McAuley's Mission. Bootleggers, gamblers, and libertines have been gloriously saved, and are now on fire for God and righteousness. It is indeed thrilling to hear the testimony of men, women, boys and girls who have been saved, and to see their shining faces expressive of the great joy they now have.

Perhaps the greatest results are seen in the reclaiming of backsliders, and the awakening of church members to a real sense of their obligations to God and humanity. Slackers and hypocrites have been made to see themselves as God sees them, and have come back to God with penitent hearts and renewed consecration. Men and women in all walks of life and representing various denominations, have met together on a common basis at the foot of the Cross, and rejoiced together in the bonds of Christian love and peace. Flying squadrons have been organized and are going to various communities to "tell the story" and bear enthusiastic witness to the saving power of Christ. "Harrison County for Christ," is the slogan of the Gulfport and Biloxi Flying Squadrons.

Now, just a few words about the evangelist and his methods. It is true that he is just beginning and in some instances rather crude, but no one is more conscious of this than is Howard Williams himself. He fully realizes his limitations, and, from the standpoint of homiletics, is no great preacher. But he is rapidly developing. Like Edward Bok, he is learning to do by doing; he is learning to preach by preaching. He made remarkable progress in his month's stay in Biloxi. In many respects he is wonderfully qualified for his work, far beyond the average. As a newspaper man for many years, he gained a wealth of experience and an intimate knowledge of human nature that enabled him to speak with the authority of one who knows. In the business and social life of the world, he stood high and had a host of friends. He knows from first-hand information almost all that goes on in the political, business and social life of Mississippi and of the nation. His devoted wife, now heart and soul with him in his work, is the only woman who is a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee, and has stood high in the social life of the State. But like Saul of Tarsus, they have completely reversed their former ways of living, and are now crucified with Christ, and their glory is now in that Cross by which the world is crucified unto them and they to the world. The thing that impresses one most about Howard Williams is his tremendous earnestness and absolute sincerity. One of the finest compliments paid him was by a Jew from Chicago, who was staying at the White House and observed Howard Williams from day to day and who listened to his messages. On the closing night of the meeting this Jew stood up in the audience and said that he had never seen a man so much in earnest and in whose sincerity he had so much confidence, and he could truly say, "God bless Howard Williams."

In closing, let me say to the brethren that if Howard Williams comes into your neighborhood, do not hesitate to co-operate with him. You may not agree with all he says and does, but he will listen to you and take suggestions from you if you do it for the glory of God and give him your co-operation. He uses no clap-trap methods in order to get people to come forward and confess. He insists on a man's meaning business and coming clean with God. With him it is Repent, Confess Christ, and Obey. You can repent and confess now, but it takes a lifetime to obey. He insists on keeping the Commandments, and is especially severe on Sabbath desecration, for that seems to be such a common sin among church people. He will not compromise his Lord.

The spiritual foundation for the greatest year of my ministry has been laid and we are confident of having a great year in the Lord. Brethren, when your people come to the coast to have a vacation, tell them to be sure and bring their religion with them and to hunt up the Christians for associates.

Yours for Christ on the Coast,

OSMOND S. LEWIS.

GREAT REVIVAL AT BELZONI.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been my pleasure and joy to be in many revivals; but the greatest that I have ever been in as a pastor was brought to a close Feb. 10 in our beautiful courthouse here in Belzoni.

Rev. Burke Culpepper and his choir leader, John U. Robinson, came to us Feb. 27, and soon had caught the ear of the people and had the entire town and surrounding community in the throes of a great revival. Never before had such crowds assembled in this county to hear the preaching of God's Word. The whole community was stirred. Over 200 signed cards either to reconsecrate their lives to God or give their hearts to him and unite with the church.

Since the close of the meeting, I have received 41 into the Methodist Church on profession, with others to follow, and secured the church letters of 26 others. Our prayer meeting, which has been growing regularly in attendance since last fall, received a mighty impetus, and is now a mighty spiritual force in our church. We have received members into the church at each prayer service since the revival.

The Presbyterian church, which united with us in the revival, received over 30 members, and a large number joined the Baptist church also.

God is wonderfully blessing our labors. Since being returned to this charge for the second year, we have added 74 names to our roll. Every department of church work is on a higher plane.

Yours fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS, P. C.

REV. WALDO W. MOORE—WESLEY MISSION.

By Payton A. Sowell.

The Gulf Coast has been between two winds—one blowing over the "Gulf stream," the other from "Frozen Alaska"—and the northern gale has prevailed since Jan. 1, driving back the tides far seaward and adorning the beach with ice.

Bro. Sharbrough has gone to Wiggins, his new charge, after four remarkably prosperous years in Biloxi. He is one of the rare genuinely thoughtful preachers. He handles only "fundamentals"—deals in no froth, but is an able expositor of the Word of God. I sat with appreciation and great profit under his ministry. There was always food in the manger for thoughtful souls.

The "old elder"—or rather the former elder—left the coast and is under some "high steeple," deserving by this time a "silk hat." The new elder appears to have his "feet in the stirrups" (as we were accustomed to say in my day); now we say he is "seated in his Ford."

Rev. O. S. Lewis, as deftly and securely as the old stage drivers of my boyhood, as they guided four spanking horses, holds all the lines of this important church at Biloxi in his hands. He, with all faithful preachers, is letting down the net for the "Forgottens."

Bishop Ainsworth made almost a clean sweep of this "Coast country" in the removal of those serving the church.

Rev. Waldo W. Moore is almost the solitary exception. He is one of our—or Mississippi's—most diligent and reliable men. A graduate of the Old Greensboro, he has served in the quiet and valuable charges where "choice grain" is grown for the kingdom. He is a real pleasure to me here on the Camp Ground.

He is in his fourth year in this small, but unique, yet important charge.

No man that could be sent here could win more securely the respect, confidence, and love of the people he serves.

He visits the ships at Gulfport, from foreign shores, climbs up their sides, and puts Testaments printed in the languages of the hardy sailors in their hands. He serves, in a sense, the Government Veteran Hospital, and also the "remnant" of Methodism of Mississippi City who yet remain since Gulfport has overspread "all the coast." He serves also Back Bay, with Wesley House. To do this physically he was obliged to have an auto. There is no parsonage; he has to live in his own cottage on the Camp Ground. The salary and appropriations—all make an insufficient sum to support him.

Two years ago he bought on a credit (to be the property of the charge) a Ford, and asked that lovers of Jesus would make an offering to be applied to the purchase of this Ford. It was a great stretch of faith, but he is a "heroic believer."

From many places—from far-away California, from Alabama, from Louisiana, from Mississippi, etc., gifts have come. As it was natural to expect, Mississippi has led, but many generous sums have come from Louisiana. Among the most numerous and kindly, gifts have come from superannuates and their families. Louisiana has given about $150.

Now, all is paid on the car debt except the balance of $60.

The object of this last public mention is to ask that, before Easter, generous friends from everywhere send Rev. Waldo W. Moore, P. O. Box 500, Biloxi, Miss., a gift. If there is an excess, it will be used in the Sunday school work. Who will send first?

ELEPHANT SOLVES TRAFFIC PROBLEM.

Elephants being such ponderous creatures, we are apt to assume that they are thick-witted. A story recently told by Samuel A. Derieux in the American Magazine shows how one elephant, at least, met a difficult "traffic" situation and solved it.

A traveler by the name of Tenant was once riding horseback along a road in India, on both sides of which grew a dense jungle. Suddenly his horse shied violently, and Mr. Tenant saw coming toward him a huge elephant unattended and balancing on his tusks a heavy timber that he was evidently carrying from a sawmill to the shipyards. The timber filled the road from side to side, and Mr. Tenant could not possibly pass.

Suddenly the elephant, seeing horse and rider, stopped and turned sidewise. Then he backed a short distance into the jungle and, leaving room for horse and rider to pass, snorted out his directions that they should go on. But a horse is terribly afraid of an elephant, and Mr. Tenant's horse continued to rear and plunge; the man himself, interested to see what would happen next, did not force him to pass.

Deeper and deeper into the jungle the elephant backed; still the horse reared and plunged. At last the elephant laid the piece of timber down and, pushing hard against the undergrowth, disappeared. Then Mr. Tenant rode past.

A short distance down the road he reined in and looked back. The elephant came out of the jungle, picked up the timber with his tusks, balanced it with his trunk and, turning it round in the road, went on his way with loud snorts of indignation and disgust.—Selected.

Let All The People Know the Facts

Walk With Me in the Garden of Pinks.—Pleasant Hill charge, Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, adds $320 to its minimum quota, thus accepting $2,000 to raise for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. J. L. Lay is the pastor.

Fort Thomas charge, Covington District, Kentucky Conference, adds $363 to its minimum quota, making $3,000 the total amount to be raised for Superanuate Endowment. Rev. J. P. Strother is the pastor.

Roanoke Station, Roanoke District, North Alabama Conference, adds $625 to its minimum quota, making a total amount of $4,000 to be raised for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. John R. Turner is the pastor.

Goodlettsville and City Roads charge, Lebanon District, Tennesses Conference, adds $1,112.80 to its minimum quota, thus making $2,500 the amount to be raised for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. J. T. Parsons is the pastor. This is a two-point circuit.

Main Street charge, Gastonia, N. C., Shelby District, Western North Carolina Conference, adds $1,625 to its minimum quota, thus making $6,000 the amount to be raised for Superannuate Endowment. This was accomplished under the leadership of the sometime pastor, Rev. W. A. Lambeth, the man who says, "Hang to this thing, man; hang to it like a cocklebur to a cow's tail!" Now, Brother Will, do it all over again at your new appointment, Mount Vernon, Washington.

A Pink Good Enough for a Bridegroom.—El Dorado charge, Camden District, Little Rock Conference, adds $5,200 to its minimum quota, making a total of $10,000 that this charge agrees to raise in five years for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. P. Q. Rorie is the pastor. These good people are spending $150,000 on a new building and raising the money as needed. They do not owe a cent at the present time, having paid over three-fourths of the contract price. Also they have just finished a $20,000 brick parsonage. In two years' time the pastor's salary has been increased from $2,500 to $4,500. They had the largest budget last year of any Church in the State and the only deaconess in the State. The pastor writes that his charge would raise the full $10,000 for Superannuate Endowment and pay it this year but for the fact that they want to finish and dedicate their new church building in time for the next Little Rock Annual Conference. He says, "Not one has spoken a word against the Special Effort, but on every hand I find that men are wondering why the people called Methodists have waited so long to take notice of the men that made our great country possible." El Dorado! Rorie! Bridegroom! Pink! Rah! Rah! Rah!

The Great Crossroads Story Dramatized.—I have just received from Dr. H. E. Spence, professor in Trinity College, North Carolina, a dramatization of the wonderful story by Rupert Hughes, "When Crossroads Cross Again." Dr. Spence has done a very creditable work, and all friends of the cause of the "forgotten man" owe him a debt of gratitude.

Before publishing the dramatization in booklet form it was necessary to have Collier's Weekly, original publishers of the story, certain song writers of songs used in the dramatization, and Rupert Hughes, author of the story, to waive their claims as to copyrights in said publication. Waivers from each and every one of the foregoing have been received, and they were sent most gladly.

I wired Rupert Hughes at his Los Angeles address for his waiver, and in two hours his reply came, which my readers will delight to have, as dramatization rights to my story, 'When Cross-dramatization rights to my story, "When Crossroads Cross Again,' to the Methodist Church, South, for all performances proceeds of which are devoted to the furtherance of the Superannuate Endowment Fund. I am glad to contribute this mite to so beautiful a cause. Best wishes for its success."

The booklet containing the dramatization of "Crossroads" will be off the press in about three weeks and the Board of Finance will be glad to send it to any group of players that would like to present it to the public.

The Presiding Elders Get Pinker and Pinker.

In addition to the honor roll of presiding elders who are one hundred per cent on the pink leaf report as recently published, the following braves are entitled to their places on this roll in position according to number given:

18. Louisville Conference, Bowling Green District, Rev. B. M. Currie, presiding elder.

19. Illinois Conference, Waverly District, Rev. T. H. Ballarby, presiding elder.

20. Kentucky Conference, Covington District, Rev. C. H. Green, presiding elder.

21. Virginia Conference, Farmville District, Rev. C. O. Tuttle, presiding elder.

22. Louisville Conference, Henderson District, Rev. G. P. Dillon, presiding elder.

The Louisville Confcrence has to date five districts one hundred per cent pink.

The Real Measure of Our Concern.

Hundreds—yes—thousands of preachers and lay members have by letter and personal testimony expressed determination to do their dead level best in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. The test is on. The strain has come. What we do during these crisal days and the spirit in which we do it will react for good or ill throughout the long years that lie ahead, even to the end of time. To sit now with folded hands and unconcerned will mark us as the biggest camouflagers the world has ever seen. The passing hours are big with tremendous possibilities if they are used as should be. Come on, you red-blooded preachers and lay members who never quit in a pinch, and let us show to the world the stuff we are made of.

The deprivations of more than 900 warm-hearted but superannuate preachers cry to us; more than 1,400 widows of preachers and over 500 orphans of preachers reach out their suppliant hands, urging us to our task. The preachers and wives of preachers and children of preachers who have taken up their everlasting abode in their heavenly home by their spiritual presence urge us forward to victory. The Christ whom the "forgotten man" preached and whom we uphold as the one hope of this troubled world tenderly pleads with us now "to give a cup of cold water in his name." From such an urge we cannot turn aside and still call ourselves Christians.

"Why do we wait till hands are laid
Close folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses, sweet and rare,
And lilies in their flawless grace?

Why do we wait till eyes are sealed
To light and love in death's deep trance,
Dear wistful eyes, before we bend
Above them with impassioned glance?

Why do we wait till hearts are still
To tell them all the love that's ours
And give them such late meed of praise
And lay above them fragrant flowers?

How oft do we, careless, wait till life's
Sweet opportunities are past
And break our 'alabaster box
Of ointment' at the very last!"

And They Will Turn the Pink to Gold

The Home Circle

THE BOY READS.

By Florence Van Cleve.

Your room is very quiet as you read;
I know the book—I read it long ago;
It is Scott's Ivanhoe;
About my household tasks, I take good heed
To guard my lips; a word were like a blow
To youth, enamored of the famed romance.

You read about fair ladies and brave knights;
Your boyish heart is thrilled
By jousts and tourneys, where the hero wins,
Leaving the villain killed;
And now . . . to-morrow your own tourneys wait;
Fare forth, my Knight, and have a tilt with Fate!
I watch you riding through the Ivory Gate . . .
Dreams end, Life begins.

Oh, I have failed in many ways, I know,
To be a model mother; circumstance
Has been against me; but in future years
The heroes of your dreams will be your peers;
I think you will forget the sordid things—
The daily struggle to be clothed and fed—
Remembering only those great books you read,
The tales that gave Imagination wings.

And you may say—I pray it will be so!—
'Tis pitiful how little mothers crave;
But even in my grave
I'd hear, I think, your voice, if you should say,
"At least she did not steal my youth away."

Ah, Boy of mine, your future speaks to me:
"He built his House of Dreams . . . his soul is free!"

BOBBY CHANGES HIS MIND.

By A. F. Whitney.

Bobby was trying very hard to win the best-attendance prize offered by his public school teacher, Mr. Green. So far his record had been perfect, and he was determined to keep it that way right up to the very last day.

One morning about a week before the prize was to be awarded, Bobby woke up with a very bad pain in his stomach, which naturally made him feel miserable all over. He could not account for the pain, as he was very sure that he had not eaten anything the night before to disagree with him.

"Just my old luck," muttered Bobby to himself as he lay back in bed hoping that the pain would soon pass off. "Here I am so far with the best record in the class, and if I have to remain away to-day I'll surely fall behind."

However, the pain, instead of getting better, seemed to grow worse. When mother came in his room as usual to call him she was surprised to find that he was not feeling well. As the pain did not cease she insisted that Bobby remain away from school that day, prize or no prize.

"Your health is far more important than any prize," she told Bobby. "I'll send a note to Mr. Green by Bruce."

Bruce was Bobby's pet Irish terrier. Every day he carried Bobby's lunch to school, and seemed to take great pleasure in so doing.

Bobby, against his will, had to admit that mother's judgment was right, although he was almost in tears over worrying about his standing for the prize.

His mother then wrote a short note to Mr. Green explaining the situation, and about eight o'clock dispatched Bruce with it. For a moment mother had a little difficulty making him understand just what she wanted him to do, as he was not used to starting out for school until about eleven-thirty. Finally he started off with the note, and then mother hurried back to Bobby. Much to her surprise, she found him up and almost dressed. He told her that the pain had almost disappeared, and that he now felt able to go to school. Bobby, when he heard that Bruce had already left with the note, said that he would take the trolley-car and try to get there ahead of Bruce. Bruce already had a good start, and Bobby would have to make good time if he wished to beat him.

Bobby fortunately soon caught a car and overtook Bruce about a block from the school. Just as he got off the car Mr. Green came along, and then Bobby explained to him how he had sent Bruce with the note, but that as he had felt much better soon afterwards he had decided to come to school, after all. Just then the panting Bruce came along with the note.

Then Mr. Green laughed hard and said: "I'm glad that you were so anxious to come to school, and also that you feel better. However, you seem to have forgotten that the contest closed yesterday, and so it would not have made any difference if you had remained at home to-day. You won the prize, and as soon as the class is assembled I'll present it to you."

Then, looking at the tired Bruce, he added: "If I had another prize I'd certainly give it to Bruce, for he has been almost as regular as you, Bobby."

WHAT KINDNESS DID.

By Dorothy Arno Baldwin.

Tony and Estelle, standing in the doorway of a tenement in the big city, shivered in the cold, autumn wind.

"Listen!" said Estelle. "I thought I heard a cat cry. We may hear it again."

"It might have been the wind," said Tony.

"No, it's a cat in that alleyway. Perhaps he's lost. Let us see if we can find him."

The brother and sister hurried into the alley. There, sure enough, was the cat, a poor, miserable tramp, thin and dirty. When he saw the children he ran and hid behind an ash can, for he had learned that little boys and girls are not always kind to cats.

Estelle rushed into the house and brought back a saucer of milk which she put down near the ash can.

"Come, kitty! Poor kitty!" called Estelle, in soothing tones. "We won't hurt you. Come get the milk."

Tony tried to feed him with a spoon, but it wasn't long before the cat crept up to the saucer and began to drink, for she was half-starved. When he had finished the last drop, he let Estelle pick him up and carry him into the house, for he knew that she was a friend.

The next day there came a cold, driving storm, but the cat didn't care, for he had a home at last, and he could keep warm and dry. He soon grew plump and sleek, and handsome, with the good food and the care that Estelle and Tony gave him.

One day Tony came home in great excitement.

"There's going to be a Cat Show!" he cried. "I've just seen the posters. Let us tie a ribbon around Sambo's neck, and take him to the show."

That was how it happened, a few weeks later, that the big black-and-white cat which once had been a wretched alley cat, was sitting up straight and proud in one of the boxes at the Cat Show. He was clean and happy, and he seemed to know that he looked handsome with the big bow of red ribbon at his neck.

If Sambo was proud, Tony and Estelle were prouder and happier later, when the judge at the Cat Show called them to the platform before all the people and told them that Sambo had been awarded a special prize.

"Sambo is a fine cat," said the judge, as he handed them a bright ribbon and a tiny, shiny gold piece. "I'm sure that he never would have deserved a prize at any show if you had not rescued him when he was cold and hungry, and given him a good home and loving care. I hope other boys and girls will remember to be kind to stray animals."—The Sunbeam.

ODD ACCIDENTS.

I saw a cow slip throught the fence,
A horse fly in the store;
I saw a board walk up the street,
A stone step by the door.
I saw a mill race up the road,
A morning break the gloom;
I saw a night fall on the lawn,
A clock run in the room.
I saw a peanut stand up high,
A sardine box in town;
I saw a bed spring at the gate,
An ink stand on the ground.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. W. Booth, our pastor at Ponchatoula, La., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office one day last week.

Dr. W. G. Cram announces that approximately $19,000,000 has been collected of the $35,000,000 pledged to the Centenary cause.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, reports that all goes well on his district.

Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, spoke to a great audience in Jerusalem Temple, New Orleans, on last Sunday evening.

Mr. R. E. Bobbitt, vice president of Whitworth College, is the teacher of the Wesley Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church, Brookhaven, Miss.

Hon. R. E. Bennett, of Meadville, Miss., district attorney for his district, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Thursday of last week.

Rev. W. W. Bruner, of the Corinth circuit, North Mississippi Conference, is happily and busily at work among the good people of his charge.

The John Brown meeting in Columbus, Miss., will begin next Sunday. The great tabernacle in which the meeting is to be held was erected by volunteer labor.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Cude Rousseaux, of Algiers, this city, are receiving congratulations upon the arrival in their home of a baby daughter on last Sunday morning.

The February number of the Mansfield Collegian, published by the students of Mansfield Female College, is dedicated to the Sophomore Class of the institution.

The increasing attendance at the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., has necessitated the appointment of a staff of ushers. Rev. Del Longgrear is the pastor of the church.

Rev. T. J. Holladay, of the Pelican charge, Louisiana Conference, is indeed an itinerant—and a faithful one. He is preaching at eight places regularly, and the work is prospering in his hands. Blessings upon him!

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., is a member of the Board of Directors of the Methodist Men's Club, of which Dr. Guy E. Snavely, of Birmingham-Southern College, is president.

In spite of bad weather, Rev. Casper W. Avery has been preaching to good congregations on the Crawford and Schaeffer charge, North Mississippi Conference, and the interest in the work on the part of the people indicates a good year.

The First Methodist Church of Greenville, Miss., has suffered a great loss in the death of Miss Bettie Dunn Finlay, which sad event occurred on Feb. 9. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Rev. H. E. Raley, our pastor at Osyka, Miss., requests us to announce that Bishop W. N. Ainsworth will dedicate the church at that place on Sunday evening, March 16, at 7 p.m., and to say that all former pastors are cordially invited to be present.

The bazaar given at St. Mark's, this city, last Saturday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the furnishings fund, was largely attended and was a great success. The musical concert in the evening, given by local friends of the institution, was an unusually fine performance.

Bishop John M. Moore has been elected president of the General Sunday School Board, to succeed the late Bishop James Atkins. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington has been elected to fill the vacancy in the Commission of the Southern Assembly of Lake Junaluska, caused by the death of Bishop Atkins.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been invited to attend the annual meeting of the American Branch of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches, to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 11-13. The Archbishop will also be asked to speak in a number of large cities throughout the United States.

Dr. A. F. Smith, editor of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), will preach the commencement sermon for Whitworth College on May 18, and Dr. D. M. Key, vice president of Millsaps College, will deliver the address on May 20. The Senior Class at Whitworth this year has twenty-six candidates for the A. B. degree, and there will be at least twenty-five Department graduates.

Rev. W. W. Murray, pastor of the Harperville and Lena charge, Mississippi Conference, has issued a neat handbook of the charge for the current year. It contains much interesting matter. Brother Murray is serving his second year on this charge, and the work begins auspiciously. He has recently closed a meeting, conducted by Rev. J. M. Smith, general evangelist, in which he received 18 members into the church.

The campaign to increase the endowment of Whitworth College to a minimum of $250,000 in order to meet the requirements of the Educational Commission, is being enthusiastically promoted in Brookhaven and Lincoln County, the home of the institution. It is expected that $50,000 of the needed amount will be raised locally. There is no more urgent need to-day before our people than the adequate endowment of our educational institutions.

The following telegram from Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, is inspiring: "Five thousand pink leaf reports received to date, representing over eight million dollars undertaken to be raised by charges sending them. Seventh Episcopal District lacks but thirty-six reports to be one hundred per cent. Eighth Episcopal district lacks but twenty-seven reports to be one hundred per cent. Special effort going with tremendous momentum, and outlook is very promising."

Rev. J. D. Nesom, of Mangham, La., gives us the following sad news: "Brother C. M. Noble, of Charlieville, La., died Feb. 19 of pneumonia, and was buried the following day at Union, his home church. He was a great and good man—chairman of the board of trustees, Sunday school superintendent, and steward of the charge. He was a friend of the preacher, a friend of the church and all her institutions, a friend of men, a friend of little children, and, best of all, a friend of God." We extend sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow.

Dr. C. C. Jarrell, executive secretary of the General Hospital Board, announces that four large hospital plants are now in operation by the church, as follows: Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Mo.; Wesley Memorial Hospital, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.; Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn.; Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss. Other hospitals are projected at Montgomery, Ala., and at Dallas, Houston, and Fort Worth, Texas. The Board has in contemplation the establishment of two hospitals for tubercular patients, one east and the other west of the Mississippi river.

Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, requests the publication of the following: "The magazine known as True Story Magazine has used as advertising material a statement which I made as follows: 'I feel sure that true stories of moral tone are very greatly needed and would tend to encourage good reading, especially by our young people.' I did not write this as an endorsement of this or any other magazine and I had not seen the magazine at that time. Since seeing the magazine, I have written its publishers that my statement must not be used in advertising the magazine."

Rev. James M. Smith, general evangelist, asks us to make the following announcement: "I have an open date, beginning March 23 and continuing through April 5, that I would like very much to give to some pastor for a revival meeting. If a tent meeting is desired, I have a complete outfit for the work. I have a new tent, and am installing folding seats for two thousand people. I am also planning to put in a broadcasting outfit, to broadcast my sermons, the testimonials of the converts, and the music in the meetings. I propose to furnish this outfit when a tent meeting is desired by any church or federation of churches, in any town or city. Any pastor or evangelistic committee desiring to put on a re-rival campaign may get in touch with me by writing me at the following address: Rev. James M. Smith, P. O. Box 722, Hattiesburg, Miss."

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. M. Williams, Magee, Miss., 4; Rev. H. W. Jordan, Bernice, La., 2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Brandon, Miss., 9; Rev. O. B. Matheny, Vimville, Miss., 2; Rev. W. W. Bruner, Corinth, Miss., 3; Rev. Casper W. Avery, Crawford, Miss., 2.

THE TORCH IN THE DARKNESS.

By William C. Allen.

"April 17, 1658. Began holding school for the young slaves, the chaplain being present, charged with the duty. To stimulate the slaves to attention while at school, and to induce them to learn the Christian prayers, they were promised each a glass of brandy and two inches of tobacco, when they finish their task."

Thus wrote Johan van Riebeck, First Commander of the Settlement of the Cape Colony, in his diary. His efforts to Christianize the natives of South Africa are the first on record. He acted according to his lights. They were quite as brilliant as have been those of many of the white people who have succeeded him. Intoxicants, and the work of so-called Christian people who furnish them, to-day are counted among the worst foes of Christian missionary propaganda.

Only an outline of missionary enterprise, as I saw it in 1923, can be depicted in this short article. The men and women engaged in it are entitled to our sympathy and support. Many of them, whilst living in a fair degree of comfort, are surrounded by social and sanitary disadvantages that they would not accept at home. Shopping is difficult. What to do with their children—whether to grant them a really insufficient education with native influences about them, or to be separated from them for years by sending them to England or America—is ever a deep family problem. Small chance is there to lay up for the proverbial "rainy day." Even when they go "home" for a well-earned rest, their friends tempt them, though physically and mentally tired, to expend their strength in addresses and lectures on behalf of the cause they love. Oh, you in pleasant homes, surrounded by congenial friends, do not forget the missionaries whom your financial support makes possible—put down your money, but do more than this—remember them with genuine, vital prayers, your personal sympathy and love!

On the railway train, bound for Equatorial Africa, I met an English missionary, a splendidly put-up young man with a merry eye and a happy heart. He was an ex-conscientious objector to military service, who, after a furlough, was proceeding to his station. His field of labor was 120 miles distant from the nearest railway, and the only way to reach it was by bicycle, on native paths a few inches wide. I remembered that Missionary Bishop May, of the Anglican Church, once told me how he traveled over his vast Diocese of Northern Rhodesia in the same manner. At Cape Town on this trip we were entertained at the hospitable home of Bishop Johnson, of the American Methodist Episcopal Church. At one time he walked 1,000 miles through tropical Africa without seeing a missionary. He was accompanied by his secretary and porters who carried his luggage. These burden-bearers seldom would go further than among their own people, fearing they would be captured and eaten outside their own territories. The party carried no firearms, and no lions or wild animals disturbed them. On another trip he walked 800 miles. To this day missionary ardor records physical and moral endurance, faith and courage nowhere excelled in the world.

I remember the Kilnerton Training School, in the Transvaal, under the care of the Wesleyan Church of England. Of the 230 pupils, about 160 are in training for teaching, 12 for evangelistic work, and the remainder are securing a general education. The practice school has 250 children. A farm school attached to the institution teaches caro of livestock, field work, forestry, dairying, and horticulture. Principal William W. Shilling, remarking on the value of missionary effort, said: "If the church people are faithful to their trust and take hold of educating the native, all will be well. If they do not, God only knows what will happen. The natives getting education without Christianity is the great danger."

A typical school—this controlled by the Scotch Presbyterians—is at Impolweni, in the midst of a fragrant countryside of Natal. There are 5,993 acres belonging to the station. The sewing and gardening classes particularly interested me. This mission is the central plant from which 73 stations are conducted. Native exhorters are largely depended upon. At Impolweni I met with Amos Montyali, the Zulu pastor, who is said to be a mighty man at winning souls to Christ. He was at the moment making benches for meeting houses in distant stations. We left Principal William Ewen, and his gracious wife—all married missionaries I have met have good and gracious wives—with regret.

The American Board represents much Christian effort in South Africa. With Dr. Frederick B. Bridgman, who as of yore drives his much-used motor car like a jolly John, we inspected some of the work around Johannesburg. This brother-beloved is quite overworked in his earnest employ for Christ. Schools and preaching stations, motion pictures, Bible classes and moral uplift are conducted among many thousands of natives who toil in the mines. Severe is the battle on the part of the missionaries with the white men's vices, acquired so readily by the unsophisticated Kaffirs when they leave their distant kraals. Near Durban, through the courtesy of Dr. J. D. Taylor, we saw other work of the American Board. Unanda Mission for girls is equipped with some fine modern buildings, and is deeply religious in management and spirit. Upon the compound resides the quick-witted and charming Mary K. Edwards, now 94 years of age, who in 1868 left New York for Africa in a tiny vessel of 350 tons. It has been forty-seven years since her last visit to her native country, but with winning smile and vigorous emphasis she declared, whilst reviewing world conditions, "I am still 100 per cent American!" The Adams Mission, at Amanzimtoti, like ancient Rome, is spread over numerous hills, and as elsewhere an earnest staff instructs in a variety of occupations, and in the things of the Spirit. Here I met with and addressed a large group of native pastors and white leaders, from over South Africa, who were gathered in conference on behalf of the Kingdom. These black brethren in Christ were a fine-looking and spiritually-seeking band.

Probably the best known institution of its kind in Africa is the Lovedale Missionary Institute. It was founded by the United Free Church of Scotland. It is in the heart of a dense native population—the little round kraals of the non-Christian Kaffirs are seen in all directions. Illness detained us here for several weeks but kind friends and the care of Dr. Gray, in charge of the excellent hospital with its fifty beds, associated with the institution, contributed to our relief. The religious element, of course, is supreme. There is a large degree of industrial instruction besides the academic pursuits. Nine hours out of about thirty hours per week are devoted to manual training, agriculture, native handicrafts, etc. There are good-sized buildings for the use of the 900 students, one each for wagon building, manual training, carpentering, blacksmithing. Another building is that of the printing department, from whence books and literature are published. The girls have domestic science; the brickmaking is taught out of doors. Think of the opportunities granted these young black people, and the stabilizing effect upon the political life of the country from Christianizing them, in comparison with the lot of the half-nakcd or red-blanketed natives who, in ignorance and squalor, multiply in discontent because of the real or fancied injustices meted upon them, and so become a menace to the national life!

Do the newly-uplifted negroes in Africa understand the subtleties of a humorous tale or an American joke? I recollect the Fort Hare Native Institute, where peals of laughter greeted a funny story, with a moral, to an extent that no American or English group could excel. Do these new converts appreciate the dignity of the Christian calling and really live ont the ethical teachings of the Gospel? Whilst there are lapses, and consequent discouragements at times experienced by the missionaries, the majority find in Jesus a Saviour and a guide for daily life. It has been my happy lot as a visitor to preach Him to responsive audiences in the mission stations. To these groups He is very precious and the grand old story of His love and mercifulness is to them new, but very real.

There are besides the English and American organizations, Swiss, German, Dutch Reformed and other missions, in the southern part of South Africa, which we were unable to inspect. In contrast with them are the millions of "raw natives," missionless and oftimes spiritually hopeless, entitled to our sympathy and help.

Do the dusky-skinned but spiritually transformed men and women of the Dark Continent suffer reproach because of their freshly discovered faith? Some do. The British Government grants religious liberty, bnt an influential layman, thoroughly conversant with his subject, told me of the trials of converts in territories adjacent to British possessions. These men often indulged in singing of hymns until the authorities told them they must cease making so much noise. They quietly continued their religions exercises until ordered to quit altogether. This they refused to do. They were put in chains, placed aboard small vessels and taken to a convict settlement, where they suffer much hardship, and, where," said my informant, "they are this very night."

There is humor as well as seriousness in the story of mission life. At Lovedale Mission the devout girls held meetings before examinations, praying for success during the approaching ordeal. They were anxious not to forget what they had committed to memory during the preceding months. Here is a passage from a letter sent home by one of the students during this trying period: "Dear Mother: The girls are now praying earnestly for success in the coming examinations. The prayer we like best is one written by a man called Kipling. This prayer runs,

"'Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet;
Lest we forget, lest we forget!'"

J. E. SINGLETARY was born at Florence, Miss., April 8, 1867, and departed this life, Dec. 9, 1923. He lived at Florence all of his life except that a few months before his death he moved to Jackson. He was for many years a member of the Methodist church at Florence. On Feb. 10, 1904, he was married to Miss Eva Hale, of Florence, Miss. To this happy union were born five children, all of whom now live with their mother in Jackson, except her oldest daughter, Velma, who is now Mrs. Williams, and lives in Louisiana. Brother Singletary was in bad health several months before his death. I visited his home a number of times during his illness. He, of course, naturally wanted to be with his loved ones, but he said that he did not fear death and was ready to go. His devoted wife and loved ones spared no efforts to minister to his needs, and all was done that could be done for his comfort and recovery. On Dec. 10, at 3 o'clock, from the Methodist church at Florence, he was buried in the Florence cemetery, followed by a host of friends, who mingled their tears with the tears of the sad mother and relatives. May God bless and comfort each one of them and lead them in the way of life everlasting.

A. A. SIMMS.

Resolutions of esteem and feelings of loss to our church, upon the death of our brother, CHARLES R. HATFIELD, of Bay Hills church, which occurred near noon on Jan. 3, 1924:

Resolved, first, That we, the undersigned members of the first quarterly conference for Marksville circuit, convened in Evergreen on Jan. 21, 1924, appointed to draft resolutions of esteem and respect for Brother Chas. R. Hatfield, do with love and esteem bear testimony to our feeling of loss, because he was always in his place in our quarterly conferences, and his absence in this conference is so very noticeable, and we all sadly miss him. We feel very confident, however, that though we sadly miss his presence and brotherly counsel, he has gone to a rich reward, which is for the faithful. To his sorrowing wife and children and other friends we can say we know all is well with him, for he was ready for his Saviour's call. May we all follow and imitate his life and example.

Resolved, second, That a copy of these resolutions be given to Sister Hatfield, to keep in memory of him, and one spread upon the minutes of the first quarterly conference of the Marksville circuit, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

MRS. ANN R. PHILLIPS—AN APPRECIATION.

Very soon after our arrival in Grand Cane, La., we heard of a certain Christian character, whose light shed its radiance throughout the entire community, thus pointing others to the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." This individual was the saintly, and now sainted, Sister Ann R. Phillips, who was born in the State of Georgia, more than ninety years ago. She, with her family, moved to Louisiana, and settled in Grand Cane before the Civil War, a short time after which her husband passed on to the other life. The burden of rearing the children fell upon her heart and shoulders, but, with faith in God and courage undaunted, she submissively accepted the inevitable, and without complaint against the Divine Administration, went even to the farm, superintending the planting, cultivation, and harvesting of the crops. She became a Christian early in life, and brought her Christianity to Louisiana with her—uniting with the Grand Cane Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1860—the first name I find on my register. She passed to her reward on the 15th of December, 1923, and on the next afternoon—being the Holy Sabbath—we laid her aged and wearied frame to rest in the Mansfield cemetery. Some years ago she attended a revival meeting at the Scottsville Camp Ground, and the following bit of heart history was furnished me by one of her special friends: After a certain service, while in her tent, she said: "I have never been able to sing, even to my own children. When I get to heaven, I hope the Lord will let me sing." She leaves the following relatives: A brother living at White Plains, Ga.; three sons, W. S. Phillips, living in Grand Cane, at whose home she died; George Phillips, of Shreveport, La., and Lucius Phillips, of New York City; also a daughter, Mrs. J. Henry Shepherd, of Washington, D.C. Thus passed to her reward one of the most unselfish and consecrated of earth.

I. T. REAMES.

AN OLD-TIME METHODIST REVIVAL.

We began a meeting at Meehan Methodist church on Wednesday night, Jan. 30, and continued twelve days. The result was a revival of old-time religion.

There were about seventy-five who knelt at an altar of prayer and prayed through to victory—many for conversion, some for reclamation, and several for entire consecration.

Twenty-seven joined the Methodist Church, ages ranging from 50 years to 8.

The entire community was stirred probably as never before. Men who had been drunkards, and the heads of families, came to the altar, prayed and wept until God saved their souls. One promising young man feels the call to the ministry. He, too, was converted during the revival.

An Epworth League was organized at the close of the meeting, and a total of $116 was raised for all purposes, $80 of which went to Brother Earl B. Moll, the very able evangelist, a man of power, and a good judge of human nature. I most heartily recommend him to any pastor who desires a genuine revival of old-time religion.

We are to begin a twelve-day meeting here at Chunky on the 20th of this month. Brother Moll is to be with me here.

Please pray for us.

H. J. OAKLEY, P. C.

FROM CHUNKY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines to let you know how things are moving along on the Chunky charge, Newton District.

I was very cordially received by the good people of this work. We have been the recipients of two substantial poundings since our arrival—one shortly after we came, and again on Christmas Eve. The people further showed their loyalty by increasing the pastor's salary $300 at the first quarterly conference.

We are doing things on the Chunky charge. Two Laymen's Leagues have been organized, one at Chunky, and the other at Meehan, and we hope to organize another soon. Twenty-nine members have been added to the church since Conference.

I am greatly encouraged, and expect to have a good report at the Annual Conference.

"JESUS, SAVIOR, PILOT ME."

In the crisis of life, writes a contributor, we learn to love the great hymns. I had long known "Jesus Savior, Pilot Me," by heart; in strange and trying circumstances I learned to love it.

On a beautiful Sunday morning in the summer of 1913 during the bloody Balkan war eight of us, all Americans, sat on the upper deck of the steamer Ishmaelia on her way up the Gulf of Smyrna. We sang a number of songs, and last of all "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."

None of us will ever forget the fascination of the song on that quiet morning. Over the hills lay the ruins of Ephesus and the other cities to whose seven churches John wrote. Back beyond the headland stood the ocean-washed rock called Patmos, where the exiled apostle "was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." We, too, were in the Spirit that morning in 1913.

The song ceased, and we all sat in pensive silence. Then the steamer stopped.

"What does this mean?" we asked one another.

"We have reached the edge of the mine field," answered the chief engineer.

"Can't we go on to Smyrna?" I asked.

"Yes, when the little pilot boat comes out and leads the way through the mine field."

Soon the little pilot boat came out to us. Sometimes in its winding course the little boat described the letter S. The Ishmaelia, being a long steamer, frequently had to stop, reverse and manoeuvre in order to follow the exact course of the pilot boat.

At one place we passed between two ships that had struck mines the week before and had sunk; their masts sticking up out of the water warned us what would be our fate if we did not follow our pilot. Over and over we repeated a prayer to the Great Pilot to guide us right. We got through safe, but a ship that was following another pilot boat struck a mine and sank.

In troubled times since that day I have found confidence and courage from repeating

Jesus, Savior, pilot me
Over life's tempestuous sea;
Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rock and treach'rous shoal;
Chart and compass came from Thee;
Jesus, Savior pilot me.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNNVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. J. M. BAGLEY.

A very happy occasion was observed on the evening of Feb. 12, when Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bagley celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding, at their home, 1725 Burdette Street, New Orleans.

The house was tastefully decorated, the color scheme being gold. Children, grandchildren, relatives and friends gathered at the home to offer their congratulations and to express their wishes for many years still of happiness and joy in this life. In response to the ritual questions of the Methodist Church, read by their pastor, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, the bride and groom of fifty years again plighted their troth and renewed their marital vows. A close friend of the family, Rev. L. Schweickhardt, of the St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church, invoked God's blessings upon the aged couple, praying that they might yet have many more years of peaceful happiness together in this life.

Mrs. Bagley was Miss Annie B. Vinson, of Monroe, La., and was united in marriage to Mr. Bagley by the Rev. C. F. Evans fifty years ago in that city. Seven children have blessed the home. Two sons and a daughter have come to maturity. The sons are still unmarried. The daughter, Mrs. Chas. Vasterling, resides in the city of New Orleans and has been blessed herself with two beautiful little daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Bagley have been lifelong Methodists. For twelve years after their marriage they resided in Monroe, La. In 1884 they removed to the city of New Orleans, where they have since resided. On coming to New Orleans, they became members of the Carondelet Street Church during the pastorate of Rev. F. R. Hill. After a short time, their membership was changed to the Felicity Street Church, where they were members for more than thirty-five years. Many of their Felicity friends were present to enjoy with them the pleasure of their golden wedding anniversary. For about two years they have been members of the Carrollton Avenue Church. They still take a lively interest in the affairs of the church, though not being permitted to be actually in the services and the work of the church as much as they would like.

May God still bless theso faithful servants of his, giving to them a peaceful eventide to their life and the full assurance of his presence in their lives.

W. L. DOSS., JR., Pastor.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Rebecca Wailes Hunnicutt.

Rebecca Covington, seventh child of Edmund Howard and Jane Bell Walles, was born on the 23d day of March, 1841, and entered into the higher life on the 25th day of July, 1923. A long span of eighty-two years stretches between the earthly and heavenly birthdays, filled with the memories and experiences of several generations.

She opened her eyes in a Mississippi home on a typical Southern plantation—a home full of the peace and joy that comes to children born of a happy marriage and leading the untrammeled life of wide spaces and beautiful surroundings. Culture of the mind and spirit was an important part of the training by that home of high ideals.

When quite young, Rebecca was often in the home of her maternal grandmother, at that time feeble from age and ill health. A very tender affection existed between the two. The granddaughter read to the invalid and ministered to her comfort in many ways, while the grandmother entertained her by telling of the "dear, dead days" when she was young. She recalled the time when her father, fearing the hostile Indians, had brought his family from Tennessee down the Mississippi River on a flatboat. She told of the difficulties of the pioneer days when there was so little machinery to lighten the labor of the fields. The cotton was seeded by hand, and her own fair fingers had helped in this work. No doubt, in this loving and helpful association with her grandmother was born some of the self-restraint and sympathy that afterwards made her such an angel of mercy in the home.

This dear sister was never strong, but had wonderful power to endure and to recuperate. Her ambition as a student made her forget her body until she was compelled to cut short her literary course. Otherwise, her life might have been different in some respects; for she had a bright, original mind and might have made a place for herself in the field of literature. She had an admirable and animated way of "holding the mirror up to nature." These gifts of imagination and mimicry, added to a wealth of tender feeling, made children gather around to hear her stories, while grown-up children "listened in" with laughter and with tears.

Rebecca Covington was married in her young womanhood to Judge James Wiley of Troy, Ala., a man of much intelligence and an able lawyer. Though he was much older than his bride, the marriage was a very happy one, and brought her some much cherished friendships. He died in a very few years, and she spent her widowhood teaching school. Some years later, she was married to Rev. Benjamin Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, a man of sterling character and saintly life; a good preacher and pastor, a most kind, devoted husband. For thirteen years she was an helpmeet for him, and then the shadow fell and he was called to his reward. She continued to live in their home at Long Beach, Miss., for a number of years, and then was married to Rev. James B. Hunnicutt, of Georgia, well known throughout his State as planter, preacher, educator, and Editor of "The Southern Cultivator." Our sister gave herself with absolute devotion to his happiness and interests and to the welfare and comfort of the children who shared his home. He was a man of frail body but indomitable spirit, and, with all the strength and courage of a woman's heart, she helped to keep the body strong enough to sustain the work into which his soul plunged it. When the end came, he had accomplished the task of a very strong man.

After his death, Mrs. Hunnicutt spent most of her time in her home on the Mississippi coast with a much loved sister; frequently visiting her favorite niece and dear step-son in their home near Atlanta. This niece, Mrs. Wilbur Hunnicutt, she had helped to rear, and claimed as an only and well-beloved child, and the two children as her grandchildren. Three years ago, at their request, she took up her permanent abode with these dear ones. She often wrote of the love that was lavished on her in this home, adding, "Surely, the lines have fallen unto me in pleasant places." From this home, made sweet to her by the ministration of those she loved, she entered into her heavenly home—"the house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."

While still a young woman, under the preaching and helpful ministration of a gifted and saintly relative, Rebecca Covington Walles had a great deepening of her religious life, which was to sustain her through many afflictions and prepare her for a life of larger influence and usefulness. To the end of a long pilgrimage, the Bible was her daily companion and guide. The day before her death she discussed with a sister the meaning of one of St. Paul's deep sayings.

Gently, gently as a tired child, she fell "asleep in Jesus." In that majestic sleep, death kindly smoothed away all the wrinkles of age, the lines of care and sorrow, and brought back the semblance of a youth long past, and the faint prophecy of that radiant eternal youth into which her redeemed spirit hath entered.

HOW TO GET REPORTS.

By James E. Ellis.

1. Keep at it and everlastingly at it. This is the only way to get results.

2. Show them the reason why it is important for them to report. Many chapters do not report because they have never realized the importance of doing so. They do not know that we need reports. Many district secretaries and assistant district secretaries do not realize that it is important for them to send in their quarterly reports, and, therefore, fail to do so.

3. Use the reports you do secure. In writing to chapters use the information you have gained from their report and make suggestions for their work, and comment on some of their achievements as well as their failures. Make suggestions as to how they may improve their work.

(a) Where possible, issue a bulletin each quarter, summing up the reports you received. Mention the chapters reporting or the ones which failed to report. Call attention to some of the items reported. Sum up the work in your district and appeal to a district spirit. Try to get them to see that a good district report cannot be secured without the co-operation of every chapter. In the bulletin and in the letters hold up the aims you have for your district.

(b) Use the Conference League papers or bulletins and the League page in the Conference Advocates for publishing a digest or making comments upon reports and work done. In these commend those making reports and those doing worth while work.

(c) In use of reports, never complain, abuse or criticise, but give the facts and your aims and hopes.

4. One reason for not getting reports is the lack of good records in the local chapter. Start a campaign of good record keeping. In the District Institutes, in [illegible] letters, and in the Conference [illegible] urge good records. Explain how to keep good records. At the District Institute, and when visiting a local [illegible] carry one or more well kept record books to show.

5. Get the personal touch as quickly as possible. Visit every chapter just as soon as you can. Nothing can take the place of this personal knowledge of your Leaguers and their knowledge of you. You do not want to be known as a name but as [illegible] whom they know and like. Start to help in district work at once. When visiting is impossible, letters will have to do the work, and we must try to secure the personal touch through them.

6. Write, WRite, WRIte, WRITE, WRITE, then write some more, if the first writing does not get results. Make your letters different, and make them personal. Sometimes it works better to use different kinds of stationery, making that add to the personal element. In asking for information, make it as easy as possible for them to answer.

7. In writing for reports, be sure you enclose a blank for their use and that your name and full address is on the blank so as to save no return for data. Also the date by which the report ought to be mailed should be on the blank as well as in the letter. When writing the second time, perhaps no other report blank need be sent, but when writing the third time, send another blank in case the first has been lost.

8. If one person does not answer, write another person, if you know more than one person in that chapter. Let them know how important you think this is and ask for their help in getting the report.

9. If the report does not come after reasonable time has elapsed, if possible, go after it. Maybe you have a car you can use, or some other Leaguer or some member of your church has one and will take you there so you can get it in person.

10. Use the long distance telephone and the telegraph when you do not get results otherwise. Special delivery letters are also effective. A telegram sent collect will sometimes get results. You are trying to get them to see the importance of giving you a report. Use every method you can think of.

11. Once more, keep at it. Josh Billings once said: "Remember the postage stamp, my son; its usefulness consists in its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there."

THE STATUS OF CHILD LABOR IN CHINA.

On September 1 of last year the cotton mill owners near Shanghai dismissed the children in their employ under twelve years of age. This was a concession to public opinion and one of the reforms accomplished by the Child Labor Committee sitting in that city. It was also in keeping with the program adopted by the Chinese Christian Conference, which provides in its first article that no child under twelve shall be employed.

Industrial standards in China are changing. Mere babies still toil at night in ten-and-twelve hour shifts, bnt a new day is dawning. In Peking twenty-seven articles of labor legislation have been introduced. If these are accepted, they will be enforced by local Child Labor Committees in great industrial centers, appointed by the chambers of commerce.—Missionary Voice.

FACTS ALL CITIZENS NEED TO KNOW.

The defeat of the Federal Child Labor Law has retarded a movement which must ultimately culminate in success. The prosperity of America is In no way dependent upon the labor of her children, if we may believe what our trade journals tell us. What to do with our products is becoming a national problem. Even the Wall Street Journal discussed in one of its issues the question, "What shall we do with our one-third surplus manufacturing capacity?" No man or woman informed of the facts can longer plead that industry needs the labor of boys and girls.

This being the case, why not relegate child labor to the scrap heap, just as we have the twelve-hour day? The arguments that children must often labor for their own and their parents' support, that work keeps them out of mischief, that schools teach them nothing valuable, that all of our self-made men worked as children, are sufficiently answered by facts.

True, there is a close relation between poverty and child labor. Yet our school statistics reveal that from fifty to sixty per cent of the children leaving school for work do so for other reasons than poverty. The Children's Bureau estimates that from one-third to one-fourth of the children in industry are there for economic reasons. America is overemphasizing this aspect of the situation. It is well for us to remember that child labor and poverty are self-perpetuating. In a few generations the income from a family in which the father, mother, and every child works will not total more than in the family where the father, who is well educated for his task, supports the family. Child labor does not pay in the long run, not even economically.

Neither does labor as children know it in America "keep them out of mischief," as some would have us believe. Child labor and delinquency are closely related. When the records of 4,339 delinquent children were studied, it was found that working children were responsible for sixty-two per cent of the offenses against society. Freedom from the restraints of school, the weakening of home discipline, and the feeling of independence incident to earning money may have something to do with this tendency to delinquency on the part of the working child. Perhaps some of the excitement which the youthful criminal enjoys may be traced to his instinct for play, which is denied and repressed through long hours of labor.

It has been estimated that two million children are employed in the United States and that three-fourths of these are in the rural sections. The fact that our school system is weakest and most unsatisfactory in the country may account for the idea that school teaches nothing valuable. The children in the country often attend school only a little more than half the regular session. Some school officials are even authorized by law to consider need of agricultural labor in excusing children from attending school.

As far as farm labor goes, little of it prepares the child laborer to become a farmer. Most of their labor is simply a "board and keep" proposition. Few of them own a pig, a calf, an acre of cotton, and receive the profits therefrom.

As for the idea that every working child is a potential "self-made" man, Raymond G. Fuller remarks: "No man ever succeeded because of child labor, but rather in spite of it; no man because of the lack of rightful opportunities and advantages of children."

In spite of these discouraging aspects, the situation of the child laboring industry has steadily improved in the last two decades. In 1904 only fourteen States had a 14-year age limit for factory labor; forty-five States had such a law in 1921. In 1904 only one State had an 8-hour law for children under 16; thirty-two had such laws in 1921. Five States prohibited night work in 1904; forty-one States prohibited it in 1921. All this is vastly encouraging, but it should not blind us to the fact that in seventeen of our States children under 16 may labor more than eight hours a day; that there are still seven States which allow children to work at night; and that only thirteen out of our forty-eight States measure up to federal regulations in every particular.

The great army of child workers in the country are still unprotected by legislation except for some compulsory education statutes, which are often laxly enforced. Children under ten are working ten and twelve hours a day in California asparagus fields, in Colorado beet fields, in Texas cotton fields, Ohio onion fields, and so on. Surely such conditions are nation destroying and inexcusable.

The remedy? An amendment to the Constitution, says the American Federaltion of Labor, the Federal Council of Churches, the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., and many women's clubs and organizations, including the Children's and Women's Bureaus of the Department of Labor. They argue that a Constitution written and adopted before the rise of the factory system is not adequate to meet the needs of an industrial America. The success of such legislation when it comes will depend upon a more thorough educational system and a higher type of parents.

For destroying the nation's future efficiency and worth, nothing can compare with our present unchristian way of wasting childhood. It will do no good for the South to point to New England as the chief sinner in regard to child labor. Too many Southern children, both in factories, and on farms, are being cursed by its drudgery and cruelty. How much longer shall they and the other helpless child laborers of America be denied their birthright?

REMARKABLE RECOVERY OF MRS. SPINK

Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Full Credit

Minn. Junc., Wis.—"I was under treatment, but nothing seemed to help me, and I was run-down and so weak that I had to remain in bed much of the time and was like an invalid. I had pains in my abdomen and in the female organs, and my stomach bothered me. My husband saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, thought it must be good, and brought it home to me and advised me to try it. After taking one bottle I was able to eat, and after six bottles I was doing my own work, which I hadn't been able to do for years. I have a new baby who is doing nicely, and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and feeling better than I have for four years. The medicine is surely wonderful and a good thing to have in the house."—Mrs. GEORGE SPINK, Minnesota Junction, Wisconsin.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 per cent. benefited. For sale by druggists everywhere.

WHY YOU NEED IRON—

To make you strong and "brainy" and put the power into your blood to overcome disease germs

The food you eat contains carbon. When your food is digested it is absorbed from the intestines into the blood. When the carbon in your food comes in contact with the oxygen carried by the iron in your blood, the carbon and oxygen unite and by so doing they give off tremendous energy, thereby giving you great force, strength and endurance. Without iron your blood carries no oxygen and without oxygen there is nothing to unite with the carbon in your food, so that what you eat does you no good—you do not get any strength from it—It is like putting coal into a stove without a fire. You cannot get any heat unless the coal unites with the fire.

The strongest weapon with which to prevent and overcome colds, pneumonia, kidney trouble, rheumatism, nervous prostration, in fact almost any disease or disease germs is plenty of good rich, pure blood, strength, energy and endurance and the greater energy carrier in the body is organic iron, not metallic iron which people usually take, but organic iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron contained in what is known as organic Nuxated Iron, which may be had from almost any druggist. Nuxated Iron often increased the strength, energy and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

It has been used and highly recommended by former United States Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of U. S. Courts, many physicians and prominent men.

Over 4,000,000 people are now using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed or the manufacturers will refund your money. Sold by all druggists in tablet form only.

NUXATED IRON
For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHY run the risk of sickness? Keep clean internally. When you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, attack all parts of the body. The first results, headache, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness," etc., serve as warnings of a graver danger. If this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked, you become the victim of some serious organic disease.

Internal Cleanliness More Important Than Bathing

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Washing Cleans Only The Skin

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Health Brings Beauty

A Discovery That Has Done a World of Good

Augusta, Ga.—"My father's family was kept well ever since I can remember by using Dr. Pierce's remedies. My father used to get a supply of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' every spring, as a tonic. He took it himself and gave it to the rest of us. He did not wait until we were sick. He said, 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.' When I was about sixteen my parents saved me, I believe, from serious feminine trouble by giving me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. L. E. Gunn, 506 Moore Ave.

Keep yourself in the pink of condition by obtaining Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in liquid or tablets from your neighborhood druggist, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE GOLDEN RULE WORKS IN BUSINESS.

The Magnolia Metal Company, of New York, believes that the Golden Rule is practicable in business, and it undertakes to apply the Rule in all its dealings. The president of the company, Mr. E. C. Miller, says: "The curse of this world is selfishness. It is at the bottom of all industrial and social trouble. If men can be brought to regard other men as brothers, if they can be induced to love their neighbors as themselves, if men would do unto others as they would be done by, there would be no trouble between capital and labor. Social strife and international conflicts would cease. We, therefore, individually and as a corporation, advocate the Golden Rule with all our power, as an aid to 'peace and good will among men.'" Just as soon as men begin to work their religion, they will find that their religion works.

AT LEAST A FAIR CHANCE.

There are a great many people in the world who are not Christians. Some of these are not Christians because they do not want to be. They have heard the gospel call, they have weighed the issues involved, they have realized what it would mean for them to turn away from their sins and follow Christ, and they have deliberately refused to yield allegiance to Him. It is sad that it is so, but there seems to be little left to do for them. Christianity is not a religion of force, and coercion has no place in its propagation. "Ye would not," is one of the most pathetic utterances in the New Testament.

But what about the multitudes of people who have never had a fair chance to accept Christ? There are thousands of them all around us who have really never heard the gospel call, who have never really weighed the issues involved, who have never really faced the matter of their personal relationship to God. They have not refused to accept Christ—the question has not been squarely put up to them. They are the ones who constitute our great evangelistic opportunity.

The church has not fulfilled its mission until it has given every man, woman, and child within its reach a fair chance to accept Christ. This means a great deal more than the general proclamation of the gospel from the pulpit and a general invitation to the unconverted to accept the offers of grace; it means the direct, personal presentation of the gospel to each individual, with a full statement of all that is involved in its acceptance or rejection, in order that each one may decide for himself the vital issue. We do not mean to suggest that the general proclamation of the gospel is not an efficient means of reaching great masses of people—it has reached them in the past, and it is reaching them to-day; but the time has come for an intensive form of evangelism that will reach all the people as individuals.

This intensive form of evangelism means hard work for preachers and all Christians—but it is work that carries with it a joy that is above all price, and that hastens the glorious coming of the Kingdom of God. It is worth all it costs to give every individual in the world a fair chance to be a Christian.

PRESSING TOWARD THE GOAL.

A Great Program of Work in Mississippi.

At the Conferences in Greenville and Gulfport, and again at the Presiding Elders' Institute in Jackson, certain definite goals of achievement were set up for the year, with definite plans of concerted endeavor for their realization. The Conferences are moving, as one man, to attain these ends. The purpose and spirit of both preachers and laymen in this unified program are worthy of all praise, and promise a year of larger results than ever before.

I. A DEFINITE PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM IN EVERY DISTRICT. This embraces several features. (1) A thorough revival campaign in every organized church, after due preparation and a careful survey of the adjacent territory, to the end that no individual shall be overlooked in the church's appeal to accept Christ and enlist in His service. (2) Under the leadership of the presiding elder, all station pastors and all Conference and district evangelists, with many laymen, will be mobilized for work in the country during the summer, and particularly for school house, tent, and arbor meetings, where our church is not already organized. (3) The country campaigns will culminate in county-wide meetings in many counties in the late summer. (4) It is proposed to keep our country churches open during the spring and summer, with services every Sunday, through the enlistment of our choicest laymen.

II. A THOROUGH CAMPAIGN OF PREACHING AND DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE ON CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP in every church of the Conferences in the early part of the year, that our people may be brought to face their duty to God and His church with life and substance. This program carried out in every church means a new day of vision and triumph.

III. IT IS PROPOSED TO RAISE 100% ON ALL SALARIES AND BENEVOLENCES in every pastoral charge, and to this end we have pledged to secure all assessments for Conference work by May 1, so that the fall will be open to secure the remainder.

God is demanding of Mississippi Methodism its best. The field is white unto the harvest. He is waiting to prove the fidelity of His servants, and is ready to give us of His best. May all the Israel of God stand girded and ready to enter into a glorious harvest! WILLIAM N. AINSWORTH.

THE SUNSHINE AFTER RAIN.

We have just passed through a period of cold, rainy, gloomy weather. The streets were wet and muddy; the chilling winds made it uncomfortable to get away from the fireside; the leaden skies and the dripping eaves made a picture of gloom and desolation. People were despondent, ill-humored, pessimistic. But to-day the sun is shining! The streets are filled with people walking briskly; automobiles are passing in a stream; the voices we hear are vibrant and cheerful. After all, it seems to be a pretty good world in which to live. It is the same world, though—with the difference that the sun is shining. O gloomy, despondent, fearful soul, let the sunshine in!

POOR AMERICANS.

On the basis of tax receipts for the fiscal year 1921, the following figures show how the poor Americans managed to find a little money for luxuries during that year:

Automobiles and accesories (exclusive of trucks)	$2,512,000,000
Cigars, cigarettes, snuff, and tobacco	1,740,000,000
Beverages (non-alcoholic), ice cream, etc.	830,000,000
Admissions, dues, etc.	950,000,000
Candy	715,000,000
Jewelry, watches, etc.	490,000,000
Pianos, organs, etc.	460,000,000
Sporting goods, cameras, etc.	185,000,000
Carpets, trunks, etc. (excess value on which tax is paid)	200,000,000
Fur articles	181,000,000
Perfumes and cosmetics	150,000,000
Toilet soaps, etc.	148,000,000
Chewing gum	88,000,000
Firearms and shells	75,000,000
Sculptures, paintings, etc.	15,000,000
Portable electric fans	10,000,000
Yachts, motor boats, etc.	7,000,000
Hunting garments, etc.	4,000,000
Cigar and cigarette holders, etc.	3,000,000
Livery and livery boots	3,000,000
Total	$8,766,000,000

Obviously, not all this vast amount was spent for pure luxuries. In the case of automobiles, for example, allowance must be made for the great number used in business; toilet soap is not always to be classed as a luxury, either. But the Treasury Department of the Government estimates that about two-thirds of the total represents actual luxuries, to which it estimates five billions for luxurious expenditures which are not reflected in the tax receipts should be added, and two hundred millions spent by tourists abroad. These figures give us a total of $11,200,000,000 spent for luxuries in the United States in 1921. Thousands of children are starving in Germany. Poor Americans!

A LETTER FROM DR. W. B. LEWIS IN AFRICA.

Tunda Station, M. E. C. M., Dec. 16, 1923.

The Business Men's Prayer Meeting, Leland, Miss.

Dear Fellows: I have just come back from church in the village of Tunda. Mr. Reeve, the man in charge of the station, preached. There was a very good crowd, and I wonder what some of you would have thought if you had seen the crowd and the way they were dressed. The men had a piece of cloth wound around their bodies, and the women had a string around their wrists and a small piece of cloth about the size of my two hands in front and the same behind. The chief was there with some of his wives—he has fifty-six—and the whole congregation was attentive. In the afternoon they have Sunday school. Every morning, except Sunday, we have prayer service at 6 o'clock. Some mornings there will be a short talk, some mornings they are taught the catechism, and some mornings just a prayer or two and some songs. Of course, Mrs. Lewis and I can only look on, as we are not able as yet to talk the language, hut we hope before long to be able to talk to them.

My hospital work is very interesting though very discouraging. Every morning the nurse and I go down there and we have a song and a prayer with the patients before we start work. We have a two-room mud building with a grass roof and hard dirt floor in which to operate, do laboratory work, examine patients, keep our drugs, and fix up our reports. The walls are whitewashed inside with a kind of native whitewash, and we have a boy who sweeps and washes our aprons, etc. Across from that is a four-room building of the same kind, except for the whitewash, in which we keep our hospital cases. The rooms are just large enough for one bed really, hut we have to put up three beds in each room to accommodate our patients.

My equipment consists at present of a few stale drugs, a few handages and cotton and a roll of gauze, two or three pairs of dressing forceps, an irrigator, a microscope and a set of knives I bought myself, and a couple of glass syringes, one of which belongs to the nurse. We have more coming, but before I arrived there was only one doctor on the field and he was stationed elsewhere, so there was not equipment to go around. I bought some things myself when in Brussels, and the Board gave me authority to buy more, and I have sent back home for my personal equipment that I had in Leland. However, that is not enough for the work we have to do. There are more surgical cases on hand than I can operate on in a week, principally hernias, and some minor surgical cases that need immediate attention, but will have to wait until I can get enough supplies and equipment on hand to work with. Before I came the nurse was trying to do it all herself with the limited equipment she had. I forgot to mention that we have about six pairs of forceps for pulling teeth, and I have that to do also. Pulled one yesterday. It is very discouraging to see these cases coming in with these conditions expecting you to do something and not be able to give them the relief they should have because you have nothing with which to work and no adequate place to keep them after you work on them. At present we have about nineteen in the hospital, besides some cases that come in every day from places nearby for treatment. I have one woman on hand with an ulcer on her right breast that has nearly eaten the breast away, two with arms that are useless because of ulcers that were not treated, others with ulcers on their arms, legs, foreheads, a case of sleeping sickness that we are afraid to keep here because we have the tesetse flies here and no place to put this fellow to keep him away from the flies and thus protect others as well as ourselves. As the rainy season has started in, we will be overrun with pneumonia cases, hut I don't know where we will put them. We have started a mud huilding to accommodate forty patients, but it will not be what we need, but it is the hest we can do. The Board has put aside $5,000 for medical work here, but we need at least $7,000 to huild a brick hospital large enough to do good work and equip it. Labor is cheap here, and we have a brick kiln and burn our own brick; but even at that I am afraid we will have to wait for more money before we can huild a place such as we need. It is hard to see these poor people come in with these conditions and know that they are curahle if you only had a place to put them while you treated them, and enough equipment to treat them properly. The medical work is one of the means of gaining their confidence and making a loophole for the others to work through. As soon as I can talk to them in their own language, I am going to tell them a Bible story every morning, in addition to the song and prayer. We make a small charge for our services in order to help pay expenses and keep down the spirit of begging. For an ordinary treatment we charge 20 centimes, ahout 1 cent at the present rate of exchange. If they have to stay in the hospital, we charge 3 francs for the entire time, whether it is one week or six months. On Saturday we give each hospital patient 1 franc with which to buy food for themselves, and those that are able we make work around the grounds. If they haven't the money, we accept eggs, fruit or anything in reason and huy it ourselves and put the money in the fund. Of course we wouldn't turn down any one who was unable to pay, but most of them can afford to pay that fee. For giving intravenous injections we charge 10 francs. As we have to give each patient at least ten or twelve, it makes it less than a franc a treatment. This money is used to pay them their ration money each week and help buy more drugs. We hope to huild it up so it will he in a way self-supporting. Although this is a new station, we are already doing more medical work than Wembo Nyama, the original station opened up when our church came to Africa. Some day I will have a good place to work in for these poor fellows; but how it makes you feel to have to tell them you are not ahle at present to help them, just for the sake of a few dollars!

We are very comfortably situated in a two-room house, with a large closet for putting away our groceries and trunks. We will have a kitchen built after Christmas, as our stove is on the back porch at present; but as we have not received all our stuff as yet we are boarding with the nurse. The house is made of sun-dried hrick with a grass roof and hard dirt floor with native mats made of reeds on the floor. The walls inside and out are white with the native whitewash, and the doors and windows are screened. At present I have two large bunches of bananas hanging on the back porch that cost me about fifteen cents for the two. My back yard is full of pie-pie trees and several banana trees, one of which has a bloom on it, and if the elephants will just let it alone we will have bananas off it some day.

Mrs. Lewis and the baby are both well, and I am getting fat. We have a little boy about nine or ten years old who comes every day to play with the baby and see that she keeps her helmet on in the sun and that nothing hurts her. The climate here is wonderful. The days get real hot ahout eleven to three or four, but the nights are cool and a blanket feels good every night.

I hope the prayer servies are continuing as they were when we left. Every night I pray for the success of the services and for the Minute Men, and I hope you all will remember us. It is very interesting to be in this work, but there are some very discouraging things come up. I am going to try to tell you all every month of some of our work. I wish it was so you could see it for yourselves, because you can't get a really true insight into this branch of the work from letters and books. Mrs. Lewis joins me in best wishes to you all.

Sincerely yours,

W. B. LEWIS.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Fellow-Citizens: I am writing to emphasize Governor Whitfield's call for a State-wide conference of citizens who desire the enforcement of our laws and who are willing to exert themselves for this achievement.

The Governor, in this commendable step, has the endorsement and co-operation of the Federal authorities in the State and of the W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League forces. You are, therefore, urged:

1. To use your influence for the widest possible publicity of the Governor's proclamation, by pen or oral announcement, both public and private.

2. To attend the conference personally.

3. To influence every other person you can to attend.

4. When you return to your home, talk up the strong features of the conference, that the largest possible results may be realized.

The conference will convene in the County Courthouse at 10 a.m., March 5, 1924. Women as well as men are invited.

T. J. BAILEY, Superintendent,
Mississippi Anti-Saloon League.

EXCERPTS FROM REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINDINGS.

Adopted by Educational Association, Methodist Episcopal Shurch, South, Feb. 1, 1924.

We express our sincere appreciation to the committee in charge of the program for selecting "Religious Education of College Students" as the general theme for discussion at this session of the Methodist Educational Association. We record our gratitude for the spirit of deep earnestness that has marked all the discussion of this theme, and we regard what has been done during this session of the Educational Association as marking a definite step forward in accomplishing the purposes of this newest and vitally important undertaking in our educational field.

We especially call attention to the action of this hody in adopting the report of the Joint Committee on Curriculum for Religious Education, in which was presented an outline of courses of study lying at the foundation of college courses in Christian religion. We wish to urge that careful consideration be given to that report with a view to its early incorporation in the general curriculum of the schools and colleges having membership in this Educational Association.

A resolution from the Joint Committee of the General Sunday School Board, the Board of Education and the teachers of Religious Education in Methodist schools and colleges, we present with recommendation for adoption: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this group that we ask the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to recommend to the General Sunday School Board and the Board of Education that they devise a plan to pay the expenses of an annual meeting for the next two or three years of a group of the teachers of Religious Education, to be selected by Boards mentioned in the resolution, for the purpose of helping to shape definitely the aims, purposes and methods of this new Department of Study in our schools and colleges."

We recognize the necessity of having our General Boards and their duly authorized committees present to our students the obligation to true Christian living in every profession, trade, occupation and calling. We do not want our students to think that when we call them to consider Christian life work we mean the ministry, or missions, or teaching, or any other of the great life callings to the exclusion of their business or non-professional pursuits. We believe that the whole of human society is the subject of the redemptive power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the whole social order becomes Christian only when Jesus Christ is Lord of every legitimate human activity.

Resolved, therefore, That we call upon our Church Boards to work out a plan of visitation to our schools and colleges to present to students the whole field of Christian living in terms of our present-day life and its needs.

* * *

We put ourselves on record as standing loyal to the Sunday school, Epworth League, Missionary Societies and all other agencies of Christian Education and activity of our church, and wherever circumstances justify we favor the organization of these agencies among the students of our church schools and colleges. We believe also in the great religious values of such organizations as the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Student Volunteer Bands and similar interchurch societies. We believe in all the agencies mentioned in this paragraph, not as ends in themselves, but as means to the accomplishment of our ultimate purpose to lead all human life to active fellowship with the life of God on earth.

On the subject of athletics your committee recommends the following:

1. We frankly recognize the values to be found in athletic games in helping to develop the health, morality and loyalty of students and the unity of college life.

2. Just as frankly we recognize the evils that arise out of the misdirected purpose in much of the present-day intercollegiate athletics, either through an over-emphasis of the financial or advertising aspect of the athletic organization, or through failure of college authorities to assert complete and undisputed responsibility for every phase of student participation in athletics, or through a combination of these and other causes.

3. We pledge the moral support of the Educational Association to any and every educational institution whose faculty assumes full direction and control of all athletics, believing that this is the minimum that can be done toward the eradication of evils and the conservation of the values in college athletics.

4. Through the officers of our Educational Association we issue an invitation to the other constituent members of the Council of Church Schools of the South to join with us in a definite determination to cleanse our athletic situation of its well known and intolerable evils. Should our effort to remedy the situation fail, within a reasonable time, we register our conviction that the colleges of the church must honestly face the question whether they can continue to participate in a situation that works moral injury to our students, in view of the righteous purpose for which our colleges and schools were created.

Since Conference Boards of Education are members of this Association, we urge that they all appoint representatives each year and appropriate money for their traveling expenses to the annual meetings.

It is the sense of this Association that we should invite the editors of our church papers to become members and that the question of negotiations looking to this be referred to the Executive Committee.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. F. M. WILLIAMS.

Mrs. Carlista Catherine Williams, widow of Rev. F. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference, was born in Hickman County, Tenn., on the 11th day of August, 1831; married to Rev. F. M. Williams, then a member of the Tennessee Conference, on the 19th of April, 1852, and passed to her eternal reward on the 21st day of September, 1923. In those long and eventful years what a record she made! Her toils and trials and heartaches and disappointments and victories and rejoicings, are they not recorded in God's book of remembrance! Though small and rather frail physically, she had the will of the conqueror, the spirit of the undaunted, yet the gentleness of an angel. Magnificently did the manly qualities of the great-hearted F. M. Williams and the womanly virtues of his splendid wife blend in a beautiful companionship for nearly sixty years.

About four years after they were married they moved to Kansas, where they lived for nine years, spending the troublous period of the war among those people. Some of the experiences through which these two devoted souls passed would have overwhelmed those of less heroic spirit. In 1865 they transferred to the Mississippi Conference, and here labored together until his superannuation. In 1912 he went to Heaven. During the eleven years of her widowhood she lived quietly with her daughters, and from the home of one of them, Mrs. Clarke Wetherbee, in Waynesboro, she went to join her sainted husband.

Grandma Williams was one of the highest order of itinerant Methodist preachers' wives. She did not find her field of labor among the members of her husband's congregation; but her sphere was a more important and more exalted, though possibly a narrower, one. Hers was the lot of wife, mother, and home-maker. Her busy husband, seeking to do God's work in his pastoral charge, found a loving greeting at the end of the day's toils and journeys. No haunting fears that the children whom God had entrusted to them would be neglected in his absence hindered his work, for the true mother was there to bear her share of the responsibility and care for those whom she loved. A well-kept home with pleasant surroundings and well prepared meals met the weary itinerant, and here he rested preparatory to another day's toils. As wife, mother, home-maker, she was a blessing in that inner circle of her own home, and through it she blessed the communities in which she lived.

She was a self-sacrificing woman. Her service to her church, extending over nearly sixty years in the itinerancy, was not considered by her a hardship, but a service of love. It is true there were hardships. The salary was not always commensurate with the needs of the family; the surroundings for the rearing of the children were such as she would have shunned if she had been choosing; the lack of sympathetic co-operation with and consideration for the pastor, her husband, sometimes made itself evident. But amidst all these adverse and unpleasant conditions she labored on, "for she had respect unto the recompense of the reward." It was only her duty as she felt it, and duty calls for sacrifice. Amid it all she was cheerful. What a tonic to the worn-out nerves of the pastor when he reaches the shelter of his own home and finds the partner, who bears more than her share of the burdens and cares, with a smiling face and cheerful heart! Such was she to the man of her choice.

Many were the virtues of this good woman, whose impress has been left on a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

During her last illness she was patient and submissive, yet longing to go home and be at rest. Often she repeated the last words of General Jackson: "Let us pass over the river and rest in the shade of the trees." Her last day was peaceful and painless, and she died without a struggle.

Her body was laid to rest by the side of her sainted husband in the cemetery at Waynesboro, Miss., the services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. A. Wood. She is survived by her son, Rev. W. M. Williams, our pastor at Magee, and by four daughters: Mrs. W. C. Wetherbee, Waynesboro, Miss.; Mrs. Mollie Grant, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. J. W. Alexander, Meridian, Miss., and Mrs. A. B. Kling, Satartia, Miss.

In our Father's house she awaits our coming.

"ONE WHO LOVED HER."

SACRED OBLIGATIONS TO SUPRANNUATES.

By James H. Walker.

Let us drop back sixty years ago and take an inventory of conditions which prevailed from that time to the present. The sunny South was in war; property values were destroyed to an enormous amount, the country finally being left in a devastated condition; bankrupt outlaws were ransacking the country, robbing and murdering people. The only source of comfort came from the Methodist circuit rider, who visited the different sections of our Southland as often as was possible, with scant clothing, poorly fed horse, enduring all kinds of hardship of cold and heat, often hungry and fatigued, to speak words of comfort, exhorting and praying in every little cabin where he was admitted, depending entirely upon God by faith for his existence and laboring that the saving power of God might restore peace and happiness and to lay a foundation for his kingdom on earth for the children of men. How we used to rejoice when we saw the good man coming! During his visit his words were so consoling. At such perilous times, our door was always open, ready to welcome such a guest, glad to prepare the best we had for him. I could name several who are now enjoying their rewards in heaven—some day we will have the pleasure of meeting again under different circumstances and surroundings.

For many unfortunate years the Methodists were ignorant of the need of support for the aged circuit rider and family. I well remember how faithful they were to fill their monthly appointments, traveling several miles to do so under adverse weather conditions, to receive only in return the hospitality of the home where he and his horse were cared for.

Ignorance satisfied itself if the good man was called of God and was living by faith—God would provide without their giving a portion of their possessions. Perhaps a year's labor of this man of God would expire and not a soul would be interested enough to get out and get a support for him and family. Yet they were always glad to see him and sure to invite him back again. Strange, but true, people would look forward for the time to come when they would come together at some appointed place and have the good man to hold revival services. They would make all kinds of preparations for themselves to camp and have a big time; but not once would they make any provision for a good compensation for the good man's support.

Now we are enlightened; let us do our best to care for this good man from this time forward. It is my duty and yours.

I call to remembrance my song in the night; I commune with mine own heart.—Psalm 77:6.

REPORT OF THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

I have just finished my first round of conferences, and have enjoyed meeting many friends. I was licensed to preach at the district conference that met in Melville in 1895. I preached my first sermon at the Rapides Camp Ground, near Boyce, and was reared in Bunkie. I taught five years in Evergreen, where I was married.

The Alexandria District has been greatly hindered on account of bad weather, and many pastors have been handicapped by this. Altogether they are in a healthy, active attitude in the kingdom. The pastor at Alexandria, Brother O. W. Bradley, passed through weeks of sickness, but is again at his post. During the last three months he has lost his father, sister, and his oldest brother, hut he is well again, and hard at work. The church was so well organized that it kept going in spite of the fact that the pastor was indisposed so long.

Boyce is progressing nicely, with Brother E. L. Cargill as pastor, but there have been three losses by death. Brother W. F. Texada, who has been a steward for a long time and a prominent man in the community, died Jan. 17, and on Feb. 11 Mrs. Texada died. They were very much beloved, and will be greatly missed. Brother J. C. Roberts, another good member, has also died. These were the exponents of the Christian faith.

The Bunkie pastor, Brother W. R. Harvell, has gotten well started as a new pastor. They are expecting a forward movement and have increased his salary $200.

Campti, where Brother J. L. Cady is pastor, is a four-weeks circuit. It has suffered greatly on account of bad roads.

They have had a great meeting at Colfax, led by Evangelist W. E. Thomas, who has been assisting Brother H. B. Thomason in an evangelistic campaign.

Coushatta is enjoying her new church, that is very pretty. They expect to have their pastor, Brother Louis Hoffpauir, occupying a new parsonage during the coming year.

Elizaheth has a splendid house of worship and a mixed congregation—mostly Methodists, but members of other churches are affiliated. Brother Henry is leading largely a community work.

Evangeline circuit is doing nicely under the leadership of its new pastor, Brother J. A. Knight. At White's Chapel, they have put in a new lighting plant.

Glenmora, where Brother Boddie is pastor, has heen hlessed with a great revival, at which the Wisdom Sisters did the singing, and Rev. A. J. Gearheard did the preaching. It was all well done in spite of the bad weather.

Jena and Jonesville are enjoying their new pastor, Brother L. P. Moreland. Both churches are well organized. Brother John F. Baker died at Jena a few weeks ago, in his ninety-seventh year. He was the father of the wives of Rev. Edward Galloway and Rev. W. E. Akin, and the grandfather of Brother D. B. Boddie. He had heen a Christian since early manhood, and was almost a life-long reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. His life has left an aroma in that part of the country.

Lecompte and Woodworth are under the leadership of Brother H. W. Bowman, who is in high favor with his people. Lecompte expects to huild a hrick church during the present Conference year.

Brother J. H. French, pastor on the Marksville circuit, is delighted at the progress heing made in his work. Among other items of interest, is the painting of the church at Marksville.

Brother F. P. Moss, on the Melder circuit, has heen sick, but is hopeful, and when the weather breaks will get everything in hand perfectly.

At Melville, Brother Lahey, pastor, has eight preaching places, hut is doing his very best. The district has made him a present of a Ford car, that will be of assistance in doing his work. The building at Melville has been greatly improved and modernized.

At Natchitoches, Brother H. W. Rickey is doing a splendid work on his triangular situation, viz., East Natchitoches, West Natchitoches, and the Normal. Brother W. E. Thomas begins his meeting the first Sunday in March.

At Oakdale, the congregation is well organized. Brother Shaw has had sickness in his home. His son, Joseph, was operated on for appendicitis in February, hut is now hetter.

Pineville is taxed for room, and they are wondering how they are going to house the crowds that will attend the meeting, led by Brother Leon I. McCain, in April. Brother C. K. Smith and his little family have just moved into a fine new parsonage.

Brother Riggs, of Opelousas, has had many funerals within the last year, and has lost some of his very hest people. Evangelist Dan Kelly will hegin a meeting with him the early part of April.

Brother J. C. Price and his crowd of workers are well organized at Rochelle circuit, and are planning to get an assistant pastor.

Rapides circuit has been re-established, and is under the leadership of Rev. O. W. Nally, who came to us from the Methodist Protestant Church. They, too, are talking new church for Holloway.

At Trout and Good Pine, the people are greatly rejoiced at having their pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Waltman, returned.

C. C. WIER, P. E.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT NOTES.

Rev. L. W. Cain, at Franklinton, is rejoicing with his people in the prospect of getting into his new church in a few days. It is a modern huilding, with rooms for all church purposes. The hest thing ahout it is that the people have come so near paying for it while the work has gone on. Brother Cain hopes to have it practically out of debt at the end of the Conference year, which will complete his fourth year on the charge.

Brother Frazier, at Springfield, is making progress with a new church, doing a good part of the work with his own hands. He has five other points, and is a husy preacher.

New churches are enterprised at Alford's Chapel, Keener Memorial, First Church, Baton Rouge, and an addition is being made to the Fisher church in the Franklinton charge.

The churches are loyally accepting their quotas for the "Forgotten Man." At Amite, when the question came up, one man, Dr. C. S. Stewart, announced his intention of paying twenty-five per cent of it himself. The pastor told me he thought another man would do equally as well.

First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, Dr. C. W. Crisier, pastor, has had a campaign to round up the finances for the second year of the five-year campaign to raise $100,000 for the new church. This is a great enterprise, and deserves to succeed.

The new pastors on the district have started off well with their work. McCullen, at Istrouma, is making a fine impression; Booth, at Ponchatoula, has had sickness in the entire family, hut has kept his work well in hand, and is going forward with confidence; Warlick, at Zachary, is accused of preaching fine sermons. He was a presiding elder once, hut has reformed and learned to preach. McVey, at Baker, gets to his work in spite of had roads, and is making progress; Jay Coburn, at Pine Grove, found the parsonage needed more furniture, but that did not embarrass him—he got out his tool kit and manufactured what was needed. He has a fine garden started, and expects to fare well when it grows. William Schuhle, at Clinton, needs no reference—he is on the joh and looking faithfully after the work; Andrews, at Amite, has made a fine start. The church there is well organized, a new coat of paint has been given the church. The pastor speaks well of his predecessor, hut that is not surprising, for it was J. W. Booth.

While the roads have heen impassahle, Brother White, at Livonia, has heen improving the parsonage property; cow sheds, chicken yard, garage and garden all look as if a real man was somewhere ahout.

Brother Brulet, at Gonzales, needs several hundred dollars to erect a tabernacle. He has a fine community, but no house for preaching at that point.

Brother Miller, at Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, has been on the sick list for a few weeks, but is hack in his pulpit and about his work again.

Brother Hines, at Plaquemine, preaches at four points, and three times on Sunday. One man cannot cover that field effectually without overwork.

Brother Barrett, at Greensburg, has six points in his charge; five were represented, and all made good reports at the first quarterly conference.

Brothers Gunn, at Bogalusa, and Cain, at Franklinton, are trying to make up for our deficit in preachers hy doing circuit work in the afternoon. That they are popular with their people seems evident from the fact that both have erected fine new churches at their points.

Brother Watson, at Jackson, has the inspiration of old Centenary College buildings and grounds opposite the parsonage. Any one ought to do good work under these conditions, and Watson does.

Brother Newsom has two towns and three country churches on his charge. He and Brother McQueen are the only preachers I have found who keep the old orthodox habit of doing their work with a horse. But they do it well, as the old guard did.

On the Pearl River circuit, they keep up the old-time habit of going to quarterly conference, even when it is twenty miles away. But H. W. Jamieson is the pastor, and he looks well after his work, and the people are interested and loyal.

H. N. BROWN, P. E.

REPORT OF S. A. BROWN, COMMISSIONER, METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

To the Eexcutive Committee of the Board of Directors of the North Mississippi Conference: During the month of February your commissioner has been in three districts of the Conference; visited the following charges: Aberdeen, Fulton, Okolona, Shannon, New Albany, Shaw, Batesville, Byhalia, Hernando and Senatobia; has also preached at West Point, but took no collection at the latter place. Cash and subscriptions have been received by mail and otherwise from Houston, Tupelo and Durant. He has traveled 1,330 miles.

Amount secured in cash and subscriptions, $1,372, of which amount $1,000 has been remitted to W. M. Buie, Treasurer.

Weather conditions have been very unfavorahle, night congregations usually small as a result. Revival campaigns in several of the larger churches have prevented or made unadvisahlo the presentation of the matter during this month. Some of the better charges are giving the right of way to Superannuate Endowment Fund.

Every pastor and all of the people seem interested in the Home and building enterprise. All have assured your commissioner of their intention of assisting more later.

Respectfully submitted,

S. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI MISSION PASTORS' CONFERENCE.

The pastors of mission charges of the west side of the North Mississippi Conference met in a called meeting at Winona, Feb. 19 and 20. The meeting organized with Rev. V. C. Curtis, chairman; Rev. T. B. Thrower, secretary; Rev. S. A. Brown, recording secretary for the Board of Missions. Seventeen mission pastors were in attendance. Rev. B. P. Jaco, Conference missionary secretary; Rev. Charles Assaf, Assyrian missionary; Rev. W. M. Camphell and Rev. J. W. Robertson, missionary evangelists, were with us, taking part in the discussions, giving inspiration and encouragement. The order of the meeting was similar to the one held at Tupelo the week before by the mission pastors of that vicinity, a round table discussion of the problems of the rural mission pastorates.

Rev. Carroll Varner, with the help of the Woman's Missionary Society and other good people of Winona, looked after our every need in the way of entertainment, and a rising vote of thanks was tendered them by all visitors present.

The closing service was an inspiration to all, and we went away feeling that it was indeed good to have been there.

T. B. THROWER, Sec'y.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

We, your Committee on Resolutions, offer the following:

1. It is the sense of this body, after hearing the reports and making inquiry in detail, that at least 75% of these (mission) charges are financially able to be self-sustaining.

2. That it is our aim to make every effort to get our charges out of the rut of "the summertime only system" of holding revival meetings, and give at least ten days to each meeting.

3. That we pledge ourselves to do our best to bring up the benevolences in full, and to this end we will begin this task at once.

4. That we pledge ourselves to remember that it is our duty to make our charge fit for a better preacher while we are fitting the preacher for a better charge.

Finally, we feel that this meeting has been of great benefit to us and that we appreciate this opportunity of coming together for the discussion of our mutual problems; therefore we ask the Board of Missions to make this meeting an annual event.

Respectfully submitted, T. B. Thrower, W. P. Bailey, M. H. Weed, Committee.

A YEAR OF GROWTH IN LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

By J. Q. Schisler, Assistant Director of Training Work, General Sunday School Board.

The work of teacher training has shown a steady growth each year since the adoption of the Standard Training Course by the General Sunday School Board in 1916. A number of the leading denominations in America use the Standard Training Course as the basis of their curriculum for training the Sunday school officers and teachers. The greatest increase in the number of awards on the Standard Training Course ever made in one year by any denomination in America was recorded by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during the calendar year 1923.

There has been an increase in the number of credits awarded through each method of training work being carried on by the General Sunday School Board. This growth is indicative of a growing appreciation on the part of presiding elders, pastors, Sunday school superintendents and other officers and teachers as to the importance of Sunday school work and the need of thoroughgoing preparation for it.

Standard Training Schools.

In 1922 there were 126 Standard Training Schools conducted. These schools awarded 9,007 credits. In 1923 there were 185 Standard Training Schools, awarding a total of 13,119 credits, an increase of more than forty-five per cent in the number of credits awarded. There are now 325 high-grade instructors on the approved list of the General Sunday School Board for work in Standard Schools. These instructors taught a total of 1,012 weeks in Standard Training Schools last year. The work accomplished in leadership training through these Standard Schools is the equivalent of what would be done in ten schools of Religious Education each with a faculty of three specialists running for full nine months' terms with an average enrollment in each school of sixty-six.

Standard Training Courses in Colleges.

The texts of the Standard Training Course are being offered quite extensively along with other texts in the department of Religious Education in a number of denominational colleges. Credit is given by the General Sunday School Board to students in these colleges who take courses in Religious Education that parallel the units of the Standard Training Course when such courses are credited by the colleges on degrees. Professors of Religious Education in our colleges have exhibited sincere and growing interest in this work. The total number of credits awarded by the General Sunday School Board in 1923, upon the basis of this work, in twenty-two colleges of the church is 4,195.

Correspondence Work.

The remarkable growth in the number of Standard Training Schools, with the consequent growth in the number of credits awarded in these schools, has not surpassed the growth of training work which is being carried on through other types of training schools, through local training classes and by individual students. The total number of credits awarded in these phases of work in 1922 was 9,745, including credits awarded through colleges. The total for 1923, not including credits awarded through colleges, is 10,092.

A plan for correspondence work on the specialization units of the Standard Training Course was put into operation last year which doubtless has in it great possibilities for development in the future. That is called "Supervised Study by Correspondence." This plan contemplates giving expert advice and suggestions on the lesson papers which are prepared by the students who take these courses by correspondence. For this service a small fee is charged. Though this plan was not put into operation until Oct. 20 of last year, there were 188 pupils enrolled for this work by the middle of January of this year.

The painstaking care with which every detail of all this correspondence work is handled is indicated by the fact that during the past six years more than 51,000 examination papers have been handled in the office of Training Work, and only two papers out of this large number have been lost. Every effort is made to keep every detail of the records of this work absolutely accurate.

Leadership School at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina.

There was a new departure last summer in the Leadership Training School which is conducted annually by the General Sunday School Board at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina. Instead of the usual two weeks' Leadership School, which has been held annually for the past six years, there were three terms of two weeks each, and a six weeks' school running parallel. In the six weeks' school, only advanced courses were offered. This plan will be followed again this year. The total enrollment in the school in 1923 was 696. This includes only those students who actually enrolled for work in the school, and does not include any visitors. This is an advance of 242 over the highest mark in previous years. The total number of credits awarded was 686, which is 182 above any previous year.

Pastors' Schools.

In 1923, at the invitation of the Board of Missions, the General Sunday School Board, through the Director of Training Work, entered into active co-operation with the Home Department of the Board of Missions in plans for the promotion and support of Pastors' Schools. According to this arrangement, one-fourth of the courses in the curriculum for each school were to be courses in the field of Religious Education which the General Sunday School Board could credit on its Standard Training Course. From two to four of these courses have been included in the curriculum of each of the Pastors' Schools which have been held this year.

The total enrollment for actual class work in these twelve schools was more than 1,200. Many others were in and out, and 498 credits in the courses of Religious Education have been earned by pastors in these schools this year.

Total Awards Annually.

The increase of 1922 over previous years, as well as the steady growth of this work, may be indicated by the following figures giving the total annual awards during the past five years: 1919, 6,900; 1920, 11,900; 1921, 16,900; 1922, 18,750; 1923, 28,524. It will be seen that the increase of 1923 over the previous year's record is fifty-two per cent.

These figures for the first three years are approximate, since these calculations are based on the period intervening between the annual meetings of the General Sunday School Board, which was not uniformly twelve months. There is, however, no duplication in the figures here given, and the figures for the last two years are accurate.

EVANGELISTIC VISIT TO HISTORIC FORT ADAMS.

By Rev. Henry G. Hawkins.

Last Sunday afternoon, following an inspiring worship in Woodville at the morning hour, with a masterful sermon by Dr. Rolfe Hunt, District Missionary Evangelist, he and the writer started to Fort Adams, twenty miles distant. It is now a village of about 75 souls, 40 or 50 being whites, the others Negroes. Of the whites, about half are Protestant; the remainder Roman Catholic or non-professing. There are five Methodists. About the only religious services held in the place are once per month by the Baptists, who have seven members. The work there is supported by their Mission Board.

The place had more comparative importance in previous periods of history than to-day. The first Christian minister that ever resided within the territorial limits of the present State of Mississippi was the priest Davion, from Quebec, who, in 1698, erected on the lofty bluff at Fort Adams a cross, and started work there among the Tunica Indians. It was for a time called Roche a Davion. It was later chosen by the British as the most favorable position on the Mississippi River for an impregnable fortress, and in honor of Major Loftus went by the name of Loftus Heights for a long time; later the name was changed to Fort Adams. Lorenzo Dow preached there in 1803.

On our route thither we halted more than once to "take in" the rugged scenery. The road itself, after over a century of use, has in places become a gorge ten and twenty feet deep. Radiating from the ridges to which the road keeps, are picturesque ravines, luxuriant with cane and a variety of forest growth. These ravines shape out from ridges somewhat like toes on a turkey's foot. Rev. J. D. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, while at Woodville, wrote an unpublished story, "The Queen of Turkey Toe." But the soil, aided by the roots, has a wonderful compactness; and in only one place does cave scenery appear, at which point the view approaches the sublime.

At last we reached one-mile hill, the descent of which brings one to the outskirts of the village. A muddy section of the road detained us thirty minutes. But at dusk we found all comfort at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Morgan. The hospitality was unbounded.

Nearly all the Protestant population attended the evening service held, at which we distributed leaflets, explained the purpose of our visit, and had a touching gospel message by Dr. Hunt, which was appreciated. One man remarked that he could have listened an hour longer. Next morning we visited in the homes and stores, with short worship at several places. One sister secured from us the addres of Rev. W. W. Moore, under whom she joined the church. The site of a prospective oil well was pointed out; there has been a bubbling of gas for years.

The last hour of the morning we used for a climb along the ruins of the old fort and to the top of Block House Hill. The effort is repaid in the grand view of the majestic sweep of river and valley.

While finishing our dinner of fish, prepared by our hostess, it began raining, and we took rather a hurried departure, hoping to attain the top of one-mile hill before it became impassable. Paying little attention to scenery, we drove on, and reached our starting point at four, the rain continuing and a blizzard threatening.

First Church, Wichita Falls, Wichita Falls District, North Texas Conference, adds $1900 to its minimum quota, thus accepting $10,000 to raise for Superannuate Endowment. The pastor, Dr. Claude M. Simpson, writes: "Observe that we have brought our quota up from $8100 to $10,000. Our committee hopes to raise this entire amount the first year. I feel sure that if they do that they shall be able to raise more than the quota during the period of five years. Unless all signs fail me, this is certain to be done."

Epworth University charge, San Francisco District, Pacific Conference, adds $2570 to its minimum quota, thus accepting $5000 to raise for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. John R. Score is the pastor. All things considered, this is one of the most notable achievements that has yet come to my attention in this glorious effort for the "forgotten man." It is quite in line with many extremely heartening things coming to the office of the Board of Finance from the Conferences in the far West.

Druid Hills charge, North Atlanta District, North Georgia Conference, adds $5160 to its minimum quota, thus accepting $10,000 to raise for Superannuate Endowment. Rev. A. M. Pierce is the pastor. Truly we can lift up our eyes unto the "Hills," for they give unto us clear vision, inspiration, and health.

Central charge, Asheville District, Western North Carolina Conference, adds $8300 to its minimum quota, thus accepting $15,000 to raise for Superannuate Endowment. The pastor, Dr. Ashley Chappell, writes, "Since we have on a great building plan of something like half a million dollars, we decided to pay at least $15,000." So far this great Church has the distinction of being second only to St. John's Church, St Louis, in the amount accepted to raise for Superannuate Endowment.

A BIT OF STARTLING INFORMATION.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon sends me a letter from one of his preachers, Rev. J. E. Woodward, pastor of Centerville charge, Tennessess Conference, from which I quote as follows: "According to our Tennessee Conference Journals for the past forty years, the total amount unpaid on salaries for the presiding elders and pastors is practically the same amount assessed for that purpose last year—that is, the minimum asking for our Conference for Superannuate Endowment ($282,000) is in reality asking only the payment of an actual debt that has been accumulating these forty years."

I am sure that the condition revealed in these figures by Brother Woodward concerning the Tennessee Conference will prevail in all of the Conferences of the Church.

This means that the minimum asking of $10,000,000 for the Superannuate Endowment is simply an urgent request for the Church to pay the unpaid amount she promised her active preachers through a period of forty years. It is the most powerful appeal for a hearty response to the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment that has come to my attention.

When Every Presiding Elder is Wholly Pink

The Home Circle

HER MALADY.

It's been the awful longest while
My mother's been away!
You see, my grandma's pretty sick,
And don't get well so very quick:
'Course mother has to stay.

Aunt Nan is kind, but she don't make
The rightest kind of curls,
Or know just how to button me;
She isn't used to it, you see—
She has no little girls.

And father, well, he doesn't know
Just how to go to bed.
He gets things all hindside before,
And hangs my clothes up by the door,
Away above my head.

Now, mother always puts them 'cross
My little willow chair;
'N' I have a car'mel and a drink—
That's pretty comfor'ble, I think—
And then she braids my hair.

But father sometimes he forgets
To wash my hands and face,
And he can't never 'member where
He stopped in telling 'bout the bear;
He just forgets the place.

There's some things father does, I like,
When I have said my prayers;
He tells me stories in the dark;
They're full of whist! and hist! and hark!
And lovely creepy scares.

But then when I have smuggled down,
All comfor'bly in bed,
I wish that mother would come in,
And cuddle me, and then begin
To sing, and smoothe my head.

Of course Aunt Nan and father do
Their best—I know they've tried;
And everybody's very kind—
I try my hardest not to mind
But something aches inside.

I don't believe it's homesickness
That makes my eyelids prick;
I wish I knew what 'tis I've got—
'Course, home is here—but mother's not!
I b'lieve I'm mothersick!

MARY ELLEN FIGHTS SOME GIANTS.

By Eugene du Maurier.

"Oh, dear," sighed Mary Ellen, "why can't there be giants around nowadays for boys and girls to fight, as there were when David was a little shepherd boy? But a girl never gets a chance to show how brave she can be."

"What is that I hear my Mary Ellen saying about giants?" asked grandma, who had come in from the country to spend the day in Golden Rule Lane. She was sewing in the little sitting room where Mary Ellen was throwing her books and tennis balls around.

"Oh, nothing, grandma. I was just wishing there were giants now as there were in Gulliver's Travels, and when David killed Goliath. Miss Ophelia was telling us at Sunday school this morning that all the king's soldiers were afraid of this giant, Goliath, and that David, a young shepherd boy, not so much taller than I am, went out alone and killed him with only a sling and some pebbles and God's help. Miss Ophelia showed us how the sling was made and the way David put the pebbles in it."

"What makes you think that there aren't any giants nowadays, Mary Ellen?" Grandma smiled in her quizzical way. "I think I see several very dreadful ones in this pretty sitting room, my dear. And they may be even harder to kill than David's giant was."

"Why, grandma, where are they? I'd like to kill one of them right off. Oh, couldn't I?" cried Mary Ellen.

"Would you really, Mary Ellen? Well, I think you can if you just try hard enough. But you will have to work very hard and not let the giants get the better of you."

"Where are the giants, grandma? What are their names?" Mary Ellen ran around the room in great delight.

"The giant I saw round here awhile ago, when mother and I first came in from church, was when mother told a certain little girl she must not go to another little girl's house when she had the measles. This giant's name was Bad Temper. He certainly did win a big battle when this little girl threw all her dolls and hooks in a heap, and stamped her foot at her mother. And little girls who want to fight giants ought first to know how to be prepared to fight. A good fighter must be orderly, and know where to find his things without a great deal of fuss and time being wasted."

Grandma kissed Mary Ellen. Mary Ellen hung her head.

"But, grandma," she said, "that isn't really, truly like Goliath."

"Oh, do you think so? But those are the very giants that cause so much needless fighting all over the world. Let me tell you a few of them. Bad Temper, Selfishness, Jealousy, and a great many more of them you will meet by-and-by as you grow older."

"But, oh, grandma, there wouldn't be any fun fighting such things as that."

"Oh, no, I suppose not much fun. But I did not know that fighting was fun. I never thought it was. But these are the very kind of giants that cause all the fighting, as I told you. You would be just as brave as David was, if you could conquer those things because, you see, the worst about these giants is that the longer you let them act badly the bigger and stronger they grow, until they get enormously big and ever so much harder to fight. Suppose you start before they get any worse."

"I reckon you're right, grandma," agreed Mary Ellen. "I'll try to beat these giants all to pieces, so they won't have a chance to beat me."

And Mary Ellen began to put her dolls away in their cradles. She arranged her books neatly in her little toy closet and after hanging up her hat and coat she went and stood looking up into grandma's smiling face.

"I've begun a real battle, grandma, dear," she said.

"I see, Mary Ellen. Bravo! It needs patience and good humor to help."—Selected.

THE LULLABY.

By Willie C. Page.

Notes soft, low-sung and sweet,
Float out on the twilight air,
A mother singing her child to sleep:
"Rest, little one; the angels fair
Will guard you; nay, do not weep,
Mother is near; sleep, dear one, sleep.
Rest my dear, do not fear,
Rock-a-bye, hush-a-bye."

No other music can sway the heart,
No matter how faint its echoes ring,
No other songs such love impart,
To the soul sweet memories bring—
Methinks the angels above the skies
Silence their harps when mothers sing lullabies.
"Rest, my dear, mother is near,
Rock-a-bye, hush-a-bye."

Let not our hearts be troubled. The church of Christ was not built on the shifting sand, but founded deep in the living rock. Century after century the rain has descended and the floods risen, and the winds blown and beaten upon it. Century after century the tide of assaulting criticism has ebbed, to rush up again with fiercer surges and more apparently resistless force. But look again. The rock is there, unshaken still. It is but the blustering waves which have been shattered into spray, and dashed into a briny mist upon the winds.—Canon Farrar.

Meditation is at once the greatest aid to faithfulness and its greatest joy, constantly renewing the cause of it; and through meditation faithfulness takes possession of its treasures. Meditation is the concentration of all our thoughts and all our powers on one point. It renders all verities present at once, and all their consequences plain. Meditate, says the Master to the disciples, and evil will seem less possible and good more easy.—Mme. Swetchine.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Billy Sunday meeting in Shreveport, La., has assumed large proportions, great congregations attending the services.

The faculty and student body of Whitworth College have subscribed $5000 to the endowment fund now being raised for the institution.

Dr. E. P. Puckett, dean of Central College, Fayette, Mo., has been elected acting president to take the place of Dr. Paul H. Linn, recently deceased.

Miss Flora Watson, a New Orleans Methodist temporarily residing in Santa Monica, Calif., keeps in touch with church work at home by reading the Advocate.

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, and Sister O'Bryant are making their home with a widowed daughter in Gulfport, Miss.

Rev. Ellis Smith, formerly pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, now pastor of the Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., was in the city last week and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He is diligently cultivating the great field in which he now serves, and there are evidences of substantial progress.

The Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., has assumed the Fannin circuit as a home mission special. Rev. E. K. Means is the pastor of Galloway Memorial.

"The Cedar Grove Methodist News," is the name of the monthly bulletin just begun to be issued by Rev. H. L. Johns, the wide-awake and efficient pastor of our church at Cedar Grove, La.

A Presbyterian subscriber to the Advocate, in renewing his subscription recently, writes: "This is a fine paper, and it is such a pity that so many Methodist homes are without it." It is a pity.

The congregation of the First Methodist Church, Mansfield, La., recently presented its pastor, Rev. J. B. Peters, a Hudson coach. Brother Peters and his people evidently love each other.

Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. He spoke favorably of the work of the district.

The work of the church at Water Valley, Miss., prospers under the leadership of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb. Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, well known Bible student and lecturer, was with Brother Lipscomb at Water Valley last Sunday.

Rev. H. T. Young, our pastor at De Ridder, La., will begin a revival meeting on March 23, in which he will do the preaching. The church has been thoroughly organized for the meeting, and the outlook is good for a great revival.

The Methodist pastors of Jackson, Miss., are organized into a Methodist Ministerial Union, which devotes one meeting a month to the ministerial students of Millsaps College. These gatherings are both entertaining and profitable.

The General Conference Committee on Entertainment will meet in Louisville, Ky., on May 1, to consider plans for the 1926 session of the General Conference. Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, of San Antonio, Tex., is chairman of the committee.

With the erection of the new building for the old Rankin Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., the name has been changed to "Grace Methodist Church." The new building is nearly completed. Rev. F. L. Applewhite is the pastor.

Mrs. D. W. Ulmer, wife of our pastor at Scooba, Miss., recently underwent a very serious operation at the hospital at Electric Mills, Miss. We are rejoiced to know that she has been able to return to her home, and trust that she will speedily be restored to health.

Rev. and Mrs. V. C. Curtis announce the marriage of their daughter, Gladys, to Mr. Gordon Martin McIntyre on Sunday, Feb. 24, at Greenwood, Miss. The young couple will make their home at Jackson, Miss. The Advocate prays the richest blessings of Heaven upon them.

A brother wrote recently: "I am sorry you have to remind me of my renewal. I really wish my pastor would 'jog' my memory at that point if any one must." Mention from the pulpit now and then of the Advocate would be a favor both to the paper and to some of its subscribers.

Bishop William N. Ainsworth is one of our most faithful and efficient chief pastors. He has recently preached at Anguilla and Bolton, in the Mississippi Conference; at Amory, New Albany, and Corinth, in the North Mississippi Conference, and at various points in the Florida Conference—all in his episcopal district. He will preach at Brookhaven and at Osyka, Miss., on March 16, morning and evening.

Dr. H. G. Davis, pastor of our church at Aberdeen, Miss., preached at Amory, Miss., on Sunday, Feb. 24, while Rev. W. R. Lott preached at Tupelo for Rev. C. C. Alexander, our pastor there. Brother Alexander has been sick for several weeks, but we are glad to report that he is improving.

Mrs. W. W. Hopper, widow of the lamented Rev. W. W. Hopper, late of the Mississippi Conference, is making her home at Leitchfield, Ky. Mrs. Hopper is still greatly interested in the work of the Mississippi Conference, and she takes the Advocate to keep informed concerning its progress.

Dr. J. C. F. Harrington, Director of Concepcion College, Concepcion, Chile, honored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday of last week while passing through the city en route to New York. Concepcion College is under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, devoted to the education of girls.

Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman has been transferred from Church Street Methodist Church, Knoxville, Tenn., to the Western North Carolina Conference and appointed pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church at Gastonia, N. C., to succeed Rev. W. A. Lambeth, recently appointed to the Representative Church, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Milton C. Chalmers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Chalmers, and Miss Isabella Lochte, a beautiful and charming young lady of this city, were recently married. They are now taking a honeymoon trip, visiting the principal cities of the North and East. Mr. Chalmers has long been connected with the office force of the Advocate, and has proved himself to be a young man of sterling character and a high order of business ability. The editor of the Advocate eteems him very highly, and he joins their many friends in wishing them lifelong happiness and in praying that the richest blessings of Heaven may be visited upon them.

The Times-Picayune of this city recently devoted two pages of its rotogravure section to a presentation of the pictures of the buildings, student body, and president and faculty of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., accompanied by a comprehensive "write-up" in the news section. The Times-Picayune is to be commended for its progressive policy in giving so much space to this institution. Centenary College is one of the great schools of Louisiana, and it deserves the confidence, support, and patronage of all the friends of education. Dr. George S. Sexton, the able and hard-working president, has done a monumental work in building up the endowment, adding to the equipment, and increasing the number of students. Centenary is now one of the most solidly established of all our institutions—and greater things are in store for it if the present administration receives the support and cooperation it deserves.

Bob Shuler, of Trinity Methodist Church, Los Angeles, has recently delivered four Sunday afternoon addresses on "The Healing Cults and Tongues Movements" before a total attendance of more than 10,000 people. These addresses were very intimately related, in their analysis and study, to the program of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson and her disciples. More than 50,000 copies of these sermons have gone out over America and Canada. The sermons are published in a 64-page booklet, which may be had from Brother Shuler by addressing him at 1201 South Flower Street. Los Angeles, Calif., and enclosing 15 cents for printing and postage. The booklet also contains 100 questions submitted to Mrs. McPherson before the sermons were delivered, which she did not answer. It contains several pages of quotations from Mrs. McPherson's writings. The booklet is a revelation and our people should know this movement from the viewpoint of one of our Methodist pastors on the ground and studiouly watching it and its results.

THE PERIL OF PAGANISM AMONG US.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

No nation has ever perished by the assaults of forces outside of it, but from demoralization and decay within itself.

All the powerful peoples of whom history gives us any account have died as suicides. They have risen to power and prosperity by self-denial and have fallen into defeat and desolation by self-indulgence. Plain living has given them strength, and luxurious habits have wrought their ruin. Poverty has blessed them, and opulence has cursed them.

Wealth is perilous not only to individuals, but it is very dangerous to nations also, especially when it pours in suddenly and has not been acquired gradually as the fruit of patient labor. It leads to lawless luxury and engenders vile voluptuousness.

The desolate ruins of Egypt, Nineveh and Babylon attest and exemplify these truths, and the decline and fall of the Roman Empire confirm them.

When these world-powers of ancient times, deluded by their riches, imagined that they were too potent ever to perish, they were tottering to their fall into remediless ruin.

Modern nations, especially the Anglo-Saxon peoples, should take warning from the fate of these ancient commonwealths.

The vast accumulations of Great Britain and the United States are of recent origin, and they are drawing after them enfeebling luxury and riotous voluptuousness.

Into Great Britain has flowed untold wealth from the fruitful colonies and enriching dependencies of the empire and from its gainful maritime power. The luxury now prevalent under the reign of George V exceeds anything dreamed of when Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India as well as Sovereign of the United Kingdom.

The wealth of the United States has increased even more swiftly. In 1860 the taxable property in our country, exclusive of the value of slaves, which was a liability rather than an asset, was no more than $15,000,000,000. Now it exceeds $315,000,000,000. Were immeasurable riches ever gathered so rapidly in all the history of mankind?

These two great nations now own quite half of the wealth of the world.

They control one-fourth of the land surface of the globe; exercise authority over one-third of the world's population; occupy all the most strategic points on the planet; possess most of the richest mines of gold, iron, and coal in the earth; command the highways of the sea and the railways of the land; dominate the commerce of mankind; and direct all the currents of material good for the human race.

Alas! While surpassing in wealth the Babylonish Kingdom in its most opulent era, they have imbibed also the vanity and pride of the boastful king of that base realm, who, walking upon the roof of his luxurious palace and reflecting on the resources of his rich dominions, said: "Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the house of the Kingdom by the might of my power and for the honor of my majesty?" (Daniel 4:30.) While they indulge in his folly, let them be mindful also of the divine judgment upon him of which we read: "While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven saying, 'O King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken: The Kingdom is departed from thee.'" (Daniel 4:31).

It is to be feared, however, that they are too obsessed with the mania for luxury and pleasure-seeking to heed any warning of God or man.

The dreadful war of 1914-18, with all its sorrows and horrors, has not chastened them. If there is any difference between their habits of riotous self-indulgence before the war, and now, their extravagance it seems their frenzy of folly is more wild at this time than it was in the pre-war period.

Just a few days ago a press dispatch from Leeds, England, reported a notable economist of England as taking this view with reference to the luxurious manner of living now prevalent in his country. The cablegram, as printed in our great dailies, was as follows:

"The reason rehabilitation in this country is so slow is that every one, both collectively and individually, spends more than they can afford. This statement was made by Felix J. Blakemore recently in an address to the Chamber of Commerce here. He said the Board of Trade returns for 1923 showed an adverse balance against this country of $1,060,570,000, indicating that while there had been a fall in the value of the exports, the value of imports had increased and so depreciated the value of currency in foreign countries, causing a slight increase in the cost of living.

"'How many people,' he asked, 'if they could be detached from present prejudices and could see through the eyes of 1913, would be able to recognize or even reconcile the standard of living of pre-war days with that demanded at the present time? The theatre, music hall and cinema make a far greater demand upon personal expenditure than they did in 1913. Food luxuries at every meal are more common to-day than in pre-war days, and it appears to be an undoubted fact that individually and nationally we are living above our income.'

"Mr. Blackmore asserted that unless all sections of the community were prepared to make some sacrifice and return to a more humble and less ostentatious method of living, the period necessary for the adjustment of the present economic difficulties would be greatly extended."

With equal justice the same might be said of the present conditions in the United States. On all sides we see the most wasteful extravagance and conscienceless self-indulgence.

The end of all these things is as sorrowful as it is certain unless they be speedily cured.

The inordinate pursuit of pleasure always results in effeminacy and degeneracy. To this rule there has never been found an exception in all the world during all the ages of its existence.

Self-indulgence engenders indolence also. When it prevails, there is always an utter want of earnest purpose and high endeavor. With respect to these noble things, it is cynical and scornful. The votaries of sensual pleasure speedily come to sneering at God and goodness. Religion is a matter of jest and derision with them. So are all other serious matters. They make sport a business and then make sport of business. They covet incomes without work.

The public welfare has no place in their thoughts, and no slightest concern for the consequences of their manner of life upon the community at large engages their attention for a moment. They have no interest in the public affairs of the nation; no, not enough to understand, or oppose, even legislation that is unfriendly to the enterprises from which they derive the money that they squander on their vices.

Their opinions, which they express most volubly, are not products of thought so much as pretexts to defend their sins.

Yet with all they are restless, discontented, and unhappy. Life becomes to them dull and stale and insipid. Utterly intoxicated with pleasure and sensual enjoyment, they are constantly seeking new devices to impart zest to an existence that has become tedious, monotonous, and uninteresting. They are ever craving "new thrills."

Of course, such habits of living are inevitably destructive of morality. Rights of property and even the sanctity of human life are violated if they stand in the way of self-indulgence. Gambling, theft, robbery, defalcations, and murder itself, are employed to get the means for procuring pleasure. These crimes of covetousness are of daily occurrence now in our land. Men are robbed and killed in open daylight to get money for sensual gratifications. So it was in old Rome, and so runs the carnival of crime in the United States.

Well may cries be raised for a "return to normalcy," for all these manifestations of evil are symptoms of moral insanity.

But there will be no return to normalcy until the people repent and return to God. On the contrary, conditions will grow worse and worse; for it is the characteristic property of vice always to run from one excess of indulgence to another that is more piquant and pleasurable.

There is but one saving element in our social system which ancient Babylon and Rome did not have. They had music, painting, sculpture, drama, architecture, literature, philosophy and everything else that imagination could conceive and ingenuity obtain; but they were without the Christian religion.

Christianity is our only hope, and we can rely on that to save us only in so far as we have the experience of its heavenly life and subject ourselves to its divine law. Even in a Christian atmosphere paganism may flourish.

If we live like pagans, we shall perish like pagans. Indeed, all the evil things which Mr. Blakemore discussed and deprecated at Leeds, and the similar sins which abound in our own country, are utterly pagan in their nature. Our luxury-loving men and women are as truly pagans as any of the voluptuaries who brought Babylon to destruction and Rome to ruin. Unless they can be Christianized—genuinely converted to God—they will corrupt our civilization and overthrow our social system.

The supreme need of Great Britain and the United States is a revival of pure and undefiled religion. Such a revival is most imperatively needed in our cities and towns, and among those in them who belong to what is called "the upper classes."

The "slums" do not need a revival of religion quite as urgently as does what is called "society."

From all classes in our land, both high and low, paganism must be purged away by the purifying power of Christ's saving grace. It has become a peril to the nation which puts in jeopardy every hour the life of the Republic.

The church at Mitchell, La., suffered a great loss in the going away of Sister E. J. LEYSETH, Nov. 23, 1923. She was born, Aug. 13, 1844, in Orangeburg County, South Carolina. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when but a small girl, and from that day to her death graced the church with such loving service that both young and old feel the vacant seat's need of her. She and Mr. E. J. Leyseth, marriaed about the closing of the Civil War. Twelve children were born to this home. They moved to Louisiana in 1884 and settled in Sabine Parish, and have lived here ever since. In thought and life, she was truly a Christian. Beyond the suffering of afflictions and physical death she has passed. She leaves two sons and three daughters and her husband to suffer their loss of such a companion. The Holy Spirit temper the winds to the shorn ones! Her weary feet and hands are at rest. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. * * * They rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." She sees her Savior face to face whom she loved and served for these many years.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our hearts are made to mourn on account of the death of our friend and co-worker, MRS. MARY SPEER BENNETT, who has been for many months a resident of our community; and,

Whereas, she was a faithful and much-loved member of the Methodist church, where she welcomed every opportunity of service and made her influence felt in every department of the church life; therefore, be it Resolved:

1. That the church has lost a valued and useful worker.

2. That the Young Woman's Missionary Society has sustained an irremediable loss in the death of one of the most substantial members.

3. That the community has lost a citizen worthy of emulation in the principles of Christianity as exemplified in the life of Mrs. Bennett.

4. That while we are stricken with grief over the death of our friend, we humbly submit to the inevitable and shall try to turn our grief into thanksgiving that we had the privilege of her association for even a short while in this life, and shall endeavor to meet her in the life eternal.

5. That we extend our deepest love and sympathy to the bereaved loved ones and pray that this great sorrow may draw them closer to our Heavenly Father.

THE CHILD.

It is the wish of every patriotic parent that his child shall stand in the front ranks of the business world. To get these results the teacher, the parent, and the child must work together. Open mutiny with the school means hindrance to the child to attain this high standing. There should be close unity. Consult freely on these subjects which will largely determine the welfare of the future of the child. If your child is not doing well in school, it is your duty to see the teacher and help her advise plans which will remedy the evil. Don't! Don't pour out your wrath on the teacher at the supper table in the presence of the children. It only means that your children will reap what you sow for them. They will have no confidence in the teacher, cause trouble in school, and lose all their interest in learning. If the evil exists in school, see the teacher and it will be made right.—Weekly County Press.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

WOMAN'S SPECIALIST

Remedies may come and remedies may go in one long fleeting procession and are soon forgotton; but Dr. Pierce's wonderful herbal remedies have steadily endured for over fifty years and are as popular to-day as half a century ago, a splendid record, indeed.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, when a young and rising physician in Pennsylvania, learned the secrets of Nature's healing; he noticed the effect of certain herbs that regulate the disorders of women, also that the Indian women passed easily thru motherhood, and, using the same herbs and roots, he compounded an unequalled remedy for women, which he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials from grateful women bear witness to its healing powers. Dr. Pierce's phenomenal success was due to the purity of his medicines and to the confidence he enjoyed as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, where he founded the Invalids Hotel, known as a model sanitarium thruout the United States and Canada.

TO PASTORS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Fellow-workers: We are sending you a copy of the program which has been arranged by the Epworth League Department of our church for the observance of "Anniversary Day."

The time set is April 13, but if for any cause you or your young people will not be able to use that time, a Sunday as near thereto as possible should be used to give your church an opportunity to have a part in this work for our young people.

If there is no League, as such, every church should have "Young People's Day," and let the membership know what is planned; and organize a League if possible.

Let an offering be taken and sent at once to the treasurer, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Belzoni, Miss., for use in the extension plans of your Conference Epworth League Board.

The League Conference will be held at Grenada College, this year, June 18-21, 1924. Send your young people.

Yours in service.

R. P. NEBLETT,
Chairman League Board.

MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

A new Epworth League chapter has been organized at Ocean Springs, Miss., designated as Chapter 12,618, with the following officers, whose address is Ocean Springs, Miss.: President, Miss Ellen Scharr; First Department Superintendent, Miss Mary L. Holland; Second Department, Mrs. E. B. Williams; Third Department, Miss Jessie Vickers; Fourth Department, Miss Ellen Scharr; Secretary, Miss Eleanor Vickers; Treasurer, Mr. Sherman Wright.

* * *

Have you planned your summer vacation yet? Remember the Epworth League Assembly, Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., June 9-15, inclusive. Plan to get to Brookhaven for the very first service and remain until the very last. We expect one hundred moro than we had last year, but Brookhaven and the college officials say they will prepare for us. Additional room will be provided on the campus, and it is expected that there will be plenty of room in the dormitories for all who come.

Mr. Pastor, won't you head your delegation and come to spend the entire week? It will do you good. No one could spend a week in such a meeting as wo had last year and not feel a great spiritual benefit within his own soul.

May we call your attention to the following letter received by our president from one of our pastors, Rev. L. F. Alford, soon after the close of our second Assembly? Note what he has to say about the spiritual side of the work there. We quote his letter in full:

"The second Epworth League Assembly of the Mississippi Conference is a thing of history as far as dates are concerned, but we feel sure that its complete history will not be finished until the final records are made up in 'That Great Day.' The program had been in preparation for almost the entire year, and was all that could be desired.

"The attendance was large and as fine a body of young people as ever gathered in any Epworth League conference. A large majority of the delegates were of the 'Teen Age,' and were ready to be taught and led in holy things.

"As an officer, my duties would not permit my taking class work, but I attended the platform addresses and other features, and all were up to the standard, full of instruction and inspiration.

"I wish to mention a few things which, in my judgment, made the Assembly the great success it was.

"First of all, I would say that the faculty was well organized and consecrated. We were all sorry not to have Dr. Parker with us, but those who took his place were very acceptable and did fine work.

"The jubilant spirit and holy fellowship which prevailed in the study halls, in the dining-room and on the campus; the blessed memory of these will linger long in the hearts of all of us.

"In the third place, I would say the spiritual feast at the Morning Watch, the Vesper Service, and the worship with the good people of Brookhaven on the Sabbath day will long be remembered as mountain top experiences.

"The last feature which I would mention, and in my judgment, the greatest of all, was the large number who dedicated themselves for life service; and, after all, this is the real 'acid test' of a church gathering of this kind.

"With prayer and faith we turn our faces hopefully to the Third Assembly at Whitworth next June."

Remember what our Bishop said of our Assembly last year? "Of all that I have attended, this is one of the best."

It will be even better this year. "Dont' skip it."

We have the following letter addressed to Epworth Leaguers of the Mississippi Conference by Brother Ware, our Conference special in Africa:

"Dear Friends: It has been more than three months since we left home, and since this is my first letter to you, I feel that we are due you an apology; therefore, I begin this letter by saying that upon our arrival in London it was found that Mrs. Ware's health was such as to cause anxiety about our proceeding to the Congo, and for about two months we feared we would have to return to the States and let you good people look for another representative to carry on

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interferance with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.—Adv.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Write to Miss Virginia Thomas, Grenada, Miss., for the Sunday School Day programs you need for your school.

In preparing the program you will find that if you assign each department superintendent that part of the program for her department and have it taught during the Sunday school hour, the results will be far more satisfactory. As a rule it is better to adhere to the program as it is written.

Charleston has a fine class that is ready to take the examination on the book, "Organization and Administration." Leland has a similar class, and so has Aberdeen.

The pastor, superintendent, and teachers at Leland have an ambition to make their school one of the best in the Conference. Their church building is nearing completion. It is a dream, a poem, a shout of victory, a prophecy of the coming Kingdom. It embodies the three-fold idea of instruction, worship, and service. If you care to see a church building properly designed and constructed, make a visit to Leland.

Dr. H. G. Davis, our pastor at Aberdeen, is leading his superintendent and teachers in the work of a greater Sunday school. He is wise enough to know that he must have trained teachers to help build the kingdom of God in the hearts of the children of the church. To this end he has a class of fifteen studying "Organization and Administration." The church is prospering and will continue to grow under his leadership.

The third session of the Greenville District Standard Training School will be held at Clarksdale, April 7-12. From present indications we shall have an enrollment of more than one hundred. Following courses will be offered:

"Training Beginners in Worship," Mrs. W. W. Adams, of Memphis, instructor.

"The School," Mr. E. E. French, of Nashville, instructor.

This oil is conceded to be the most penetrating remedy known. Its prompt and immediate effect in relieving pain is due to the fact that it penetrates to the affected parts at once. As an illustration, pour ten drops on the thickest piece of sole leather and it will penetrate this substance through and through in three minutes.

"Pupil Study," Mrs. J. B. Randolph, of Corinth, instructor.

"Principles of Religious Teaching," Mrs. W. W. Templeton, of Atoka, Tenn., instructor.

"Life and Letters of St. Paul," Rev. W. W. Woollard, of Starkville, instructor.

Rev. J. H. Felts is Educational Director. Rev. T. M. Brownlee, Clarksdale, will look after registration and classification, with the help of his many able assistants. Textbooks are to be had of Brother Brownlee. If you expect to be entertained while attending the school write to Mrs. Ed. Moore, Clarksdale. Those working for credit must attend the twelve class periods, beginning Monday, at 3 p. m.

Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, pastor of First Church, Memphis, Tenn., will give us some great gospel messages at the different hours of worship. The presiding elder of the Greenville District asked his district stewards to make an appropriation of $300 for this school. This district surely means to give the church the best type of service.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Ruston District, writes: "I think everything is moving well, and I believe we will have a great Federation at Homer."

A member of the Lake Charles District Council meeting, writes: "I suppose Mr. Mayo will advise you of our meeting in Jennings, and that we decided on a Training School for Lake Charles District to be held in Lake Charles."

The first direct order for Sunday School Day programs for 1924 was made by Mrs. W. M. Martin, of Grove, La.

The Conference Sunday School Board, through the Executive Committee, has secured the services of Mrs. J. M. Henry, of Ruston, La., to do some field work during the summer months, as Asistant Conference Superintendent. Louisiana Methodism will receive this announcement with approval, as Mrs. Henry is known as one of the outstanding Sunday school workers of the State.

We have just received from the training section of the General Sunday School Board, at Nashville, an individual record card of every Sunday school worker in Louisiana Methodism who has secured one or more credits from this training section of our General Board. They also sent us an individual card of those who took a course in training and failed to secure the credit.

The records sent us show some very interesting facts concerning where the workers reside who have taken one or more credits. The record by districts of these workers is as follows: Number residing in the Shreveport District leads with the total of 151. A large number of the 151 persons receiving a credit, did so while at college at Mansfield or Centenary. This fact, no doubt, gives the Shreveport District a lead over the Alexandria and the Baton Rouge Districts of 20, the Baton Rouge and Alexandria District having a total of 131 each. The New Orleans District comes next with 128; Monroe 83; Ruston 71, and Lake Charles 34.

The subject of "worship" in the Sunday school is receiving great at-

Is Your Blood Starving For Want of Iron?

Without Plenty of Iron In Your Blood You Don't Get the Strength and Nourishment Out of the Food You Eat

When over-work, lack of sleep, improper food and impure air sap the iron from your blood and make you feel weak, nervous, irritable and out-of-sorts, it is important that you should at once put more iron into your blood. Without iron the blood loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing that you eat does you the proper amount of good because you don't get the full strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. Because of this steady starvation of the blood and nerves people often become weakened, tired-out, nervous and rundown and frequently develop all sorts of symptoms. But the moment organic iron—Nuxated Iron—is supplied a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear in most cases, the flesh becomes firmer, the muscles get back their strength and the roses of health bloom in cheeks that were pale and sickly looking.

No matter what other so-called remedies you may have tried, if you are not strong, vigorous, hearty and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next, take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. You can obtain Nuxated Iron from your druggist on the distinct understanding that if you are not fully satisfied your money will be refunded.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The month of February has been a ...ighty good month in spite of ...eather and road conditions. Our ...rk started on the Harrisville ...arge with two training classes, one ... Poplar Springs and the other at ...arrisville. Fourteen examination ...pers have been turned in from ...ese two classes. Many more attended the classes who did not take the work. We all felt that the work would go forward from this effort on the part of the workers.

Plans have been perfected for the Jackson District Standard Training School. Brother Burton, the presiding elder, is insisting that each pastor in the district take a unit of work in the Training School. The Board of Managers have adopted this slogan, "At least one person from each Sunday school in the Jackson District taking one unit of work for credit in the Training School." Brother Burton has challenged the District to have an enrollment of 400. This is a daring attempt, and if put across would mean a most wonderful victory for the Sunday school cause. Rev. E. K. Means, the dean and host of the school, has perfected the local arrangements, and is promoting the work in a most worth while manner. All the committees are working, and it is hoped that this will be the best and the most far-reaching school the city of Jackson has ever had.

On the second Sunday, a visit to Forest Hill and Byram was greatly enjoyed. Brother Downer was sick and unable to be out. There were good congregations and a very pleasant date. The work on this circuit starts well, and we trust will be better than any previous year.

Mr. M. W. Brabham came to us from Nashville on the 18th, and stayed with us through the 24th for a series of county-wide meetings for Methodist Sunday school workers. We began our work at Forest, Scott County. Brother Alford gave us two very strong deliverances on the need of religious education. A cloudy, threatening day greeted us here, but we had almost 100% representation from the county, and many visitors from adjoining counties. Under the leadership of the presiding elder, 100% of the preachers and superintendents joined the "1,000 Study Club for 1924."

We reached Brandon, Rankin County, in a cold drizzle. To our delight, the local people gave us a fine hearing. Pelahatchie and Fannin were represented. The rest were kept away on account of the roads. The Brandon Sunday school was checked. The Fannin school reported they would be ready to be checked at an early date. Under the leadership of the presiding elder, 100% of the preachers and superintendents present enrolled in "the 1,000 Study Club for 1924."

It was still cold when we reached Mendenhall, Simpson County. Brother Burton, both at Brandon and at Mendenhall, gave us strong messages on religious education, which were very helpful and encouraging. Here again 100% of the pastors and superintendents were enrolled in the "1,000 Study Club for 1924." On our way back to Jackson we stopped at D'Lo, where the workers met us for a most encouraging session.

Brother Ellis could not be with us for the morning session at McComb, Pike County, but gave us a most enjoyable and inspiring message at the afternoon session. Only two pastors from the county were absent. A representative crowd greeted us and stayed through. The work done in this meeting was most satisfactory indeed. Again, under the leadership of the presiding elder, 100% of the preachers and superintendents present enrolled in the "1,000 Study Club for 1924."

In these four meetings a county organization was perfected, the object of which was to reach each Methodist Sunday school in the county at least once each quarter with a program for work of the local Sunday school that will be informing and inspiring. We are hoping great things from these county organizations.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehner says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." GAVE CARDUI TO DAUGHTER

Alabama Mother Had Thorough Confidence In Cardui, as a Result of Her Own Long, Successful Use of It.

Gadsden, Ala.—"My back and hips gave me a great deal of trouble before my first baby was born," Mrs. W. J. Daugherty recently told a visitor at her home on Route 2, here.

"When I became . . . the second time," continued Mrs. Daugherty, "I had the same trouble, only worse . . . Medicines did me no good at all; in fact, I got worse instead of better. Finally, when I had given up hope of getting well, a neighbor told me about Cardui. My husband got me a bottle and I started on it at once.

"Immediately I began to improve. I have taken Cardi ever since, when I get puny . . . For female trouble it can't be beat. I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen.

"I took it because I suffered so from aching all over—arms, legs and head. My head would ache for weeks at a time. After taking Cardui I have completely recovered."

Cardui is a perfectly harmless, mild, purely vegetable extract of medicinal herbs. One of the ingredients of which it is composed has been known to medical science for over six hundred years and has been recommended by medical writers as being of great value in many female ailments. A TOURIST GIVES $25,000 TO BUY A SITE FOR THE UNION WOMAN'S COLLEGE IN KOREA.

Twenty-five thousand dollars given by a tourist to make it possible to buy a beautiful site for a Union Woman's Christian College in Korea is the latest news from Korea.

The General Boards working in China united their assets some time ago to establish in Seoul the Chosen Christian College for men. A splendid site was secured on the edge of the city of Seoul and buildings erected, and the college is well on its way; but the Korean women have no college. The Japanese government provides no colleges for women. The Methodist Episcopal Church has a little beginning of a college known as "Ewha." For a number of years the three Woman's Boards working in Korea—the Presbyterian, the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—have had under consideration a uniting of their forces to do for women what Chosen Christian College does for men. The Woman's Misionary Council indorsed such a development when funds should be available.

Meanwhile the friends of the movement have been feeling the deepest concern that money be secured to purchase a site. Just across from the Chosen Christian College on a beautiful hillside and valley was a piece of land wonderfully adapted for a college campus. It was feared that unless it could be secured soon, it would not be available, and it was undoubtedly the very best location. There was, however, no money, and hopes for the college have been about buried. Then came the news that a tourist traveling through Seoul heard of the need and gave $25,000 to purchase the ground adjoining the men's college for a woman's college. At last it looks as if Korea's womanhood has a chance to come to its own.—Council Bulletin.

KOREA MISSION CLOTH TO BE SOLD IN AMERICA.

A mail order house for the sale of the famous Korean Mission cloth, which "never fades and seldom wears out," will be opened in America in March, according to the Missionary Voice. Mr. C. H. Deal, manager of the textile department of the Higher Common School, Songdo, Korea, where this cloth is manufactured by the students working their way through school, writes that this enterprise employs thirty Christian men on salary and enables one hundred and thirty-five of the selected youth of our church in Korea to obtain an education. The textile department is not only self-supporting, but each year it makes a profit which is reinvested so that more boys may be taken care of.

Mr. Deal writes that during the year cloth was sold in twenty-four foreign countries to the amount of 177,000 yen. "This year we have added a hosiery department, also shirt-making and children's garment manufacturing," says his letter. "Next year our output will be much larger than this year. We are opening up a mail order distributing branch in America next March to provide quick service and lower duty to our regular customers."

AN EFFICIENT CHURCH.

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman, D.D.

The writer is in his fourth year as pastor of Central Church, Fort Worth, Tex.

For three years we were in a program of building and organization, during which time also more than 800 were received into the membership of the church.

Now we are well organized in a real plant, practically arranged and equipped for all the activities of a great working institution running seven days a week in the service of Him who has left his church here to make real in human life the salvation that he made possible. We have an elegant auditorium of beauty, comfort, and well-nigh perfect acoustics, and a seating capacity of 1,200, adjacent to which is a four-story Sunday school building in every detail adapted to the work of the Standard A Departmentized Sunday School. Each Sunday morning we have, simultaneously, seven different opening programs in as many different departments, each department with its own superintendent and corps of officers and teachers. The general superintendent is free to visit any department, or all departments as he may deem best.

In a separate building we have an up-to-date gymnasium, with spectators' gallery, dressing rooms, showers, etc.

The ground floor of the Sunday school building is used during the entire week for various activities. Taking the past week as an average, we had the following:

Monday night, a Young Men's banquet.

Tuesday afternoon, the regular weekly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Tuesday night, stewards' meeting.

Wednesday night, a large, enthusiastic, spiritual prayer meeting.

Thursday night, three simultaneous programs, four counting the gymnasium games: The weekly banquet of the Men's Bible Class, a full choir rehearsal, and a young people's valentine party, in which more than one hundred splendid Christian young people delightfully engaged in pure, wholesome fun.

Friday night, the regular weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts, and a splendid and largely attended entertainment by the Woman's Missionary Society.

There are games in the gymnasium from 4 to 9 p. m. every day except Sunday and during prayer meeting Wednesday.

Orchestra practice was missed this week on account of the director's being sick.

Our Sunday school has more than one hundred officers and teachers, a majority of whom, in response to a request of the general superintendent and the pastor, agreed to attend the mid-week prayer meeting and to enter into personal evangelism.

Other groups, such as the Senior Epworth League, Senior and Junior Boards of Stewards, Bible Classes, and Woman's Missionary Society, are also entering into our evangelistic campaign, from now until Easter Sunday, which is to be led by the pastor.

These various groups are also diligent in many social service activities.

Our budget for this year has been doubled.

Attendance at preaching services continues to be large throughout the entire year.

Our people are religious, busy, efficient and happy. And there is a constant song of joy in the grateful heart of the pastor.

COULD NOT WALK BECAUSE OF PAIN

Bad Case of Woman's Illness Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Missouri.—"I had such a bad case of female trouble that I could not walk because of the pains from inflammation. My back was all done up. I could hardly bend, could not go up stairs because of weakness, and no one could possibly be in worse shape than I was. I have taken twelve bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am a strong woman now and can work down any of my neighbors. They wonder how I can do so much work. I dare say that I have recommended your medicine to a thousand women. A little book was thrown at my door, and that is how I first learned of it."—Mrs. D. M. BEAUCHAMP, 1104 Morrison Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Letters like this bring out the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Dr. Gladney with the presiding elder at every appointment. Superintendent Sunday schools, every teacher possible, and the stewards present and on time. Of course if pastors fail the conference, the conference will fail the pastors. If stewards will but redeem the time this round may put the slower charges on a par with Clarksdale, Shelby, Duncan and Alligator, Tunica, Lake Cormorant, Shaw, Merigold, Coahoma, Lyon, Rosedale and Hillhouse, Sherard, Glen Allan, Lula. What one charge does in this district every charge in the district may do. A snipe-bag steward, a circle-running pastor and stay-at-home elder are fatal to any charge or district.

Four things are necessary to the success of this round—yea, five:

1. Have the S. T. S. apportionment in hand at the quarterly conference.
2. Be ready to sign the "Pink Slip."
3. Be ready to nominate delegates to the District Conference.
4. Have all reports in hand that business may be expedited.
5. See every person designated to be present personally, and "compel" them to come.

Mrs. Housewife! Do You Favor Food Law Enforcement?

You appreciate the vital importance of pure and fresh drugs—drugs that are prepared and packed under fixed government regulations.

How about foods? Aren't they just as important? Take baking powder, for instance—it is useful only when it produces its maximum of leavening strength in the baking. Leavening efficiency means light, wholesome breadstuffs—bakings that are easily digested, which in turn aid towards perfect health. Lack of leavening strength means flat and soggy bakings which are surely indigestible.

The pure food laws of our country have standardized baking powder—they require that it contain 12% leavening gas at the time of sale to the consumer. Why is it that these laws have not been applied to baking powder mixed with flour, and sold in sacks as self rising flour?

Thousands of barrels of self rising flour are annually sold in our southern states without any regulation by pure food measures, except in Texas.

Any grade of flour and any quality or strength of baking powder can be used in making self rising flour and sold to the unthinking public without official criticism.

Numerous baking and laboratory experiments have been conducted by state chemists and other investigators. They found a surprising amount of this mixed flour to be so deteriorated as to be productive only of heavy, soggy bakings.

Do you want to eat foods made from self rising flours that do not contain the necessary leavening strength—foods that are hard to digest and a detriment to health? Do you want the law to protect you in this instance as it protects the user of medicine? It is for you and others interested in public health to decide.

Remember Calumet Baking Powder meets every requirement of the law—that it retains its great leavening strength to the last spoonful.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AS LLOYD GEORGE SEES IT.

We are not unfamiliar with the statements of various visitors from abroad to the United States in which they take occasion to scoff at our prohibition laws and to condemn the policy of total abstinence upon which our people have determined in order to do away with the curse of intoxicating drink; nor are we unfamiliar with the fact that the opponents of prohibition make capital of the opinions of these visitors, evidently with the hope of weakening the sentiment for prohibition in this country, thus paving the way for a return to the unrestricted liquor traffic.

But not all visitors from foreign shores condemn the Eighteenth Amendment; and one of them—and he the most distinguished of them all—declares that prohibition is the greatest gain any nation received from the world war. Here is what former Premier Lloyd George said recently, as given in a press dispatch from London:

"America is the country which got the most out of the great war—not gold, but prohibition. I saw a little of prohibition. I went to America with the usual European prejudice against it, hearing that it was demoralizing America and that there was more liquor than ever. That is not true—not in the least. There are some men who get it. But I believe it is mostly very bad liquor. Some have already been poisoned, and others are getting frightened for fear that their turn will come next. That generation will disappear. The vast majority are not drinking. The worst form of repeal that is threatened is a return to light wines and beer, but they will never have saloons again. The only unemployed in America are the jailers. The children of America never saw such times as they have now."

The greatest moral advance in modern times was marked by the adoption of national prohibition by the United States; the next great advance will be the adoption of world-wide prohibition—and that is coming.

A LITTLE MORE ACTION, PLEASE.

There seem to be some people so obsessed with the idea that heresy is rampant in the church that they are ready to declare that sound doctrine is a rarity among those who are in positions of leadership and that the faith is utterly corrupt except among a few—of whom they apparently fain would be called the chiefest. If the suggestion be made that these so-called traitors to the church be brought to account, that they be haled into court to stand trial for their alleged delinquences, immediately the retort is hurled at the one who has the temerity to make so simple a suggestion that a trial would be a farce, that a trial committee would be "packed," that a fair trial would be impossible, that no ecclesiastical court could be found to convict, etc., etc.

All of which, by the most charitable construction, is a super-abundant blast of hot air.

How do these self-constituted guardians of the faith, these self-appointed monitors of the church, know that a trial would be a farce, that the committee would be "packed," that a fair trial would be impossible? Have they formally preferred charges against anybody? Have they asked for the appointment of a committee of investigation? Have they arrested anybody's character in Conference session? Have they put in motion the machinery that is specifically provided for just such situations as they declare exist?

What do these critics of the church, of its high officials, of its duly constituted boards, of its educational institutions, of its plans and programs, want—what do they expect? Do they imagine that mere clamor will have the effect of judicial procedure, that mere words by voluble individuals will legally convict and condemn and impose penalties? Would they enforce the law by extra-legal means and maintain the constitution by unconstitutional measures?

What is the matter with the courage of these assailants of the integrity of the church? Are they afraid to bring charges formally against some preacher whom they suspect of heresy because they would, by so doing, bring upon themselves the wrath of some one in a place of authority? Are they afraid they would lose some position they now hold and the prestige and emolument of some place they now occupy? Are they afraid they would not get a "good appointment" at the next session of the Conference? Unthinkable! Fear of consequences certainly has never characterized those who were truly zealous for the faith—in other days men were willing to suffer imprisonment, to be torn limb from limb, to be burned at the stake, to be counted as the offscouring of the earth for their faith. Are there no longer those in whose veins runs the blood of martyrs?

But suppose a trial should be had and an acquittal should result—what then? Why, have another trial of another suspected brother in another Conference. But suppose no conviction could be had there? Why, go to still another Conference, and still another one, until every Conference has had its heresy trial and the matter has been thoroughly threshed out from one side of the connection to the other and the church has had an opportunity to say whether heresy exists or not. But suppose no conviction resulted anywhere? There could be only one conclusion—that the charges were not sustained, that the church is still sound in the faith.

If the church itself is not to pass on the character of its faith, who is to do so? A group of individuals who set themselves against what the church itself says? But where would they get their authority to act, and whom would they represent? The church would not authorize the few to act against the many, and the few, self-appointed, could represent only themselves. That they would have a perfect right to do—provided they would be satisfied with that.

Does heresy exist in the church? Possibly so; probably so. It would be strange if, in a membership running into the millions, there should not be a single individual whose views were out of keeping, at least in some detail, with the commonly accepted doctrinal standards of the church. In all probability, though, some of these are good Christians, whether they are good Methodists or not.

Is the church shot through and through with unsound teaching and unsafe leadership? There is no proof that it is so. There is much talk in some quarters, but formal charges are lacking. It is a fundamental principle of law that the accused is to be held innocent until he is proved guilty. If the church is full of heresies, it is high time to prefer some charges, hold some trials, secure some convictions, and impose some penalties.

There has been enough of hot air—cold facts and action are needed.

A WISE PREMIER.

In an address the other day, England's new Prime Minister in the Labor Cabinet, Ramsay Macdonald, made a significant statement. He said: "We must put materialism aside and remember that man does not live for his pocket, but for his soul and for justice." He was speaking before a church gathering, and he may have used a text; if he did not, one lay at hand—"What shall a man be profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

The Master's words are as timely to-day as they were when uttered, and his teachings are still—as they always will be—the foundation upon which right character, both individual and national, must be based. Materialism is no new menace to the welfare of the world, but it threatens with increasing insidiousness. We are too prone to measure values in terms of what we can see and touch. Gold makes a stronger appeal to many people than the gospel does. That may be because men know the value of gold and they do not know the value of the gospel. Gold will buy goods and the things men want; the gospel will save souls—but men forget their souls in the fight for gold. It is a wise leader of his people who calls them back to the real values of life. A full pocket and an empty soul—what a tragedy!

BY WATERS STILL.

By Willie C. Page.

The twilight falls, the winds blow chill;
The sun sinks low o'er the distant hill;
Deeper grow the shadows of the night;
The shining stars have veiled their light;
O'er rocks and chasms He guides our way,
By waters still to endless day.

Through pastures green, by waters still—
If we follow His steps, obey His will,
With watchful care our way He will guide,
His love and peace in our hearts abide.
By waters still, though it be dark and cold,
Tender Shepherd, keep us within Thy fold.

REV. H. B. COTTRELL—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. W. B. Jones.

Hugh Blair Cottrell was born in Cokesboro, S. C., April 19, 1831. He was the nineteenth child of his father and the ninth of his mother, his father having been married before, and there were ten children in each family. Thus the boy was thoroughly Wesleyan by nature. In those pioneer days it was not thought a thing incredible for the family to grow to large proportions, and out of such families came great men and noble women, some of them giants.

His father, Thomas Cottrell, was a physician, and was also a local Methodist preacher; his mother, Susan Lewis, was an educator, being for years the prineipal of a large and flourishing female school at Greensboro, Ala., where she received a salary of $3,000 a year. These two were of excellent character and reputation, as well as culture. The children, therefore, entered into a large inheritance of noble examples and qualities which attended the boy all the way down to the end of life. It would be expected that he would grow up to be a man of education, culture, and refinement. He was educated in his mother's school and in other academies of his day. Not to speak of the others, there came out of this home, as well as the subject of this sketch, the brilliant, superb preacher, Dr. J. B. Cottrell, of Alabama, a very prominent member of the Alabama Conference for years, but who died a member of the Louisville Conference, in which he served a number of prominent churches. Having moved from South Carolina to Alabama while the boy was young, these noble parents brought him up among that sturdy folk where he could get plenty of iron in his blood.

Of course, his face was early turned toward the holy sanctuary, and there he found the Lord, was converted at the age of nine, and was received into the Methodist Church. But he was destined to minister in the holy place, and responded to the call to preach, was licensed about 1859 and became a preacher of no mean sort.

Brother Cottrell was married in 1861 to Miss Annie Porteus Blunt, at Old Spring Hill in Alabama, being about 30 years of age. There were born to this young couple two daughters and one son—Susie Agnes, Angie Fletcher, and Thomas Blunt. These all survive him; one daughter, Mrs. J. J. Muse, lives in Memphis; the other, Mrs. J. H. Powers, lives in Meridian, Miss., and his son, Thomas B., is pastor of the Gibson Memorial Methodist Church, Vicksburg. They mourn his loss. They loved him, and hugged him to their bosoms as with hooks of steel. But the wife and mother did not linger with them more than about ten years, when she was summoned to her reward. The husband never married again.

He was for three years a member of the Alabama Conference, but during the Civil War he gave up his Conference connection and entered educational work, in which he spent the remainder of his active life, in his adopted State. To this great work he gave about thirty of the best years of his life; and to this work he seemed to be specially adapted. But he did not cease to preach—he loved to preach, and continued to do so till the last year or so of his earthly pilgrimage, till the infirmities of the flesh would no longer allow it. The people heard him gladly. He was prepared in mind and heart to preach. He was a diligent student of tho Scriptures. He believed them with all his soul. He believed in the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints. He had little place for skepticism and Modernism. Among the last things he said was: "The world is going to pieces. They are trying to take the Word from us." He had little patience with anything that seemed to strike at the foundation of the church, or to undermine the Scriptures. To the one he had sworn his fealty, and on the promises of the other he pillowed his weary head. To him it was God's church and God's word, and he had implicit faith and confidence in each.

To sum up the life and character of such a man is a very difficult task; to sum up the good he has done in the world, and to measure his influence, is impossible. As a preacher he does not suffer in comparison with those who are called excellent. As a teacher he reached a high mark. He taught in the Spring Hill Academy, in Alabama, for seventeen years. In the pulpit, in the class room, or elsewhere, he was a man of deep convictions and great moral stamina, and would stand for his convictions, no matter who was against him, although he was generous in his estimate of the opinions of others. And he was gentle and unassuming. It may be said of him that he was a good man, one, indeed, in whom there was no guile. He was a heavenly man. Truly he was a Christian gentleman. He was a witty man as well as a wise man, and as a conversationalist he was most charming.

Father Cottrell was a princely man. He was a prince in Israel. In the home he was a prince. There he was at his best. He was the center of charm in the home circle, and in him the affections of all converged. He was musical, and it was uplifting, even when he had reached his fourscore years and ten, to hear him play the piano and sing such songs as, "Now I Am Growing Old, Maggie," "O, Halleluiah." He had a heart to love others, and others loved him. The writer never saw him when he was not most affable, kind, and obliging. But, probably, the most beautiful mark of his great character, outside of his love for God, was his devotion to his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. And theirs to him was no less beautiful. His influence upon them cannot be stated in words, but it was constantly shown in their caresses and loving deeds to him. Of these they never tired and he never grew weary. He had fifteen grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren, all living except one of each. In a letter from a granddaughter far away, less than two months before his death, are such expressions as these: "For many days my thoughts have been only of you—bless your precious heart! I know you would not have us grieve—our loss is heaven's gain. I am earnestly praying that God may see fit to spare you to us for a while longer that my greatest wish may be fulfilled to see you again in this world. He has been so wonderfully good to let us keep you all these many years. I wonder if you realize what your pure, perfect life has meant to us who love you so. 'Grandpa' has been the perfect example of many, many little lives as they grew from babyhood. If all humanity would live the life you have lived, there would be no death, no parting of the ways; this world would be heaven—not only to me, but to all those who love you so dearly, your life has been a guiding star leading heavenward." These grateful words but express in a mild way the sentiments that spring out of the hearts of all the others.

In the year 1892 Brother Cottrell came to Mississippi and spent the remainder of his years with his children, living some years in the home of each one, and there pouring out the blessings of his influence. The last few years of his life he spent in the home of his son, Rev. Thomas B. Cottrell. To son and wife no father was ever more welcome, and no father ever received more loving attention or better treatment. To him they gave much, and from him they received much. The love and kindness of son's wife were no less than those of son, and the love and affection she received in turn were no less. A daughter could not have been more thoughtful of a father; and it is doubtful if a father could love a daughter more.

But the years kept creeping and the shadows kept lengthening till at last he came down to age and feebleness extreme. As a result of an accident culminating in a fall, an ankle was broken, and henceforth for nearly a year he was confined to his rolling chair and bed. It was evident the end was nearing. His faith remained strong and his joy complete. He had been preparing all these years, and he was ready. He asked that they not grieve for him and not to spend money for flowers, no extra expenses for the funeral, but to use that money where it was needed, and bring flowers from the garden, if so desired; he would soon be where he would have plenty of flowers. Before he became unconscious he called his preacher boy to his bedside, and, quoting from an old hymn, said:

Why should we start and fear to die?
What timorous worms we mortals are!
Death is the gate to endless joy,
And yet we dread to enter there.

And then remarked that, in his case, "The poet was wrong; I do not fear to enter there." Doubtless no one has come down to the end of life with less dread and fear and with more confidence than he. Just before that strong mind began to tremble and he lost consciousness to the things of this world, when asked if he was suffering, replied, "How can I suffer when I have already entered into glory." Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

On a flyleaf of his well-worn Bible, in his own handwriting, were found these words: "My darlings, read these original lines when your old Sire's tongue lies silent in the grave:"

Holy Spirit, be my Guide;
Then, whatever may betide,
Be it understood,
Though the way be rough or smooth,
I shall always fully prove
All things work for good.

Cheerful, then, I'll always be,
Well assured He guideth me
Well into the truth;
Then I'll tell to sinners round,
What a Saviour I have found,
Who is mine forsooth.

I shall never leave His side,
But in Him always abide
Till time is no more;
Then He'll come to take His own,
And on Angels' wings high borne
I'll scale the Golden Shore.

The end came peacefully at 12:30 a. m., Dec. 25, 1923. Like his Lord, he arose early that Christmas morning. He was buried from the Gibson Memorial Church, the funeral service being conducted by the writer. He was laid to rest in the family lot in Yazoo City, Miss., Dec. 26, 1923, the commitment service being read by the pastor of the Methodist church, A. F. Watkins, D.D. Thus, at the age of nearly 93 years, he leaves us to await our coming on the resurrection morning. We shall see him again.

DUTIES OF HUSBANDS AND WIVES TOWARD EACH OTHER.

By Hon. D. W. Heidelberg.

Mr. Lindsey, judge of the Juvenile Court at Denver, in a recent magazine article, said that marriage was a failure. I am unable to agree with the learned judge, but the unhappiness existing in many homes and the increasing number of divorces being granted by Chancery Court, proves that in a great number or cases what Judge Lindsey says is true. I believe that it is possible for husbands and wives so to conduct themselves as to make the happiness of the marital relation perpetual and the honeymoon of unending duration.

It is a mistake for husband and wife to cease to make love to each other. It does the husband good to be told often by the wife that she loves him, and the same effect is produced upon the wife by the expression of love on the part of the husband. Such expressions have a tendency to keep alive the flame of love on the family altar. How unkind it is, after having constantly made love to each other as sweethearts, to cease altogether to do so after they have secured the object of their affection!

The tokens of affection which the bride and groom indulged in during their honeymoon should never be neglected. When the bloom of youth has departed from the cheek of the wife and her face has become furrowed largely as the result of care and labor for the husband, it shows the want of proper appreciation on his part to neglect this simple yet beautiful expression of his love for her.

Husbands and wives should not be sparing of their compliments towards each other. If the wife cooks an unusually good meal, the husband should not fail to call attention to it. She will appreciate it and try harder to please him next time. If, on the contrary, the food is not properly cooked, or it does not suit the husband's taste, say nothing about it. By all means do not complain to her about it. If her new hat or new dress is pretty, tell her so. If she looks especially attractive, it will do her good for the husband to compliment her on her good looks.

Husband and wife should keep their tempers in complete subjection. The foolish things we say and do are usually said and done when we are mad. "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad," was an ancient but true saying. Husband and wife should never get angry with each other, or, if they do, they should withhold any expression of their anger. If one of them should happen to give way to his temper and speak unkindly to the other, let the other keep silent. It takes two to make a fuss, and if the one who has been unkindly spoken to will hold his temper and not retaliate, the exhibition of temper and the unkind words will soon pass away.

One of the many causes of domestic unhappiness is the complaining disposition so often prevalent among husbands and wives. They are often so prone to find fault with and make complaint at each other's conduct. Nothing that the other does suits them. They should be indulgent of each other's faults and weaknesses. Each should search for his own faults and endeavor to correct them, instead of constantly looking for and complaining of the faults of the other. If they see faults in each other's conduct, let no attention be called to them until they are in a perfectly good humor, and then in a kind and gentle tone of voice. Let us first cast the beam out of our own eye and then we can see the more clearly to cast the mote out of our mate's eye.

The personal appearance of the husband and wife should not be neglected. The wife should endeavor to look just as attractive after she secures her husband as she did when she was only his sweetheart, and so should the husband. It is easy to love a beautiful rose or hyacinth, but we do not love a flower that is not pretty. We all love beautiful objects; it is a part of our nature. It is difficult for a wife to love her husband who pays no attention to his dress or personal appearance. It is equally difficult for a husband to love a slovenly or an untidy wife; but it is easy to love her if she is neat and tidy. In order that the wife may look attractive, she must be supplied with the means to do so. A husband makes a mistake if he fails to furnish his wife with sufficient money to buy the necessary wearing apparel to make herself attractive. It is as natural for a woman to want to make herself attractive as it is for the rose that blooms in the yard to look pretty. This is part of her mission in life, as it is the sole mission of the rose or hyacinth. But how can she fulfill this mission if the husband does not supply her with the means to do so?

The husband should make the wife a monthly allowance. The money which is made is the result of their joint labors, and she is as much entitled to it as he is. It is humiliating to her to have to ask of the husband the money which every wife should have to spend as she pleases. It is positively unkind in the husband to pocket all the money that is made, as though it was made by his exclusive efforts, and to deny the wife any portion for her personal use. It would be well for the husband to supply the wife with enough money to buy her wearing apparel and incidentals and for the provisions for the family, and the allowance should be sufficiently liberal, with proper economy, to lay aside a small amount for each month. By sharing with the wife the money that comes into his possession, the husband will add much to their domestic happiness.

The wife should keep the home clean and attractive. It is refreshing to the husband, when he returns home at night, tired and wearied, to find the home inviting and in order. He will be slow to leave such a home and seek pleasure on the streets and away from his wife and children.

Husbands and wives should steer clear of debt. Many a home has been rendered unhappy by this inexcusable habit, which has become well-nigh universal. Is is a habit which, if once formed, will as a rule follow you to the grave. To keep dirt, debt and the devil out of his home had been his constant endeavor since he set out housekeeping, says Mr. Spurgeon, in his John Ploughman's Talks. The Bible says that we should owe no man anything but to love him, and Spurgeon says that this does not mean to pay your debts, but to have none to pay. He further says that any one who willfully violates this passage of the Scriptures should be turned out of the church. The Bible also says that the borrower is slave to the lender. If you want to sell yourself into voluntary servitude, load yourself with this heavy burden of debt. You will find it a hard taskmaster.

The husband should, as soon as possible, purchase a home for himself and wife. In order that he may be able to do this, both husband and wife should practice frugality, economy and industry. As the wife has to spend most of her time at home, it should be made as attractive as the means of the husband will justify.

Husband and wife should be uniformly kind to each other and each willing to make sacrifices for the other. It is well for them to express their love for each other, but, after all, this love is best exemplified in deeds of kindness.

Dear reader, ponder over these things and do your utmost to put them into practice. If you do and have been happily mated, your home will be the happiest on earth to you, and a foretaste of that Heavenly home beyond the grave.

Shuhuta, Miss.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

To-day, Sunday, Feb. 17, Billy Sunday begins a revival in Shreveport. The large tabernacle, with a seating capacity of six thousand, was filled at the morning service. A choir of approximately one thousand filled the tier of seats behind the speaker. All the evangelical churches of the city unite in this special effort for the advancement of the Kingdom of God. After the usual felicitations incident to such occasions, the evangelist delivered a clean-cut, orthodox sermon.

Intense earnestness and deathless faith in the inspiration of the Bible characterized his message. His voice is rather harsh—almost guttural. His enunciation is rapid—the words flow forth like a torrent—but he surely meets the old rhetorician's demand for "action, action, action," first, last and all the way through. The two leading papers of the city print his sermons in full. It is really refreshing for one to read a sermon in the very language in which it is preached. Sometimes a minister can barely recognize his own production. Mr. Sunday grows on one after repeated hearings. His histrionic efforts give emphasis to his speech. These caricature sin in no uncertain manner. Hypocrisy in social, civic, and home life is mercilessly excoriated. His sermons are replete with vivid pictures, illustrated by telling incidents and anecdotes selected from a broad field of experience and observation.

Every age has its prophet. Intensiveness in all the activities of life is characteristic of this. Nothing dull or prosaic can draw the crowd, or, for that matter, effect a definite purpose. The lines have fallen in living, moving, virile places. Sensationalism, in the good or bad sense, rules the hour. There is no escape from it. I presume the wise thing to do is to harness this tremendous force and subsidize it to the interests of God's Kingdom in the earth. The old preachers can not do this, for it must be lived and experienced to be used rightly. We pray that the prophets of this generation may win the race for righteousness.

Country folks! God bless them! They are our own. City people are only country folks once removed, and, mostly, hardly that. Some of these plain, fine old farmers, induced by sudden acquisition of wealth from the things God had stored away in the bosom of mother earth for her children, and by the heart tugs made by younger members of the family for the garish joys of the city, look "mighty lonesome" to the passing observer as they sit on the porches of their palatial houses.

"Is that you, Brother Davies?"

"Yes, what's left of me."

"Come in here, I want to talk to you."

And then from memory's chalice is poured a stream of associations and experiences that are the garnered joys of richer years. The old hearth fires burn anew, the old scenes come back again, trooping like ministrant angels bearing from out the golden years memories that are the enduring treasures of the past.

I wonder who ever thinks of a city when we sing, "My Country, 'tis of Thee!" Is not the vision one of green fields, wide stretches of pasture lands, orchards, gardens, forests, running brooks, minstrelsy of birds, and all the varied scenes and sounds of rural life? When the orator makes his stirring appeal, he cries "my countrymen"—never does he speak to his fellow patriots as "city men." Most men living in cities are too busy, too hurried, to be very patriotic. The crush and rush of the street and market drown and stifle the fine sentiments. If the corn is too thick in the row, the stalks are spindling. Most cities need thinning.

The evangelistic tide is rising higher and higher each day. Preachers are planning to help each other in meetings. Many such meetings have already been held. "The fight is on, O Christian soldier." Sunday schools are interested and enlisted. Epworth Leagues are interested and enlisted. The Methodist Men's Clubs and laymen's organizations, under whatever name, are interested and enlisted. No part of the church can afford to stand afar off. If every member will do his full duty, this year bids fair to be a memorable one in our history.—Methodist Advocate.

He has distributed the book, "What We Believe," by Dr. Parker, and is teaching his people the principles of our doctrine.

Farmerville is moving on well under the leadership of Rev. J. E. Greenway, Jr. Knowing pastor and people, one would expect nothing short of success.

K. W. DODSON, P. E.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

At the last Annual Conference a larger number of changes than usual were made in this district. Some items in reference to the newly-appointed pastors will be interesting.

Rev. R. E. Goodrich, transferred from Waco, Tex., to First Church, is preaching to full houses at every regular Sunday service, and the great congregation is delighted with his ministry, both public and private. The salary has been increased to $7 500. He has been much in demand for outside addresses of various kinds.

* * *

Rev. Ellis Smith, moved from Carrollton Avenue to Mangum Memorial Church, is confronted with a difficult financial situation, but is carefully devising plans for relieving the pressure of debt, and is keenly alive to the great opportunity which is before our church in this rapidly developing section. He has been most cordially received by the congregation.

* * *

Brother Alford has made a splendid beginning at Texas Avenue. He has a heroic task before him in leading the congregation in the needed enterprise of rebuilding in a changed location. He suffered an unfortunate accident several weeks ago in the fracture of his heel (can you guess how it happened?) which retarded his movements for a while. The church gave him a warm welcome and has increased the salary to $2,400.

* * *

Rev. J. B. Peters, recently transferred to Mansfield from Salisbury, Md. (Baltimore Conference), is a man of most engaging personality, and the appointment has proved exceedingly popular with the Mansfield people. They have presented him with a Hudson car.

* * *

Brother Roy is quietly and skillfully working and planning for the progress of our work in Logansport City. He has already written the Advocate a letter in his hearty recognition by the people and other evidences of appreciation.

* * *

Brother Tucker has begun his work in Logansport with the loyal support of the church and a splendid prospect of success. He will be host of the district conference, which will be held in the new church April 8-10.

* * *

Brother Guy M. Hicks, a well-equipped young man, has greatly delighted the people of Belcher and Gilliam. The salary has been increased, and a commodious parsonage, which was planned last year, is now being erected.

* * *

Other changes took place from one charge to another within the district. Brother Neill has begun his work in Mooringsport with his accustomed painstaking attention, and is very hopeful as to the outcome of the year's work. Brother Reames, after making a fine start, had a severe attack of measles, but is now back at work. He has every prospect of a successful year at Grand Cane. Both of these brethren were cordially received.

Brother Roberts is now serving the Bayou La Chute charge in connection with his duties at Centenary College, and is happy in serving a loyal and generous people.

Brother A. L. Harper is supplying the Longstreet church in addition to his Ruston District appointments, and Prof. Roy Moore, of Centenary College, is supplying the church at Keatchie.

"JAZZ."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

The following has just appeared through the Associated Press:

"Rome, Feb. 25. The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, in an article endorsing the recent stand by Cardinal Begin, archbishop of Quebec, severely condemns the modern dances, with especial mention of the 'shimmy' and 'camel's step' and denounces 'jazz.'"

That our Roman brethren are beginning to see the light long since seen by us Methodists, is very gratifying. I am quite ready to accept the Cardinal's view relative to the dances indicated, and I most heartily endorse his denunciation of "jazz."

The word does not occur in the older dictionaries; but in a very recent one it is defined as "ragtime music in discordant tones." The definition is self-contradictory, for "discordant tones" cannot be musical; music is, above everything, "concord." To speak of "jazz music" would be speaking of "discord" as "concord." "Jazz" is certainly not music; but it has become a fad to make it and miscall it music.

The fad extends to art; and so we have so-called "impressionistic art" and "cubist art," neither of which is really art. They are painting in the sense that whitewashing and house-painting may be painting; but in no sense are they art. An old artist painted cherries that birds tried to pick off the canvass; but no bird ever mistook a cubist or an impressionistic creation for something real. Such paintings are not art; but in some sections they are the fad. The axiom of this fad is that "the real artist does not bother with details, but piles on the paint, leaving details to the imagination of the art critic." It is related that one painter became so obsessed with this fad that he would sit with palette and brush in hand before a bare canvass, saying to all who passed: "Come, see my splendid painting of the Israelites crossing the Red Sea;" and if asked, "Where are the Israelites?" would answer, "They have gone on;" and if asked: "Where are the Egyptians?" would answer: "They have not got in here yet;" and to "where is the Red Sea?" he replied: "It is rolled back." He knew what to leave for the imagination—hence "he was a real artist." It is hardly necessary to say that he was in a lunatic asylum.

In these later days we also have the reign of jazz in the domain of science. It is named "The Evolution of Species;" and it teaches that all the higher animal species grew out of lower species, and these out of still lower ad infinitum et ad absurdum. Linnaeus, the father of modern botany, and Cuvier, the father of modern zoology, had laid down as a great law of nature, the fixedness of species; that is, that no real species could produce any other species—that horses are not developed (or evolved) from cows, nor cows from goats, nor goats from hogs, nor hogs from alligators, nor men from monkeys. About sixty years ago Charles Darwin wrote two books to prove, not that this theory is true, but to prove that this great law of the fixedness of species might possibly be or have been violated or overridden somewhere down the dim past; and although he utterly failed to find a single half-breed between any two real species on earth, he, by his books, started, to his own confessed amazement, a fad. Since then evolutional faddists have ransacked the whole world in search for a single "missing link" or half-breed between two real species, but have utterly failed to find any such creature. Some of these so-called scientists, in a desperate effort to find what they cannot find, have resorted to a desperate scheme, and have constructed out of plaster and a few fragments of bones, supposed to be human, some half-dozen or more figures and labelled them "missing links." One they call the Piltdown Man; another the Neanderthal Man; another the Heidelberg Man, Spy Man, Gibraltar Man, Krapina Man, La Quinta Lady. Not one of them is an ape or gorilla or any sort of monkey; and not one of them is any kind of half-breed or 'missing link." They are, as indicated clearly, just men (and one woman); and they have the brain capacity of average human heads, in every case away beyond that of apes, gorillas, or any other brutes of their size. And yet these so-called scientists, blind to facts and obsessed with the evolutional fad, deceive themselves, and through these palpable frauds teach—especially the children in New York City—the baseless theory of the evolution of species. Although the axiom laid down by Linnaeus and Cuvier is to be found in the Genesis record of creation, in the repeated phrase, "after its kind," i.e., under the law of its species, yet there are a few preachers who have caught the ridiculous fad and join in the jazz of so-called science. I am delighted to be able to say that among the more than five hundred traveling and local Methodist preachers in Mississippi, I do not know of one thus jazz-struck. I wish it were so in all the bounds of our great church, and in the ranks of all the churches.

Out of this jazz in the realm of science there has come a strange thing, a sort of theological jazz. It discounts Genesis and Moses and much else that we get from our precious and incomparable old Bible. This theological jazz miscalls itself "Higher Criticism," and yet it is neither "high" nor critical. It would set aside, without any reason for so doing, very much that the Bible declares to be truth. It finds no sort of support in history or in archaeology or in any other science. It offers no other proof than the unproved utterances of some faddists who claim great learning and offers none and yet classes as ignoramuses all who do not join in this theological jazz.

I have studied psychology for half a century; have lectured on it hundreds of times when professor in colleges; yet I have up to date failed to account for fads like these. Of all fads, the utterly most bewildering I have ever met are these scientific and theological jazz fads. Why will men be lured by them?

"THE LITERATURE OF THE DAY IS NOT CATHOLIC."

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D.D.

The above is the caption of an article by the Very Reverend Thomas F. Burke, C.S.P., published in a Catholic paper, the Sunday Visitor, of Jan. 20.

In this article the author makes the following frank statement: "In presenting Catholic truth we are facing a condition of mind; and that condition of mind in the English speaking world of to-day is due, largely, to the fact that for some centuries English literature, as a whole, has been almost entirely non-Catholic in character. Account for it as we may, there is a vast world of thinking men and women outside the Catholic fold. Perhaps we may go further and, limiting our scope of view to the English-speaking nations, we may say that more of the highest and best intellectually are to be found without than within the fold. Enter into the realm of learning, embracing every branch of knowledge, from metaphysics to the purely physical sciences, and the appalling fact meets us face to face that English literature, taken in its totality, has been, for centuries, essentially and characteristically non-Catholic."

Among the Latin-speaking peoples, our author sees more hopeful conditions. He says:

"Of some other countries, thank God, this statement cannot be made. In France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Catholics can boast in the scientific and intellectual world at least as large a representation as their neighbors."

The facts which Dr. Burke concedes, in respect to the intellectual leadership of the non-Catholic among English-speaking people, are such as every fair-minded and observant man must recognize. But does not the confession present a dilemma to thoughtful Catholics? Are the people who have been most completely swayed and molded by the Roman Catholic Church the people who are the recognized intellectual and moral leaders of to-day? How do Italy and Spain, where the Catholic influence is strongest, and where it has been the least disturbed in all the past of Christian history, compare with England and America, which are furthest removed from the Romish Church? Is the moral condition of English-speaking peoples "appalling" in this comparison? Are political and social conditions "appalling?" Dr. Burke thanks God for the sway that the church still holds over Italy and Spain. Have not England and America reason to thank God for their freedom from the influences which have made Italy and Spain what they are?

"In presenting Catholic truth we are facing a condition of mind," says Dr. Burke. Ah, truly, and that condition of mind is buttressed by the most evident truth, presented in the history of all Protestant peoples, that good and not evil has come to them as the result of breaking from the Church of Rome.

Dr. Burke says: "We may say that more of the highest and best intellectually are to be found without than within the fold." The Protestant is not only confident that this is true, but that, in the progress of knowledge, and of all that is highest and best in civilization, this truth will be more and more apparent.

DEATH OF REV. W. W. SIMMONS.

Brother W. W. Simmons, superannuate of this place, died Saturday night at 11:40 o'clock, and was buried in the Gloster cemetery Monday morning, March 3, after an impressive ceremony. The pastor conducted the funeral by Brother Simmons' request; Rev. W. M. Sullivan, by a personal request from Brother Simmons, as they had been close, lifelong friends, preached the funeral sermon; Brother W. H. Saunders followed Brother Sullivan with a few remarks; the first Scripture lesson was read by Brother W. B. Jones, presiding elder, and the second lesson was read by Brother C. C. Evans; Brother J. A. Wells led the prayer; Brother W. B. Jones read the committal service, and was followed in prayer by Brother J. L. Smith. A secret order added a beautiful cross of white and red carnations to the already covered grave of lovely floral offerings by many friends. The benediction was then pronounced by the pastor. A suitable memoir will follow later.

The following relatives were in attendance: Two daughters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cammack, and Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Cammack, Fayette, Miss.; another daughter and son, Mrs. W. J. Conerly, Gloster, Miss., and Mr. W. W. Simmons, Jr., St. Joseph, Mo.; Mr. J. J. Watts, brother-in-law, Rockport, Miss.; Thomas, Earnest, and L. L. Simmons, McComb, Miss., nephews; also the following nephews and nieces: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Conerly, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Conerly, and Tyler Conerly, Gloster, Miss.; Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Gunn, Pogalusa, La.

Brother Simmons leaves a devoted and loving wife, who will continue heroically and cheerfully to serve her God while she patiently waits a short space of time until they will be together again. Many tender hands will eagerly administer to her wants. And a host of friends all over the entire Mississippi Conference and also elsewhere will deeply sympathize and often pray for Sister Simmons.

When Utter Decay Threatens the Morals of Mankind

During the past forty years the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, failed to pay her preachers more than $10,000,000 actually promised them in salaries. The statistical tables of the Conference Minutes for the period given will verify this statement. Thus the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment becomes a movement to collect an honest debt.

These preachers kept to their tasks of doing the Church's work, regardless of annual salary deficits. If they went to Conference one year with a good part of their salaries unpaid, they returned to the same churches to be treated in the same way another year.

Over 900 of these preachers are now superannuated and in need of life's commonest necessities. Can lay members who profess thy name, Almighty Lord, sit in tranquil peace while these old braves stretch out their war-scarred hands pleading for simple justice?

And soon all the preachers who served so faithfully during those 40 years, will reluctantly enter the great silence of superannuation. Shall they suffer pitiful deprivations during old age and physical disability, while the Church closes her fists tightly upon what she promised them in salaries but did not pay?

Nay! Nay! Let all true-hearted believers rush to the rescue, extend the helping hand, and give of their bounty for the sustenance of those who gave their lives to make the name of Christ a praise in he earth. It is not a charity, not a beggar's sop---it is the payment of a debt!

The Home Circle

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

By Willie C. Page.

When things go wrong, as they often do,
And the days are full of trials new,
Don't be sad—just hide your doubt.
And always keep the bright side out.
Some dark clouds you will always find,
But most of them are silver-lined—
Don't sulk and grieve, it will not do—
Go find the silver lining, too.

Complaining may appeal to some;
Play the game and take things as they come.
Banish sorrows, heartaches and fears;
Do away with gloom and tears.
Keep smiling—put despair to rout,
And always keep the bright side out.

A STRING OF PEARLS.

Betty's eyes were very bright and her cheeks rosy as she skipped along the street toward home one afternoon, writes Clara C. Votey in the Watchman Examiner. For weeks she had looked forward to grandmother's visit, and this very day she was coming.

Betty ran up the steps and into the house. "Grandmother, grandmother," she called. Yes, there she was sitting in the parlor. Betty climbed into her lap, and told her how glad she was to see her, and grandmother kissed her over and over again.

Then Betty brought her white Angora kitten with the blue ribbon around its neck, and her new doll that could walk and talk, and last of all she showed her dearest treasure, her "Add-a-pearl necklace." "See, grandmother," she said, "Uncle Jack gives me a pearl every Christmas. Here are eight, and one more for luck. When I grow up I shall have a long string. Not another little girl around here has any. Aren't they beautiful?"

Grandmother looked very grave.

"Yes, dear, they are very beautiful, but I was just thinking about some little girls who have no homes and need food and clothing."

Then grandmother took Betty on her lap and told her about the poor little children, away over the ocean that our country is caring for, and Betty listened to every word.

All the next day in school she thought of the little homeless children and wondered how she could help them. At last she smiled, for she had found a way.

Betty ran all the way home from school and went right up to her room. She opened the box where her precious necklace was kept. Very carefully she untied the string and took off the lucky pearl. Then she found a little box and put the pearl in it. She took it to her mother and told her it was for the poor children who had no homes.

Mother kissed Betty and said she was so glad that her little girl was so kind and thoughtful. Father looked very queer when he heard it, and Uncle Jack whistled softly to himself, but grandmother smiled and whispered, "Dear child, the pearl you gave is the loveliest one of all."—New York Christian Advocate.

BETTY AND GEORGE MAKE A SNOW MAN.

Sometimes Betty and George played together happily for hours, and sometimes they could not be happy together at all. The trouble always came when they could not agree what to do. George thought that Betty should do what he wanted to do because he was a man and men always had their way; and Betty thought that because she was a lady George ought to give in to her. Of course, the real trouble was that both of them were acting selfishly.

To-day there had been a big snow-storm, and Betty thought that it would be fun to go out with their sled and coast. George said that he was tired of pulling sleds up the hill, and that he had much rather have a snow-ball fight. They were both unhappy.

"Well, we just won't go out at all then," said George.

"All right," agreed Betty. "I had rather stay in the house and play paper dolls by the fire anyway."

But deep down in her heart Betty knew that she wanted to go outside and play in that beautiful snow more than she wanted to do anything else. She knew that George wanted to play in the snow, too. But she got her paper dolls and sat down before the fire, and George got his favorite book and curled up in the morris chair and tried to enjoy reading. Oh, but they were a stubborn pair!

By and by Betty felt that she did not wish to play with her paper dolls so much after all; she was tired of them. She did not care whether she ever saw a paper doll again. And George found out that reading in the house when you have a yardful of lovely snow is not so much fun as he thought it was. But if they went outdoors, he wanted to snowball. That was all there was to it. So he went on with his reading.

All the time Betty was playing paper dolls and trying to pretend that she enjoyed it. But she was saying to herself: "I am a stubborn and selfish little girl. It is foolish to waste that lovely snow just because I can't have my way."

And all the time George was reading he was thinking to himself: "If I can't play snowball, I won't play anything."

Then suddenly Betty thought of a secret that she knew. It was that you must do for some one else what you would like to have some one do for you, and that you must do it smiling. She looked up at George and smiled and said: "George, I will play snowball with you if you want me to."

As quick as a flash something happened inside George's mind. He didn't want to play snowball at all! He wanted to take Betty coasting. "I had just as soon go coasting, Betty," he said. "I don't mind pulling the sled up the hill one bit."

So George and Betty put on their wraps and went out in the snow.

"Let's go coasting," said George. "I'd heaps rather."

"I tell you what," said Betty. "Let's make a snow man all by ourselves. We can make a fine one together."

"Yes, let's," agreed George. "We can use hickory nuts for buttons and pecans for teeth, and we'll get that old hat of father's for the top of his head."

They set to work eagerly, and very soon the snow man began to grow, while he was taller than George. He was a big snow man indeed. George ran into the house for the hickory nuts, and when he put them on for buttons he got them on crooked, but Betty said that it didn't matter. Just when he had almost finished, Betty knocked one of the man's arms off, but George helped her to make another one and to put it on. Such happy little children as they were!

Between you and me, I think the snow man knows what the secret was that Betty thought about. He is certainly trying hard to wink at her; so there must be some sort of joke between them.—Youth's Companion.

A GOOD RULE.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold.

Three narrow gates—first, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer, and the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"

And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale,, nor fear
What the result of speech may be..

THE DEATH OF REV. W. W. SIMMONS.

The news of the death of Rev. W. W. Simmons, which occurred at Gloster, Miss., on Saturday, March 1, will be received with sadness throughout the Mississippi Conference, of which the deceased was an honored superannuate member.

Brother Simmons was admitted on trial into the traveling connection in the Mississippi Conference in 1876; he was ordained deacon in 1878, and elder in 1881. He was one of those faithful itinerants who gave themselves unreservedly to the work of their holy calling, and throughout his long ministry he served faithfully the church and the people under his pastoral care. He lived nobly, wrought efficiently, and died triumphantly, and now he is at rest in a heavenly home.

The sorrow over his going is tempered by the reflection that he had served his day and generation well, and that he was ready for the summons. Death loses its sting in view of the triumph of a living faith, and the grave becomes but the portal to a mansion in the skies. We sorrow at his death, but we rejoice in the life he lived and in the reward that is now his.

We shall expect a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

THE DEATH OF REV. J. A. GOAD.

We are called upon again to chronicle the passing of one of our faithful pastors—Rev. J. A. Goad, of Carrollton, Miss. We have no further information concerning his passing away than is contained in the announcement, in another column, by his presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Cunningham; but he was a faithful member of the North Mississippi Conference, had entered hopefully upon his work at Carrollton, and was in the midst of useful labors when he was called to his reward. He was admitted on trial into the Conference in 1901, ordained deacon in 1900, and elder in 1906.

Our tenderest sympathy is extended to his sorrowing wife and children. We hope to publish a suitable memoir in due time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. S. L. Riggs and family, of Opelousas, La., visited relatives in New Orleans last week.

At Algoma, Miss., where Rev. W. L. Atkins is pastor, everything goes well. The parsonage has just been nicely repaired.

Dr. A. J. Weeks, editor for the Board of Missions, is on a visit to Cuba, to inspect the work of the church in that field.

The church at Lake Providence, La., has increased the pastor's salary $200 over last year. Rev. Jno. F. Foster serves this fine people.

Rev. A. K. McLellan requests us to say that his post office address is Barham, La., and not Hornbeck, La., as it appears in the Conference Minutes.

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., of this city, are enjoying a visit from Brother Doss's mother and sister, Mrs. W. L. Doss and Miss Bessie Doss, of Gueydan, La.

Rev. R. I. Collins is serving a big-hearted people on the Vaiden and West charge, North Mississippi Conference, and he is expecting this to be a fine year in his work.

The work at Kossuth, Miss., Rev. A. L. Davenport, pastor, has been interfered with greatly thus far by bad weather and much sickness, but as conditions improve the work will go forward.

The Billy Sunday meeting in Shreveport, La., is now in its third week. Great crowds are thronging the tabernacle, and there are indications of a great spiritual movement throughout the city.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, missionary evangelist for the Jackson and the Vicksburg Districts, Mississippi Conference, is spending the Sundays of March within the bounds of the Camden charge, of which Rev. G. E. Allen is pastor.

Rev. H. D. Snydam, of the Arcola charge, North Mississippi Conference, is completing a new church at Murphy's Bayou. The Big Brothers' Class of Greenville, Miss., will supply the pulpit chairs for the new church.

Mr. T. Wynn Holloman, of Alexandria, La., accompanied by his wife, spent a few days in New Orleans last week. Mr. Holloman is Conference Lay Leader of the Louisiana Conference and is one of the foremost laymen of the State. He was recently elected a member of the State Legislature.

Rev. Jesse F. Watson, of Jackson, Miss., has been transferred to the North Mississippi Conference and appointed pastor of the church at Carrollton, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. J. A. Goad. Brother Watson, while serving a charge in the Mississippi Conference, is finishing his senior year at Millsaps College. He was born and reared in Carroll County. He is a young man of great promise, and it is a compliment that he should be called to the pastorate of his home church.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, our pastor at Shelby, Miss., has recently returned from Hot Springs, Ark., where he went for treatment to overcome the effects of illness incurred during his European trip last year. We are glad to learn that he has entirely recovered. Of course the work at Shelby goes well.

Central Methodist Church, of Columbus, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. Del Longgrear, the pastor, is undertaking the organization of a great men's Bible class. A special meeting was held recently in the interest of the movement, officers were elected, and the campaign for members planned for.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School Superintendent, dropped in at the Advocate office for a few minutes on Monday morning of this week. He is busily engaged perfecting plans for the great Sunday school gathering at Homer, La., March 18-20, which promises to be an unusually profitable occasion.

A series of rally day services has been arranged for in the Columbus District, the purpose being to overcome the effects of the handicaps of an unusually severe winter by getting all the forces of the church together for a great year's work. Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the wide-awake presiding elder is actively leading in this good movement.

Col. Thomas D. Boyd, for many years president of the Louisiana State University, has announced that he will tender his resignation at a meeting of the board of supervisors early in April. Col. Boyd has rendered distinguished service to the institution, and it is probable that he will be elected president emeritus as a mark of appreciation.

In a recent contest in Natchitoches, La., in the interest of prohibition, the first prize of $10 for the ten best reasons "Why We Should Observe Prohibition," was won by Henry Rickey, son of Rev. H. W. Rickey, pastor of the Methodist church. In a second contest, the prize of $5 for the best temperance recitation was won by Miss Eulalie Lacoste.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from the Woman's Missionary Society of Philadelphia, Miss., to attend the silver wedding of Rev. and Mrs. Luke E. Alford, at the Methodist church, on March 22 at 8 o'clock p.m. It is hard to realize that the young presiding elder of the Newton District has been married twenty-five years. Blessings upon the happy couple!

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., was in New Orleans this week, attending the meeting of the Southern Lumbermen's Association, of which he is, we understand, an honorary member. At noon on Tuesday, a luncheon was given at the Monteleone Hotel by old Centenary College men at which Dr. Sexton was the guest of honor. It was a delightful occasion.

The new Union Avenue Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., of which Rev. R. A. Clark is pastor, will be formally opened with a communion service, conducted by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, on Sunday morning, March 16, at seven o'clock. Bishop Mouzon will preach at the two services on Sunday, and the pastor will conduct a revival campaign throughout the following week. An organ recital will be given in the church on Friday evening, March 14.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. William Hogan was celebrated at the Methodist church, Pine Grove, La., on Sunday, Feb. 24. A large number of presents was received, and many of pressions of good will came from far and near. Mrs. Jay Coburn, wife of the pastor, was in charge of the arrangements. Brother Hogan has been Sunday school superintendent at Pine Grove for thirty years. The Advocate wishes for them many additional years of happiness.

The following sad news comes to us from Rev. J. H. Foreman, our pastor at Mt. Olive, Miss.: "We have just hurled Brother J. B. Rawls, of Mt. Olive. Brother Rawls was president of our board of stewards. He loved his church, and was a faithful member until his death. Everybody loved him. Revs. A. F. Watkins, Geo. H. Thompson, and W. M. Williams assisted in the funeral service." The Advocate extends sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends of the deceased.

Just as we go to press, we learn with very great sorrow of the death of Mrs. W. J. Bryan, of Timpson, Texas, only daughter of Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor of the Mangum Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La. Mrs. Bryan was a beautiful woman in person and character, still young in years, and the shock of her death is a very heavy one to her devoted father and family. She leaves her husband and two little daughters. We extend tenderest sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Water Valley, Miss., 2; B. F. Toler, Baton Rouge, La., 2; Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, Summit, Miss., 2; F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 10; Mrs. Margaret Tarpley, Vicksburg, Miss., 3; Rev. R. H. Harper, New Orleans, La., 3; Rev. W. W. Murray, Harperville, Miss., 3; Rev. C. W. Atkins, Algoma, Miss., 2; W. H. Jones, Norris, Miss., 2; Rev. A. K. McLellan, Barham, La., 6.

DEATH OF REV. J. A. GOAD.

Dear Advocate: Your readers, especially those of North Mississippi, will be saddened to know of the death of the Rev. James A. Goad, Tuesday night, at the Methodist Hospital, in Memphis, following an operation.

Brother Goad was appointed to Carrollton charge at the last session of the Conference. He had made a splendid beginning, and was much beloved by his people. He was a true and useful man.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Starkville, Thursday morning. The body was laid to rest in Odd Fellows' Cemetery. The writer, assisted by Revs. W. W. Woollard and B. P. Jaco, conducted the services.

The brethren will sympathize with the wife and children.

REPORT OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ORPHANAGE COMMISSIONER.

The month of Feburary, with all its church activities, has also been a good month for the new Orphanage building fund. The way has been opened to us at Gulfport, Long Beach, Biloxi, Moss Point, Pascagoula, Logtown, McComb (Centenary), Norfield, and Fernwood; and cash contributions reached close to $1000, with subscriptions of over $5000 closed up.

This has necessitated much traveling on foot, by bus, by train, and by "flivvers." The brethren have been extremely kind to us, for our work's sake, and it has troubled others because they could not give us right of way just now; but duty will, and this is to be appreciated.

The Orphanage should have its share of it very never more upon the hearts of our people. The people should know the real situation. A new building is a necessity this year.

Fraternally,

W. T. GRIFFIN.

CHURCH DEDICATION AT BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

On the 16th day of March, at 11 o'clock in the morning, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth will dedicate the First Methodist Church building of Brookhaven, Miss. All former pastors of this church are cordially invited to be present that day and help in the services of the day.

A. M. BROADFOOT, Pastor.

NOTHING TO GIVE.

By T. W. B. Demaree.

By the erection of the new Centenary church at Kitsuki, Japan, our long-time struggling church has emerged from its hiding, and Christianity in Kitsuki has come to stay. The Christians at this place have been a brave band from the beginning, and were severely persecuted and stoned in the early days. One of our early Christians, when he became a believer, called together his old friends and told them what had come into his life, and that from that time on he would not be able to revel and drink with them, that since he had accepted Christ he must lead a pure and honorable life. He gained their lasting respect and was never again molested by them.

There is an interesting story of a poor woman who belonged to this group. Mrs. Demaree was accustomed to going there and holding meeting for the Woman's Society. One day she saw this old lady in the rear of the church weeping as she held a small child on her back. She continued to weep throughout the meeting, and at the close she came forward, prostrated herself, and with many tears said: "O, Sensei, you have come from so far away to teach us the way of God and Jesus, and I do so want to give you something, but I live in a little hovel. My husband is dead and his wife is no account. It is just like hell there, but I can massage. Won't you allow me to massage your back?" She was told that no reward was asked for the Lord's work, and that it was only ten minutes till time to start for the train.

Mrs. Demaree accompanied me again when I went to dedicate the new church, and we found the poor old woman mopping up the back steps. She arose from her work with the joyful exclamation, "I see you again. I see you again," and with many tears thanked Mrs. Demaree for coming. Thus the Centenary not only gave Kitsuki a new church, but it gave a little work to a poor old woman from a home like hell, with nothing to give.

The dedication of the new church took place on the 15th of July, 1923. On the 18th we went to Kobe preparatory to sailing for America on the 1st of August, but before I left Japan the worker at Kitsuki wrote me that the Sunday school was booming and the congregation had greatly increased. I wish every one in the home land might see the neatness and dignity of the church, with its large, high windows letting in floods of light and its iron and concrete fence. You enter the compound, containing both church and parsonage, through the large iron gate with the granite posts. You then turn to the left, walk across the court, enter the vestibule at either corner of the church and then into the main auditorium, 40x60 feet, with three Sunday school class rooms, 9x9 and 9x12 feet. The building is of concrete with light polished post effects, in imitation granite.

At the request of the older Christians Rev. W. A. Wilson, who was one of the earliest workers in this field, if not the very earliest, was invited to preach the sermon and to dedicate the church. In addition to the general invitation to every one, special written invitations were sent to the town officials and influential people of the town. A part of the ceremony was the presenting of congratulatory addresses, and the head of the town made a most friendly and pleasing address. Two addresses by a little girl of the Sunday school and by a young lady of the League were so beautiful and appropriate that an outsider, an old man, said afterward that no one but Christians could do things like that, for only Christians had the heart and the ideas.

THE COMPLETE GIFT.

By Mark Guy Pearse.

Thy gifts without Thy grace are lacking still.
Imperfect I do turn Thy gifts to ill:
Therefore with all Thy gifts would I entreat,
These graces three to make Thy gifts complete:
The grace to see, and wonder at the sight,
The grace to take and use the gift aright,
The grace to share with him in poorer plight.
Amen.

Without doubt the best missionary is not the one who hates idolatry most, but the one who is most ready to recognize the good that may lurk within it. Benjamin Franklin, whose two hundred and eighteenth birthday we recently celebrated, was the author of many proverbs. In his Poor Richard Almanacs he coined many a phrase of lasting quality. Here are two of them:

The noblest question in the world is, What good may I do in it?

He that cannot obey, cannot command.

By all means use sometimes to be alone—
Salute thyself! See what thy soul doth wear!

She was converted and joined the Mount Zion Methodist Church, on the Ellisville charge, in the summer of 1917, during a meeting in which Rev. J. S. Purcell assisted the pastor, Rev. T. C. Cooper. Ellisville, Miss.

MRS. SARAH MARGARET MARLER was born July 15, 1845, in the State of Alabama, where she lived until twelve years of age, when she moved with her parents to Scott County, Miss., where she spent the remainder of her life. On Aug. 14, 1869, she was married to G. L. Marler. To this union eight children were born—four boys and four girls. Mother joined the Methodist church early in life. Both father and mother gave their children the greatest heritage that can be left—the example of a Christian life. The influence of mother was always felt, even when the children were miles from home. We rise up and call her blessed.

A son,

J. C. MARLER.

On Friday, Feb. 15, 1924, there quietly slipped away from earth to heaven the spirit of MISS ANNA E. SAUNDERS. Born in 1831, her long life knew no pleasure comparable with that of pure, unselfish devotion to duty. Love for God and mankind was the ruling motive of her life. Acquaintance with her meant a blessing—truly she scattered sunshine wherever she went. The high, the low; the rich, the poor; whether white or black, all felt the magic of her unselfish, kindly regard. For years she was a loved and fondly cherished inmate of the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Wall, of Slaughter, La. Although exceedingly feeble for years, she was confined to bed only twenty-four hours, when she painlessly fell asleep in Jesus. Joyfully she has entered the rest remaining for the children of God—the inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away. What a happy time she is now having with all our loved ones!

R.

HAMILTON AMOS COPE was born in Washington County, Alabama, Feb. 12, 1830, the son of Sydney B. Cope and Mrs. Sina Cope. His father having died when he was 8 years old, the widow and orphans came to Paulding, Miss., to live with her brother-in-law, whose wife was Miss Clara Harmon, daughter of the late Dr. John W. Harmon. In early manhood, Hamilton Cope came to Ellisville to make his home, and here he was received into the Methodist Church on profession of faith by Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, July 19, 1901. On Oct. 24, 1906, he was married to Miss Lula McGowan, and here they maintained a happy home until he passed away, Dec. 28, 1923. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor at the Methodist church on the following day, and the Masonic fraternity concluded the services at the cemetery. Brother Cope leaves his wife and five children—Delores, Laurie, Helen, Margaret, and Hamilton Amos—one brother, a number of other relatives, and a host of friends. He was a man of irreproachable character, devoted to his family, loyal to his church, consistent in his life, and conscientious in all his dealings.

His pastor,

J. B. CAIN.

Ellisville, Miss.

The subject of this sketch, MR. JOSEPH E. ROBERT, was born in Rapides Parish, La., near Boyce, La., on Jan. 9, 1844. He spent his life on the old home plantation where he was born, and died Jan. 23, 1924. His remains were interred the next day in the family cemetery, the writer officiating. I was his pastor for only a little more than a year, but I found him to be a good man, yea, more, a Christian. Brother Robert united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, early in life (I think), and remained a faithful member till death. I visited him often; and, although he had been blind for four years, I always found him cheerful. I enjoyed being his guest. He was a man of prayer; therefore spiritually minded. He talked fluently on the Bible and matters of religion. He knew God, and had a true conception of the Christian life. He was ready for the Heavenly home. He fell asleep in Jesus while sitting in his chair by the fireside. The church and community have lost a good Christian man; but our loss is his eternal gain. I miss him very keenly. Brother Robert was never married. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Alice Trimble, and a brother, Dan B. Robert, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but not as those who have no hope. "I heard a voice from heaven saying, write: Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." May the bereaved ones ever find comfort in the Holy Scriptures, and of the Holy Spirit.

E. L. CARGILL, P. C.

Boyce, La.

It was a sad day in Vinton when phones announced the death of our neighbor and friend, C. P. HAMPTON, "Senator," as he was commonly called, was born in Marshall, Tex., July 10, 1844, which would make him 80 years old at the time of his death. He died at his home in Vinton, Feb. 23. He had reared a large family of children, ten in number, five girls and five boys, as follows: Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. Mabry, Mrs. Bath, Mrs. Moran, and Miss Bessie; boys: Ben, Tom, Blanchard, Joe and Jim, all grown. These children and a number of grandchildren, and a devoted wife, are now left to mourn his passing away. Brother Hampton moved to Lake Charles many years ago and became connected in business with A. J. Perkins in a sawmill, which gave employment to many poor people at that day and time. While in that business he married Miss Lovonia Perkins. I believe the only daughter of Mr. A. J. Perkins. It was Brother Hampton's request that when the end came, he wanted all of the family present; though somewhat scattered in Louisiana and Texas, they were obedient to this request, they were all on hand, showing love and affection. Brother Hampton believed in the old-time religion and old-time hymns. Some time before he died he had me to help find that good old hymn, "How Happy Are They Who Their Savior Obey;" he said this covered the true experience of a child of God. I told him on his death-bed that I was asking the Lord to take care of him; he replied in a feeble way, "I am asking the same thing." Funeral services were held at the residence by his pastor, Brother Lipscomb, assisted by Brother Horton, of the Baptist church. The flower-strewn casket was conveyed to Lake Charles, followed by loved ones and friends, where the Masons placed him in his last resting place. Brother Hampton was an old Confederate soldier—belonged to Ector's Texas Brigade. He was color-bearer, and carried the flag of the Confederacy through many hard-fought battles under Bragg, Hood, and Johnston, and never surrendered it until compelled to do so by overwhelming numbers and resources at the closing of the war. I believe he thought the greatest victory he ever won was when he surrendered himself to Jesus and became a child of the King. God grant, when the old ship of Zion makes its last trip, we will all be prepared to go on board and cross the chilly waters, where we will find our loved ones anchored in that haven of rest, where there will be no more good-bys, sorrows, or pain, and Jesus says he will wipe all tears from our eyes.

MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

(In our last issue we inadvertently left out a part of the Epworth League contribution by Mr. J. H. Weems, which we give below.)

We have the following letter addressed to Epworth Leaguers of the Mississippi Conference by Brother Ware, our Conference special in Africa:

"Dear Friends: It has been more than three months since we left home, and since this is my first letter to you, I feel that we are due you an apology; therefore, I begin this letter by saying that upon our arrival in London it was found that Mrs. Ware's health was such as to cause anxiety about our proceeding to the Congo, and for about two months we feared we would have to return to the States and let you good people look for another representative to carry on your work in Africa. We did not know how anxious we were to enter the field until we feared it was forbidden. It was looking sad to all of us when our Holy Father smiled upon us and gave Mrs. Ware better health. We are happy to say that the past six weeks spent in Brussels has brought good health to us all, and the doctor, as well as our Bishop Cannon, has given authority for us to press forward.

"After leaving Jackson, Miss., we went direct to our headquarters at Nashville, Tenn., where we were delighted with our reception; we were made to feel that we had "backing" at home and that brotherly love and good fellowship existed in our offices at Nashville. From there we went to Washington and spent Sunday in the capital city. We arrived in New York Monday morning, June 4, and were kept busy shopping, packing and attending to necessary business until the 7th, when we took ship for Europe. We were very favorably impressed with the office force of the Methodist Episcopal Church at 150 Fifth Avenue, and feel obligated to them for their many kind deeds and needed assistance.

"Landing at Plymouth, England, on the 16th, we went by rail to London and spent Sunday in that city. Monday evening we took train for Harwich, England, and went from there across to Antwerp that night, where we were met by Dr. W. H. Moore, of Kansas City, and carried on to Brussels Tuesday morning. The following ten days were spent purchasing supplies for the Congo and packing same. At the end of this time we were accompanied by Dr. Moore to London, where we spent a month in the study of tropical medicine at Livingtono College. Among the interesting things we saw there, was the medicine case and contents which Mr. Livingstone carried with him to the tropics on his last trip to Africa.

"On the evening of the 31st of August, I met Dr. W. B. Lewis and family, of Leland, Miss., who are going on with us to the Congo. We were sorry to say good-by to Dr. Moore, who sailed to Africa July 31. We had reservations on the same boat with him, but had to cancel same on account of the health of Mrs. Ware. We are now much pleased to have Dr. Lewis and family go with us, as Dr. Lewis has a baby girl about the size of our baby. I think we are going to have a lively time as we proceed. We are sailing from Antwerp to-morrow, the 11th, and are scheduled to arrive at Matadi, Oct. 2. We think we will reach our final destination in the Congo about the 1st of December. We will write you then.

"Let me say in closing that we are very grateful to the Mississippi Conference Epworth Lague for accepting us as your special in Africa, and we are going to put forth every effort to accomplish great work for God and to make you glad that you sent us out.

"Accept our best wishes and remember us in prayer.

"Yours in Him,

"W. N. WARE, WIFE AND LITTLE MARGARET."

Will pastors and Epworth League presidents please have this letter read before their Epworth Leagues?

EPWORTH LEAGUERS TO ERECT BUILDING ON MOUNT SEQUOYAH.

By Ralph E. Nollner.

At the suggestion of the Commissioners of the Western Methodist Asembly, the Epworth Leaguers of the twelve parent Conferences will undertake to raise $25,000 on March 30 for the purpose of erecting an Epworth League building on Mount Sequoyah. The plan was first submitted to the Leaguers who were in attendance at the First Western Assembly last August, and it received their hearty approval. It was submitted next to the Annual Conference Boards, and was approved by them. At the recent Presidents' meeting in Meridian, Miss., the representatives of the twelve Conferecnces had a meeting in which final arrangements were made for the raising of the funds.

March 30 has been fixed as the day on which every chapter in the Mount Sequoyah territory will be asked to give a special program. The special programs will be sent to all chapters through the district secretaries. At this service each Leaguer will be asked to make a contribution of fifty cents to the building fund. The chapter contribution should be sent to the Conference League Treasurer.

An Honor Roll has been prepared for each chapter, and each contributor will be asked to enter his name and the amount given on this Honor Roll. The Honor Rolls of those chapters that secure seventy-five per cent or more of their quota will be placed in the corner stone of the League building. For instance, a chapter with a membership of thirty would have a quota of fifteen dollars. If this chapter secured contributions totaling $11.25 or over, it would be entitled to have its Honor Roll placed in the corner stone of the building.

The site selected by the Commissioners for the location of the building is just inside the main entrance. The first building to greet the eye of the visitor will be the Epworth League building. An illuminated Epworth League emblem will be placed on the building, and from the opening to the closing of the Assembly each summer this emblem will send forth its message, "All for Christ," to all who enter the grounds.

This will be the first permanent building erected on Mount Sequoyah. It will be constructed of native stone and stucco, and will be as nearly fireproof as possible. The building will contain class rooms, offices, a library and exhibit room, sleeping quarters for instructors, etc. It will be available for use by other organizations when not in use by the Leaguers.

Will your name be placed in the corner stone? Sign the Honor Roll March 30.

A LAYMAN WRITES FROM FLORA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Brother Wood is still under a full head of steam—he has received 40 new additions to the church; preaches at Flora twice every Sunday; preaches at Vernon twice a month; at Anderson's once a month, and at Smith's school house once a month, and is having good crowds at each place. He has visited and had family worship in every home within ten miles of Flora almost, and the people are beginning to love him and to realize that there are great things in store for us this year.

Thank God for a preacher who is "about his Master's business." You don't find Brother Wood standing around on the streets cracking jokes, smoking cigars, and drinking dopes.

Sunday school is picking up every Sunday, prayer meetings growing, Epworth League doing good work.

We have put on the card system of financing the church, and the people are very enthusiastic, and we believe our financial troubles are over with.

B. C. HEIDELBERG.

Lead, kindly light, amid the encircling gloom;
Lead thou me on!
The night is dark, and I am far from home;
Lead thou me on!
Keep thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—one step enough for me!
So long thy power hath blest me, sure it still
Will lead me on,
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE ITEMS.

The eighth annual meeting of the Louisiana Sunday School Conference opens Tuesday, March 18, at 2 p. m. in the new Methodist church at Homer, La. Mr. E. W. Gill, superintendent of the Homer Sunday school, writes that the Homer folks are anxious to do what is required of them to make the Sunday School Conference a great success.

The writer spent last Sunday and Monday at Zwolle. The pastor there, Rev. F. W. Dick, and the faithful Sunday school superintendent, Mr. S. H. Porter, have their Sunday school in fine shape. On Monday, the pastors of that section of the Lake Charles District had a meeting in which they gave a good deal of attention to the great Sunday school cause. Rev. A. K. McLellan is chairman of this preachers' meeting.

The Mansfield Sunday school is making great progress this year, with the Program of Work "B" as their guide or goal. They will have a large delegation at the Homer Conference and their pastor has promised to lead the discussion at the Homer Conference on the subject of the "Worker's Council."

Sunday School Day this year falls on Easter, and several of the Sunday schools are planning to have Sunday School Day before Easter. The Mansfield school voted at its recent Workers' Council to observe this day the last Sunday in March.

The presiding elder of the Monroe District, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, called a District Council meeting of his Sunday school workers at Winnsboro, Thursday, March 6. They decided many important matters for their district work. They are the first to decide on the date for their Standard Training School for 1924, deciding on the third week in June.

The records show that during the past month there were ten Wesley Bible classes registered with the central office, four Intermediate classes, three Senior classes, and three Young People's classes. All are from the Lake Charles District with the exception of three.

At the recent Monroe District Council meeting, Mr. C. W. Scated was elected assistant district secretary. Mr. Scated was formerly a member of the Conference Sunday School Board, and is considered one of the outstanding Sunday school workers in the Conference.

We hope the coming fifth Sunday in March will be used by all of the circuit pastors in our Conference as an opportunity to organize and try out the "Circuit Sunday School Organization." The pastors who now have this organization are getting great results from it. This special organization will be discussed at the coming Homer Conference.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

NOTES FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At Richton we had a fine meeting—a good deal better attendance locally than was expected under the circumstances. Our train was late and we arrived about two hours behind time. The folks waited for us, and we spent an hour that afternoon in the work. Ovett and New Augusta were the only schools out of Richton present. We did not organize here because we felt the territory was not sufficiently represented. We felt it was a most worth while meeting.

At Biloxi, the only other school represented from Harrison County was Back Bay. The local workers were there and were very enthusiastic. There was much to encourage us in this meeting, and we felt this was a high-water mark meeting. We did not organize here for the same reason that the organization was not made at Richton.

Brother Brabham was at his best. He delighted his hearers and made friends for the cause. His messages were definite and carried instruction in a most definite way. He was most graciously received at each place. It looked as if a contest was on as to which one would treat us the best. It made us enjoy the work most thoroughly.

Thursday, the district workers of the Meridian District met at Central Church, Meridian, and made some definite plans for the year's work. All the workers but one were present. All the members of the Sunday School Board were present. It gladdened our hearts to meet such a hearty response.

Last month we helped to plan three Sunday school buildings. It has been a pleasure to help in this way. We appreciate the confidence of our brethren in appealing to us in this matter. The Sunday School Board of the Conference cannot offer a large service in this matter, but we can offer a very definite service and think a material help.

Three shares at $25 each have been placed and about $650 of other mission money placed. We are hearing from many schools in regard to mission specials. Let the good work go on.

The Conference Board is promoting the following Honor Rolls:

"The Circuit Honor Roll," where names of the circuits will be displayed which have maintained seven (7) points on the circuit standard adopted by the Conference Sunday School Board at its last session. This standard has been sent each pastor and superintendent. If you have lost yours and desire another, or more than one, please let us know and we will be glad to supply you. Last year fourteen circuits were entitled to place on the Honor Roll.

"Leadership Training Honor Roll." The name of each preacher taking a unit of work in the Leadership Training Course of the General Sunday School Board and receiving credit for it this Conference year, will appear on this Honor Roll. Last year three preachers were entitled to place on the Honor Roll.

"Sunday School Day Honor Roll." The name of each circuit preacher who sends an offering from each Sunday school on his charge to the Sunday School Board, from Sunday School Day equaling ten cents per pupil enrolled as reported to the last session of the Annual Conference will be enrolled.

The presiding elder who can report an offering from each Sunday school in his district, on Sunday School Day sent in to the Sunday School Board—his name will appear on this Honor Roll.

The Sunday School Day programs have been ordered sent to the pastors of the various charges. If you do not get yours, please notify me so that I may attend to it and see that you get them.

Brother Hull is doing fine work. The Lord is blessing him. Pray for him.

Pray for all the workers and the work.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

CHURCH INSURANCE.

Year by year the fire fiend destroys an appalling amount of property, which, in spite of all that can be done, is usually an increase over the previous year.

The National Mutual Church Insurance Company, of Chicago, maintains an Inspection Department devoted entirely to keeping losses at their minimum (most losses, being due to carelessness or ignorance, are really unnecessary), and yet during 1923 their loss payments were $31,493.65 more than the previous year, the total amounting to $188,798.16, which is by far the largest amount during any one of the twenty-five years since the company began business. All were promptly paid, of course, this being the unbroken record of the company.

During its first quarter of a century of activity, the company has paid losses aggregating $1,901,492.07, and during that time has saved its policyholders approximately one and one-half million dollars in comparison with the expense of insuring in stock companies.

It is a matter of much importance to a large percentage of the churches that while the total amount of all the policies go into effect immediately, the premiums can be paid for in annual installments, divided through the years.

At the beginning of 1924 the company had policies in force aggregating over $65,000,000, held in all parts of the country, including Alaska.

Epworth League

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Third Annual Assembly, Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., June 9-15, 1924.

Dear Pastor: Do you like to be remembered on your birthday? Doesn't it make you feel good even to get a post card from some one who has thought of you? Now, the Epworth League will be thirty-four years of age April 13, 1924, and your Conference Epworth Board is very anxious to have each church in our Conference observe our anniversary.

A splendid program has been arranged, the title of which is "To Vision Heights." Will you kindly read the program enclosed? You can purchase the number you need from Lamar & Barton, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for 20 cents per dozen.

We are therefore appealing to you to help us celebrate our "Anniversary Day":

First—By having each Epworth League on your charge observe the day and urge the membership of the church to attend. Have the service at one of the preaching hours if possible. The program should be ordered at once in order that there may be time to prepare for it.

Second—If you have a church without an Epworth League, have the program put on if possible. If not, preach a special sermon to the young people.

Third—In either case, be sure to take an offering and send it to Rev. L. F. Alford, Pascagoula, Treasurer of our Board. The offering is to be used for extension work, one-half to the General Board and one-half to our Board. Let's be 100% on the observance of Anniversary Day.

If it is not possible to have the meeting on April 13, use the nearest date suitable to you. Be sure to observe the day, take the offering, and forward it to Brother Alford.

Let's give the Epworth League a "sure enough birthday."

Yours for "The Epworth League and the Young People."

EPWORTH LEAGUE BOARD, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE,
W. D. HAWKINS, President.
J. B. CAIN, Secretary.

P. S.—Remember the Assembly, June 9-15. Come with your young folks.

FROM CALEDONIA, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Perhaps some of the brethren will be interested in some of the facts abont the Caledonia circult that the Minutes do not show.

Caledonia is a very delightful little village, sixteen miles north of Columbus, in the center of one of the most thickly populated sections of the State.

We now have a consolidated high school, with nearly three hundred students; there are other schools waiting to come in with us that will run the enrollment up to between five and six hundred, but we must have a new building before we can take care of them.

The parsonage is one of the best circult parsonages in the entire Conference.

Although there are seven churches, and some of them are qulte a distance from the parsonage, the roads are all gravelled, and are excellent all the year. The circuit this week bought a new Ford touring car, turned it over to the pastor, and told him if he could wear it out in going to the appointments, visiting, marrying the living, and burying the dead, to do it. I think that it can be done.

My predecessor, Brother R. T. Hollingsworth, left the charge in a very fine condition in every respect. Our new church building at Steens will be dedicated some time this spring. It has been completed, and the new pews will be in in a few days, and I am glad to say is free from debt.

The people are looking after the needs of the pastor and his family. So far, this has been a very delightful year, and we are hoping for the best year in our ministry. We are happy in the work of the Master.

Many of our people are taking advantage of the great John E. Brown revival that is in progress in Columbus now. We hope that it will better prepare us for our own meetings that we are now planning.

You can see from these facts that this is a great charge, and the opportunity is unlimited. Pray that I may be equal to the task.

OVID A. CLARK, P. C.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

New Orleans Public Service,
INCORPORATED

OONYONG, THE FAITHFUL.

By Mrs. W. T. Reid.

He is a young man still, for he began his career as a boy. Like Dr. Y. Huh, he was born in an obscure village a few miles out of Songdo. His parents did farming there, and when he was old enough for school they came to Songdo, where Oonyong graduated from the Anglo-Korean College with credit. He would like to have gone to Severance Medical College to study medicine, but there was no money. So bravely he accepted the position of druggist at Ivey Hospital, which has meant an enormous amount of hard work and unremitting toil.

His life is written in work. It is a synonym of labor. His education has undoubtedly given him a perception of joys and ambitions he can never attain, but only see others indulge in. I am filled with admiration for his pluck and stolid contentment with what life means for him.

Even his home can bring him little joy. His parents married him when quite young to a poor girl from the country who has no education and no native attractions. He has no amusements, not even having time to go to Seoul, as there is no one to relieve him in the dispensary. On pressing him to tell me if there was anything interesting in his life, he said, "No, how could there be?" But there must be something interesting, though it be hidden—longings, disappointments, visions of what he would like to have and to be. These must all be recorded there, for he is human.

Whatever is not right is smothered. He lives a life of splendid record—years of faithful service, never a mistake in the many multiplied duties of the dispensary and drug-room, regular attendance at church. He serves as a member of the finance committee. Young in years, he is a senior in faithfulness at Ivey Hospital, for he has served there longer than any one of its employees.

There is not much else to say. And yet I think it is very much to say of any one, that he has been faithful. And this is the keynote of Oonyong's life: FAITHFULNESS.

ON TAKING THE CONSEQUENCES.

That attitude of mind that allows us not to reck too greatly of the consequences is one that many of us find it difficult to attain unto. Of course what is going to happen as a result of any course or action is a matter that we ought not to be altogether indifferent about, but to think too much of consequences seems to be the bane of many lives, and it is the one sure way of making life altogether inconsequent and ineffectual. If a thing is right it is right, and the only sure way of making it work out rightly is to tackle it on the basis of its rightness, and to carry it through as if any thought of consequences never entered into the situation at all. The indecision and lack of sureness that always result from temporizing and counseling as to consequences are terribly weakening and disastrous things in any life. Aggressive living of any kind always has its dangers, and the man who gets the habit of keeping his eyes open too much for the risks of things will never attempt or carry through any heroic or fine achievements. The greatest risk any man can run with life is to decide that he will not take any risk at all, but will always play along the safe margins of things. A man may save his skin by doing that, but that is all he will do, and in the end even he is very likely to decide that that was scarcely worth the doing. Paying big prices for safety is a height of folly. —Christian Guardian.

HELPED HER IN EVERY WAY

So Writes Mrs. Trombley of Sharon, Vt., Concerning Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sharon, Vermont. — "I was weak and run-down, had a tired feeling and bearing-down pains. I saw an advertisement in the newspaper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began taking it. It has stopped these bearing-down pains and other bad feelings, and has helped me in every way. I have so much faith in the Vegetable Compound that I keep it on hand all of the time and recommend it whenever I have the opportunity."—Mrs. LEWIS TROMBLEY, Sharon, Vermont.

Glad to Help Others

"I had pains in my back and sides for many months, and my work would have to be left undone at those times. My sister told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing her, so I tried it, and from the third bottle I was well and every one thought I looked better. I am glad to help others regain their health, and you may use my testimonial."—MABEL HARTMANN, 1824 Greene Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

You must believe that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. You should try it.

Doctor Tells How NUXATED IRON PUTS BACK INTO YOUR BLOOD VITAL ELEMENTS OF STRENGTH

Which are Wasted Every Day and Without Which You Become Weak, Nervous, and Run-down.

EVERY action of your daily life uses up a certain amount of strength, energy and nerve force, saps the iron from your blood and gradually steals away your youthful vigor and active usefulness. Unless you replace the iron which is constantly leaving the body, your blood stream loses the power to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain; it becomes thin, pale and watery and cannot provide proper resistance against disease.

If you feel weak, nervous and run-down it is simply because your food does not supply enough iron to make up for the daily waste of this vitally important health-building element. But physicians have found a way to quickly correct such conditions by prescribing a concentrated form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron — which contains iron like the natural iron in your blood.

Iron is the master principle, one of the vital elements, of the blood and blood is life. By enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and power into the whole system.

When you get up feeling tired in the morning; when you find yourself nervous, irritable and easily upset; when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night; pains across the back and your face looks pale and drawn, do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease. Simply try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks and note the amazing change in your health, vigor, energy and endurance. You should be astonished at the results in even a few days time. Success guaranteed or money refunded. At all druggists.

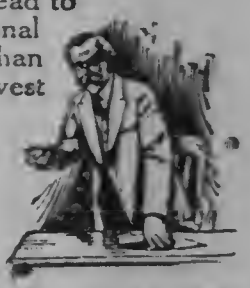
Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.



"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

HEROES IN SABLE.

By Ex-Governor M. R. Patterson, in Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

You can never tell who the heroes in this life may be. They are discovered as occasions arise. Woodfin of Kentucky and York of Tennessee were all unknown to fame until circumstances gave them the chance to show in what heroic molds they were cast.

Woodfin and York are white, but a dispatch from Aberdeen, Miss., tells of another story of heroism, of brave and unselfish service wrapped up in two black skins. The story goes that a man, his wife and 10-months-old baby were in an automobile truck packed with their belongings, which they were moving to a new home, and when they reached the James Creek Canal the driver lost control of the car and it plunged into the icy waters with all on board.

The day, it is said, was bitterly cold, with the temperature far below the freezing point, and it seemed that the father, mother and child would all drown and the waters close over them. Without help there was no chance to survive. Two Negroes—Ed. Jones and William Drake—happened to be walking down the road and witnessed the accident. Without a moment's hesitation these men plunged into the stream and effected the rescue of the three struggling forms in the water, who were then brought to Aberdeen and given attention. This is all. The account ended here. I don't know what, if anything, was done for the Negroes, or if anybody praised them.

I am sure they have not been decorated for bravery and were not met with brass bands and offers of entertainment.

The names of these Negroes will probably never again be in the papers.

They did not kill anybody—they saved somebody.

No commander ordered them to do what they did, and nobody was there to look on except the helpless trio in the swirling waters.

But God looked down upon what these obscure Negroes did, and Christ was near them when they risked their own lives to save the lives of others.

It won't do, my friends, for us to hate or wrong a race that can furnish heroes like this.

It won't do not to give it a chance—not to help and encourage it.

Ed. Jones and William Drake are black only outside—they are all white within.

Their act was as fine as any that may be found in any tale which has been told of heroic service. Ed. Jones and William Drake have hearts of gold. They are gentlemen by right of what they did.

Their titles are clear to respect and honor.

GETTING TOGETHER.

The Christians of the world are getting together more than the men outside of the church know. There have been many conventions during the years since the close of the war, at which men from all the belligerent nations met, sat side by side, partook of the holy sacrament, and talked of the common interests of the church and of the kingdom of God without giving the least evidence that their nations had previously been at war. For instance, it has only been a few weeks since the International Missionary Conference met in England. The members of that great gathering were confronted by the world problems as located in Europe. The French, the Belgian, the German, the Dane, the Swede, and the Englishman sat together. They prayed and conversed together, they discussed world conditions and good will from the viewpoint of their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; condemning the wickedness of hatred, militarism, and national prejudice, and ill will; they greeted each other as brothers in Christ and forgot racial and national differences in their common faith in him. They are under vows with each other to forget everything that divides asunder, and to cultivate morals that make for international good will in the name of Jesus Christ. It is becoming the conviction of serious men everywhere that the church is not going to be caught napping if there is another war sprung by the engulfing of any nation or nations under the rising tide of paganism to which all nations periodically sink.—Western Christian Advocate.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE REAL CRISIS IN EDUCATION.

The real crisis in education is not caused by the lack of endowments, equipment and material resources which is now felt so keenly by our educational institutions, great as that lack is and as acute as the situation produced by that fact is; the real crisis is caused by a conception of education and an attitude toward education that threaten to destroy the thing itself which the church from the beginning has undertaken to foster.

The conception to which we allude seems to be that there is a certain amount of knowledge—no more, no less—which the individual ought to acquire; and the attitude, growing out of that conception, seems to be one of opposition to any endeavor to widen the range of investigation or any attempt to add to this store of knowledge. This conception and this attitude both seem to imply that all is now known that can ever be known, and that further knowledge is neither desirable nor possible. If these be the proper conception and attitude, it is only a logical conclusion that the "end of the ages" is at hand, and that "millions now living will never die." If this conclusion be the correct one, it could only mean for us—and we say it reverently—that God is forced to confess his failure to accomplish his purpose to redeem the world and that he is determined to bring about by cataclysmic destruction what he could not accomplish by the mediation of Christ and the continued operation of divine love.

The crisis is accentuated by the fact that millions of young people, keen of intellect, eager in spirit, pure in motive, are striving to learn for themselves something of the real meaning of life here and hereafter. Faced by serious problems, confronted by baffling mysteries, they are asking for—nay, demanding—the right to explore to the uttermost limits all the realms of knowledge that the human mind has yet conceived of or that may be discovered. To the statement that they ought to be satisfied with what has already been acquired and that they must be satisfied with it if they would remain in the paths of truth, the sufficient answer is that they are not satisfied, and that they do not have to be satisfied so long as their questions are not answered and their problems are not solved.

These young people have a right to look, and they are looking, to the church for leadership and guidance in their efforts to find the truth. Their own intelligence tells them that reason and faith are not incompatible and that science and faith are not contradictories, and they want to establish for themselves the grounds of both faith and reason. They cannot understand what is apparently the position of some people, that if they would have faith they must not seek to know so much, and that if they persist in seeking to know they cannot have faith. They are asking for bread—and they will not be satisfied with a stone.

It is a common logical fallacy to put cause for effect; and it is at least possible that some people are guilty of this fallacy in the explanation they offer of the present state of unrest in the theological world—that that unrest is caused by preachers and teachers who are so unsound in their own faith as to unsettle the faith of others—when, as a matter of fact, it may be that these good men have given themselves conscientiously to the task of allaying the unrest that already existed by undertaking to harmonize the conflicting views of religion and science. Of course, there are some men who have taken advantage of the situation to propagate error; but we are constrained to believe that the vast majority of those who are so glibly accused of heresy in the church have earnestly and honestly been trying to solve rightly a problem, rather than to disturb, weaken, or destroy the faith of anybody.

It is quite the fashion nowadays for any man who undertakes to deal with the real problems of life in an attempt to establish faith and vindicate reason, to be dubbed at once a rationalist, a materialist, a heretic, a destroyer of the faith, a disturber of the church, an enemy of righteousness and of God. It is this disposition upon the part of some folk to call in question the honesty, sincerity, and motives of those who are seeking as best they can to discover truth that constitutes the real crisis in education. If men must not think at all, or if they must think only in terms of what has already been wrought out, with no effort to meet the problems of to-day in terms of present-day need, the world must stand still till another Renaissance brings another release of all the faculties of man, to be used for the good of humanity and the glory of God.

"MEN, THIS IS A CALL TO US!"

Justice James C. Cropsey, of the Supreme Court of New York, in passing sentence of death recently upon four young men for murder, took occasion to say some very plain things concerning the responsibility for the fact that so many boys and young men fall into criminal habits. Among other things he said: "Most of the criminals are boys and young men. To be exact, over 80 per cent of them are less than 25 years of age. If the people of Brooklyn ask why so many youths become criminals, I can tell them. A dozen years of investigation and experience in these matters have demonstrated that the vast majority of all the youthful offenders have committed crime because they had bad associates and were not under the proper influences in the years when their boyhood was turning into manhood—between the ages of 12 and 18. That is the most important period in a boy's life. Then his ideals are acquired, his character formed. In those years every boy needs to be under the influence of the right kind of a man. He needs such a man's life to supply his ideals and such a man to become his hero. Every boy is a hero-worshiper. The reason so many become criminals is that they follow the worng leaders. This condition is a challenge to the manhood of our community. What are we men doing? Tens of thousands of boys are nightly on our streets looking for amusements, seeking adventure, yearning for companionship. Many of them have no fathers, and the parents of many others give little or no heed to the places their boys visit or the companions they choose. Do we men owe no duty to those boys? Can we longer remain blind to the perils that beset them? Should we not provide places where such boys may meet and play and be entertained and instructed and all the time be under the influence of men of the right kind? This is a practical thing. It can be done. * * * We can lessen the crime in our midst by giving attention to the youths. They need a real man's guiding hand and helpful personality. They need the example of a true man's life in forming their character. * * * Men, this is a call to us! Are we awake? Do we hear it? Will our consciences let us ignore it? Shall we not help to make better the boys of to-day? Should we not begin at once?"

These words of Justice Cropsey constitute at once a severe charge against many of the men of to-day and a challenge to them to render a service that they are capable of and that is sorely needed. To those who are already trying to perform this service, these words are an encouragement and an inspiration. Bad associates and improper influences—these are the things that our Sunday schools, our Epworth Leagues, our Young Men's Christian Associations, and other organizations of a similar kind, are trying to guard against. In supporting them, working for and through them, we are doing that which will help save the youth of this age from crime, and—what is of more value—save them from sin. "Men, this is a call to us!"

A SCIENTIST ON SIN.

The following statement is attributed to Huxley, the eminent scientist: "The absolute justice of the system of things is as clear to me as any scientific fact. The gravitation of sin to sorrow is as certain as that of the earth to the sun, and more so, for experimental proof of the fact is in reach of us all—nay, it is before us all in our own lives, if we had but the eyes to see it." This may be a sermon without a text—but a text would not be hard to find. God is running this system of ours, and he is running it right. Those who interfere with His purposes will have to pay the penalty.

PACIFISM IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

If there is a place for pacifism, it might surely seem to be in the church of God, which proclaims peace on earth, good will toward men; so that it is easy for multitudes to assume that the supreme duty of the church is to maintain harmony, peace, unity, as tending most to the glory of God and the good of men.

Yet all must admit that the church on earth is a church militant—a church at war; and we face the paradox of a church proclaiming both peace and war, and using appropriately the language both of the pacifists and militarists with entire consistency. The explanation is that the church is not yet the church triumphant; and the peace which the church offers and extols is attainable only through conflict and triumph over error and sin within and without, in the individual heart, the body of believers, the world, and ultimately the universe through the final overthrow of the incorrigibly hostile to truth and righteousness.

So, though the church speaks ever of peace, a peace of God "which passeth all understanding," its whole history has been one of conflict, and only in times of degeneracy has she lost the militant spirit. Two kinds of peace the church has never and can never make in honor—with error or with sin, within or without her borders; using the word error as deviation from the truth of sound doctrine, and sin as deviation from the principles of practical Christian morality. The church when alive has recognized that error within her body is a deadly poison, paralyzing her life, obscuring the light of her testimony, and undermining her very foundations. Hence the heretic has ever been recognized as the most subtle arch enemy of Christ and the church, sowing tares as wheat, and offering error, plausibly disguised and worded, as new light or an improved restatement of old truth, if possible deceiving the very elect. The sinner or the confessed infidel, though recognized as an enemy, has never been so dreaded or feared; for the heretic is the assassin in the dark, the Judas who betrays with a kiss, the "familiar friend—trusted—which did eat of my bread," who lifts up his heel against me; yet his real character and deadly work being discovered only when too late.

Hence, throughout all Scripture the false prophet is anathematized and the faithful are warned to "beware of false prophets which come to you in sheep's clothing," and to withdraw fellowship from such as hold not the form of sound doctrine, knowing that "they will increase unto more ungodliness; and their word will eat as doth a canker." The church in all ages, taught thus of God, has under the most solemn vows made it obligatory upon all her leaders to "be ready with faithful diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines, contrary to God's word," and upon her bishops she enjoins the added obligation, "both privately and openly, to call upon and encourage others to do the same."

Tracing the history of the church from the earliest ages, we find controversy throughout; and the extant writings of her most illustrious sons—Paul, Athanasius, Luther, Wesley—following their Lord, teem with controversy. In fact, it may truly be said that the church has maintained her integrity of doctrine throughout the centuries by intense conflict with error, in which the truth has ever come forth "reeling but erect," with "the dull heresies sprawling at her feet." Fletcher, the saint of Madeley and mighty defender of Methodism, affirms that "controversy has a hundred times rescued truth, groaning under the lash of triumphant error."

We have recently, under the marvelously scholarly guidance and profound Christian insight of Bishop Westcott, reviewed the Arian controversy of the fourth century culminating in the Council of Nicea, A. D. 325, and the formulating of the Nicene Creed, a Christian symbol which Athanasius informs us the fathers left undated, shrinking "from affixing any note of time to that which belonged to every age of the catholic church and could not be said to have a point of origin." That great controversy, which shook Christendom, began much as the Manning-Grant controversy of last year, in which a popular preacher, Arius, in a large city church in Alexandria, took issue with his bishop over matters pertaining to the essential deity of Jesus Christ. But it did not end, as have the Manning-Grant-Heaton controversies, with the heretics continuing to occupy Christian pulpits, triumphant in error. Yet the deviations of Arius from the orthodox faith were as nothing compared with the sweeping negations of our times. Arius admitted that Christ existed before all time, and that by him the worlds were made, that he was incarnate of the Virgin Mary, wrought miracles, rose from the dead and ascended on high; but the church, with clear spiritual insight, recognized that there were significant phrases which he used and persisted in which robbed Christ of his essential deity and oneness with the Father; and that no such creature, high and exalted though he might be, could truly mediate between God and man and enable man to know and have fellowship with God. So with uncompromising fidelity to the truth and increasing clarity the controversy raged and spread for about fifteen years. Constantine, the Emperor, addressed a pacifist letter to all the bishops, urging peace by the dropping of differences; but, as Eusebius says: "The question was too great to be dealth with in such a way. It was inspired by thoughts which reach beyond the control of imperial authority." The Emperor realized that his own measurements of great and small did not correspond with the standard of believers; and that in some way he must evoke a unity which he could not produce by mere edict.

So the Ecumenical Council of Nicea, the first in Christendom, was called by the first Christian Emperor. Three hundred bishops gathered, of every tongue and race, but of one creed; many bearing in their bodies "the marks of the Lord Jesus," for the Diocletian persecutions were only twenty years past. They met to give formal expression to a spontaneous and inherited faith, not to formulate a new faith; such expression as would be unequivocal and a safeguard of orthodoxy. Every word, and the exact meaning of that word, as not subject to double interpretation, was weighed and argued; and only by this process was a basis of real unity obtained and unity maintained.

There were mediating theologians then as now, men who sought peace by compromise, unconsciously ready to sacrifice real unity if only the semblance of unity might be maintained. And as now often, most plausibly were the compromises urged. There were none then, thank God, to speak of creeds with disparagement, as mere "theories," or "last year's birds' nests;" none were then so superficial. What could apparently have been more happy than the suggestion, in compromise of Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea, that the following creed be adopted, the creed of his own church? "It was the creed, he argued, which he had received from his predecessors in the see, in which he had been instructed as a catechumen, which he had repeated at his baptism, which he had held and taught as a presbyter and bishop. Such an ancient and well tried symbol might serve the needs of the universal church, as it has served from immemorial time the needs of his own."

The Proposed Caesarean Creed.

"1. We believe in one God (the Father Almighty), the Maker of all things, both visible and invisible;

"2. And in one Lord Jesus Christ,
The Word of God,
God of God,
Light of Light,
Life of Life,
The only begotten Son,
The first-born of all creation,
Begotten before all ages of God the Father.

"3. Through whom also all things were made.

"4. Who for our salvation was incarnate and lived among men;

"5. And suffered;

"6. And rose again the third day;

"7. And ascended to the Father;

"8. And shall come again in glory to judge the quick and the dead.

"9. We believe also in one Holy Spirit."

Surely, we cry, a creed like that all might accept as sufficient. But no! With unerring spiritual insight the Nicene Fathers held that while the creed was unquestionably orthodox and good for such use as the local church had given it, it was not a safeguard of orthodoxy; that the language used of the Son was capable of being interpreted in an Arian sense; that in view of the double meaning which heretics delight to hide their errors beneath while salving their consciences, a more unequivocal expression must be found. And their objections were at once justified. The Arian party promptly agreed to accept the proposed creed. "But when a question arose as to the meaning of the first debatable phrase in it, a fundamental difference of opinion was revealed between them and the orthodox. They admitted that the Son was God and 'of God,' but when they were pressed to explain 'of God,' etc., it became clear that it was in the sense in which all these terms could be applied to men, and that they were insufficient to describe the co-essential deity of the Son with the Father," and that they were hiding behind the ambiguity of words. How modern does all this seem! So the Fathers stopped not until they found expressions of faith which none could utter in insincerity or with equivocation, and which constituted a bond of real unity of faith for the church. The vote finally stood about 300 for, to seventeen against, the amended symbol, and after explanation only five refused their signatures. A creed of the local church at Antioch, it seems, formed the basis of the amended symbol, which varies from the creed above quoted only in a few meaningful phrases: "begotten, not made," Christ is not "of God" in the sense of being created by God, as we are: and co-eternal and "co-essential with the Father." Arius asserted "there was when Christ was not," denying his eternity and essential oneness with the Father.

The lesson of this controversy to the modern church is one of warning against compromises with error, in the name of unity which produce no unity; the result of which is only to obscure truth, and allow the poison of false teaching to work on unhindered in the bodies of the church at home and abroad. Had the Nicene Fathers compromised as we are prone to do to-day, chaos would have resulted, they would have left the church groping in partial light, with discordant voices uttering diverse things, and the church as God's faithful witness, "the pillar and ground of the truth," would have lost her crown. Peace at the price of principle, either doctrinal or moral, is never the duty of the church.

The weapons of our warfare are never carnal, as all agree; but to brand Christian controversy in defense of the faith as though it were a carnal weapon, reprehensible, and to be excluded from the church press as unsavory and uncharitable, has no foundation in Scripture or support in reason or history. To argue that the progress of the church is hindered by controversy, is contrary to all experience, for every great spiritual movement in Christian history has gone forward under the fire of controversy, both from within and without the church. As Bishop Westcott finally says: "No age which would hold and enjoy the prizes of victory can expect to have them without entering bravely into the turmoil of conflict." The unity of the church can be maintained in reality only as she says unmistakably to all who are not of like precious faith, "Stand thou on that side, for on this am I." Light hath no fellowship with darkness. "What concord hath he that believeth with an infidel?"

A final word. The Apostle Paul affirmed: "So fight I not as one that beateth the air." Glittering generalities, condemnations of nameless heretics a thousand miles away while being unable to discover heresy within arms length, avails nothing, and commands neither the respect of the world nor of heretics themselves. It is but beating tom-toms and firing guns in the air to scare the heretics away. By no such methods has heresy ever been eradicated, especially when entrenched in positions of influence, power, and emolument; and when in the chill, bleak regions of their negations and unbelief the heretics see no generous friends and like security. Responsibility must ever be fixed upon persons, and every true man is willing to accept responsibility for his words and deeds. The church to-day can purify herself only by letting judgment thus begin at the house of God; but if so, the militant spirit of the church must be greatly revived. Perhaps the most scholarly church historian, professor and author, in Methodism to-day wrote me recently from the very heart of the intellectual life of America: "It looks now that in twenty-five or fifty years the Methodist Church in Canada and the United States will be unitarian; that is, if the present trend goes on." It is futile to deny that a serious conflict is on between the orthodox faith and all shades of negations thereof. Is it not time that lovers of the truth as revealed in God's Word should everywhere stand up in defense of their most sacred inheritance?

"And though this world, with devils filled,
Should threaten to undo us;
We will not fear, for God hath willed
His truth to triumph through us."

RALPH BRADLEY—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D.

Ralph Bradley, youngest son of Charles and Ellen Bradley, was born in the little village of High Lane, Cheshire, England, January 2, 1842, and died in Louisville, Miss., Nov. 20, 1923.

The county in which he was born is one of the western counties of England, fronting on the Irish Sea between the estuaries of the rivers Mersey and Dee. Its most distinguished, though not its largest city, is Chester, rich in the memories of the Roman occupation of the British Isles, while just beyond its northern boundaries, across the Mersey, is the city of Liverpool.

The boy may often have visited this great city, teeming with the world's commerce and its harbor thronged with the ships of all nations, telling of the lands beyond the sea, and the impulses born of such scenes may have led his feet in after years to the great Republic across the western sea, where his long and useful life was spent.

We know nothing of the educational advantages enjoyed by the lad; probably they were only such as were afforded by the schools of his native village. But those who knew him in the years of his mature life will bear witness that in some way, either in college or in the studious habits of his young manhood, he had acquired both learning and refinement. Perhaps much of this may be attributed to the Methodist itinerancy, that wonderful school that has transformed many a callow youth into a wise and scholarly man.

Methodist blood was in his veins and Methodist traditions in his home. George Lowe, one of John Wesley's co-workers, was his great-uncle. He joined the church in his boyhood, and in his twentieth year was licensed to preach as a local preacher in the British Wesleyan Connection. For ten years he served as one of that large body of ministerial workers which our English brethren have learned so extensively and profitably to use.

At Sheffield, Ralph Bradley was instrumental in the conversion of Joseph Oakley, a young Englishman, who came with him to America and with him entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He will be remembered as a prominent and influential member of the North Mississippi Conference.

On the twenty-fifth day of December, 1866, at Pitt Street Chapel, Barnsley, Yorkshire, England, Brother Bradley was happily married to Miss Emma Walker, and to them were born ten children, six boys and four girls. Two of the sons, T. M. and O. W. Bradley, are honored graduates of Millsaps College and influential ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, one of them being a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and the other a member of the Louisiana Conference. Four of the children are living, Ellen and Walter having died since the death of their father.

It was in 1872 that Brother Bradley, accompanied by Brother Oakley, came to the United States. They seem to have come directly to Corinth, Miss., where Bishop Kavanaugh was presiding over the annual session of the North Mississippi Conference. Both were admitted on trial into the traveling connection in that Conference; but Brother Bradley was transferred immediately to the Mississippi Conference, and was received at the session of that Conference held in Brandon, Dec. 11-17, 1872, Brother Oakley remaining in North Mississippi. Before leaving the session of the Conference in Corinth, Brother Bradley was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh. He was ordained a traveling elder by Bishop Wightman in Natchez, Dec. 3, 1876.

The first work to which Brother Bradley was appointed was Camden and Soule's Chapel. It must have been an interesting experience both to him and the good Methodist folk of Madison County to have this young Englishman in their pulpits and their homes. But the young preacher had sense and religion, and, withal, a rich fund of humor that served to smooth over the rough places, and he came to be greatly beloved on the work, and for three years served the circuit with great acceptability.

From Camden he was sent to the Sharon circuit, in the same county, and here two years were spent, filled with toil and the joy of service. Then followed two years on the Dover circuit, in the adjoining County of Yazoo; and these, in turn, were succeeded by three years on the Benton circuit in the same county.

The next move was to Rocky Springs, in Claiborne County, with its little village and its old brick church, fragrant with the memories of the Rev. Thomas Owen, the pioneer Methodist preacher of that section. After three years we find him at Oak Ridge, in Warren County, where four years of hard, but fruitful and happy service was rendered. Then followed the appointment to Fayette, in Jefferson County, where his busy feet often crossed the trail, blazed nearly a hundred years before, by Toblas Gibson, the first Methodist missionary to enter the Natchez country. Here three years of tireless and successful work were given, and here the old people still talk of his genial spirit and sturdy manhood.

These were followed by his minstry to Vossburg, one year; to Montrose, two years; to Steen's Creek, four years; to Gallman, two years; to Caseyville, four years; to Topisaw, one year; to Adams, one year; to Silver Creek, two years; to Washington, one year.

The historic interest that attaches to Washington and its vicinity must have strongly appealed to him. The village had been the Territorial Capitol of Mississippi. Here were to be seen the walls of the old Elizabeth Female Academy, founded in 1818, said to have been "the first chartered institution in the world for the higher education of girls and young women." A few miles to the west had stood the home of William Foster, where Bishop Roberts held the Mississippi Conference in 1816; while not far to the northwest stood the home of Benjamin M. Drake, "the St. John of Mississippi Methodism." To the north a short distance was the site of old Fort Dearborn, and just to the southwest was Natchez, crowning the majestic bluffs that overlooked the Mississippi River—the seat of the Spanish Government of the Territory, rich in its traditions of the massacre of Fort Rosalie. Scattered over the entire section were the beautiful mansions of the wealthy planters of the ante-bellum days, while over the whole territory there lingered the romantic traditions of the Natchez Indians.

The next year finds our itinerant back on the Rocky Springs charge for one year; then, for the last stage of a ministry, long, useful, and blameless, he went to Pearl Street Church, Natchez.

At the session of the Conference held in Hazlehurst, December, 1912, Brother Bradley was granted the superannuate relation, thus closing an active ministry of sixty-two years, of which ten years were given to his native Cheshire and fifty-two to Mississippi.

But even then he did not cease from his loved employ. For several years he lived in Jackson, filling appointments here and elsewhere as opportunity offered, preaching at Tutwiler, Rosedale, Moorhead, and serving as assistant chaplain of the Mississippi State Penitentiary until 1918, when failing health admonished him that the time had come to sheathe the sword he had so long and so valiantly wielded.

The last four years were spent in Louisville, Misss., in the home of his daughter, Annie, where, honored by the entire community, and the recipient of the loving service of his devoted wife and children, he passed confidently into the realization of the rest that remaineth for the children of God. Just before he fell asleep he said: "I know that the gospel I have preached is true, and I shall soon hear my Master say, 'Well done.'" We are thankful for the testimony of the dying saint; but better far is the testimony of his long and blameless life.

While the Mississippi Conference was in session in Gulfport, November, 1923, he had his son, Marvin, write to the brethren that he was sorry that failing health kept him from their meeting, that he wished them a happy session, and prayed that the God of our fathers would be with them.

Wednesday, Nov. 21, the body was brought to Jackson. The funeral services were held in the Galloway Memorial Church at 3 o'clock that afternoon, followed by the interment in the beautiful Cedar Lawn cemetery.

In person, Brother Bradley was scarcely of medium height; somewhat stockily built, but quick in movement and in speech. His eyes were gray, his complexion fair, his face well rounded, his features finely formed. His voice was rich and pleasant, and upon his lips there still hung the accents of his native Britain. His voice, his English accent, and the winning smile that lighted his expressive face, added a peculiar charm to the quiet humor to which he often gave expression. In the social circle he was genial and friendly, and in his intercourse with his brethren he seemed to have made his own the charity that "thinketh no evil."

As a Christian, he was humble and devout; as a pastor, industrious and painstaking; as a preacher, earnest and scriptural, and notably gifted in prayer. He was a faithful friend, a kind and considerate husband and father, and his home life was beautiful in the trustful affection of his wife and children. All who knew him loved him, and his precious memory lingers with them like that of the joys of the days that are gone.

"The pains of death are past,
Labor and sorrow cease;
And, life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace.
Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH MILLSAPS COLLEGE?

By Rev. F. L. Applewhite.

Sometimes this question is asked with the apparent implication that something bad's the matter. Maybe so. And because this college is the property of the Methodist Church and is, or ought to be, first in the hearts of Methodist people of our State, the facts should be forthcoming, for a true and correct understanding of our college situation will not only prevent misunderstandings, but will, I hope, stimulate more enthusiastic interest in our school, develop a more genuine loyalty to our institution than has hitherto existed, and inspire our people to do their duty in the educational task.

In taking an inventory of our college possessions here, we find that at least in one very important particular our institution approaches the ideal—that is in the matter of location. Not a college in the State that would not gladly make an exchange with us of location. By far and away Millsaps has THE college situation, speaking geographically and every other way—at the Capital of the State where the student can study civic, religious, social questions first-hand, having access to great libraries, having the privilege of hearing the world's greatest orators, lecturers, musicians and men of distinction or all vocations. This in itself affords opportunities for a liberal education to the youth with a mind to learn. No other college in Mississippi is so well favored in this respect.

The spacious campus grows more beautiful with the passing years. It is situated on the highest elevation in the city, and from the windows of the main building a beautiful panorama of Jackson and the surrounding country lies before the observer. Nature has pre-eminently qualified Millsaps to satisfy the soul's love of the beautiful.

When we consider the physical equipment of the college plant, we must admit that we need more buildings and better facilities, especially for the Science Department. Nevertheless, there are in appropriate situations on the campus beautiful and modern college buildings which, at least for the present, can take care of the need. It will not be long until a splendid new library building will be erected, costing between sixty and seventy thousand dollars. No doubt in the near future a Science Hall and a new dormitory and other needed buildings will follow. One of the two observatories in this State is here. It is equipped with a large telescope, which gives Millsaps an unusual advantage in the study of astronomy.

The productive endowment of the college amounts to $600,000. While this is a large sum and enables the college to select men of unusual ability and training for its faculty, there is a fact in evidence which makes the need for a larger endowment acutely felt. This is the expansion of the student body, since the number in attendance has more than doubled since 1918. We are in the midst of an educational renaissance, when the youth of our country are literally swarming into our college halls, and to meet this unusual situation our faculty needs to be increased and our physical plant enlarged. That the need is imperative no one can deny who is at all conversant with the facts.

Happily, the realization of the need is within easy reach of Mississippi Methodism. The General Education Board stands ready to pay into the endowment $100,000 whenever enough of the educational pledges are paid to realize $250,000. That this opportunity to push our endowment up to the million dollar mark, thus giving distinction to the college and putting it in position to meet the demands of the educational situation, will be seized cannot be doubted if we are awake to the fact that opportunity knocks at the door.

Of unusual interest to my brother-preachers and to those laymen who estimate the value of a college according to religious standards, is that department made possible by the gift of $100,000 by Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg. The Religious Education Department is not a miniature theological school which exists mainly for the ministerial students, but it is rather a department which has for its aim "to provide training for the workers who are soon to be required as the church-wide program of religious education, now being formulated, gets under way." It exists to teach the Bible and to train Sunday school teachers and other church workers in the fundamentals of religion and in the fundamental principles of Christian leadership. In one course, the literature sent out by the General Sunday School Board passes under the student's review, and a thorough acquaintance is made or standards required for our Sunday schools, of best methods of organizing and promoting Sunday school work, and similar details. Also a course is given on the work of the Rural Church, which is the same course as that taught at pastors' summer schools. Professor Summers, who teaches this course, is thoroughly fitted by experience and training to teach the subject in a practical and helpful way.

This department has given thus far one hundred and forty-eight credit units for Teacher Training and by the end of this session will give a total of four hundred units.

It is encouraging to note that at Capitol Street Church two teacher training classes, composed of Millsaps students and taught by members of the faculty, and at Galloway Memorial four such classes, are taught. While the work of this department, except the Bible, is elective, it is a source of gratification to know that these courses are very popular with the student body.

The distinction belongs to Millsaps of having one of the two such departments in Southern Methodism. The other is at Trinity and the comparison is not unfavorable to Millsaps.

Professor Bowen and Professor Summers are much beloved by the Millsaps student body and exert a fine religious influence on the campus. They spend as much time as possible in helping other preachers in the field.

Finally, brethren, the unanimous verdict of all who are in position to know is that Millsaps is having her very best session. Dr. Key has shown himself a firm and competent administrator. The spirit of the student body seems excellent in every way. Not much encouragement is shown to the trifler or unruly. The faculty and the students are busy "on the job" and Millsaps is a live-wire situation.

WHAT NOW DOES MILLSAPS NEED? First, that endowment of a million dollars, and, second, the backing of our Methodist preachers and people. Why not rally to our school not only because it is our Methodism's only A-grade college in the State, but because of what we may make it by thus rallying? Let Millsaps have your criticisms if they are constructive and directed in the channels where they will do good. Let Millsaps have your praise when she merits it. Let Millsaps have your prayers and sympathy and co-operation.

WITH THE FLEET.

By Chaplain J. H. Brooks.

On Jan. 8, the Air Squadrons, Scouting Fleet, left Hampton Roads, Va., en route to Culebra, Porto Rico, for the winter fleet maneuvers. The Air Squadrons consist of the U. S. S. Wright, flagship, and twenty-seven seaplanes. These airships are of two types, scouting and torpedo. I say "airships" advisedly, because the scouting planes weigh seven tons, measure 102 feet from tip to tip, and are powered by two liberty motors developing 800 horsepower. They have a cruising radius of 425 miles and a flying speed of 60 miles an hour. The torpedo planes are somewhat smaller and faster, but cannot carry so heavy a load or stand the rough seas. Eight ships acted as tenders on the way south, i. e., they were stationed along the coast to give the planes gasoline, go to their help in case of forced landings, and make minor repairs when necessary. The passage to Key West, Fla., was made in ten days, the planes making brief stops at Moorhead City, Charleston, Fernandino, and Miami. It was quite a change from the near-zero weather at Norfolk to the warm sunshine in Key West. After a few days here, during which time there were fishing parties, tennis, and baseball games, the Wright with the planes crossed over to Mariel, Cuba. It was very pleasant on deck during this passage of the Florida Straits and at odd minutes the flying fishes, frightened by the ship, could be seen gliding swiftly through the air to a safe distance. The skyline of Cuba was visible from a distance of thirty miles, and as we approached the white buildings of Havana were outlined against the green of the hills. Mariel Bay is one of the most beautiful natural landscapes to be found in the West Indies. From the placid waters of the land-locked harbor the hills rise to a height of 500 feet, and on the summit of the highest stands a great, white stone Spanish castle, which is now the Cuban Naval Academy. The hillsides are green with palms, cocoanut trees and tropical grasses, with here and there cultivated gardens and banana groves. Mariel itself is a typical Cuban town with its "plaza," where the people gather every evening to smoke and talk; its saloons, where an abundance of wines, liquors, and beer may be found; its wide verandaed houses opening on narrow streets, and its "Cathedral" on the hillside. Back of the town the sugar cane fields stretch for miles in an unbroken expanse.

Liberty was given the starboard watch, with the privilege of going to Havana, the queen city of the West Indies. The planes then crossed the island, stopped overnight at Cienfuegos, where the Shawmut provided for the health and comfort of the crew, and joined the Wright again at Guantanamo Bay. This splendid harbor is leased by the United States Government and is the usual rendezvous of the fleet in the winter. A very good naval station is maintained. After several days at sea the men enjoyed the privilege of getting ashore and playing a lively game of baseball. Swimming parties were sent to the beach, and boats made regular trips to the little Cuban town of Caimanera. From Guantanamo we crossed the Windward passage to Haiti and cruised along the southern coast, admiring the towering mountains that rise from the water to a height of 5000 to 8000 feet. Little villages of thatched houses dotted the coast line. A stop was made at Caldera Bay, D. R., where a hiking party went ashore to study the curious pyramids on the beach. They proved to be great piles of salt from the salt vats. Sea water is admitted into the shallow flats, then the dam is closed and the water allowed to evaporate. The salt is raked up, refined and marketed. From Santo Domingo the squadron passed over to Porto Rico, the rugged, picturesque, beautiful "Switzerland of America," and then along the coast to Culebra Island.

At Culebra the tactical war maneuvers took place. Three thousand marines, representing an enemy force, were in possession of the island. The ships of the battle fleet approached from the Panama Canal to shell the island and drive off the enemy. A constant patrol both day and night of waters adjacent to Culebra was made by the seaplanes of the scouting fleet, which were also defending the island. Finally the approaching fleet was sighted and a warning sent by radio to the marines on Culebra. A landing party in motor sailers from the fleet approached the island about midnight. A realistic war scene ensued. All planes were sent up and from an altitude of several thousand feet, flares were dropped which illuminated the skies, exposing to view the boats of the landing force. The marine batteries on the hills opened fire; the battleships responded; and the air was rent with thunderous explosions and the darkness pierced by lurid flashes. When daylight came the battle was declared over and the fleet came to anchor. The results will be determined by the umpires after careful study of all maneuvers.

Culebra is a very small island six miles long, three miles wide, of irregular coast line, very mountainous and inhabited by about 500 people. It has had a very interesting history, dating back to the time of the "Spanish Main," when it was the rendezvous for the pirate ships which preyed upon the treasure-laden Spanish vessels. Captain Kidd and other famous pirates landed here and awaited an auspicious time to strike. A fleet anchored here would control the approaches to the canal from the south, and for that reason the maneuvers are being held in these waters this year. It makes an ideal place for a month's exile. Athletic fields have been constructed here and eight or ten baseball games are in progress every afternoon; the beaches are splendid and all men are required to qualify in swimming; hiking parties, boat races and all kinds of sports are provided for. Every effort is made to give the men clean, healthy exercise to develop their strength and self-control as they learn their jobs in the Navy.

On February 19 and 20, a conference of the chaplains in the fleet was held in Denby Hall, Culebra. Captain Patrick, fleet chaplain, battle fleet, presided. Twenty-four chaplains were present. Protestants and Catholics mingled in Christian fellowship, and a spirit of harmony, devotion to the cause and eagerness for knowledge prevailed. Some of the topics on which papers were read follow: "The Christian Ministry Our Calling;" "Catching and Training Chaplains;" "The Chaplain's Program;" "The Chaplain's Duties Ashore;" "The Chaplain's Relation to Shipboard Life and Activity;" "The Sailor—A Study of Man, His Personality and Habits;" "Religious Education in the Navy;" "Naval Ideals in the Christian Life, and Christian Ideals in Naval Life." The papers were well prepared and the reading of each was followed by discussion. Each session was opened with a devotional address in which the essentials of Christian faith were stressed. It was an earnest and helpful conference.

The chaplain's duty is a difficult and important one. He is an "Aide for Morale" on the ship. The men look to him to provide for their comfort, recreation and general welfare. He is librarian, and in this capacity encourages the reading of good books; he is educational officer, and instructs the ambitious in preparing for the advancement in rating; he is recreational officer, and arranges for motion pictures, vaudeville, and other entertainments. On the effort made in these directions depends somewhat his influence and success in church work. If he proves his interest in and love for the men, they respect him and attend his services. His week-day activities give evidence of a faith that is vital and contagious.

The opportunity of the church service on board ship is inspiring. At the average service, from fifty to one hundred men between the ages of 18 to 25 years are gathered; men who know life; who are quick to recognize truth and sincerity; who have no use for cant, and are not impressed by sacred phraseology; men who want the truth presented so they can understand it and profit by it. The chaplain must carefully prepare his sermon if he would hold these men, but if he has a direct, earnest and sincere message he is sure of a respectful hearing. However, there are many discouragements to meet. Sunday is often a busy day aboard ship. Some men have to stand watch, load stores, gas planes; others are attracted by the Sunday athletic programs of boat races, ball games, swimming parties, etc.; still others, of course, choose to sleep or play cards; so that the chaplain may be fairly sure that the men who face him at church aboard ship on Sunday morning are there from choice, to attend a religious service.

Being deprived of the "fellowship of the saints" of the average pastorate and so often living in a worldly and materialistic atmosphere, a conference such as the one held in Culebra is a godsend to the chaplain. He feels again the strength of "that power that makes for righteousness," the sympathy and encouragement of the army of God's elect. The men of the chaplain's corps are missionaries in a difficult field and greatly need the support and prayers of the church.

Meditation illuminates, it warms, it invigorates; and by doing this it gives that inward proof of its own reality which has been most highly prized by the most devoted servants of God.—Dr. Liddon.

"IS THE WORLD GROWING WORSE?"

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

This is not my question. I quote it as the title of this paper. In a grand old book that millions believe to be very truthful, I read: "Say not thou, what is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this." (Ecc. 7:10.) I have never asked: "What is the cause that the former days were better than these?" for I have never believed that they were. Mr. Wesley has a sermon on this text. If I had ever been inclined to ask this forbidden question, Mr. Wesley's sermon would have cured me of the folly of such an inclination.

When some one tells me that the world is growing worse, I ask: "why do you think so?" He answers in effect: "I see and hear of much more wickedness than I ever did before." I ask: "Do you not see and hear vastly more of good as well as of evil than you ever did before?" Our facilities for news-gathering and news-spreading have in these last years been vastly increased. No living man or woman can form any sort of a conclusion in this matter by balancing the evil things he sees and hears against the good things that he observes. Macaulay long ago said:

"Those who compare the age in which their lot has fallen with a golden age which exists only in imagination, may talk of degeneracy and decay; but no man who is correctly informed as to the past, will be disposed to take a morose or desponding view of the present."

It has become quite the fashion with some to write and speak of our present time as "an age of materialism," and some add of infidelity. Yes, it is; and so has been every age or era of human history; but this, in proportion to population, is less than any, "an age of materialism and infidelity." The saying is senseless. It would be just as wise to say: "This is the present age." So has been every age during passage. Some change it and say, "the social unrest of to-day." Unrest is the normal condition of life. It is far better than utter inactivity. To one whose boyhood embraced the period of our awful Civil War, with its demoralizing tendencies, and whose young manhood took in that darker time of Reconstruction, all of these intimations of spiritual and moral decline set forth as present realities are utterly without foundation, and are irritating.

My eyes have just fallen on the following in a daily paper of this date. Its reasonableness is beyond question:

"As you follow the daily news and read of hold-ups, confidence games, swindles and burglary, maybe you occasionally get the notion that the world reeks with dishonesty. Not so. The dishonest cases are the exceptions. That's why they are news—a record of the unusual. Honesty is so common and general, that cases of it are not news."

In a late issue of the Nashville Advocate Dr. Elmer T. Clark, writing from certain knowledge, giving exact figures from accurate statistics, shows that since our church began its great Centenary, 293,350 bona fide new members have been added. Dr. Clark says:

"When 1918 closed we had not increased our missionary force in ten years, and the only prospect before us was a gradual withdrawal. Since that date we have sent out 274 new foreign missionaries, lacking but 25 of doubling our entire force. We have occupied five new mission fields (Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Siberia, and Manchuria), and in each of these we have won thousands of converts and established our own churches, schools, hospitals, and other institutions. In foreign lands we have built or rebuilt a dozen hospitals and nearly fifty schools, and to-day we have as many educational institutions abroad as at home. To-day our largest college is in Japan, and our largest church is in Czecho-Slovakia. And as a result we are winning more souls, erecting more churches, founding more schools, building more hospitals, and sending out more preachers than the fathers ever dreamed would be possible. The morning cometh. Its dawn is on the hills. And we are challenged to deeper consecration, greater loyalty, and renewed activity."

Yet some are saying: "Our people are not as religious as Methodists were half a century ago;" and I ask for evidence, and am told that they do not "shout and testify" as much as our fathers did; and I think of our Lord's significant words: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father." When I entered the itinerancy fifty-two years ago, our church had hardly a half dozen foreign missionaries in all the world. To-day she has more than a thousand. Possibly our Methodist people back there were more given to shouting, i. e., to saying: "Lord, Lord"—but now they are more given to doing God's will.

Some very good but mistaken people, misinterpreting Paul's warning to the church at Thessalonica concerning a temporary and more or less local "falling away," have gone to the extreme of teaching that the world can never be brought to Christ unless he come again and take up personally in his physical person the bloody work of cleaning out the wicked. Missing the meaning of some of the visions told in the Book of Revelation, conspires to this mistake. I remember that when Peter once said to Jesus, "Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God," Christ in replying said: "On this rock (this faith you have just expressed) I will build my church, and the gates of Hades (Hell or destruction) shall not prevail against it;" and when I ask: "What is the business of Christ's church?" I remember that after his resurrection he said to the apostles, and through them to all his church: "Go ye and make disciples of all the nations." Would he, could he have uttered such a commission if it had been impossible to do? Must the church despair of doing the sublime work, and call out to him: "O Lord come back in your bodily form and do your work of world-saving over again!" Was his work on earth twenty centuries ago a failure? Is the saving business an utter failure, and the world only growing worse? If that were true, the words of our Lord to Peter, cited above, would be a tremendous mistake. Are we to believe the Christ mistaken? Some of his benighted followers are; but he is not. Under his spirit-guided program, the whole world is swinging into light; and far more rapidly than ever before.

"Our faces toward the dawn
Where God's fair light is gleaming;
Courageously we travel on
Toward the new day's beaming.
Fearless we follow where that light
Reveals the path of duty;
And with us in the way of right
The Christ walks in his beauty."

"Lo I am with you all the days, even unto the end."

THANKS TO CONTRIBUTORS.

I wish to acknowledge with thanks and appreciation a number of contributions for our French Mission work as called for in my appeal several weeks ago. It is not necessary to list these, but I feel like noting especially a check for $10 from Rev. W. J. Porter, one of our superannuates, who, in spite of broken health, is trying to make ends meet, but wanted to help the work in South Louisiana where he had labored for many years. Another specially notable contribution came from Massachusetts, from Rev. William B. Van Valkenburg, who many years ago served in the French section of Louisiana, and is now pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Westboro, Mass. He has not lost interest in this great work.

We still have room for other contributions in this special emergency call.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

WE

THE METHODST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, IS NOW FACED BY A REAL OPPORTUNITY TO PROVE THAT SHE REALLY CARES FOR THE PREACHERS WHO WEAR OUT THEMSELVES IN HER MINISTRY.

THE SPECIAL EFFORT FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT MOVES ON TO SUCCESS OR FAILURE. WHICH SHALL IT BE? IF LOYAL MEMBERS EVERYWHERE GIVE LIBERALLY TO THE FUND, VICTORY IS SURE TO COME; BUT IF THEY FAIL TO CONTRIBUTE AS THEY SHOULD, THE CHURCH'S COLORS WILL BE TRAMPLED IN DISMAL DEFEAT.

WILL

SHALL THOSE OLD BRAVES WHO SACRIFICED EVERY AVAILABLE MEANS TO CREATE AN OLD-AGE COMPETENCY FOR THEMSELVES, IN ORDER TO GIVE ALL THEIR TIME TELLING THE GLAD TIDINGS OF GOD'S DEAR SON FOR THE BENEFIT OF OTHERS, BE LEFT AS THE PREY OF PITILESS POVERTY AND AS THE SHAME OF AN UNGRATEFUL CHURCH WHEN THEY ARE UNABLE TO CONTINUE SUCH SERVICE BECAUSE OF OLD AGE AND PHYSICAL DISABILITY?

SHALL THE ACTIVE PREACHERS OF TO-DAY AND OF SUCCEEDING GENERATIONS BE ABLE TO DO THE WORK OF THE CHURCH UNAFRAID, KNOWING THAT PROVISION HAS BEEN MADE FOR THEM WHEN OLD AGE FORCES THEM TO SUPERNANUATE? OR SHALL THEY TRY TO CARRY ON IN THE FUTURE, KNOWING THAT THE CHURCH HAD A REAL CHANCE TO PROVIDE ADEQATE SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT AND FAILED?

SHALL THE CHURCH OF CHRIST, WHICH PROCLAIMS A GOSPEL OF PROPER CARE FOR DEPENDANTS, NOW PRACTICE WHAT SHE PREACHES BY RESPONDING LIBERALLY TO THE CALL OF HER OWN CLAIMANTS? OR SHALL SHE STAND SHAME-FACED IN THE PRESENCE OF GOVERNMENTS, SECULAR CORPORATIONS, AND MEN OF THE WORLD, WHO DO NOT PREACH SUCH A GOSPEL BUT PRACTICE IT?

NOT

THE WORLD IS SICK: MORALS LIMP: THE SOCIAL ORDER IS DISEASED: FEAR CLUTCHES THE THROATS OF MEN EVERYWHERE: SOMETHING MUST BE DONE.

THE NEREST AND BEST PLACE OF TREATMENT IS THE CROSS OF THE GREAT TEACHER. THOUSANDS OF PREACHERS ARE ABLE TO POINT THE WAY, AND THEY ARE BUSY DOING IT. HEARKEN UNTO THEM.

THOSE PATHFINDERS OF THE CROSS ARE FAITHFUL. THEY DO NOT SHIRK. BUT THEY WOULD BE GREATLY STRENGTHENED FOR THEIR WORK IF THEY COULD BE ASSURED OF THE COMMONEST NECESSITIES WHEN THEY WEAR OUT AT THE TASK.

FORGET

This is the Call of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. It aims to hearten the active preachers in their work of administering to an afflicted world the prescription of the Great Physician. It seeks to do justice to superannuated preachers who have been used up in such service.

The Home Circle

ELSIE'S SCARE.

By Mrs. Alla M. Foster.

Elsie sat with eyes opened wide in amazement. "Oh, I guess Indians don't ever scalp folks," she exclaimed. "My teacher was telling us a nice story about Indians. They are good, I know."

Teddy laughed boisterously. "Oh, 'course your teacher wouldn't tell you anything scary. But the only good Indians are dead ones. You bet they do scalp folks. I read it, all right."

Well, if Teddy had read things like that, it must be true. But Elsie hated to think about it. So she didn't ask any questions, but she did think about it for many days.

A few weeks later, she and mother were all excited over daddy's coming home. He was gone from home so long, it was nearly like a party when he came. Daddy was a wonderful being.

When he got off the street car, Elsie was so excited that she didn't see the half-grown boy beside him. After daddy had kissed them both and been nearly suffocated with Elsie's bear hugs, he said: "Well, I nearly forgot somebody I brought along. This is Tim, Elsie. I'm going to help him out a bit."

They walked up the walk and into the house. The boy remained outside on the porch, but Elsie took time now to look him over. Why! what a brown little fellow! He wasn't a Negro, but oh! he was awful dark! Where did daddy find him and why did he bring him here, she wondered. But pretty soon she had to go to bed and didn't ask about the boy.

The next day, in answer to her question, mother said daddy was going to put the boy in school and have him work in the garden and do the chores.

"What makes him so brown, mother—is he sunburned?" Elsie asked.

Mother smiled. "Looks something like that," was all she said.

The next evening Elsie was playing on the porch with her basketful of kittens.

"You're just the dearest kitties in the world," she said as she hugged each one. "When you get bigger we will—"

And then she sprang up in terror. Around the corner of the house came an awful, dreadful—something. Oh! An Indian! Teddy had shown her a picture, and this was just like it. Oh! Oh! What could she do and where could she go? She seemed glued to her tracks and couldn't take a step. And In-di-ans sc-al-ped fo-lk-s!

A piercing shriek brought mother quickly to the door. "Mother, oh mother! look—he'll scalp us! Oh! Oh! Take me away quick!" and a series of screams followed quickly.

Mother carried the trembling little figure into the house and held her close.

"Elsie, where did you hear such things as that?" she asked. "Now listen. That is Tim. He is a poor little Indian lad whom daddy wants to educate. We didn't tell you because we thought it would be funny for him to dress up in his native clothes for you. Elsie—Elsie, you must stop crying!"

The sobs grew fainter, but Elsie was shaking all over.

"But mother, don't they sometimes scalp folks?" she whispered.

Mother patted her gently.

"Years ago in battle, some of them did that awful thing. But they did not think it was any worse than shooting and maiming, as the white men did. They have learned better now, and we should feel sorry for the children. How can they learn, unless we teach them! I hope you will be very kind to Tim."

Elsie raised her head and turned her eyes toward the door.

"I—I, oh, I'm nearly 'frald yet, mother," she said timidly.

Mother led her out on the proch where a huddled-up bunch of feathers and beads met their gaze. The bright feather had fallen from the headpiece of the boy, and the brilliantly colored coat fell apart loosely.

"Tim," mother spoke kindly. "Come here, boy."

Elsie held mother's hand tight—but of course mother knew.

Tim came over with slow step and drooping eyes.

"Me not know," he said humbly.

Then mother told why Elsie was frightened—that she had never seen Indian clothes—and added that she would never be afraid again.

A look of relief came to the brown face and a little smile hovered over his lips.

"Me no want scare anybody," he said simply.

Suddenly Elsie went over to the boy.

"I'm sorry I acted that way," she said, "I like your bright feathers and the lovely beads. And I want to help you lots of ways."

From a deep pocket somewhere, Tim slowly brought forth a pair of pretty beaded moccasins.

"I bring for you," he said as he put them in her hand, "me want to learn all thing."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

HOW PIGEONS FEED THEIR YOUNG.

One of the strangest things in nature, and one that is not widely known, is the fact that for the first six to eight days of their lives squabs are fed entirely on milk. Three or four days before the young are hatched, both the mother and father pigeon secrete a milk-like fluid in a gland in their throats provided by nature for that purpose. The squab thrusts his bill into the parent's mouth and receives its nourishment from the milk expressed from this gland. So far as is known, the pigeons and doves are the only birds who feed their young in this manner.

Pigeons lead a very exemplary life in every respect, and to spend several hours on a large pigeon farm and learn something of their habits is like a step into fairyland.

The courtship and domestic life of Mr. and Mrs. Pigeon, for instance, reads like an old-fashioned love story. There is no infidelity there. Pigeons mate for life. If one dies, the other may or may not take another companion, but as long as both live, they stick together.

When the mother is sitting on the eggs, promptly at 10 o'clock every day the father bird comes to take his turn. And so accurate a timepiece does he carry in his head, one might almost set a watch by his appearance. This change does not consist merely in her getting off and his taking her place, but he first stands outside the nest on the landingboard and coos and bows three times (just three), and kisses her. Then she goes down into the yard and takes a bath and dresses her feathers. No eating for Mrs. Pigeon until she is well groomed. Then she is ready to eat, sun herself, and probably exchange views with the other lady pigeons on household topics. She enjoys herself this way until exactly 4 o'clock, when she flies to the nest, and the bowing and scraping, billing and cooing take place again and the transfer is made. In a pigeon home there is always time for politeness.

There is perhaps no uglier thing in all birddom than a newly-hatched squab, but to those fond parents he is beautiful. By the time he is two weeks old, however, he has feathered out and is very pretty.

The father continues to take his turn on the nest until the children are two weeks old, at which time they require no further hovering. He then brings material for a second nest, which the mother bird builds. The children are left entirely to the father's care, and he is a very busy bird indeed. Instead of sitting six hours a day on the second nest, as he did on the first, he spends twelve hours out of each twenty-four there, and rustles food for the first brood also, for the older children are not yet out of their nest.

When the second family is two weeks old, the mother builds another nest out of the material provided by the father, and hatches a third family. Each family, by the way, consists of two squabs. Unless the oldest squabs have been taken away for market, as is done on commercial farms, when the third litter of eggs is being incubated the father pigeon has young ones to feed in two nests, spends half his time on the third nest, and somehow finds time to teach the first family to fly and feed themselves. When one considers that an average pair of pigeons raises ten families a year, it is apparent that Father Pigeon is not a union man.

Everything seems done in a spirit of love, and a man who has worked with pigeons for twenty years says he has never seen any quarrelling between Mr. and Mrs. Pigeon.—In Our Dumb Animals.

CENTENARY COLLEGE LUNCHEON.

While Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, was in New Orleans last week, attending the meeting of the Southern Pine Association, the alumni and former students of Centenary College took advantage of the opportunity to get together, with Dr. Sexton as the guest of honor. The meeting was made the occasion of a luncheon at the Monteleone Hotel. The following were in attendance: Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District; Mr. H. H. Ahrens, religious editor of the Times-Picayune; Mr. A. H. Dumas, a leading business man of the city; Mr. O. H. Simpson, recently elected lieutenant governor of Louisiana; Hon. Carter Schwing, prominent in political and business circles; Dr. Ada Kiblinger, one of the leading women physicians of the city; Dr. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church; the editor of the Advocate; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., pastor of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church; Rev. H. W. Jamieson, prominently identified with the Y. M. C. A. work of the State.

The fellowship of the gathering was delightful, and the privilege of meeting Dr. Sexton was greatly appreciated by those whose associations were with the Old Centenary at Jackson, La. In an informal way, Dr. Sexton outlined the plans for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the college in 1925—an event that promises to be of outstanding interest in the educational world. One feature of this celebration is to be a gathering of the alumni and former students at Shreveport during commencement in June, 1925. Elaborate preparations are being made for this gathering, and it is expected that former students from all sections of the country will be present. Another feature will be a campaign for a thank-offering of $1,000,000, to be used to meet the pressing needs of the college for greater endowment and an increase of its facilities in this period of its marvelous development.

The gathering entered heartily into the plans as outlined by Dr. Sexton, and the interest showed itself in the definite decision to hold similar meetings in the future, Mr. H. H. Ahrens being appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The historic Centenary has never lost its place in the affections of its former students, and the new Centenary has won their interest and support. Unless all signs fail, Louisiana is destined to have one of the greatest educational institutions of the church. Dr. Sexton has dedicated himself unreservedly to the development of a great college, and he is entitled to, and should have, the hearty co-operation of all the friends of Christian education.

This good news comes from Rev. R. P. Neblett, Durant, Miss.: "First year's quota, $500, for Superannuate Endowment, raised in cash and check has gone forward to Dr. Luther E. Todd."

Rev. H. E. Raley, our pastor at Osyka, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He gave a good account of the work on his charge.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, is publishing a bulletin setting forth the work of the district. It contains much interesting and valuable information.

The work at Wiggins, Miss., has begun well under the leadership of Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, who was appointed to that pastorate at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference.

A telegram from Mr. R. T. Moore, Shreveport, La., states that the contribution of the First Methodist Church, that city, for Superannuate Endowment, taken last Sunday, approximates $12,000. Fine! The total quota of that church is $6700.

Mr. Oliver E. Rayne, grandson of the founder of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, passed away at the Touro Infirmary, this city, last week. He was buried from the church, Dr. W. L. Duren, the pastor, officiating.

Great crowds are attending the services conducted by Rev. John Brown in Columbus, Miss. The hearts of the people are being stirred, and the greatest revival ever known in that section is being looked forward to.

Dr. A. J. Benjamin, editor of the Wisconsin Christian Advocate, with his wife and niece, is spending a few days in New Orleans for rest and recreation, and to escape the rigors of the northern climate. He honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week.

Rev. John W. Robertson recently held a great revival meeting in Friars Point, Miss., Rev. J. M. Guinn, pastor. The whole community was reached by the gospel message, and there were fifteen additions to the Methodist Church and thirteen to the Baptist Church.

Rev. John W. Chisholm, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is now pastor of the First Methodist Church at Floresville, Tex. Brother Chisholm recently spent two weeks in a hospital at San Antonio, following an operation. His work goes well, the church being well organized and active.

Just before the Advocate went to press, a note from Rev. J. R. Jones, Laurel, Miss., brought the sad news of the death of Brother J. A. Moore, father of Rev. J. A. Moore, Columbia, Miss., and of Rev. H. J. Moore, Forest, Miss., on March 8. He was 91 years old. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Rev. A. L. McQueen, pastor of the Denham Springs charge, Louisiana Conference, gives a good report of his work. There are five Sunday schools and three Epworth Leagues on the charge, all doing good work. A campaign to enlist the laymen in the work is in progress, under the direction of Dr. Rex Singletary, district lay leader.

Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, retired missionary bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. Although nearly 82 years of age, the bishop is hale and hearty and intensely interested in the work of Methodism throughout the world. He is spending a few weeks in New Orleans as a guest of friends.

Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., celebrated a birthday on March 1. Among other remembrances sent him on that day, he mentions especially, in "Methodist Matters," a birthday cake—but he fails to say how many candles were on it. Many more years to him!

Rev. J. D. Nesom, our pastor at Mangham, La., informs us of the death, on March 12, of Brother A. B. Chapman, a man of clean hands and pure heart. He was buried on the following day at Little Creek church, where rest his fathers. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

The Methodist churches in New Orleans which undertook to raise the first year's quota on the Superannuate Endowment Fund last Sunday, March 16, met with inspiring success. We have had the following reports: Carrollton Avenue, $1,450; Second Church, $345; Rayne Memorial, $1,340; Felicity, $521; Epworth, $500. Louisiana Avenue secured its entire first-year quota on the first Sunday in March. There is no doubt but that all the New Orleans churches will raise their quotas in full, and most of them will exceed it.

The New Orleans City Epworth League Union, at its monthly meeting last week, presented a very handsome traveling bag to Mr. Edgar Cayard, as a mark of appreciation for his splendid services in connection with the League work. The presentation speech was made by Rev. J. B. Grambling. Mr. Cayard has served the Union for six years as president, and he has just been re-elected for another term.

A Young Men's Christian Association building is in process of erection in Salonica, Greece. It will stand at the intersection of two city thoroughfares, and as a perpetual mark of distinction the city council named one of the streets the "Y. M. C. A. Avenue," and the other, the "John R. Mott Street. Dr. Mott was also decorated by the Greek Government with the Order of the Holy Savior.

Dr. Luther E. Todd announces that the Crestwood Methodist Church, a small country church about thirty miles out from Louisville, Ky., has the honor of being the first church in Southern Methodism to send its full five-year quota for the Superannuate Endowment Fund. Not only did this church send in its quota, $2,195, at one time, but it also overpaid the quota by more than $100. Rev. J. E. Savage is the pastor.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to call attention to the following changes in his quarterly conference announcements: Mt. Pleasant, at Union, from April 6 to April 5, at 11 a.m.; Crenshaw, from April 13 to April 14; Crowder, at Fredonia, quarterly conference, April 30, 11 a.m., preaching, May 4. These changes will appear in due time in the regular announcements.

Rev. M. M. Black reports that Richton, Miss., has already "gone over the top" in the Special Effort for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, the quota for the first year having been oversubscribed and sixty per cent of same paid in cash. Arrangements have recently been made to enlarge the church auditorium at Richton and to build a commodious and well-equipped Sunday school annex, at a cost of from $3,000 to $3,800. Work will be begun within the next few weeks.

The following sad news from Rev. R. A. Tucker, presiding elder of the Grenada District, reached us too late for our issue of last week: "Mrs. Eugene Johnson, wife of Rev. Eugene Johnson, of the North Mississippi Conference, died at the home of her son, Mellville Johnson, in Grenada, Miss., on March 8, at 12 o'clock noon. She was buried at Batesville, Miss, after services at the church in Batesville, conducted by Rev. W. M. Young, assisted by Revs. J. R. Countiss, J. E. Stephens, and R. A. Tucker." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends of the deceased.

Our church at Hammond, La., is one of the most progressive in the Baton Rouge District. It could not well be otherwise, with Dr. L. D. McGehee as superintendent of the Sunday school, Prof. L. A. Sims as lay leader, and Rev. J. E. Seife as pastor. The church has a fine official board and a loyal membership. On Friday, Jan. 25, a banquet was served in the annex to the church to more than one hundred people. Dr. McGehee was toastmaster, and several inspiring talks were made on the subjects of Sunday school work, parsonage improvement, and church building, all of which are on the minds and hearts of the people.

On the recent second annual tour of the Mansfield College glee club, the club sang in twelve towns—Mansfield, Gibsland, Homer, Haynesville, Monroe, Ruston, Winnfield, Alexandria, Bunkie, Oakdale, Lake Charles and De Ridder. Crowded houses greeted the club at each place, a total of 8,232 people making up the audiences. The club consists of twenty girls and four members of the faculty, the members of the faculty being Miss Mary Justice, directress; Miss Sara Adams, violinist; Miss Mildred Baggess, accompanist; Miss Jennie North, chaperone. Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor of the Epworth Methodist Church, New Orleans, acted as business manager of the tour. The club cleared $401, which will be applied to the purchase of a concert grand piano for the college.

A good showing made by other towns will be forthcoming. No doubt many will try to pay out in full this spring; and many more this fall. What we can do, we should do. What we should do, by the help of God, we will do. Hurrah for all who will go ahead at once and do like Booneville!

FACING OPPOSITION AND WINNING.

Among the most heroic in endeavor and truest to the faith are our home missionaries. One, Rev. A. J. Martin, of St. Martinsville, La., whose work is among the French, in a recent statement, says: "St. Martinsville has a population of 3,000, with approximately 100 Protestants. It is second to the oldest town in the State and immortalized as 'the Land of Evangeline' by Longfellow. Just recently the secretary of the Masonic Lodge passed away and was buried in our cemetery. Being friendly and of jovial disposition, he had friends by the hundreds in this part of the country, though a Mason and a former Catholic. His Catholic friends came out to his funeral by scores and our church was filled to overflowing, and then all joined in the procession to the grave. The Masons had their ceremony at the grave, and naturally created quite a stir in such a Catholic community. The priest, anxious to save the day, immediately took vehement steps to keep his flock from being further contaminated by the heretics, and even gave out threats of excommunication. A number of Catholics who had never witnessed such a funeral were deeply impressed with the ceremony, and they keenly resented the priest's tyrannical methods. One of the most prominent men in town went so far as to confide in me that he bitterly resented such bigotry. Taking advantage of the opportunity at this psychological time, I got busy at once and began a meeting. I advertised the meeting in every way possible, with special invitation to our French Catholic friends, and it worked. We had the crowds. Just so soon as I could safely approach them in personal work, I assured them that they need not fear, for should the priest refuse them absolution, I was an ordained minister and had as much power as the priest. Step by step, by prayerful and patient work, we are instructing and winning them one by one. It does not take long for them to see the light, and when once converted, they stick through thick and thin."

There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.—I Cor. 12:4-5.

MRS. AMANDA DELINDA HOLLOMAN was born Feb. 9, 1842, in New Orleans, and died Jan. 3, 1924, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Ada Pettis, in Ellisville. She was the daughter of John McKee and Arinda Fuller. Her father was a merchant in New Orleans at the time of her birth, but later moved to Yazoo County, Miss. Her mother was a daughter of Marvin Fuller, of Washington, Miss., and had spent her girlhood in the territorial capitol of Mississippi. On Jan. 21, 1874, Miss McKee married Thomas R. Holloman, of Yazoo County, and, until his death, more than twenty years later, they made their home at the old Holloman place near Phoenix. Before her marriage she was a member of the Episcopal Church, but afterward she joined the Methodist Church with her husband, and remained within its fold until her death. For some eight years she had been practically an invalid and had made her home with the Pettis family in Ellisville. Here, at noon on Jan. 3, funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. D. P. McIntosh, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Her body was taken to the Pettis burial ground at Oxford and laid away the following day with a service conducted by Dr. Heddleston, of the University. Mrs. Holloman leaves three sisters—Mrs. Carrie Folkes, of Satartia; Mrs. Belle Pugh, and Mrs. Lula Baldwin, of Memphis. Mrs. Holloman had no children of her own, but became a mother in reality to her husband's children; and their devotion to her was beautiful and touching. Only one of these remain, Mrs. Summerfield Brown, of Lexington, Miss., who makes her home with her daughter and son-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Ward, of the North Mississippi Conference. Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D., of the Mississippi Conference, was a son of T. R. Holloman, and a stepson of Mrs. Holloman. All the relatives in the Holloman family were devoted to her. Her own relatives, and especially those with whom she made her home, were exceedingly kind, and loving hands did all they could to comfort and soothe her last days. A gentle, kindly spirit, typical of the womanhood of the Old South, with the courage of a Christian faith, with loyalty for her church, and love for humanity, has gone from among us.

MR. JOSEPH MARSHALL was born and reared in Carroll County, Miss.; united with the Methodist church at Enon when a child; and passed away at his home in Carrollton on the morning of Feb. 15, 1924. The summons came swiftly and suddenly as he sat with letters in his hand and his typewriter opened before him. Five children survive him: Mrs. C. A. Neal, of Carrollton, Miss.; Alva G. Marshall, Mrs. J. Wofford Tucker, both of Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. Edgar B. Lerew, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Captain Otto Marshall, of Fortress Monroe, Va. Mrs. Josie Marshall, the wife of his second marriage, survives.

In the death of Brother Marshall, historic old Carrollton has lost a most venerable citizen, and our Methodism has sustained a loss that is well-nigh irreparable. The writer knew him as a man who "walked with God." By reason of strength he, in this intimate companionship with the Father, journeyed beyond the distant milepost of threescore years and ten. God said, "You have come a long way, my son; better come in and stay with me." So God took him.

He loved his church with a holy passion. He took an active part in all her interests. As teacher in the Bible class; leader in the mid-week prayer service; an active worker of the Twin Cities Flying Squadron; a devout worshiper at the preaching hour, he found his great joy. Often in his public prayer in a burst of sublime eloquence he would repeat the words of the Psalmist, "I was glad when they said unto me, 'Let us go into the house of the Lord.'"

In his death the forces of righteousness have lost a fearless champion. He was not a watchman in the tower; he was a battle-scarred soldier of the field. His visage was set like adamant against every manifestation of evil. He counted it all joy to be persecuted for righteousness' sake. Brother Marshall regarded prohibition in America the greatest single victory for morality the church has won, and so jealous was he of the hard-earned trophies of his church that whenever the forces of intemperance lifted their menacing tentacles, with all his might he struck with his trenchant blade. Had duty demanded, he would have sacrificed his very life and drained his blood for his church and the ideals for which she stands.

"E'en down to old age," he never lost his perspective, but remained in sympathy and touch with the world about him. In the ultimate triumph of the gospel of Jesus Christ he had a faith that was steadfast and sure. He believed that the church is waging a winning fight, and that the gates of hell could not suffice to prevail against it. Retaining his faith in men and possessing a confidence that the right is in the ascendancy, he was optimistic and cheerful at every point of contact. As his former pastor, the writer knew him to be a tower of strength in the spiritual life of his community and a most faithful official of the Methodist church.

A mighty prince has fallen; a good man has gone hence. But the memory of his life will help us in many a hard place and impel us to hold true to the faith when we are tried and tempted. While we are left behind in shadows and toil, he basks in noonday splendor in the Land of the Unsetting Sun. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

THE BIBLE FOR JAPANESE ROYALTY.

The American Bible Society is sending from the Bible House in New York two elegantly bound, stamped, and cased copies of the Bible, as wedding gifts to Prince Regent Hirohito, the future Emperor of Japan, and his bride-to-be, Princess Nagako Kuni. The wedding, originally scheduled for last November, but postponed on account of the great earthquake, is now fixed for Feb. 8. A committee from representative Japanese Christian bodies in Japan has made arrangements for the presentation of the handsome books.

The widespread acceptance of the moral teachings of the Bible is an outstanding feature of Japan's half-century of development. The Christian Sunday is observed throughout the Empire. The Sunday school is already a national institution—the royal family contributed $25,000 toward the expenses of the World Sunday School Convention held in Tokyo in 1920. Christian morals and ethics are permeating and silently working in every phase of life, from Buddha strongholds to commercial circles.

Since but one out of three hundred of the Japanese is a member of the Christian church, the question naturally arises, "Whence comes this Christian influence?" It is largely the result of a widespread circulation of the Bible. For 50 years the American Bible Society has been carrying on work in Japan. During this time it has circulated over five million copies. Each succeeding year has witnessed a large increase in the circulation of the Scriptures. During the first half-year of 1923 more than a quarter of a million copies were circulated, being more than during any previous entire year. The great earthquake has again largely increased the demand far beyond the means of the Society to provide, especially as it is so seriously handicapped by heavy losses of properties, plates, types and stocks of Scriptures, all of which must be replaced before normal supplies can be resumed.—Bulletin, American Bible Society.

According to plans made at the last annual meeting of the Mexico Conference, the new Centenary Hospital at Chihuahu will soon be in operation. Dr. J. H. Ray, who has been serving on the staff of the Monterrey Hospital for the past two years, will pioneer the work.—Missionary Voice.

Soggy Biscuits and Indigestion

From time immemorial, leavening gas has made the "touch" which made the paste of flour and water a digestible food—the staff of life. A flat and soggy loaf or biscuit is an unleavened food. So it is that leavening agents such as yeast or baking powder are employed.

To insure to the American housewife complete leavening of her biscuits, cakes, muffins, etc., which is so important to perfect digestion, the pure food authorities found it wise to require a certain standard of leavening strength in baking powder.

To maintain this guaranty of digestibility—to insure minimum deterioration of leavening strength, baking powder is packed in tin. This prevents absorption of atmospheric moisture. Dampness produces premature reaction in the can—results in loss of leavening gas.

The food official, would properly condemn baking powder if packed in cheap sacks.

But what about self rising flour? It comes to the southern housewife from remote northern mills packed in porous bags. What happens to this mixture of baking materials and flour?

Chemical analysis shows that much of it has lost its leavening strength before it reaches the consumer.

Breadstuffs made with such self-rising flours cannot rise properly—they come to the table heavy, flat, and soggy.

Why don't the pure food officials demand that self-rising flours contain 0.5% leavening gas, the equivalent to the 12% required of baking powder?

Calumet Baking Powder is scientifically and legally correct—the last spoonful is as pure and sure as the first.

Packed in tin—keeps the strength in

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It has become a trite saying that the church of to-morrow is in the hands of the parents and the other teachers of the childhood of to-day; nevertheless, it is true. If we desire to have a praying church, a missionary church, a liberal church, a truly evangelistic church, a church with a passion to establish the kingdom of our Lord, we will find these God-given impulses in the heart of every child of God, but these impulses must be intelligently cultivated, guided, developed, until they come to maturity. Neglect these impulses and they perish; cultivate them and they grow.

The past two weeks were spent in the Greenville District with Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder. Brother Felts attended to the business of the quarterly conferences, and I spoke upon the necessity of religious education, the necessity of a trained leadership in the home, in the church, and in the school, that the children of to-day might be rooted and grounded in the teachings of Jesus Christ. These meetings were held day and night straight through the week. The attendance was unusually good at every place, save one or two. The interest in the work of the church was marked in several places. The Sunday school at Alligator, under the supervision of Mrs. R. S. Moore, increased 100 per cent in enrollment and in the quality of work during the past year. This school paid its Centenary pledge in full, raised $385 for all purposes. They have attained six points in the Program of Work and are working on the other four points. They are reaching every man and woman, boy and girl, Jew and Gentile, in the community. Another remarkable report was that of Rev. S. L. Pope, at Tunica. He is giving a high type of religious instruction by having the members of his school commit and sing one of the great hymns of the church. He has selected twelve of the hymns to be used in this way. Of course, he is committing these hymns and leading in the singing of them. Every detail of the church work was reported upon in a way that showed what the people need most is a capable leader.

In this round of appointments it was clearly demonstrated that the Methodists in the Greenville District are ready to respond to the call of their leaders in every good work. Another fact that stands out as big as "a meeting house" is, where we have one trained leader, the Sunday schools are doing 100 per cent better work than where they have no trained leaders. Brother Felts and I had a great time together. We are hopeful of having an attendance of more than a hundred at our training school to be held at Clarksdale, April 7-12.

Atlanta, Ga.—"I had been suffering a good while with indigestion, also very frequently with shortness of breath; and my blood was undoubtedly in very bad condition. I was losing weight and getting weak and thin. My aunt recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and I had taken only a little when my health began to improve. MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Sunday School Day programs have been ordered sent to each pastor in the Conference. If you do not receive yours, please notify me at once, so that the Board may have others sent and get credit for the non-delivery of the ones ordered. We are going to have an Honor Roll displayed at Conference, with the names of every preacher on a circuit who sends an offering to the Sunday school Board from each of the Sunday schools on the circuit. The names of the station and half-station preachers will appear if they have sent an offering equal to 10 cents per pupil enrolled as reported to the last Annual Conference, also the names of the presiding elders whose districts report an offering from each Sunday school in the district.

We are getting fine reports from the leadership training work. It looks now as if our Honor Roll for leadership training will have a long list of names. The young preacher students at Millsaps asked to be included, and I thought it would be a proper thing to include them. They are going to be 100% it looks like now. Every preacher who gets a credit for leadership training this year will have his name enrolled on the Honor Roll.

The Mission Special work moves mighty slowly—eight days have passed this month and not a single application for a share in the work. It is beginning to appear that our Conference is going to fall down completely. I wish every pastor and Sunday school superintendent would read Chapter 12 in the 1922 Discipline. Perhaps section 2 of paragraph 692 would help to make clear what our effort is all about.

Over 100 schools in our Conference who pledged to the Centenary have not replied. This will mean that the part of the mission work we are responsible for will fail. Can we not see our way clear to rally to this important work?

March 2 was spent on the Satartia charge in their first circuit-wide institute for this year. This was a mighty good institute. The reports, in spite of the winter weather, rain and mud and cold, showed a decided improvement. There was a report from two of the schools. These reports showed a decided gain over the four schools at the last institute. It looks as if there will be two ranking schools now on this circuit. They set the following goals for the next quarter: Points 7 and 8 on the "Program of Work C," and to make a survey and follow it up in a definite way. The carrying out of these goals will mean a forward step that will count.

Brother Porter is busy with the rebuilding of the parsonage. It is going to be a mighty pretty building when it is completed and a most comfortable one, too. They plan to paint and paper it throughout before they stop. Brother Porter likes his work and the folks are pleased with him.

The Canton church building has received more compliments than any other building in our Conference lately. People who have seen it have been astonished that a town the size of Canton would build as ambitious a building as they did. I am glad that the Methodists of Canton built a building in keeping with the plans and programs of the church. It compares favorably with the other public buildings, and will enable them to have an "A" type Sunday school. I am glad that our connectional workers approve and compliment the building.

Please remember that all the missionary work of the Conference, so far as it relates to the Sunday schools, clears through the Conference Board's office now. Please bear this in mind, and when you apply for Specials, if you would apply through the Conference Board, it would expedite matters wonderfully. Out of 216 shares assigned the Mississippi Conference, only ten have been taken. The Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference owe $18,000 on their Centenary pledges. Can we not do better than $300 on this terrible amount that is due?

March 9 was spent on the Florence charge. Brother Simms is beginning the year well. The parsonage looks like another place entirely. With some more help he will be enabled to fix things in apple pie order.

We were at Braxton morning and night. A man dropped dead in the street about a block from the church just at the close of Sunday school, and it kept quite a number from coming or staying to the services. But we had a good service and the workers pledged themselves to put over the Program "C" as best they might. I know that this school which will work on this Program of Work suitable for their church will find it a means of lifting their work way above its present level. We enjoyed the social part of our visit to Braxton so much. It is always a treat to be with these folks and to share their hospitality.

Sunday afternoon was spent at Wesleyanna. Their Sunday school meets in the morning now in place of the afternoon. They reported an increase in their attendance in spite of the cold weather, and we had a mighty fine attendance at the afternoon service. They ordered a Program of Work "C" and promised to go to work on it. This was the most responsive service we have ever held with these folks. It did our hearts good to be with them and to have the pleasure of speaking to them.

At the night service at Braxton a young lady united with the church from the Baptist Church. We were glad to have her, and pray that she will prove a blessing to the church and the church will prove a blessing to her.

The response to the missionary appeal has been the poorest this month of any months so far. There must be a picking up along this line. If the Sunday schools that owed on the Centenary would be willing to direct the money they are going to pay to a mission special, it would prove educative and helpful beyond words to the individual pupil in the school. I would like to see our Conference respond in such a way that we could raise Brother Assaf's salary. It would do him good and it would be putting our money to a mighty good use. The Sunday school that is not missionary cannot do the work it ought to do, and certainly cannot produce the well rounded Christian manhood and womanhood it ought to produce.

We have to-day, March 5, ninety-five enrolled for the Jackson Training School. My, this is fine! It is the best enrollment Jackson has ever had. We will have a much larger number if the percentage holds that is usually held in such schools.

Calls are coming from all over the Conference. If we could just do all the promotion work necessary, our Conference would move forward to a higher rank among the Conferences in its Sunday school work. May the day be hastened.

Brother Hull is doing fine work. Pray for him, the work, the workers. Did you get your Sunday School Day Programs?

Pray for the work and the workers.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

FROM TIE PLANT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please change my address from Grenada, Miss., to Tie Plant, Miss.

We have just moved into a niee new bungalow, which I have helped to build with mine own hands. This makes my fourteenth building—either a church or a parsonage—I have put my hand to during my ministry of eighteen years, each one of which is a good building for the community in which it is located. I averaged one each year for my first thirteen years; then my health became such that I had to slow down, and finally to superannuate. I am glad to say that I am improving, and hope to "come back" into effective relation.

Cordially,

Elderly People Need More Iron in the Blood

To Give Added Strength, Vitality, and Greater Power of Resistance Against Disease.

IRON is constantly leaving the body, especially toward the period of middle age and you must make up for this iron deficiency if you want to escape disease and be strong and well. When the iron in your blood runs low, signs of old age creep into your system. If there is not enough iron circulating the blood-stream becomes thin, pale and watery, the body weak and run-down. In such cases ordinary iron-containing foods seldom supply a sufficient quantity of this important element to make up for the waste so that many physicians now prescribe a concentrated form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which contains iron like the iron in your blood.

Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood. If you are not sure of your own condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood-count and see where you stand or else make the following test yourself:

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. By enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and power into the whole system.

Unlike the older inorganic iron products, Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Annual Meeting—Please Take Notice.

We think it will help all who are to attend the annual meeting at Bogalusa to know the exact schedule of the N. O. Great Northern trains. The only afternoon train from New Orleans to Bogalusa leaves the Terminal station at 4:30 p. m., reaches Bogalusa at 7:20 p. m. The morning train leaves New Orleans at 7:15 a. m.; reaches Bogalusa at 10:20 a. m. Trains leaving Bogalusa for New Orleans leave Bogalusa at 6:05 a. m., arrive at New Orleans at 8:45 a.m.; leaves Bogalusa at 3. p. m., arrives at New Orleans at 6 p. m. On account of these schedules our President wishes to impress upon all the importance of catching the afternoon train on Tuesday, the 25th, so as to reach Bogalusa in time for the evening meeting, which is an important part of the whole program. Every delegate, if possible, is expected to answer "here" at this meeting. The 26th and 27th will be full days, finishing up the work on Friday morning.

Leave New Orleans over the New Orleans Great Northern from the Terminal Station on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 25th, at 4:30 o'clock.

Fourteenth Annual Meeting, Woman's Missionary Society, Louisiana Conference, Bogalusa, La., March 25, 26, 27, and 28, 1924.

The well known hospitality of the beautiful little city of Bogalusa, and the fact that Mrs. J. W. Perry, of Nashville, is to be our Council guest, almost assure us that this fourteenth annual meeting will be well worth attending.

Delegates to same should be elected at the March meeting of your Auxiliary, and names sent in as soon thereafter as possible to Mrs. J. L. Lipscomb, Bogalusa, La.

For the number of delegates to which your Auxiliary is entitled see page 98, By-law 24, last copy Louisiana Conference Minutes.

In order that no unnecessary reservations for entertainment be made, and in order to avoid confusion at the last moment, please send in to Mrs. Lipscomb only names of delegates who accept their election and expect to attend (Deo volente).

Please also see that delegate is supplied with the following information:

Your Auxiliary pledge for 1924.

Lists of names of those who died during the year, and whose names should be included in our Memorial Roll published in the Minutes each year.

Also—a poster. Do not neglect having this poster made.

We expect each District to have a poster from each Auxiliary in the District. In order that the posters may be uniform, please have same made of white cardboard, 1 foot wide, 2 feet long and containing the following information in large letters:

Name of Auxiliary across top.
Number of members.....
Pledge paid in 1923.....
Young People organized.....
Juniors organized .....
Bible Study class .....
Mission Study class.....
Supply boxes sent.....
Social Service work .....
Membership goal 1924.....
Pledge made in 1924.....

These posters will be hung in the church, and we trust every Auxiliary will be represented by a poster, even if same must be mailed to Mrs. Lipscomb at Bogalusa, and she will see that same is placed in proper District.

The meeting opens Tuesday afternoon, March 25, with a Workers' Conference. The Conference will close in all probability Friday noon. Last but far from least—pray collectively and as individuals for the success of this meeting.

Sincerely,
MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.
MRS. GEORGE BROWN,
Secretary.

Annual Meeting at Bogalusa.

The Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Methodist Church of the city of Bogalusa is glad indeed to have the honor of entertaining the State Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society. Bogalusa is a "Convention city," and we hope to prove to the ladies of this great organization both our interest in the work which they represent and in the reputation of our city, by giving them the best entertainment they have ever had as a Conference. The Methodist Church of Bogalusa has made great progress during the years of its experience. We now have nearly eight hundred members, and the city is growing rapidly along all lines, which in itself helps the development of the church. The Woman's Missionary Society of our church, while not one of the largest, is one of the best organized in the Conference. Needless to say, these organizations gladly welcome you as visitors and co-workers.

In addition to this, Bogalusa has many industries well worth seeing. Located here is the largest sawmill in the world, operating under a single roof; and also we have one great paper mill in operation and one under construction. We have the leading reforestation project of the United States under way in Washington Parish. Our schools, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Chamber of Commerce, and our civic spirit are second to none.

We welcome you to our churches, to our city, and to our homes.

MRS. G. F. POOLE,
President.
MRS. K. I. BEAN,
Corresponding Secretary.

BACK-DRAUGHT FOR 30 YEARS

"IT DID ME GOOD," SAYS PAINTER WHO USES IT FOR HEADACHE, INDIGESTION AND LIVER TROUBLE.

Bowling Green, Ky.—"I don't just remember how many years I have used Black-Draught," says Mr. Frank Burnett, a painter and song writer, of 200 Park street, this city, "but I've used it longer than I've known my wife—that is over thirty years—and I've found it a wonderful friend."

"When a young man," he says, "we kept Black-Draught in our home and I would take it for headache, indigestion and liver trouble. It did me good. I used it on until we married, and then my daughters grew up and they used it, and we hardly know how to get along without it.

"I am a painter and the paint affects the stomach. When I need anything for stomach trouble, I take a good dose or two of Thedford's Black-Draught and I am all right....It relieves indigestion and cleanses the liver best of anything I ever used."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been a well-known, successful liver medicine for over eighty years. Made from selected medicinal roots and herbs, and containing no dangerous mineral drugs, it is nature's own remedy for a tired, worn-out liver.

Just Another Story About the Goodness of PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Anna Linder, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 44, Dassel, Meeker County, Minn., writes: "For two years I suffered with that terrible disease, chronic catarrh. Fortunately I saw your advertisement and took Pe-ru-na. Now I am well and the mother of two children. I owe it all to Pe-ru-na. I would not be without that great remedy for twice its cost, for I am well and strong now. I cannot speak in too high terms of its value as a medicine."

the time to put on an intensive campaign.

In section 1 of the guide sheet you will find that your Executive Committee took as the Conference goal "five shares for every member in the Conference." In other words, if your Auxiliary had twenty members in 1922, your Auxiliary quota will be 100 shares—these shares to be paid before 1926. Every member of the Mississippi Conference is responsible for five shares. She can pay for her five shares at once, or she can divide payments through the remaining years, but all shares must be paid before 1926. Is this perfectly clear?

During the months of March and April we are going to run an Honor Roll column in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. All Auxiliaries having paid their quota in full will have their names printed in this Roll. Enlist now so that when your Auxiliary has given her love gift in full you can send name of Auxiliary and total amount of gift to your District chairman.

My dear collector, please don't fail to do this—only through your cooperation can we hope to reach our goal. We are depending on you. I know you want your Auxiliary on the Honor Roll.

Sincerely yours,
MABEL L. PORTER, Secretary.

Mississippi Conference Guide Sheet for the Collection of the Belle H. Bennett Memorial Fund.

Natchez, Miss., Aug. 31, 1923.

Attention, Co-Workers:

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Conference of Mississippi, in session at Hattiesburg, made the following plans to aid in the collection of funds for the Belle H. Bennett Memorial. Believing that the hearts and minds of the women of the Conference are one in endorsing the Council's plan of establishing "an enduring monument" to the memory of our departed loved leader, and knowing that we would receive your hearty support in service and generous gifts, and also desiring to give a gift worthy of having our beloved Conference name on the Memorial Tablet—your committee took as the Conference goal five shares for every member, or a sum equal to $20,000. This fund is to be raised by the share plan, as explained in the Council Campaign Hand Book.

Since the campaign is to extend through a period of three years, and since the Conference Society and Auxiliaries making the pledges are responsible for the collection of those pledges, a campaign general chairman and seven district chairmen were appointed to assist the Conference President, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer in raising this fund. This campaign committee is to make plans, collect special gifts, present the Memorial campaign at all Conferences, District and All-Day meetings. In other words, this committee is to have full charge of the campaign and oversee the collections of all funds.

General Chairman, Mrs. G. L. Hawkins, Hattiesburg, Miss.

The General Chairman is to supervise the working of the campaign machinery. She is to keep in close touch with Council Memorial campaign headquarters, passing on to the district chairmen all literature and information covering the Memorial campaign. She is to see that all Council and Conference plans for the campaign are carried out. She is also to keep the Conference President and Corresponding Secretary acquainted with the exact status of the campaign.

JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD

Often Prevented by Female Trouble

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brings Joy to Homes by Removing Cause of Trouble

Brooklyn, N.Y.,—"I was working after I got married and the young lady who worked next to me asked me if I had any intentions of having a child. I told her I would be the happiest woman on earth if I could become a mother, but I always had terrible cramps, backaches and headaches. She then told me of a woman she knows who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the same troubles and it helped her greatly. I took about a half bottle and found that the following month I did not suffer any pain, so I kept on taking it. I have a wonderful baby boy six months old and he is as strong and fat as any one could wish a baby to be. I still take the Vegetable Compound regularly because I have looked fine all the time and felt fine and my mother told me that was the reason. I will be glad to have you publish my testimonial with my name and address."—Mrs. EDWARD WERBECK, 1824 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Free From Old Trouble

Auburn, Maine.—"I suffered with inward weakness for ten years and had doctored all this long time but never got any help. One day I saw my sister and she told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I went and got me a bottle of it. I took two bottles and a half and I was just as free from my old troubles as I could be. I had only one child and I was afraid that I could never have any more, for I had been told that I never could have a living child for I was not strong enough to carry one. But they were mistaken and I had a nice baby boy and now I have five children. I can't praise your medicine enough. My youngest sister has taken it, too, and praises it."—Mrs. G. L. WISWELL, 43 Mechanics Row, Auburn, Maine.

These cases are similar to many others reported to us. It is well for women to carefully consider such statements and to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It may bring great joy to your home.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a medicine for women.

For sale by druggists everywhere.

FULL EDUCATION.

The worst thing that could happen for the present system of education would be for it to succeed. Our whole system of modern education is artificial. It aims at training the intellect and does not train the whole mind. We do not live, move, and have our being in the intellect. Intellect is only a subordinate part of the mind, a tool to assist the will to obtain the heart's desire. Emotions, passions, morals, religion, love, and hate—these make up the important part of the mind, the part that feels. Our education does not touch it. Our system is intensely narrow.—Gus W. Dyer.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

the Auxiliary Memorial pledge. She may make plans for promoting the Memorial campaign in her district, provided said plans do not conflict with Council or Conference plans. She is at all times to keep in close touch with the General Chairman, Mrs. G. L. Hawkins, Hattiesburg, and report quarterly the exact condition of her district.

Auxiliary Collector.

It is important that each Auxiliary at once appoint a collector and send her name to her district chairman. She is to co-operate with her district chairman in securing pledges and in the collection of the funds. The collector shall keep an exact record of pledges made and pledges paid. Pledge cards can be secured from Miss Estelle Haskin, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., or from her district chairman. The collector is asked to keep the pledge cards in a safe place, as pledge cards must be kept until the pledge is paid in full—then they are to be sent to Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. The collector is responsible for the pledge card.

The collector is to present to her Auxiliary all Council and Conference plans given her by her district chairman. The Auxiliary can appoint a Memorial Campaign Committee to assist the collector. The collector, however, is to report to her district chairman every quarter the status of her Auxiliary.

The collector is also to give a detailed report to the Auxiliary Treasurer. She can secure report blanks from her district chairman. The blank, properly filled, will be given to the Auxiliary Treasurer, to be sent each quarter with her report to the Conference Treasurer, Mrs. Robert Ricketts, of Jackson.

The Conference Prayer League.

Mrs. L. W. Alford, McComb City, shall be the leader of the Conference Prayer League. A loose leaf prayer book shall be made. A page shall be sent to each Auxiliary. The Auxiliary is to appoint a Prayer League committee to visit "shut-ins and those who cannot take an active part in the campaign," and get them to sign their names on the beautiful Auxiliary page—thus promising to be God's remembrances and giving as their pledge an offering of prayer. This Conference Prayer Book will be sent to Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, the Council leader of the Prayer League.

The above plans are to be used in connection with the Council plans as found in the Council Campaign Hand Book. Our Conference plans must not conflict with the Council's splendid program. If you have not a Council Campaign Hand Book, write to your district chairman and get one at once. We have tried to put before you a simple working basis whereby you might more easily collect the money for the Memorial. We, dear friends, want our Conference to give a generous love gift, one worthy of our beloved Conference. I am sure each and every woman in the Conference will do her best to bring Mississippi Conference over the top in this wonderful service. Surely, we cannot show our love and appreciation of such a wondrous leader in a finer, nobler way than by aiding the educational institutions of Methodism. If Scarritt, with so little money, could give the world so great a return in Christian leadership, how much more do you suppose she will mean to the advancement to God's Kingdom, when the dream of Scarritt is a reality and we have completed our Belle H. Bennett Memorial? Friends, catch the vision and pray more about this wonderful opportunity for service with our gifts of prayer and money. Work for the success of the campaign. See that every woman and child of the church has had the opportunity to procure a share in this great Love Gift.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

REMEMBERED!

The "Forgotten Man" is no longer forgotten. He was remembered on March 16, and remembered in a way that will forever remove the reproach from Southern Methodism that it has let its ministers live in want after it had profited from their active lives spent in its service. The remembrance was not forced or half-hearted, but spontaneous and loving. The special effort for the superannuates was not looked upon as a burden, but as a privilege. The cry was not, "What, another drive for money!" but, "We are glad to pay a debt that has long been owing." There was a glow in the hearts of the people as they listened to the appeals in behalf of these honored servants of the church, and a tear in many an eye as they heard recounted the heroic labors and the pathetic suffering of these ambassadors of Christ. Many feeble hands, too—hands of those who fought bravely in the thickest of the fight—were raised to heaven in devout thanksgiving for the day of succor, and many a prayer was breathed from their devout lips for blessings upon those who gave so willingly and so gladly. Will the pledges be paid? We almost blush with shame at even the thought of such a question; of course they will be paid—every dollar of them. Blessings upon these great and good men who have at last been remembered!

IS ROME RIGHT?

The Roman Catholic Church claims that it alone, speaking through its councils and through the Pope, has the right to interpret the Bible. It asserts this claim in its teachings and practices in its dealings with its subjects. It is consistently opposed to the reading of the Scriptures by its members, and is constantly endevoring to prevent the circulation of the Bible generally.

Presumably this opposition is based upon the assumption that the ordinary person, no matter how well educated that person may be, is incapable of understanding the truths of revealed reiigion for himself, and that he has no right to undertake to interpret the words of Holy Writ for himself, the church itself having the sole right to say what those words mean and the authority to enforce its pronouncements.

This attitude of the Roman Catholic Church is utterly repugnant to those who believe the individual soul has the right of immediate access to God without the intervention of priests or sacraments, and it is violative of the fundamental principles of the Reformation, out of which Protestantism sprang and which it is supposed to hold supreme to this day.

There seems to be, however, a certain school of theologians, professing to be Protestants and insisting most strenuously upon the acceptance of the Protestant conception of religion, who, in effect, take the same position that Roman Catholicism takes, namely, that the only valid interpretations of the Bible are those set forth in symbols officially promulgated, and that the only right any individual has is to accept those promulgations "verbatim et literatim" if he would be counted among the faithful. In other words, it appears that this school of theologians has adopted the theory of Rome in its entirety, making a difference only as to the nature of the symbols to be accepted.

It must be confessed that this theory makes a tremendous appeal to some people. History is not without shining examples of those who became weary of the search for truth themselves and finally went to Rome for the sake of a body of doctrine that professed to be inerrant and that was enforced by an authority that allowed no question as to its validity. Instead of thinking for themselves and speking for themselves, they preferred to let the church, which claimed the sole right to do so, to do their thinking and their speaking. The authority of the church was accepted as a satisfactory substitute for the exercise of their own reasoning faculties and as the infallible guide of their consciences.

But this is Roman Catholicism, and not Protestantism. Rome is at least consistent when it forbids its people to read the Bible and denies them the right to think for themselves. Its theory, carried to its logical conclusion, leaves no other course to be pursued. Why should an individual read the Bible when it has already been read and authoritatively interpreted for him by an infallible ecclesiastical organization? Why should any individual want to read it, since any interpretation he might place upon it out of harmony with the authoritative interpretation would necessarily be wrong, and would subject him not only to ecclesiastical penalties in this life, but also to doom hereafter? Instead of circulating the Bible, why not circulate the decrees of the church as containing all that any individual ought to know?

With the failure of Rome both as a civilizing and a Christianizing force in the countries where it has been the dominant religious force for centuries staring us in the face, it is strange that there should be those among Protestants who aparently think that Rome is right in theory even if wrong in practice, and who would endeavor, therefore, to set up their own opinions as infallible and their own interpretations of Scripture as inerrant; yet, if we may judge from current theological discussion, there are those among us who have set themselves up as the final judges of orthodoxy and who do not hesitate to brand as heretics those who do not accept their views or agree with their opinions. They have already undertaken to establish an Index Librorum Prohibitorum; their next logical step will be to issue formal decrees of excommunication. We hope we shall be spared the horrors of another Inquisition.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP STATISTICS FOR 1923.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, the eminent church statistician, gives, in a recent issue of the Christian Herald, the results of his study of the membership gains of the churches of the United States for the year 1923. We give the followiug brief summaries from his article:

The grand totals for all religious bodies are 45,457,366 communicants, 206,843 ministers, and 237,404 churches, indicating gains for 1923 of 680,015 communicants, 2,733 ministers, and 2,884 churches.

Some of the figures of the leading denominations are given, showing the present number of communicants and the gain during 1923:

Baptist (14 bodies), 8,237,021; gain, 192,520.

Disciples of Christ (2 bodies), 1,621,203; gain, 68,490.

Lutheran (18 bodies), 2,465,841; gain, 22,825.

Methodist (15 bodies), 8,622,838; gain, 87,683.

Presbyterian (9 bodies), 2,462,557; gain, 61,290.

Protestant Episcopal (2 bodies), 1,140,076; gain, 10,463.

Roman Catholic, 15,750,260; gain, 138,616.

The aggregate number of communicants of the evangelical churches is 27,812,898, a gain of 493,161, as opposed to a total of Roman Catholics of 15,750,260, including a gain of 138,616. Of the Baptist group, the Southern Baptist Convention is reported as the largest, more than 700,000 members having been added during the past five years. According to Dr. Carroll, it is now the largest white denomination in the South. The small increase of the Methodist group—87,683—is attributed mainly to the unusually slim gain of the Methodist Episcopal Church—33,635. The Unitarians report a loss of 71,110 members, 16 ministers, and 8 churches. Dr. Carroll calls attention to the fact that those churches in which the Fundamentalist-Modernist controversy has been most tense seem to have had an unusually large gain in membership, while the Unitarians and the Universalists, who might be expected to profit by the accession of Modernists, report an aggregate decrese of 130,076 members, 61 ministers, and 207 churches.

Among the Negroes, the National Baptist Convention, consisting of two colored organizations reported as one, has far outstripped all other colored denominations in its growth, having considerably over 3,000,000 members. The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church reports a loss for 1923, due to the northward migration of its members.

The grand totals for all religious bodies in the United States are given as 45,457,366 communicants, 206,843 ministers, and 237,404 churches. With less than half the population of the United States belonging to any church, it is evident that there is need for intense and unceasing evangelistic effort on the part of all evangelical churches.

FLOODS AND FOUNDATIONS.

By Howard W. Pope.

The man who hears and does Christ's word,
Can withstand any shock;
Who doeth what from Christ he's heard,
Is founded on a rock.

If floods should come and wildly beat,
His house would never fall;
For he is well prepared to meet
The floods which come to all.

But if one fails Christ's word to do,
He buildeth on the sand;
If floods should come and if winds blew,
His house would never stand.

For he who does the will of God,
Forever shall abide;
Upon the highway saints have trod,
Their feet shall never slide.

God's perfect will is done in Heav'n,
And on the earth in part;
But grace to us is freely giv'n
To serve with all our heart.

A WORD ABOUT OUR CHINA MISSIONARIES.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

This is answer to letters and inquiries from various sources concerning the orthodoxy of our missionaries in China. To all such and others who may be interested the following statements may not be unworthy of attention:

1. In the range of my knowledge there is no body of people in the church more evangelical in faith, more loyal to Methodist doctrines and traditions, more self-sacrificing in spirit, and more zealous for the kingdom than the men and women who represent us in China.

2. It would be a rash and unwarranted claim to make for any hundred people that they think alike or that none of them hold unsound theological views. Nevertheless, with a favorable opportunity for forming a judgment on the subject, I have no knowledge of a missionary in China teaching or holding doctrines that are hurtful or subversive of our standards.

3. The Mission was given ample opportunity to express its own mind in a full Mission meeting in December, 1922. After a full, free, and unhampered discussion, they declared in part, "In view of the interest of the home church in the theological attitude of the China Mission, be it resolved that this Mission reaffirms its loyalty to the Twenty-five Articles of Religion of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as does the church at home as expressed in the statement issued by the last General Conference." Only six voted in the negative. These were the most ardent and outspoken in their orthodoxy, and no one would accuse them of voting in the negative for lack of loyalty to our doctrines. Without evidence to the contrary, it must be taken for granted that those voting in the affirmative meant to express their own convictions and their confidence in one another. Such was their purpose as expressed in the discussion, interpretation, and amendments. Whatever else they lack, these resolutions were meant to convey the almost unanimous agreement of the body on so much as was therein expressed.

4. This agreement on essentials has evidently not been doubted by their bishops, presiding elders, and Conferences. No one having responsibility for them or authority over them has made any complaint, nor has any Methodist body to which they belong failed to give them indorsement.

5. Neither the Board of Missions as a body nor any officer or member of it, by voice or pen, has at any time made complaint or suggested proceeding against any missionary now connected with the China Mission. In spite of all this, irresponsible groups and unauthorized individuals and groups continue to circulate damaging accusations. Investigation reveals the fact that some are denied in toto, others are based on misunderstanding and misquotation, and others on misinterpretation or on disagreement on questions in no sense fundamental.

6. I have refused and still refuse to discuss the personal affairs of our missionaries in the press. The reasons should be manifest. Our correspondence with our missionaries, dealing with their most intimate and personal affairs, renders our relation a confidential one. But for this and the further fact that a newspaper is about the last place to win a fair verdict of guilt or innocence, some interesting facts could here be set down. The sum of all which would mean that when one deals with personality at its best and in its most sacred and solemn aspects one should be patient, be tolerant, believe, hope, and wait till the facts are all in.

7. It is in accord with the literature, laws, and established practice of the church that these missionaries should be acceptable to the church. By these tests they measure up to our best. Which one of them would not be acceptable at home? Indeed, the clamor for them at home is at times embarrassing. The church covets and welcomes them.

8. Let it be known once and for all that we ask no immunity for our missionaries from the fair and dispassionate tests that are applied to others.

We are neither defenders nor accusers of the men and women who dare the hard tasks and cheerfully take the hazards of the far frontiers. We do ask and will insist that they have a square deal and that they have their day in court before we pronounce a verdict of guilty. The same fair play, the same consideration accorded to others is the least we dare demand for them. We have no right to exact of them what we do not demand of others. The distance of seven thousand miles does not neutralize the principle of justice nor destroy the law of consistency. They have shown their confidence in the church by going at its call. They are showing it still by the uncomplaining silence with which they trust the church's sense of justice and our love of the right.

9. The church has provided an orderly, fair, and just method of conserving her doctrine and at the same time protecting the rights and reputation of her teachers. That method is meant to protect the church against the suspicion, ill feeling, and contention engendered by unproved rumors and criticism. That method preserves the inalienable right of every one to a fair and impartial hearing. It is a defense against trial by inuendo and execution by epithet. Has not the time about come when those who accuse their brethren should be required to prove their accusations in a regularly constituted court? The impossibility of trial by referendum, the barbarism of trial by ordeal, and the savagery of lynch law are substituted in the State by trial by jury. Likewise the church has found it necessary to commit to a small, select court that which cannot be judged by the whole body. This method has its inconveniences and is subject to miscarriage, but it has the virtue of being a civilized method and an improvement on the inquisition with its molten lead, its rack, and its thumbscrew.

10. Will it be amiss to say a word for a spirit of toleration? At an hour when the world is torn by discord and the specters of hate and suspicion stalk across whole sections of it, setting races and nations snarling at each other like wolves about their kill, is it not a good time for Christians to show a better spirit? It is said that at Avignon was a chamber of the Inquisition with its deep wells into which hundreds were hurled alive and its horrid instruments of torture in its underground cells where men and women were broken and flayed unpitied and unheard. On the walls of this chamber was a fresco representing the matchless parable of the good Samaritan. What must the gentle Christ have thought of the monstrous incongruity and of the hideous and misshapen ideals that made it possible! From such a spirit John Wesley was as far removed as he was from the recrudescence of the same spirit in other forms, sometimes manifest among his followers. How wholesome, heart clean, and redolent of charity that suffereth long and is kind are his words in the preface to his published sermons: "For God's sake, if it is possible to avoid it, let us not provoke one another to wrath. 'Let us not kindle in each other this fire of hell, much less blow it into a flame. If by that light we could discern truth, would it not be less rather than gain? For how far is love even with many wrong opinions to be preferred before truth itself without love? We may die without the knowledge of many truths and yet be carried to Abraham's bosom. But if we die without love, what will knowledge avail? Just as much as it avails with the devil and his angels."

"A GOD WHO IS A HORIZON."

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

It was the diplomatic and deceitful Talleyrand who said, "words are made to conceal ideas."

In recent years there has arisen a type, or class of men, who go beyond the thought of the subtle Frenchman concerning the purpose of words. They use them as a substitute for ideas, and dote on vague terms and misty phrases to disguise their intellectual destitution.

A considerable number of these men spend their time visiting colleges and universities, and lecturing students on matters religious. Their minds have secreted a number of meaningless words and empty expressions which they have so overworked that their verbal creations have become the cant by which their speech betrayeth them. They gab glibly about "leadership," "visions," "challenges," "the modern mind," "constructive programs," etc., without anything in their heads corresponding to these well-worn words and without conveying to others any definite conceptions. They make sound without sense.

A case in point was a sentence incorporated into a pompous deliverance made recently at one of these "college meets," which ran on this wise: "The student of to-day demands a God who is not a formula, but a horizon."

It is a tolerably ambitious thing for "the student of to-day" to be putting in his order for a God to suit his academic taste, but who can fill the specification set down in this lordly demand? What kind of a deity is "a God who is not a formula, but a horizon?" Where is the theological tailor who can fashion a God by this "horizon" pattern?

"The student of to-day," if his "demand" is truly voiced by this phrase, must see something in the heavens which is as vague as the cloud concerning which occurs this colloquy in Hamlet:

Hamlet—"Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in the shape of a camel?"

Polonius—"By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed."

Hamlet—"Methinks, it is like a weasel."

Polonius—"It is backed like a weasel."

Hamlet—"Or, like a whale."

Polonius—"Very like a whale."

What sort of cloud did the crazy Hamlet and the garrulous old courtier of Denmark see, which changefully looked like a camel, or a weasel, or a whale with their rapidly shifting moods of imagination? One can no more tell than he can say what kind of a deity is "a God who is not a formula, but a horizon."

It is not possible for an intelligent man to derive from these high-sounding words any definite notion of God at all; but a vague deity them in the light of the well-known characteristics of some of the leading participants in "the college meet" from which this deliverance issued, it would not be unfair to infer that the kind of God demanded is not such as is set forth in the historic creed of Christendom, but a vague deity of sentimentality. Just the exact kind of God they demand is not clear. They want him on the "horizon," but who can say whether they desire that he (or it) shall appear as a camel, or a weasel, or a whale?

This senseless pronunciamento is an expression of the creed of creedlessness which is so popular among certain classes of men in this agnostic age. They are fond of saying that they want religion without theology, which means simply that they wish an unintelligent faith, if faith it may be called—a faith which is utterly devoid of definite belief, and has no power over conscience or affection.

Religion that controls conduct and inspires worship cannot survive without a creed.

Rev. Edward Garbert, one of the greatest of the famous Bampton Lecturers, has put this whole subject in the clearest light. In the fourth lecture of his able discussion of "The Dogmatic Faith" he says:

"The religious sentiment, deprived of its natural foundation in dogma, loses its definite shape, evaporates and dies. Love cannot exist without a knowledge of the character and quality of the Being to be loved. Fear can possess no intelligent character without definite acquaintance with the object of fear, and the reasons why He should be feared. Gratitude springs from the sense of benefits received and from the contemplation of the generous benevolence of the Benefactor. Desire must be directed to a special object if it is to be real and operative. Worship is the expression of a recognized relation of dependent inferiority between the worshiper and the Worshiped. Reverence and adoration can only be kindled by the consciousness of a Being competent to claim them by the glory of His attributes. In every case, the affection is called out by some corresponding truth. The hand which sweeps away the truth necessarily strangles the affection.

"As the life of the affection depends upon the existence of truth, so also are its intensity and force exactly proportioned to the definiteness and certainty of the truth. The shapeless substance will ever produce a shapeless shadow. * * *

"It is necessary, therefore, in order to keep the religious sentiment alive and develop it into affection, to present religious truth in such a definite shape as the mind can grasp, the memory retain, and the heart appreciate, and at the same time to invest it with certitude. Yet more necessary is this in order to give the sentiment strength and force enough to control the passions, form the character, and regulate the conduct. All loopholes of escape must be stopped, and the conscience brought face to face with realities so sure and great as to abash, before their own majesty, the arrogance of self-will and the selfishness of self-indulgence. The dogmas of the Christian faith are invested to an extraordinary degree with both these characteristics. They are at once broad and simple enough for the comprehension of the most ignorant, and yet have heights and depths about them surpassing the grasp of the profoundest intellect. They come to the conscience invested with a Divine authority. The faithfulness of Him who is the God of truth, the omniscience of Him to whose piercing eyes all things in heaven and earth are open, and the authority of Him who is Creator, Redeemer, Sanctifier, King, Father, and Judge in one indivisible Deity are pledged for their certainty. The evidences constituting the credentials of the faith bear on them the visible signature of God. The inspired records of the faith speak with a confident authority unknown to any human books. Their sanctions are drawn from the highest exercise of enlightened reason and conscience, and from the tremendous interests of a future world of reward and punishment. The dogmatic faith possesses every quality fitted to instruct the reason, satisfy the conscience, and move the affections. But the cause and effect must stand or fall together. The loss of the truth involves the loss of the sentiment evoked by it. To destroy the dogmatic faith, is to destroy Christianity, and to destroy Christianity is to destroy religion."

The distinguished lecturer thus takes a perfectly correct position and sustains it with clear and conclusive statements of the most profound truths.

For the God of the Christian faith these academic tyros propose to substitute "a God who is not a formula, but a horizon," and they "demand a pragmatic religion." If the matter of religion among young men were not so serious these pretentious demands would be positively ludicrous.

This deliverance of creedlessness by a conference of "workers" in colleges and universities has a definite purpose, notwithstanding the vagueness of its language. It means to displace the creed of Christendom in order to make room for the dogmas of doubt. When pressed, one of the leaders in the conference—in fact, the leader pre-eminent—denied the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, affirmed that the Gospels were full of error and contradictions, repudiated the story of Creation in the book of Genesis, and sneered at the idea of the bodily resurrection of our Lord, frivolously asking how much the resurrection body weighed. He thus proclaimed his own creed while rejecting the dogmas of Evangelical Christianity. He wants no creed but such as he frames himself. It is no wonder he seeks to shelter skeptical doctrines under "a God who is a horizon."

Yet this man wanders through the educational institutions of the country holding his "conferences" and scattering his skepticism among the students.

The authorities of the colleges and universities of the nation should begin to be on their guard against the coming into their institutions of the apostles of creedless sentimentality in opposition to Christian truth. There be many such strolling talkers roving over the land and claiming to be "expert" workers among students. Thereby they make their living.

It is time to close the doors against not a few of them.

Commenting upon the report of the conference which published the absurd demand for "a God who is not a formula, but a horizon," the editor of "The Presbyterian" of Philadelphia says:

"It would appear from this that the chief work of the student pastors and workers is to make God after the conception of the students, or to let each student make a god after his own image. There can be no doubt as to the reliability of this report, because of the excellence of the one making it. That being so, it clearly reveals the anti-Christian character of the work being done among students. When God is represented as "a formula" or "a horizon," and when science, which here means philosophy, is presented as the authority to which religion must be conformed, and when the Bible is ignored as the infallible guide in faith and practice, and religion is presented as chiefly pragmatic, then the resulting influence must be anti-Christian."

It is quite unwise to turn loose among youthful students a lot of raw rationalists kotowing to a God "who is a horizon."

MR. EDISON AND IMMORTALITY.

(An Interview in Hearst's International, March, 1924.)

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

It is a matter of some interest to know just why Mr. Edison should be interviewed and quoted on the question of immortality. Aside from gratifying a morbid curiosity, it may serve to illustrate the value of the "freedom of the press and speech." It certainly can serve no real desire for information on the subject of immortality.

The late Dr. B. M. Palmer said on one memorable occasion that usually "great men have some weak points; and if a man has a conceit, it is invariably at his weakest point." Mr. Burbank need have no conceit about plant life; he is authority in that line, a man of national and international reputation. Mr. Edison is equally an authority in the field of applied electricity. These men are far in advance of their nearest competitors, and have served faithfully and well in their respective fields. Modern civilization owes them a debt of honor and larger material compensation than it has given them, or may ever give them. But suppose they were to exchange fields?

If my child were about to lose his eyesight, or any one of the five senses, would I send for either of these wonderful experts? I would not so much as consult the chiefest of "Christian Scientists." I would seek the best specialist to be had in the line of this physical organ involved. I should want a man who at least professed to know something about the organs of the senses.

I admit that in this land of liberty even a fool has one legal and political right to talk if he wishes to do so; but that an expert in some special line should like to be interviewed and quoted on a subject entirely out of his field of thought and operation, and on a subject which he professedly knows nothing about, is at least strange to my way of thinking.

Now, Mr. Edison in his special line is the biggest man in the world of applied electricity. In science in general, and in botany and in biology he is at variance with the known and accepted facts of material science. He is not so much as a consistent, intelligent materialist. He has notions and ideas inconsistent with themselves. He does not so much as shock us with a surprise to save as from the monotonous protoplasmic rehash of some antiquated and exploded absurdities.

Just what interest intelligent men can have in his notions and ideas on the soul of man, or in general on the matter of immortality, is beyond my ken. It could hardly be an intellectual curiosity. Certain it is that it springs from no desire for real and true information on these subjects.

Here lies a vast field of thought far out and beyond Mr. Edison's farthest outpost of investigation and action, yet not uninteresting to him or any normal man. What is man? Where did he come from? Whither is he going? and how long shall he stay when he finally gets there? Has man a soul? Is he immortal?

Now these are matters of tremendous import, and I want the best and most reliable information I can get. I want at least to think the man who talks to me in these matters knows what he is talking about. I am not even interested in men's notions or speculative ideas. And Mr. Edison states to his honorable interviewer that he does not know if man has a soul. He does not believe, nor yet does he disbelieve that he has. Man's personality may or may not survive the functioning of the physical body which he temporarily occupies as a home. He believes life is immortal and intelligent. He blunders among the functioning organs or cells of the physical body of man and of plant life, and by force of habit mentions "Protoplasms," but gets us nowhere on the main line of the discourse. The biggest and most truthful thing he says is, "I do not know." This we accept as true. His speculative ideas and foolish notions we dismiss as irrelevant and to us unimportant. They are not so much as scientific; nor are they consistent with themselves.

For real and true science, and the whole school of acquired knowledge from times more ancient than authentic history, I have a respect and love. As to matters material and intellectual (not spiritual), these are the best authorities we have as to time and processes not perfect perhaps, yet there is some real truth here. Men, by OBSERVATION, EXPERIMENT, AND DEMONSTRATION have a KNOWLEDGE of the material world and of man as an intelligent being, also of the CREATOR. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The material universe is but the manfestation of the Creator.

There is in man another man, another nature—the spiritual—not by the mental processes of the intellectual being, but by the touch and quickening of the Father of spirits. The natural man has the cells or potentialities of this immortal life, but the seed or essence comes from the Father of spirits, comes from the Father of our spirits. Man is an immortal spirit and has a temporary home in a physical body and operates through the intellect. The school of this "subconcious mind," or, more truly speaking, supernatural nature, is different from the school of acquired knowledge. It may be called the school of "inspired knowledge," or REVEALED TRUTH. Its curriculum is that of REVELATION, MANIFESTATION, and EXPERIENCE. The Author and Giver of spiritual life is also the Revealer of the truths of this school, partly in the records of the Book and partly in the spiritual intuitions of man.

I had dismissed Mr. Edison's speculations, but here I recall one—the statement of his authorized interviewer. At this age the great man seems more interested in such meditations of what lies out ahead of this life—THE CALL OF THE INDWELLING SPIRITUAL NATURE, so long neglected and unfed. It is as beautiful and pathetic as the interview of the great and devout Greek masters who made their application for terms of matriculation in the school of Jesus. Masters in all the schools of acquired knowledge, they yet were burdened with "THE WHY OF IT ALL." What the Purpose and Final Objective? And Jesus pointed out to them that IMMORTALITY was the only answer. The way of life eternal is by way of death. He went to them on their own ground. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. But if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that cometh after me, let him deny himself and follow me." The self-surrendered life, the sacrificial death, are the gate to immortal life. THE CALL OF THE SPIRITUAL, or divinity within, is disturbing the great genius and inventor. May that Quickening Spirit touch those spiritual cells in his heart, or seat of moral consciousness, and open the gates into a larger, higher and better kingdom, where man dies no more. Jesus loves and seeks such souls. May he be found and learn how blessed are those who trust the Savior of men!

THE TEXAS MEXICAN MISSION.

By Dr. A. J. Weeks, Editor, Board of Missions.

For more than a year I have had it in mind to visit some sections of the Southwest to make a personal inspection of our work among the Mexicans out there, that I might tell the church at large something of the importance of this work, the size of our task, and what we are doing to meet our responsibility in that field. Early in February I found it possible to visit a part of the field, although nothing like a complete inspection could be made in the time I could devote to it.

That I might make the best use of the time at my disposal, I wrote my friend, Dr. Frank S. Onderdonk, superintendent of the Texas Mexican Mission, that I could spend a few days with him if he had the leisure to be bothered with me. His field is the nearest to me and much of it could be seen in a few days. Then I knew that field fairly well a dozen years ago and felt that I could get a better estimate of our progress in the Mexican work by visiting there than to go elsewhere, inasmuch as I could compare conditions now with conditions those other years. Onderdonk wired me to come on, and made his plans to take me in his car for almost a thousand miles through that section where our Mexican people are most numerous.

When I reached San Antonio I found that this hard-working missionary had planned to rest that very week and that it would be many weeks before he would get a rest if he did not take it then. When I found that my visit was to deprive him of this anticipated rest, it made me rather uncomfortable. The church has no servant who works harder and maintains a bettter spirit under it all than Frank Onderdonk. His meat and drink and recreation are to do the will of God. He is a man of one work. To him the winning of his Mexican people to Jesus Christ is the most important thing in the world, and when some one offers to help him, it gives him great joy. So when he found that a visitor would come with a typewriter and go with him to his Mexican churches and schools and meet his people, and then tell thousands of Methodists about the work and its needs, he was already rested.

I knew I would enjoy the fellowship of such a friend and guide and instructor; but when I learned what the schedule was to be, I confess that I had some misgivings. I knew he had an old Ford that he had driven about eighty thousand miles. A Ford with that many miles behind it usually has ailments, and it never whispers when telling you of them. When you ride it, you may not know where you are going, but you always know you are going. Being ten years older than I was five years ago, it is not strange that I wondered just what that trip would mean to me and which hospital I would be taken to after my collapse. When Dr. Onderdonk rolled out a new Dodge touring car, fitted up with every equipment to make passengers comfortable, not to say vain, I experieneed a distinct relief. The car was a Christmas present from San Antonio friends, under the leadership of Rev. Arthur J. Moore, pastor of Travis Park Church. It is an expression of the confidence and love of those who know better than any others the work Onderdonk is doing.

Reaching San Antonio Tuesday morning, that forenoon was spent visiting the Mexican church and Wesleyan Institute. The present church building was made possible with aid from the Centenary. When I lived in San Antonio, twelve to twenty years ago, the Mexican Methodist Church was not very prepossessing. It was an unattractive little frame building poorly furnished and with a hopeless looking little congregation worshiping in it. The wonder is that we ever made any impression on the Mexicans of the community with such equipment. Now our church is a beautiful and well arranged building. It does not represent a large investment, but it is well constructed and adequate. A comfortable parsonage stands by the side of the church. The membership is about two hundred and the church is self-supporting. San Antonio probably has the largest colony of Mexicans anywhere in the United States. At the lowest calculation, they number fifty thousand. We next visited Wesleyan Institute, a school for boys, situated in a suburb where conditions are ideal for such an institution. The enrollment at Wesleyan is about seventy-five at this time, and they are a fine lot of boys and young men. A number of them are preparing for the ministry, and four of them are serving charges adjacent to the city. The new building is a Centenary enterprise. It was constructed at a cost of approximately $50,000, and it would be a creditable building at any of our schools. This new institution, with its better equipment, will be of wonderful service to our Mexican constituency in Southwest Texas, and will transform many lives by its influence. Mr. W. W. Jackson, the devoted principal, is putting his life into that institution. He is entitled to the confidence and support of the church to the utmost limit.

By noon we had completed our inspection of San Antonio and were ready for the longer journey. Mrs. Onderdonk and my boy, Jack, Jr., accompanied us. That afternoon we drove to Corpus Christi, a distance of 150 miles. Wherever one journeys these days he is impressed with the tremendous amount of road building that is going on. Good highways will soon connect every part of the United States with every other part, and this is going to destroy sectionalism. I had not visited Corpus Christi since the great storm of a few years ago. Much of that beautiful little city was destroyed by the tidal wave that swept over it, but with great courage its people are rebuilding it, although there are yet many signs of the appalling disaster.

Wednesday morning we drove out to the old site of Epworth-by-the-Sea, where for a number of years a great assembly was maintained by our church. Nothing remains to remind one of the old Epworth except the sandy beach and the ever-rolling waves. We have just completed a splendid Mexican church building at Corpus Christi, and it is being furnished and fitted up for real church work. The church and parsonage cost about ten thousand dollars. The membership is small, but the work is very hopeful, now that we have good equipment.

From Corpus Christi we drove to the Rio Grande Valley. It was an hour after dark when we reached Pharr, which is the gateway to the Lower Valley. We spent the night at Valley Institute, our Mexican school for girls. Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour, we were expected, and found gracious hospitality. The Institute is another Centenary enterprise and one destined to serve a growing constituency in a worthy way. The enrollment this year is about one hundred. About twelve years ago I was at Pharr when there were but a few buildings there. I held the first public religious service in the town. Now there is a modern little city, with banks, business houses, good streets and every modern convenience. The Town Company donated the ten-acre campus for our Mexican school, and the land was probably worth a thousand dollars an acre. The building was erected at a cost of approximately $50,000. Miss Georgia Swanson is the principal of Valley Institute, and has associated with her a capable and earnest faculty.

I have never been in any section where there has been such marvelous transformation in so short a period as there has been in the Rio Grande Valley within the last fifteen years. Twenty years ago it was a wilderness of cactus and mesquite, with ebony trees here and there, and inhabited by coyotes. Land was worth from ten to twenty-five cents an acre. Then its population consisted of a few pioneers of American stock, and many Mexicans of the peon class. Today it has fifteen thriving cities, with their fruit and packing sheds, cotton gins, grain elevators, banks, churches, accredited high schools, and is dotted with well improved and thriving farms. Land is worth as high as fifteen hundred dollars an acre, so I was told. It is a land of sunshine, produces cotton, corn and other staple crops, but its great wealth is in its vegetables and citrus fruits. Its oranges and grapefruit cannot be surpassed, and more acreage suitable for citrus is contained in the valley than in the entire State of California. There are thousands of Mexicans in that section. They are skilled in farming by irrigation and do most of the work of cultivating and harvesting the valuable crops.

We have Mexican churches at a number of places other than Pharr in the valley, and of these we visited McAllen and Mission. The Centenary enabled us to build better houses for our Mexican people in most of these places. None of these buildings are expensive, but they are neat and attractive, and in every case the local congregation raised a worthy part of the cost. I found at every place visited that the people were so happy over their new church buildings.

The benefits of timeliness of the Centenary can be seen in our Mexican work as well as anywhere in the world. These people are poor to a degree that we Americans know nothing about, and yet under the impulse of the Centenary their giving has been greatly developed. Ten years ago the Texas Mexican Mission raised for all purposes $4,781; last year they raised $17,617, an increase of over four hundred per cent. During the Centenary period nine churches and six parsonages have been built. There are now four self-sustaining charges, and all of the others are partially self-supporting. There are thirty pastoral charges, and all but three of the pastors are Mexicans. Since the organization of the Mission ten years ago there have been four thousand additions on profession of faith, although the present membership is below that number. Many of these returned to Mexico, while others went elsewhere in the United States.

Thursday we drove across the lower end of Texas to Laredo, on the border. We reached Holding Institute two or three hours after dark, but found Dr. Skinner, the president, looking for us. Holding is the oldest mission school maintained under the direction of the Department of Woman's Work. It has done a great work in the past and is doing a great work to-day. It is coeducational, and the present enrollment is about four hundred. The life of the institution is orderly. Dr. and Mrs. Skinner are greatly beloved, while the large faculty is evidently effective. After a good rest Thursday night, I had the privilege of speaking to the students Friday morning at chapel. I have rarely looked upon a more alert student body. It was a great relief to me when Dr. Onderdonk told me that it would not be necessary for me to address them in Spanish. My Spanish vocabulary is short. I do not know more than about a dozen words of that musical language, and these were not learned with a view to their use in addressing college students. But those Holding students understand English, and for forty minutes they were as attentive and responsive as any group I have spoken to in recent times.

We drove across the Rio Grande into Mexico for about an hour. I never like to fool around in a foreign country when a revolution is going on. I never voluntarily attend a revolution or an earthquake. If revolutions and earthquakes had to depend on me for an audience, they would nearly always play to empty houses. But when I go into a foreign country that is running a revolution and a policeman looks at me twice, I am nearly sure to act suspicious and to look just like a revolutionist. It is because I am so bashful, so imaginative. I couldn't be induced to go to Washington now, for half the people I would meet on the streets would look like they thought I was mixed up in that Teapot Dome affair. In view of my personal feeling I was glad when we turned our radiator toward the United States.

Friday afternoon we drove from Laredo to San Antonio—did it in less time than it used to require for me to make the trip on a railway train when I was presiding elder there.

With the great start we have in our Mexican work and with the great leadership of Frank Onderdonk, we are in position to make history down there in the next decade if the church will sustain the work in a worthy way.

Surely Southern Methodism will not falter in the face of such an opportunity and such a duty. Think of such men as Frank Onderdonk, Dr. D. W. Carter, Rev. W. D. King, Rev. J. H. Estes, Dr. J. M. Skinner, and Mr. W. W. Jackson putting their lives into work for a people so poor and needy as our Mexican people are. These men could have had the comforts we others have enjoyed—and they are entitled to these comforts; but for Christ's sake they have toiled in hard places without the applause other men have had to hearten them. Then think of a great rich church withholding from them the tools they need with which to work!

Some men who read this could send Dr. Onderdonk five hundred dollars for the library at Wesleyan Institute, or write him that a scholarship for a worthy Mexican boy would be provided, and in that way bless an increasing number of lives. We have not done a very worthy part by these millions of Mexicans who live in our land and do much of the hard work on our railroads and streets and farms. Some day the judgment throne is going to be set and we will stand before it to answer for the way we have ministered to the least of these. It will be commendation or condemnation for us in that day. May its decisions bring us only joy.

PAUL AS A PREACHER.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

The Apostle Paul has always been regarded as one of the greatest preachers of all the ages, this estimate being determined by his great success and his matchless epistles. In this article I shall consider some of the moral qualities which characterized his ministry, and contributed to its success—qualities which are simple, but basal to any ministerial excellence. These qualities stand out in that portrait which he so modestly and so frankly draws of himself in his first letter to the Thessalonian church.

Prominent among the qualities is courage. Notwithstanding his having been stoned at Lystra, scourged and imprisoned in Philippi, he carries his message to Thessalonia; and he continues to preach from place to place despite the dangers which continually haunt his footsteps until he seals his testimony with his blood. Courage is requisite to success anywhere, but especially in the pulpit. A timid, temporizing ministry is a failure in itself and is useless, not to say hurtful, to the church. Paul declared the whole counsel of God regardless of consequences. Nevertheless, Paul was prudent. When he could stay no longer in any place without certain peril, he left it, and sometimes even secretly; but while he stayed he never compromised the truth for safety. Only on his last journey to Jerusalem did he go into known danger, and then seemingly under Divine impulsion. May God ever give us brave men, and prudent, in our pulpits, and men of like spirit in our pews; for brave men are often sacrificed by churches cowardly preferring tranquility to truth.

Paul made prominent the fact that his message was without deceit. He did not preach anything of which he was not assured, or support his declarations by false or specious arguments or appeals. In this he was wholly unlike the Pagan priests, who practiced all manner of deceptions to bolster up their systems. He was also unlike some of the leaders of certain modern cults. Christianity is founded on truth and needs no falsity to sustain it. Hence thoroughly honest men are essential in its pulpits and on its tripods. Whatever limitations any Christian teacher may have, there should be no falsehood in his make-up nor any false note in his utterances.

Paul also assures us that his ministry was without guile—that is, without ulterior purpose of any kind, such as the gaining of wealth or applause. All such ulterior motives weaken and corrupt a ministry. Hence Paul bears witness that he had not sought the praise of men. The preacher who sacrifices or holds back the truth that he may win the approbation of his hearers, or one who seeks to please rather than edify his congregation, is recreant to his sacred trust, and becomes a mere weakling in the holy office which he profanes. Paul affirms that he used no flattering speech. He praised where praise was just, and blamed where blame was merited; but never praised falsely, to win approbation or favor. The church may well beware of the man of flattering lips. Such a preacher will please not a few, but his ministry will prove an opiate, tending to spiritual insensibility and death. Nor did Paul seek to make gain of his ministry. In certain places he even sacrificed his right to be supported, lest his motives should be suspected, and his work hindered. In our day when a minister may both rightly and prudently claim a comfortable living from his congregation, he may at least learn from Paul not to grow greedy for salary and perquisites. Only an unworldly ministry can be strong. An avaricious man, like a pleasure-loving man, in the pulpit is a contradiction to the gospel which he preaches.

Paul emphasizes the fact that his ministry was not of uncleanness. Both his life and teaching ministered to chastity—to purity in thought, word, and deed. He puts stress here, because paganism, which he was seeking to overthrow, had consecrated uncleanness. Hence its priests and philosophers, as well as its masses of adherents, were rotting of this moral plague. Christianity is the one religion with a moral foundation and a complete ethical content whose one purpose is to make men pure in all things, and to perfect them in holiness. Hence no man has any place as a Christian teacher whose life is not white, whose words are not clean, and whose thoughts are not pure.

Such basal moral attributes as those herein reviewed will, of course, not make every minister great; but there can be no greatness in the pulpit without them, no matter how talented or brilliant or learned one may be, and withal no worthiness.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENC.

I mailed to each Centenary Treasurer in the early part of February a questionnaire; the answers to the questions asked would have given me information concerning the Centenary, and this would have been very helpful. Quite a number of the Treasurers have not replied. Please let me have reply to the questionnaire as early as possible; if the blank has been misplaced, we will be glad to furnish you another. Your prompt attention to this will be very much appreciated, and will very materially aid the Centenary cause.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Field Secretary-Treasurer.

By J. P. Wash.

Oh for a hope that will not fade
Like fleeting things below!
That, tho' this trembling soul, dismayed,
In Christ may be aglow!

These things of earth will soon decay,
Which doth my soul molest;
Sometime, somewhere, some happy day,
May I lean on Thy breast!

Amid these conflicts on this sphere,
My troubled soul sought peace;
But vainly did all hope appear,
Until I found release!

When I survey that world unknown,
Oh may my soul have rest,
And there, like John in days of old,
Lean close on Jesus' breast!

CHILDRENS SAYINGS.

It was his first Sunday at church. He watched the proceedings with unconcealed interest, frequently asking questions, until his fond parent at last replied:

"Donald, don't ask questions. Decide for yourself and do as you think best."

Donald silently continued watching, when finally the collection was announced. As the box came to him, he looked up and murmured politely:

"No, thank you; I have some."—Chicago Daily Journal.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

EVERY DAY, EVERY WAY, THE SPECIAL EFFORT GETS BETTER AND BETTER.

The wonderful movement in behalf of the "Forgotten Man" is gripping the church tighter and tighter. Practically every message coming to the Board of Finance brings good cheer. The bishops, presiding elders, and pastors are faithfully doing their duty by the plan, and the lay members are co-operating in a manner that is most heartening. Victory seems assured.

ENCOURAGING MESSAGES.

A wire has just been received from J. E. Riddell, Crescent Hill charge, Louisville District, Louisville Conference, which reads as follows:

"Crescent Hill to-day subscribed fifty-four hundred on quota of thirty-four hundred. We believe remaining subscribers will increase subscription to nearly double quota. Considering large building program on hand this is, I think, extra good."

While in Louisville, Ky., recently to fill a speaking engagement in behalf of the "Forgotten Man" I received a long distance telephone message from Rev. J. E. Savage, pastor of Crestwood charge, Shelbyville District, Kentucky Conference. He said that he had asked his people that morning to subscribe to the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, and had raised in cash $2,200 on a quota of $2,195. Two days afterwards, having returned to St. Louis, I received from the Crestwood charge check for $2,200, and about a week later $75 more, making a total of $2,275 paid. This is the first charge in the whole Connection to pay its full quota for the five years in cash. His name may be "Savage," but his "bite" is pleasant!

THE MESSAGE OF THE PINKS.

At this writing, March 8, 1924, 5,500 Pink Leaf reports have been received out of a possible 6,400. The Baltimore Conference has not yet been held, and of course they are not yet working the program. Two Conferences in the great State of Texas postponed organizing for the movement until the second quarterly conference, and of course they have not done much on the Pink Leaf report as yet. Considering these facts it is splendid to have within 900 reports of a 100% Connection on this important matter. I believe that within a month practically every charge in the whole church will have sent in this report.

The following Annual Conferences are now 100% Pink in the order named: Louisville, Missouri, Illinois. Many other Annual Conferences are very near the perfect mark, some of them not lacking more than from three to six reports. Two or three of the Episcopal Districts are close to the point of 100%. I am curious to know what Episcopal District will be first to go over the line? Bishops Darlington, McMurry, Denny, and DuBose seem now to have the best chance to lead in this matter—but you never can tell.

I wish it were possible to list every Pink Leaf report which shows an addition to the minimum, but space will not allow. However, the following are listed as being a very good sample of what is happening:

Bradentown charge, Tampa District, Florida Conference, adds $110 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,500.

Paris Station charge, Paris District, Memphis Conference, adds $129 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,000.

Okeechobee charge, Orlando District, Florida Conference, adds $133 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $1,500.

Conway charge, Conway District, North Arkansas Conference, adds $200 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $6,000.

Tallulah charge, Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, adds $240 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $2,500.

Winter Haven, Orlando District, Florida Conference, adds $276 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,000.

Lake Providence charge, Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, adds $305 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $2,000.

Aberdeen-Voss charge, Rockingham District, North Carolina Conference, adds $319 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,500.

Galloway Memorial charge, Memphis District, Memphis Conference, adds $410 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,000.

First Church charge, Little Rock District, Little Rock Conference, adds $600 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $7,500.

Trinity charge, Sumter District, South Carolina Conference, adds $600 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $5,000

Madison Heights charge, Memphis District, Memphis Conference, adds $800 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $6,000.

Winfield Memorial charge, Little Rock District, Little Rock Conference, adds $810 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $6,000.

Hyde Park charge, Tampa District, Florida Conference, adds $932 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $5,000.

Wesley Grove charge, Baltimore District, Baltimore Conference, adds $1,061 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $3,000.

First Church, Jonesboro charge, Jonesboro District, North Arkansas Conference, adds $1,572 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $5,000.

Inman Park charge, North Atlanta District, North Georgia Conference, adds $1,700 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $5,000.

Ripley Station charge, Dyersburg District, Memphis Conference, adds $1,720 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $5,000.

St. Mark charge, North Atlanta District, North Georgia Conference, adds $5,640 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $12,500.

Kobe charge, Japan Mission, J. S. Oxford, sends $50 cash to pay his subscription to the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

Kabinda Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Congo Belge Mission, Rev. Thomas E. Reeve, sends $100 as a contribution from himself and wife for Superannuate Endowment.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

In making payments on quotas to the Board of Finance, treasurers of the Special Effort Committees should be sure to use the book of remittance forms which has been sent to them by the Board. If this request is observed, every treasurer will be able to keep the account of his charge clearly before him, and it will save labor and confusion in the office. We have a good plan and we should work it without exception.

The Home Circle

THE WISHING SWING.

I wish this swing
  Could go so high
I'd touch the thing
  They call the sky.

I'd find the moon,
  Though it might hide
Behind a cloud,
  And on it ride.

I'd pluck a star
  For in my hair,
As I should be
  A queen up there!

I'd see where rain
  Is made, and snow,
And how they fall
  To us below.

Oh! wouldn't it
  Be jolly fun
To touch the stars
  And moon, and sun?

—Child Life.

IT NEVER HAPPENED.

There never was a little girl by the name of No-One-at-All, for of course no mother would think of giving her child such a name as that; and the little girl whose name was No-One-at-All did not live in a country called the Land of Nowhere, for there is no such country on any of the maps, even in the farthest and least-known parts of the world.

The little girl whose name was not No-One-at-All did not live on the edge of a forest, and so she did not go for a walk in the woods one day. The forest paths did not grow darker and narrower as she went on, and she did not see a big lion coming just as she got to the narrowest and darkest place. There are no lions in the country that is not called the Land of Nowhere.

The lion did not say to her, "Little girl, I am very hungry, and, if I cannot get anything else, I must eat you," for you must remember that there wasn't any lion, and, if there had been one, lions cannot talk.

The little girl whose name was not No-One-at-All did not say, "Mr. Lion, do you like rabbits? I know where there are plenty of them. We eat them for our dinner, so I suppose it is all right for you to eat them;" and she did not say to herself, "Father won't like it if this lion eats any of our rabbits, but he would feel still worse if the lion ate me;" and she did not lead the way to where the rabbits were feeding, for her father had no rabbits and she had never tasted rabbit meat in her life.

The lion did not say, "I have a great deal better right to them than you have, for they eat the grass and leaves that grow in my woods. I was king of the Land of Nowhere long before you were born."

The lion did not take one of the rabbits by the neck as a cat carries her kittens, and he did not shake it as a cat shakes a mouse, for, as I have told you, there were no rabbits. Now, the little girl whose name was not No-One-at-All did not say, "Mr. Lion, do you like your rabbits cooked? I will take one home and ask mother to cook it for you."

The lion did not say, "No, I always eat my food raw."

Then the little girl whose name was not No-One-at-All did not say, "Oh! you don't know how much better they are cooked," and she did not catch one of the rabbits up by its hind leg and run with it as fast as she could for fear the lion would eat her.

Oh, no! As I told you in the first place, not one of those things ever happened, but it did happen that a little girl whose name was Marian Louise woke up one night in her own little bed in the alcove of her mother's room and found that she had been dreaming about those things about the lion and rabbits.

She knew that her father and mother were asleep in their own bed in the farther part of the room, for she could hear them breathing; she knew that with them to take care of her she need not be afraid of anything; and she knew that nothing that could hurt her could get into a large strong house like that. So she did not call out to waken her mother, but turned over and went to sleep again like a sensible little girl. Then she had a pleasant dream that perhaps I shall tell you some other time.—Kate Lawrence, in the Youth's Companion.

THE FROG PEOPLE.

Have you ever heard the story of the Frog People? It is a "once-upon-a-time" story which Greek mothers long ago told their boys and girls.

Once upon a time the beautiful goddess Latona, fleeing from the wrath of Juno with her twin babies, Apollo and Diana, came to a place called Lycia. Wearied with her burden and almost dead with thirst, Latona saw in the distance a lake of clear, sparkling water on the banks of which peasants were cutting bulrushes.

Running to the lake Latona stooped down to drink, but the peasants rudely stopped her and bade her be gone. "Why do you refuse me water?" she said. "Is not nature given it freely for all? Let me drink, I pray you. I do not wish to bathe my dearie babes, only to quench my thirst, which is so great that I can scarcely speak. By letting me drink you will be giving me life itself."

The peasants still refused to allow her to drink. Then Latona said: "See how my helpless little ones hold out their arms in entreaty. If my misery does not stir your pity, have pity upon them."

You would think that even the roughest and most cruel would have been touched by such pleading, but the peasants remained unmoved. They only threatened greater punishment if Latona did not go away, while they made the clear water muddy and unfit for drinking about in it and stirring it up.

Anger banished thirst and weariness from the goddess. She raised her hands to heaven and cried: "May you never quit that pool but pass your lives therein!" And as she wished it came to pass. They plunged beneath the water, then, raising their heads, they swam on the surface; they came to the banks of the lake and sat on them for a while, only to plunge again into the water. As they did so a wonderful change came over them. The rude, harsh voices of the peasants turned into croakings, their jaws became wide, their necks swelled, and their bodies shrank in size; they became frogs leaping about in the muddy pool.

I don't know all the lessons the Greek mothers taught their children through this story, but there is one we should all learn. It is this: a selfish spirit in a boy or girl not only makes them cruel but makes the face ugly and the voice hideous—in fact, a selfish person belongs to the "Frog People."—Irish Christian Advocate.

CATCHING A PYTHON.

I read an interesting story the other day of the way in which people catch pythons. Now the python, as you know, is an immense serpent found in certain tropical countries, that kills its victims, not by poisoning them, but by winding the great coils of its immense body around them and squeezing the life out of them. When the natives see the smooth trail made by one of them near the river, they know, of course, that he is in the neighborhood, and this is the way they go about catching him. They tie a pig near a wall through which they have made a hole. On the other side of the wall they fasten another pig. During the night the python comes and finds pig number one and proceeds to swallow him. Of course, the pig doesn't like being disposed of this way, and he sets up a great squealing about it. This starts pig number two to squealing also, and the python hearing it, after swallowing the fat pig, gets enough of his body through the hole in the wall to swallow the second one, although one would be enough to last him four days. But there he is, with his long body through the wall, and a pig within him on either side of it so that he can neither get forward nor back. And the next morning the natives come an cut off his head, and his killing days are forever at an end.

"So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; it taketh away the life of the owners thereof."—J. R. Wilkie, in Christian.

The world delights in sunny people.—Henry Drummond.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The sixteenth annual session of the Seashore Divinity School will be held at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., beginning on June 17, and ending on June 26, 1924.

The program is now being arranged and every effort is being made to maintain the high standard of excellence that has obtained in the past. Bishop William N. Ainsworth has already accepted an invitation to be one of the principal speakers.

We call the special attention of the undergraduates of the three patronizing Conferences—the Alabama, the Louisiana, and the Mississippi—to the fact that they may complete their courses of study at the Divinity School and take examinations that will be accepted by their Annual Conference examining committees. In order to do this, however, it is absolutely necessary that they read all the books in their courses before taking the work at the School.

For those who have completed their courses of study, the School offers an unusual opportunity for inspiration, recreation, and good fellowship. Those who are competent to judge say that there is no more delightful section on the American continent than the Mississippi Gulf Coast—and the Seashore Camp Ground is the most beautiful spot for location and surroundings of the whole section.

Ample provision will be made for the comfortable entertainment of attendants upon the School at the lowest possible expense. Boarding facilities will be furnished on the grounds, as well as in first-class hotels and boarding houses nearby.

Remember the date—June 17-26. Further announcements will be made in due time. Begin to plan now to attend the Seashore Divinity School this year.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Theodore Copeland has recently held a very successful revival meeting at Waters, Oklahoma.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, spent last Friday in New Orleans.

The Shreveport District Conference will convene at Logansport, La., at 10 a.m., April 8, and close at 4 p.m., April 9.

The Southern Methodist Press Association will hold its meeting for 1924 at Mount Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., August 5-8.

The Epworth League at Zwolle, La., Rev. Floyd W. Dick, pastor, has launched a campaign for money to be applied to a new church building.

Rev. W. D. Bennett, pastor at Merigold, Miss., writes: "We are now laying brick on what will be a very handsome church when finished." Congratulations!

Rev. E. J. Buck, our pastor at Haughton, La., reports progress in his work. He serves a loyal and optimistic people, and they are expecting great things this year.

Mrs. H. M. Banks, wife of Rev. H. M. Banks, local elder, of Chatham, La., writes us of the very serious illness of her husband, and asks the prayers of the readers of the Advocate that his life may be spared. We are sure this request will be heeded.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, is spending several weeks at Hot Springs, Ark., recuperating from a severe attack of rheumatism. He is being greatly benefited by the baths and expects soon to be in splendid physical condition.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, has accepted invitations to preach the following commencement sermons: De Soto Agricultural High School, Olive Branch, Miss., April 6; Consolidated High School, Arkabutla, Miss., April 13; Coldwater High School, Coldwater, Miss., May 18.

In the recent contest held by the Big Brothers' Class, Greenville, Miss., for the best answers to questions concerning the best methods of increasing attendance, securing new members, making the services more interesting, and securing prompt attendance, the following, in order, were declared the winners: C. R. Johnson, M. P. Massey, DeWitt Walcott, C. H. Fullerton.

We quote from a personal letter from a friend at Oxford, Miss.: "Our church activities here at Oxford are gratifying. Brother Dorsey is a great preacher and a successful organizer, and his fine wife is a close second." As the seat of the State University with hundreds of students, Oxford is one of the most important places in Mississippi, and it is gratifying to know that the work of the church prospers.

The pamphlet, "The Messiah According to the Old and New Testaments," written by Mr. B. A. M. Schapiro, managing director of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society, Inc., has been made available for free distribution through the kindness of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard (Helen Gould). A copy will be sent, free of all charge, upon application to the above-named Society, 83 Bible House, New York City.

Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Iuka, Miss., requests us to say that he is available for meetings during the spring and summer anywhere in Mississippi, Alahama, and Louisiana. He has served as pastor in these three States, and is acquainted with many of the preachers. He gives as references Rev. W. W. Jones, Iuka, Miss.; Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, Corinth, Miss., and Rev. W. M. McIntosh, evangelist, Columbus, Miss.

A chain of District Epworth League Institutes has been arranged by Rev. Julian S. Duncan, president of the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, for April 15-19. The schedule is as follows: Greenville District, at Leland, Tuesday, April 15; Grenada District, at Grenada, Wednesday afternoon, April 16, and Thursday morning, April 17; Sardis District, at Senatobia, Friday, April 18; Corinth District, at Baldwyn, Saturday, April 19. The institutes will be presided over by the district secretaries of the respective districts, and representatives from the Central Office and from the Conference Epworth League Board will have part in the programs.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, Secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training and Life Service, has just had printed in pamphlet form an article that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, "The Self-Supporting Student." The pamphlet teems with suggestions for students who have to finance themselves through college, and it is written in a style that makes it hard to put down before reading it through. Dr. Bennett has rendered a real service to the thousands of ambitious boys and girls who are eager for a college education, and we wish every one of them would write to him at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for a copy of the pamphlet—it will be sent free.

We commend the following, taken from a recent issue of the Brookhaven District Bulletin: "The Methodist who does not take and read his church paper is defeating his own larger outlook and greater usefulness—he is dwarfing his Christian life and influence. The pastor who does not realize what great help the church paper will be to his people, with its added information and stimulus to increased efficiency, and give himself to an earnest effort to get it in the homes of all his members, is deficient in a fundamental element of success. 'My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge,' said the Lord. Have your committees get the New Orleans Christian Advocatet in every Methodist home in your charge. It is worth great effort."

COMMITTEE ON GENERAL CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

The General Conference of 1922 appointed a committee to arrange for the meeting place and entertainment of the General Conference of 1926. The committee is composed of Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, D.D., San Antonio, Tex.; Rev. R. S. Satterfield, Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. W. E. Brock, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mr. W. R. Cross, Salem, Va.; and Judge J. M. Rogers, of Savannah, Ga. This committee is called to meet in Louisville, Ky., on May 1, 1924.

For good reasons the committee is not inviting representatives from cities asking for the Conference to come before it at the meeting in Louisville.

At the proper time the committee will give every city that desires to entertain the Conference a chance to be heard. The offers of all will be carefully considered.

S. H. C. BURGIN, Chairman.
R. S. SATTERFIELD, Secretary.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

An Invitation to All Churches to Unite in Meditation and Intercession During the Pre-Easter Season.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the agencies of evangelism in the various denominations unite in this call to all people who love the Lord Jesus Christ to give themselves with sincere devotion to faithful prayer. Prayer, ever needful to the life of the Christian, in these times of desperate world need, must receive still greater emphasis. To it we turn for those deep spiritual forces which alone can regenerate the world.

The call is twofold: (1) For a prolonged period of concerted personal and family devotions, and (2) for a week of public worship and prayer preceding Easter.

Personal and Family Devotions.

The Pre-Easter or Lenten season is observed by many communions as a special period of penitence and prayer. Many other Christian fellowships which do not so greatly magnify days and seasons have found rich spiritual benefit in approaching Easter with concerted prayer and evangelistic endeavor.

Let us during this Lenten period seek unitedly to enter into a fuller understanding of the meaning of Christ's suffering for the sins of the world. If we are "to know the power of his resurrection," we must also "know the fellowship of his suffering." As we come to a better appreciation of Christ's life, the beauty and wonder of it draws us irresistibly to himself, and in such fellowship the inner springs of our life are refreshed.

In order that we may have this blessing it is necessary that we plan our time, our reading, our thought, and that we break for a little while "the power of the world over us." We should have a fixed time for prayer and Bible reading, be regular and constant in church attendance and be wise in the use of the hours of recreation and social intercourse. It is a time to plan definitely to give more to God and fellowmen, to teach our children what it means to be followers of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to maintain faithfully the practice of prayer in the family circle.

Public Worship and Prayer.

Let the week preceding Easter, known in the church calendar as Holy Week, be observed by public services of worship, consecration, and prayer, in the several churches independently or in combination with other churches.

So far as may be possible, let us all direct our thought to the same great central issues of our Christian life and faith. There is high value in the sense of comradeship and the knowledge that other churches are following the same themes. The consciousness that hundreds of thousands of our fellow-Christians are uniting in the fellowship of prayer cannot but be an inspiration to those who know the Master's wish that we should agree on earth as touching the things we should ask of the Father.

A NEW LEAF.

He came to my desk with a quivering lip,
The lesson was done—
"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,
"I have spoiled this one."

In place of the leaf, so stained and blotted,
I gave him a new one, all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

I went to the throne with a quivering soul,
The old year was gone;
"Dear Father, hast thou a new leaf for me?
I have spoiled this one."

He took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one, all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

Part of to-day belongs to to-morrow, as the seed belongs to the shoot, as the foundation belongs to the building. So to-day owes its best to to-morrow, for not to do right to-day may ruin to-morrow; but the reverse is not true. To-morrow cannot ruin to-day. Time's wheel does not run backward. Banish, then, foreboding and anxious forecast, and fill to-day with faithful work, with kindness and courage and hope; and so you will keep to-morrow from becoming a marplot, and make it a good, honest to-day when it comes.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

A FINE WORKMAN.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney was with me some twelve days, covering practically the whole of the Greenville District, second round. His presentation of sound teaching and sane methods was just about all that could be desired. At times he amazed me. Occasionally he gripped me as few men have. He was never dull for a moment. He was never idle. When I was trying to give attention to belated correspondence and keep the way open a few days ahead of our coming, he was having personal interviews with capable teachers and leaders, pleading, pushing, scotching, commending, planning. He is a bundle of energy and as definitely consecrated as any man I know. I have a new appreciation of Brother Gladney. He is doing a work among us second to no man.

My people enjoyed him, were greatly helped by him. He is leading us in the direction of a new and better day. If the approaching S. T. S. meet at Clarksdale, April 7-12, even approximates the success we both anticipate, it will be largely to his credit. Brethren of the Conference, this man is entitled to every helpful consideration, and should be given every opportunity to reach our people. He should not be hampered save by the multitude of our calls, and those calls should be preceded by the kind of preparation that counts.

He does not obtrude himself. He never gets in the way of a pastor. His attitude to his brethren, judged by my close contact with him recently, is so brotherly as to be outstanding. There is never a word of unkindly criticism or complaint. He appeals to me as a man who has studied, prayed, absorbed, until he has become saturated and obsessed with a passion for great and intensive teaching in our churches. He knows how the work should be done. He should be kept in this work and given a moral and financial support commensurate with what he is putting into it. May he live to see the new day he is dreaming of and working for.

JAMES H. FELTS.

MARY SELSER SPEER was born, May 29, 1886, near Brandon, Miss.; was married to Mr. Lee Bennett, Sept. 22, 1917; died at the Baptist Hospital in Jackson, Miss., Jan. 16, 1924. These dates mark the life of a beautiful Christian character. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Speer. In early life she was bereft of a mother's love and care; but was devoted to her stepmother, who bears this testimony: "She was a daughter to me." She was ever thoughtful of the happiness of her parents, brother, and sisters. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Mount Carmel, at 14 years of age, and remained a faithful Christian until death. She loved God, loved the church, loved good people. She always stood for the right, and abhorred sin in any form. For many years she taught school, and was always conscientious in discharging her duties. She was always ready to help one in need; and never was there a truer friend. Her own little ones died in infancy; but she bestowed a mother's love on her little adopted son, Leo. She was a faithful, devoted wife and mother, and although their hearts, and those of other loved ones, are broken, yet her influence lives, to urge them to a higher, nobler life. May this dispensation of God's providence draw them nearer heaven, and may they so live that they will be an unbroken family in the "Home over there," where she, with other loved ones, will be "waiting and watching for you."

A friend who loved her,

IDA ROBINSON.

MRS. ELIZABETH SMITH was born, April 27, 1839, and quietly slipped away from earth to heaven, Feb. 10, 1924. She was married to James Smith in 1865. To this union six children were born—three girls and three boys—all of whom survive her. Her husband preceded her to the beyond a few years ago. Their home was a home of prayer. Mrs. Smith joined the Methodist Church seventy-four years ago, and lived a devoted Christian life to her death. She was always found at her post, never missing a service at her church as long as her health permitted. She was often heard to shout the glories of God. Her last words were: "I'm ready to go, have been ready seventy-five years, just anxiously waiting the summons." Joyfully she has entered the rest remaining for the children of God.

A friend and former pastor,

REV. L. FAYARD.

MRS. ELIZABETH VIRGINIA GRICE (nee Knight), was the daughter of John E. and Marion Amanda Knight. Born in Lawrence County, Miss., Feb. 3, 1853, under the preaching of Rev. A. B. Nicholson, late of the Mississippi Conference, she was soundly and gloriously converted and made full surrender of all her powers to the Master, to be used for his glory and the good of humanity. On Dec. 23, 1876, she became the wife of John J. Grice, to whom she gave all the riches of affections and crowned his life with joy and happiness, revealing her high sense of Christian companionship in its relation to the home. Her husband preceded her to the Father's house by several years, but she is survived by five sons and three daughters: Rev. J. H. Grice, pastor of the Methodist church at Lauderdale, Mississippi Conference; Mrs. Julia Crawford, Laurel, Miss.; Luther, an attorney at Monticello, Miss.; Philip Grice, of Crystal Springs, Miss.; Mrs. Mary Bilbo, of Picayune, Miss.; Mrs. Jennie Russell, of McComb, and Frank, of Louisiana. One little boy, M. L., died in infancy. Sister Grice gave the very best service to the community in which she lived her long and useful life, in and through the church. Her influence will abide like a benediction upon the community. Bahala Chapel was God's tabernacle largely because of her holy and saintly life. Her richest contribution to humanity is the family of fine Christian children, two of whom are ministers of the gospel, serving successfully as pastors in the Mississippi Conference. To be with her and hear her talk, one would soon find out that she was more delighted to have the honor of having two sons preaching the gospel than if they had been serving humanity in any other way. Howard and Paul, her preacher boys, were often objects of her prayers, and their success gave her great pleasure. Both these rising and successful pastors realize that they owe much to this godly mother, as well as the children. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was her ideal of what the kingdom of God was and is on earth. She knew and loved its doctrines, understood its polity and Discipline, and as a loyal, old-school Methodist, supported its institutions. It did not take long to find out that her heart was in the church, that her life was established in the spiritual realities of God, that she had partaken of the Divine Nature, and that she loved and honored God. She went to her rich and abundant reward in the early afternoon of March, 3, 1924, at the home of Mrs. Russell, in McComb, and was buried at Bahala Chapel the next day at 3 p. m., with a large congregation present, and the pastor, J. H. Moore; H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District; J. A. Wells, pastor, McComb (La Branch); G. H. Thompson, Crystal Springs, and the writer of this sketch, present to take part in the funeral ceremonies. She has a crown with many stars, and many will rise and call her blessed as the days come and go; and when we are all called to meet God, we confidently expect to see Sister Grice.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

Hazlehurst, Miss.

MRS. FRANCIS CAROLINE KING, aged 81 years, 7 months and 24 days, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Stewart, near Finley, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 16, after an illness of about three weeks. She was the daughter of Tarpley Hester, and was left an orphan when quite a child, making her home with relatives. She was married in 1856 to C. M. King, a Confederate soldier. She was the mother of thirteen children, ten of whom survive her. She joined the Methodist Church over forty years ago, and was a devoted, consistent Christian the rest of her life. Hers was a life of sacrifice, devoted to deeds of charity and kindness to her fellow-men. She nursed the sick throughout the country and never asked or expected compensation. Nothing but family sickness prevented her from responding to any call for help. She was left a widow thirty-five years ago, with a large family of children. Notwithstanding the hard struggle of trying to sustain her family, she was always cheerful and ready to administer to others. She was a mother to be proud of indeed. She was laid to rest in old Coalville cemetery, Sunday evening following her death. Scores of friends and relatives witnessed her burial. The services were conducted by Rev. Louis Fayard, assisted by Rev. John Patton, of Florida.

Her former pastor,

REV. L. FAYARD.

MRS. AMANDA HERRING (nee Roberson), daughter of J. H. and Martha A. Roberson, was born in Panola County, Miss., July 8, 1858; was very happily married to Mr. S. A. Herring, Dec. 30, 1890, and passed to her eternal reward, Feb. 3, 1924. The writer has known Sister Herring nearly all of his life, and I do not think I ever had a better friend. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early childhood, and remained a faithful member to the end. For many years before her death her health was very bad, but she bore suffering very patiently to the end. She leaves to mourn her going away her husband, Mr. S. A. Herring, and four brothers. Her home was always her pastor's home, and the writer has always felt that her home was his. Sister Herring was an affable, congenial spirit, a lover of home, and a most excellent neighbor. A noble, sweet spirit has gone to its reward.

Her friend,

R. S. LAWSON.

AN APPRECIATION—SARAH OLIVE JONES.

By Her Brother.

Sarah Olive, daughter of the late B. F. and Esther J. Jones, passed from earth to her home in heaven on the night of Dec. 17, 1923. She made profession of faith in Christ as her personal Savior early in life, after which she lived a consistent, exemplary Christian. Modest and guileless, she filled her station in life with unswerving fidelity.

Her home life was beautiful in its unostentatious habits and simplicity of appointments. Here she exhibited those qualities which gained for her the purest affection of those who knew her most intimately. Unselfishness was her predominating characteristic. She was possessed of the highest religious and ethical sense, which combined to make her the best type of womanhood. She was not demonstrative by nature, hence her Christian life was not noted for its ecstatic experience on the mountain-top of religious joy; but rather for its quiet, steady and constant attendance upon her Christian duties.

She was partially paralyzed five years before her death. Most of the time she was largely helpless. She suffered intensely, but she endured the ravages of the disease most patiently. Despite the attention of skilled physicians, and the tenderest care of a younger sister whose devotion through the five years of physical suffering was beautiful, in the waning hours of the night of Dec. 17, 1923, while nature lay sweetly sleeping beneath the receding light of the silent stars, she closed her eyes to earth, and while we thought her quietly sleeping her gentle spirit slipped from its tenement of clay as silently as the crystal dewdrop slips into the shining sea; and she passed into the abode of the blessed which she was so ready to enter. But she leaves the fragrance and beauty of a consecrated, unselfish and self-sacrificing life as a rich heritage to those whom she loved.

We relinquish our grasp upon her earthly form reluctantly. Her charming presence has vanished from our view. Her beautiful life has been terminated on earth to begin its glorified existence in heaven. Brave, heroic, consecrated woman.

"Gone to begin a new and happy story,
Thy bitter tale of earth, now told and done,
These outer shadows for their inner glory
Exchanged forever, O thrice-blessed one."

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Her Suffering and Restored Her Health

Momence, Illinois.—"I surely can recommend your medicine to other women who have female weakness, as it has helped me very much in every way possible. I was working in a dining room in town, and sometimes I could not do my work; had pains in the lower part of my body and had to stay in bed. One of my neighbors told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and it has surely done wonders for me. I hope all women who suffer will take my advice as the Vegetable Compound has done so much to bring back my vigor and strength."—Mrs. ALBERT E. DESCHAUD, Momence, Illinois.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 93 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

That is 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Health and good looks

—the reward of internal cleanliness

HEALTH and good looks go hand in hand. If you do not keep clean internally, your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks, and insomnia—each of which saps your health and vitality. Soon much more serious conditions follow.

Good Looks Throughout Life If You Keep Clean Internally

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Cleanliness Demands More Than Bathing

Not a Medicine

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

By Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

The recent eighth annual meeting of the Louisiana Sunday School Conference, at Homer, La., was pronounced one of the best in the history of our work. The Homer folks did more than their part in making it a success.

This conference had the honor of the presence of one of our bishops, Bishop Hoyt Dobbs, and a great inspirational address from him.

All the presiding elders were present at the opening session, and helped to make this conference a great one.

We had one leader from the Central Office staff, Miss Marie Parham, who represented the Elementary Department. Other leaders, district and Conference-wide, were our own Sunday school workers who have, during the last few years, given much study to the Sunday school work. Among the Conference leaders were Mrs. R. H. Harper, Conference chairman of the Elementary Council; Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior work; Mrs. J. M. Henry, Superintendent of Young People; Dr. W. W. Drake, Superintendent of Missionary Education and Extension. All rendered efficient service in their special department.

The chairman of our Conference Board, Mr. W. S. Holmes, and the following members of the Board were present: Rev. Alonzo Early, Rev. J. C. Price, Rev. J. L. Evans, Rev. R. M. Brown, Mr. A. M. Mayo, Mr. J. H. Carter, and Miss Ella Hooper.

Every district in the Conference was represented. The Lake Charles, Ruston, and Baton Rouge Districts had their district secretaries present, respectively, Mr. A. M. Mayo, Mr. E. E. Gill, Mr. D. B. Tally. The Monroe District had its assistant district secretary, Mr. C. W. Scates, formerly a member of the Conference Board.

"District Night," a new feature introduced at this conference, was a great success. The Ruston District was awarded first honor, and the Lake Charles second honor, by the committee of judges. The Ruston District featured the "Adult Bible Class work," and the Lake Charles District featured the "Sub-district work" in reclaiming the rural church. The educational message in each feature was very profitable.

The round table discussion in the Administration Department was presided over by the former Conference Superintendent, Rev. Alonzo Early. The leaders in this department were: Rev. J. B. Peters, of Mansfield; Mr. Van Carter, of the State Association; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Rural Specialist, and Miss Margaret Ragland, deaconess, Shreveport, La.

One of the outstanding inspirational addresses was made by Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of First Methodist Church, Shreveport, on the opening night of the conference. The educational institutions were represented by Dean Smith, of Centenary College, and President Bratton, of Mansfield, both of whom brought helpful messages. "The Place of Worship in the Sunday School" was ably presented by the much beloved pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Rev. W. W. Holmes.

The two pageants, "The Spirit of the Gray Moss," and the "Road to the King," the Sunday School Day pageant for 1924, were put on by the Homer Sunday school. Each of these pageants was full of information, inspiration, and beauty.

The following officers were elected for 1924: Mr. D. B. Tally, of Bogalusa, president; Mr. S. H. Porter, of Zwolle, vice president, and Rev. Larry Armstrong, of Baton Rouge, secretary.

The conference adopted the following report:

"We, your Committee on Findings, beg leave to make the following recommendations:

"1. That we commend the earnest and tireless effort of our Conference Superintendent, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, in making the program, and successfully carrying out of same.

"2. That we go to our respective districts to become responsible for one-seventh of the Conference goals, viz: District Standard Training School; two one-week, one-teacher, one-unit school; forty-three Bible classes registered.

"3. That we put forth every effort to have every Sunday school represented in District Standard Training School.

"4. That we stand back of the observance of Sunday School Day, and ask every school to make a liberal offering to the Conference Sunday School Board.

"5. That every Sunday school be checked up on Program of Work, and that a chart be placed on wall with proper seals.

"6. That we give enthusiastic support to the educational program of our denominational Sunday School Board, both General and Conference Boards.

"Rev. Alonzo Early, Dr. R. H. Wynn, Mr. D. B. Tally, Mrs. R. H. Harper, Rev. J. B. Peters, committee."

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Virginia Thomas, Elementary Superintendent.

Time is passing rapidly, and orders for Sunday School Day programs are coming in much more slowly than we like. To date there have been received thirteen orders from the Aberdeen District, fifteen from the Corinth, nine from the Columbus, ten from the Greenville, eight from the Greenwood, eleven from the Grenada, and eleven from the Sardis. What is YOUR District doing for its children, what is YOUR charge doing, what is YOUR school doing? At the meeting of the Annual Conference, recognition will be given those schools which have observed the Day and sent in their offering. One-half of the offering from your District goes for work in your District. Are you interested in your children, their religious and moral development? Send in your order for Sunday School Day programs to-day. Do not wait! Order from Virginia Thomas, Grenada, Miss.

We are making every effort to increase the efficiency of our schools, to see that some of our schools attain the standard by following the Program of Work. In attaining the standard, we do not want to make that our end; it is only a means to an end—the development of the impulses that God has given the little child. What do you want for your children—the VERY BEST of everything? Co-operate with us in obtaining the "very best" of religious training for your children.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On the Honor Roll for Leadership Training there have already been twelve members of the Annual Conference to take credit so far. This does not count the young preachers in Millsaps College. This is three times as many as last year. Who will be the next one?

The Jackson District Standard Training School had 180 students enrolled. The weather conditions eliminated quite a number from the school; 140 attended as many as four periods; 99 credits will be issued. I did hope to get 100. Twenty different Sunday schools were represented in this enrollment; 12 members of the Annual Conference were in the Training School, and 10 of them took credit. Brother Burton was sick the first two nights, and this kept him from getting credit, and Dr. H. Walter Featherstun could not come all the time, and this eliminated him. Both had real reasons. My, how glad I am over this—words cannot really tell it! Think of 20 different Sunday schools represented in the District School! One young lady, Miss Alice Glover, would have made the 100 receiving credit, but she was under age and could not be granted credit. Another one missed one too many periods, without knowing.

Mr. W. E. Harris, who has been teaching in Sunday school for fifty years, drove forty-four miles each night to attend the school. He took credit on the course. Mr. D. B. Morgan and his wife, of Canton, drove fifty miles each night to the school and took credit work. The faculty gave wonderful satisfaction. They seemed happy to be with us and we were very, very happy to have them here. Brother Bowen, the president of the Sunday School Board, worked hard in his local Sunday school, and his work told. All the committees did good work. They were interested and in earnest. The local pastors were backers of the school to the limit and did all they could humanly do to put it over big. Dr. Brooks was happy in his relations to the school and delighted us with a very impressive devotional period. Brother Applewhite took credit in the school and brought nine from Grace Church to get credit. Dr. Mitchell, from Millsaps Memorial, gets an office credit, and three from his church got credit. Brother Means, the dean of the School, endeared himself to each and every one and brought us all under obligations to him and his people. The success of this school has put iron in our blood, and we face the coming days with higher hopes and more courage than ever before.

Many reports are coming in this month on Mission Specials. Good! Let the work go on. Pray over the matter and then turn to paragraph No. 392 in chapter 12 of the Discipline of 1922 and read the second section and try to carry it out. Sunday School Day is near. I wonder who will be the first to send in an offering?

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Resolutions.

We, the undersigned committee, wish to express to Dr. Means, as dean of the Standard Training School, our appreciation of his hospitality and untiring efforts, which contributed so much to the success of this effort; to Brother John C. Chambers and Brother M. L. Burton for making this training possible; to Dr. Howard, Dr. Stephens, Professor Bowen, Professor Summers, and Mrs. Templeton for their instruction and inspiration, which has been the vital force of the school.

We wish to thank Galloway Memorial Church for the hospitality and generosity in opening its doors for our use. We also thank Dr. Brooks,

"A WHOLLY CHRISTIAN TOWN."

By Rev. M. J. Rodriguez.

We will gladly tell you about the religious work in this little town. I wish i knew how to write English correctly, so I could go into details. I will tell you now the principal facts:

We have a nice church here (for a small town) that now is being repaired by a special collection done by soms faithful workers. Our prayers are answered, thank the Lord, and we see a great revival in our work. This work has branched out to some little towns near this one: Polverillo, Matagua and Manicaragua. in the last place a house has been bought to hoid services; in Matagua they have made donation of the place to build the church. We are satisfied of this part of the work.

We have a Sunday school of 130 members, divided in five classes. The children are very enthusiastic about bringing their friends and making them stay. We have a prize every Sunday for the class that has more pupils and the one that has the highest collection. We have thirty-five iittle children in the Beginners' Department, for the organization of which we need material to work with and thirty-five little chairs. Their teacher is a girl educated in "Irene Toland School" in Matanzas.

There is a private school in this town whose principal was a pupil of that same school for many years, and she is doing splendid work for our church. She is president of the Woman's Missionary Council, which has fifty members, distributed in four groups. Though the majority of them are very poor, they all do their part, and have not failed to send regularly 40% of the money to the treasurer in Cuba, Mrs. San Pedro. They are all working and co-operating towards our ideal, which is to make this a wholly Christian town.

During the Centenary campaign our superintendent promised San Juan de los Yeras a house for the preacher, and we are waiting and praying for it. We need it very much.

it is so good to know that we have real friends in the United States, and that we are included in your prayers.

San Juan de los Yeres, Cuba.

FROM FLORA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: It is not my intention to worry you with letters from Flora; at the same time, I believe you will be glad to learn that since writing you last week Brother Wood has added thirty-seven more to the church, making in all seventy-seven members since his coming here, and we feel good over what the Lord is doing for us here.

Brother Wood held a ten-days' meeting at Smith's Schcolhouse, preaching at nights, and the outcome was a new Methodist church there, with approximately thirty-five new members. I understand that the next quarterly conference will be held at Smith's Schoolhouse.

The preacher's salary has been raised from $1,450 to $1,800 at Flora and Vernon, and with Smith's Schoolhouse we feel that Brother Wood will easily get $2,000; if we could pay him $1,500, we would then feel that we were doing our duty towards this man of God.

With Brother Wood preaching and Mrs. Wood praying, we are looking for great things this year.

"CHARACTER CLOTH."

By way of bringing the Orient to the Occident, a distributing branch for the famous Korea Mission cloth, manufactured by the students of the higher common school in Songdo, Korea, will be opened this month in Spencer, N. C., according to announcement of Miss Winnie D. Deal, who will have charge of the American branch. The address of the new office will be Textile Department, Songdo School, Spencer, N. C.

"East is East, and West is West, but here the twain shall meet," says Miss Deal, in speaking of this new venture. "Although the East has now come to the West," adds Miss Deal, "this Eastern invasion is but a by-product of Christianity, following in the wake of Southern Methodist missionaries to Korea, and the establishment of the Anglo-Korean school by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Songdo under the direction of Baron T. H. Yun, of international fame."

The textile department of the school was established thirteen years ago, and is under direction of C. H. Deal, a North Carolinian, who received his training in the Textile Institute of Spartanburg, S. C.

Mr. Deal says that he has found "the gospel of plaid gingham" one of the most effective ways of putting across Christian teachings; that as students learn to produce a cloth that is strong, beautiful, and fadeless, that neither shrinks nor wears out, they are taught that they must weave the pattern of their lives with the same painstaking care and skill if they would produce strong and beautiful Christian character; hence this cloth is known as "character cloth."

Acting upon a suggestion of Mr. Deal, Candler Yun, the young son of Baron Yun, president of the Songdo School, is now in the United States, studying improved methods in textiles at the Spartanburg plant and elsewhere. Mr. Yun expects to introduce these modern methods into Korea, in the belief that they will greatly improve industrial conditions there.

The Korean Mission cloth is made by Korean Christian students, who work half time in the textile department of the school in order to pay for an education. It is a unique product, a gingham soft and silky, and fine as linen, which, it is claimed, "never fades or shrinks and seldom wears out." it is made in plaids, stripes, checks, and solid colors, and is an excellent material for shirts, dresses, etc. It is sold in twenty-four different countries, and it is said that wherever it goes it makes a name for itself.

Solicitude sometimes is best society.—Milton.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Third Annual Assembly, June 9-15, 1924.

We are glad to be able to announce to the Leaguers that Mr. E. C. Harbin will represent the Central Office at our Assembly this year. To those who have met Mr. Harbin, this will be glad news indeed; we feel very fortunate in having him assigned to us for this Assembly. Mr. Harbin, of course, will have charge of the directed play, and will no doubt teach one of the classes. We will also have with us for the Assembly, Dr. F. M. Stites, a missionary from Korea, who will represent the Board of Missions.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, our president, recently organized an Epworth League at Scooba, in the Meridian District. This gives the Meridian District an Epworth League Chapter on every pastoral charge in their district. Who says Rah! Rah! Rah! for the Meridian District! We congratulate them. And we wonder what their goal will be now—possibly a League Chapter in every church on every charge, with a representative at the Assembly for every church.

Epworth Leaguers will be sorry to learn that our president lost his home by fire a few days ago. This occurred the last Sunday in February, and the house was a total loss.

No remedy can cure all ailments of the human body, but an immense number of people suffer from aches, pains and diseases symptoms when their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron your food merely passes through you without doing you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. There is one universally known tonic that has helped thousands because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood.

The Broad Street Chapter, Hattiesburg, certainly had a great treat on Sunday, March 9. Miss Ocie Saunders spoke to that Chapter on this date, bringing them a message that the Broad Street Leaguers will not soon forget. Miss Saunders is a very forceful speaker, and her message was certainly enjoyed by those who heard her. Those who attended the 1923 Assembly cannot soon forget Miss Saunders.

Advertising posters for the 1924 Assembly have been mailed to the district secretaries and pastors. If any pastor did not receive enough of these posters, we would be glad to supply you, if you will write a card to J. H. Weems, 308 Second Avenue, Hattiesburg. It is our desire to have one of these posters placed in each church within the bounds of our Conference, and we earnestly solicit the co-operation of our pastors in bringing this about.

Remember, you do not have to have an Epworth League Chapter in your church in order to have representatives at the June Assembly. We are anxious that you send two or more young folks from each church to this, one of the greatest religious gatherings within the bounds of our Conference.

Mr. Hawkins has received the following letter from Brother W. N. Ware:

"Kabengale, Near Wembo Nyama, Africa, Nov. 15, 1923.

"Dear Brother Hawkins: Your letter of July 25 was forwarded to me at Kabinda and I received it, together with the check for $25, on my arrival at Lusambo, Nov. 6. We got quite a lot of mail on our arrival there, and to-day is my first opportunity of answering any of it. Your letter was quite a pleasant surprised for us, and we are very grateful to our dear Leaguers for remembering us so kindly. Please thank them for us. I am sorry we were so long getting the letter, but I am glad of the check now. You see, it isn't spent and looks much better to us here in Africa than it would look at home. You can tell your people not to worry, that United States dollars are good the world over.

"I guess you received my letter written on the ship from Antwerp to Matadi. I shall be glad to follow it with another in a few weeks, and in the meantime you might let your Leaguers know that they have three happy representatives in the heart of Africa. If you could see our baby playing in the sand and watching the natives at work and at play, you would doubtless think she was the happiest of the three.

"We landed at Matadi, Oct. 1, and arrived at Kinshasa, Saturday night, Oct. 6; boarded the river boat the 17th, and landed at Lusambo Nov. 6. We found Dr. Moore in Lusambo and were happy to make the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins of our church, but at present with the A. P. C. M. there. Mr. and Mrs. Schadel were in Lusambo with the "Texas" Friday, and landed at Kabengele last night, Nov. 14. We are very much pleased with Africa so far.

"Of the twenty-two missionaries actually on the fields now, five of them are from Mississippi, and still another Mississippian is at home on furlough. This gives Mississippi a total of six missionaries to Africa, and four of these are from the Walnut Grove circuit. In thinking of missions, don't forget Walnut Grove. Let this suffice till my quarterly letter arrives. With love and peace and happiness."

Will the pastor please have this letter read to his Epworth League Chapter? J. H. WEEMS.

"I WISH MY NAME DROPPED."

By Garfield Evans.

It was only a footnote to a letter from the name of a volunteer on our files. The letter was short and courteous. Her statement was this: "I enjoy the dance and other worldly pleasures too much to live the close life of a volunteer. I wish my name dropped."

Oh yes! We dropped her name. We could not do otherwise with the thousands of names on our files. But it was not dropped without a heartache.

We admired her for her candor and honest statement. How many hundreds more failed to reply who felt the same way as she did, but did not say so!

We wonder if her Christian friends have been as interested in helping her carry out her early purposes for Christian service as they were to get her to sign a declaration card.

Nashville, Tenn.

A VISIT TO SHREVEPORT, LA.

Mr. Editor: A few days ago I returned from Shreveport, where I had the pleasure of attending the greatest religious revival of my life, conducted by Rev. W. A. Sunday and his seven helpers. The weather conditions were extremely bad, but the interest was wonderful—from four to seven thousand people hearing this noted evangelist. The fundamental truths were preached with divine power and with plainest Anglo-Saxon words that could have been spoken, resulting at every service in the acceptance of our Lord by hundreds of men and women. His sermons required from one and a half to two hours to deliver; his system of soul-winning cannot be excelled—nothing sugar-coated or artificial, but natural. Some of the language he uses could not be used by the local ministers.

It is remarkable what influence he has over an audience of a mixed multitude of people. The messages delivered uncover all classes of sinners in the church and out of the church, in the pew and the pulpit, rich and the poor—all are the same to him.

He is 62 years of age, but as active in his movements on the platform as a young man. He possesses a wonderful voice and eyesight—always pleasant, laughing nearly all the time when he is preaching. The harder he hits the sinner, the more he enjoys it. No one knows the value of his services until one hears him.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic

Stops Malaria, Restores Strength and Energy. 60c

He has been preaching for thirty years; preached in thirty-three States; there is said to be an average of four thousand converts at each meeting. He has held a total of two hundred and three meetings in the same number of cities up to date during thirty years.

Shreveport and the country for a hundred miles around will never forget Mr. Sunday for the great good that will be accomplished, in the churches especially. Methodists of Shreveport are rapidly coming to the front. The First Methodist Church has a large membership, and the attendance is fine. Dr. Robert E. Goodrich is an excellent speaker, much admired by his people. The Four-Square Men's Bible class of First Church is composed of a body of fine men, numbering nearly six hundred. Dr. Smith, dean at Centenary, is their teacher, doing a fine work. Their orchestra consists of an organ, piano, cornet, and seven violins.

I had the pleasure of worshiping with the Noel Memorial people. Dr. Robert H. Wynn preached, and also administered the Lord's Supper. They are a fine body of people, and it was good to be there and worship with such people.

For Ailing Women

Here's a Suggestion Worth While

Pensacola, Fla.—"When I was a young woman I suffered terribly at certain times. I had headaches and dizzy spells, and I just hurt all over. My health was very poor. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (after I had tried several other remedies and was no better) and began to improve right away. I was soon entirely relieved of the feminine trouble and was enjoying good health; gained considerably in weight also. I am happy to say I have never been ill to any extent since that time." —Mrs. Bertha Butler, 412 E. Belmont St.

Health is wealth. Do not neglect the most valuable asset you have. Go to your neighborhood drug store and get Favorite Prescription in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. tablets and receive good medical advice, free.

COUNCIL MEETING.

My Dear Mrs. Snelling:

The meeting of our Woman's Missionary Council, to be held in Tampa, Fla., April 9 through 16, will be one of special interest. Very careful plans are being made for the program. The great hope is that we, as women, shall be able to mark at this time a great forward movement in spiritual things.

The Council Bulletin will be published as usual, carrying with it as nearly as possible the full proceedings and the spirit and power of this meeting. Every member of the Woman's Missionary Society should subscribe for this paper. It is only 35 cents, and will be mailed to its subscribers within about a week or ten days after the close of the Council Meeting. Will you call attention in your columns to the opportunity that the women have to get in vital touch with this great meeting through the Council Bulletin? I shall greatly appreciate whatever you can do to give this publicity.

Yours most cordially,
ESTELLE HASKIN.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Active Society At Cedar Bluff.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Cedar Bluff Methodist Church was organized less than a year ago and has thirteen members.

We meet twice a month. The first Wednesday is a business meeting and "Bible Study" class, and the third Wednesday is a social meeting at which we take up a "Mission Study."

There is quite an interest shown in these meetings and we thoroughly enjoy the work.

During the year our Society has spent $125 on local work, this including electric lights for church and articles of furniture for parsonage. The sum of $12.50 was sent to Conference Treasurer, and a Christmas box to the Jackson Orphans' Home, valued at $20.50.

We rejoice over the year's work and expect greater things in the future.

FROM KILMICHAEL, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Any one who has been to school to Prof. Lin, Millsaps College, has learned one thing among many others, and that is having something to say is the most important element in speaking or writing. (And I wish I might be allowed to say more about that great man, who is a part of every boy who has attended his classes. Long may he live and teach.)

I believe that we deserve space for a brief message from the Kilmichael charge. This is an encouraging field for a young minister, for the people are responsive to worthy requests. We have just held the second quarterly conference, which, I am told, was the best quarterly conference that has been held on this charge in several years. Besides a good report from every church, the stewards raised the pastor's salary. We have recently had a revival of church and parsonage fixing, and as a result the pastor and family are enjoying some very convenient improvements. Our plans for the year are in progress and we are hoping at the end of the year to report "columns level." Brother "Swede" Wilson will begin a revival at Stewart on the fifth Sunday in March. Plans for our other revivals are not yet completed.

Please allow this one other item: I am thinking about our Divinity School at Seashore Camp Ground, to be held in June, and I hope all the old boys will be back, especially the class of the Third Year, whose names are as follows, if you will permit: H. H. Wallace, Olive Branch, Miss.; H. T. Morgan, Texas City, Tex.; J. A. Bridges, Gonzales, Fla.; W. M. Pickard, Chatoon, Ala.; C. C. Norton, McComb, Miss.; C. W. Avery, Crawford, Miss., and possibly a few others whose names I do not recall. Let us all be sure to have our books read and be present.

Brother Applewhite, and Dr. Mitchell and their respective congregations for their hearty co-operation in every detail.

We respectfully recommend to the district conference at Camden that provision be made for smaller training schools of one or two units each, to be held in each county throughout the district, and that a Standard School, providing for directors in each department, be held annually, and that this school be supported by an assessment on the district of at least $300, in order to underwrite the school.

Respectfully submitted,

A GREAT BIBLE CLASS.

Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, is leader and teacher of a great Bible class. It is known as the "Four-Square" or Busness Men's class of Shreveport, and is one of the chief factors of the First Methodist Church Sunday school. This weekly gatbering of many of the leading business and professional men of this city means much to its spiritual and moral development. Every Sunday morning from four to five hundred men meet in the auditorium of the City Hall. Most excellent music is rendered by a stringed orchestra, as well as songs by well trained voices and the audience. It is a well organized body and for the coming year will adopt a budget and plan, to do Christian and benevolent work, in a more direct and efficient manner. The Dean must have dwelt some time in the House of the Great Interpreter, judging from his easy familiarity with the Holy Scriptures and his happy and valuable appreciations of the subjects under his consideration. Last Sunday, March 16, he discussed the main features of King David's life and character, introducing this doughty warrior, poet, statesman, singer, to the busy, strenuous years of this present growing century. On this occasion the wives and daughters of the men constituting the class were given a gracious invitation to attend and some availed themselves of the opportunity. At the close of tbe meeting, there was a general expression of gratitude and approval on the part of these guests. "Yes sir, believe me, the Dean and his class are 'great.'" Pass on, brother, and bulld another like it. The saving feature of our present civilization lies in the fact that men are studying the Bible as never before in all the history of tbis country. "The entrance of Thy Word giveth light."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MISSIONS, HOME AND FOREIGN.

The proper emphasis that has been placed upon the foreign missionary work of the church for many years has resulted in the establishment of Christian institutions and the creation of a Christian sentiment in practically all the lands that were formerly looked upon as heathen; at the same time, it has resulted, unfortunately, in the feeling on the part of a great many people that the real missionary work of the church is being carried on only in foreign fields.

We are coming now to realize, however, that the need for missionary endeavor is as great in the homeland as in foreign fields, and that the success of the work abroad is largely dependent upon the maintenance of an aggressive missionary program at home. The homeland is still, in a very real sense, the base of supplies for the work abroad; and it is as important to maintain the strength of the base as it is to man and equip the far-flung battle lines. In addition to this fact, it is also true that forces and influences are at work at home that are constantly threatening to make less the Christian life of the United States, and it is as important to preserve the Christian character of our own nation as it is to Christianize the heathen nations.

In order to impress upon the church at large the scope and the urgency of the home mission task, the Home Department of the Board of Missions, Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary, has recently issued a pamphlet that will accomplish both purposes admirably if it can have the circulation and reading that it deserves. We consider this pamphlet of enough importance to justify a summary of its contents on this page.

The work of the Home Deartment of the Board of Missions is divided into twelve sections, as follows:

1. City Work.

The cities of the South are growing in number and in size. It is true that in these cities great churches are being established and maintained, and that these churches—many of them—are doing a magnificent work in evangelizing the communities from which they draw their membership; but it is also true that in practically all these cities there are down-town sections and neglected regions that constitute a menace to the whole community unless they can be provided with religious facilities which they are unable to provide for themselves. Realizing this menace, the Home Department of the Board of Missions is aiding in the erection of suitable buildings and in the supplying of trained workers for the evangelization of these needy places. Even a brief survey of any of our larger cities will convince the most skeptical of the wisdom of this policy of helpfulness on the part of the Board of Missions.

2. Rural Work.

We are hearing a great deal nowadays about "the problem of the rural church." We may have heard so much about it that it has ceased to interest us to any great extent; but the problem exists, nevertheless. Careful investigation has shown that the church in many rural sections is growing weaker and weaker, due to the movement of population toward the cities. This weakness shows itself in unattractive and poorly equipped buildings, and in poorly paid and insufficiently trained pastors, so that what was at first an effect has become a cause, and the process of weakening goes on with increasing rapidity. The Board of Missions, through its Rural Department, is endeavoring to solve the problem by strengthening the hands of the country preacher and by making more attractive the work of the country church.

3. Frontier Work.

By frontier work is meant the work in those States—principally Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Illinois, West Virginia, Maryland, New Mexico, Arizona—where we have large groups of workers ministering to a type of people peculiarly susceptible to the appeals of our church, but largely unchurched. These people are neither poor nor ignorant, and they constitute a tremendous force in the development of our civilization, and they must be given the church, with its refining influences and its saving ministry. The Home Department of the Board of Missions is endeavoring to meet this need.

4. Industrial Centers.

Almost unobserved, the South is undergoing a transformation from a section almost wholly devoted to agriculture to one that is predominantly industrial. In the mining regions, oil sections, cotton mill communities, great centers of industrial population are being established, and the gospel must be preached to them. The Home Department is undertaking to meet the religious needs of this industrial population.

5. Work Among Aliens.

America may be the "melting pot" of the world; but unless the principles of evangelical religion are instilled into the hearts and lives of the thousands of immigrants already in our midst and the thousands that are still coming, the product of the crucible will not be of a kind to advance our civilization or promote the interests of the Kingdom of God. These foreign groups must be Christianized if America is to remain Christian. The Board of Missions is taking up this important and urgent task.

6. Indian Work.

The Indians are increasing in numbers, instead of decreasing, as was the case a few years ago. The least we can do for them is to give them the gospel. This we are trying to do through schools and missionaries.

7. Negro Work.

There are about 12,000,000 Negroes in the United States, and the vast majority of them are living within the borders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They are loyal American citizens, and they need to be trained for Christian citizenship. It is well enough to send the gospel to Africa—but we must not neglect the Africans at home. What is called the "Negro Problem" will be a problem no longer when the principles of Christ are employed in all our dealings with those who have so strong a claim upon our sympathies and to whom we owe so much in the way of helpfulness in their efforts for normal development. The Home Department is assisting them in the maintenance of five schools and in the support of more than one hundred of their preachers.

8. Summer Schools.

The Home Department is enterprising a system of summer schools that will ultimately enable all our pastors to come into contact every year with some of the best trained workers in the land, from whom they will receive inspiration and information that will largely increase their own efficiency.

9. Mission Schools.

The six schools maintained by the Home Department in strictly mission territory are filled to capacity this year, and from them are coming some of our most promising preachers and church workers. The value of this work cannot be overestimated.

10. Annual Conference Mission Enterprises.

Practically every Conference Board of Missions is assisted in the solving of some of its problems by the aid of the General Board. If this help should be withdrawn, the work in our very midst would suffer beyond measure.

11. Work for Soldiers and Sailors.

The Home Department of the Board of Missions is doing a definite work in ministering to the religious needs of the army and navy by maintaining camp pastors, by assisting the navy chaplains in their difficult task, and by keeping workers at the hospitals for ex-service men.

12. Evangelism.

In the Bureau of Evangelism, the Home Department of the Board of Missions has listed more than fifty general evangelists, with a large group of evangelistic singers, and this Bureau is at the service of the whole church in developing and carrying on a program of evangelism that will do much toward maintaining the spiritual life of the church.

We have given this summary of the activities of the Home Department of the Board of Mis-

THE HAVEN OF PRAYER.

By Lawrence G. Gates.

In the days agone a ray of light
Beamed across my soul's brief day;
But my soul would grope for the ray of hope—
'Twas a duty for me to pray.

My soul now enter'd th' haven of prayer,
Secure from the stormy day;
But still I strove for the light of love,
A privilege for me to pray.

But now I kneel to the King of souls,
Tho' falt'ring the words I say,
A flood of light illumes my night,
And now 'tis a joy to pray.

REPENTANCE.

By Rev. Charles E. McLean.

Text: Mark, 6:12—"And They Went Out and Preached That Men Should Repent."

Let it be observed at the outset that repentance presupposes free grace. The Divine command to "repent and believe the gospel," is unto all mankind, and, therefore, God has provided all with the opportunity and capacity for obedience. The majesty and magnitude of divine love and the delicacy of divine justice afford sufficient logic for this statement. The conception of even one individual tormented by a consciousness of the exceeding sinfulness of sin and a premonition of impending doom, but unable to obey God's commands looking to redemption because of the unrelenting pressure of sin and because of a merciless limit to divine grace, is too strained for belief. When God commands, he desires obedience, and obedience is entirely possible.

We are not to be confused by the term, "Repent," as applied to God in the Scriptures. Its use there is an example of the incompetency of human language when used to express divine truth. "God is not a man that he should repent" —there can be no reaction in his own heart responding to his own Spirit and grace. There is no sin within him that he should loathe, or any higher life that he should aspire to. But though he cannot change in heart, he can change in his dealings with men. Therefore, we may understand repentance when applied to God to mean the substitution of his mercy for his judgment or the substitution of his judgment for his mercy, since that is what actually occurred in many instances where he is said to have repented.

Nor are we considering here that type of repentance that persists in the lives of twice-born men whereby they are kept helpfully conscious of their frailties and of their continual need of divine grace to render their lives and offerings of service acceptable. As we use the term in this study it means that repentance immediately necessary to salvation, being the stem upon which blossoms that saving faith, the fragrance of which reaches high heaven and links our lives to God himself.

A cursory examination of the whole of the Scriptures ought to reveal to the most careless of us that God has been seeking in every age to provide men with the inclination as well as the ability to live holy lives in communion with himself here on earth, this being his method of preparing them for eternal life and communion with himself in the world to come. Left to itself, an impure nature must remain impure, and, as a result, will nurture impure thoughts and motives which in turn beget unrighteousness in every relationship of life. And it is in this obvious uncleanness of nature which poisons the whole life of man that Jesus has rooted his claim for the necessity of repentance and the new birth, and not in any idea of reformation of conduct which may or may not be superficial.

God seeks to achieve his aims in every human life by besetting the course of that life with unmistakable tokens and evidences of his grace and outpourings of his love. Aiming at the best and highest and purest of which the regenerate man is capable, he pours out himself in unstinted devotion and care unto every child of man. He leaves no stone unturned that the unredeemed should fail to see the folly and danger of sin and "seek the Lord while he may be found." But it is patent that howsoever God may exercise himself on behalf of the lost man, the lost man can never be transformed and redeemed unless there is a reaction within him to the gracious mercies of God operating upon him and within him for his salvation. And when God has mercifully brought one to a consciousness of sinfulness and consequent hopelessness without God, the first reaction that should occur in that heart and life should be what we call repentance.

Repentance, then, has to do with the preparation of mind and heart immediately necessary to the change from sinfulness to righteousness embodied in justification and regeneration. In redeeming the sinner, God has not only to forgive for reprehensible guilt (Justification), but also to make anew a corrupt and tainted nature (Regeneration), so that on the one hand the sinner may be treated as though innocent, and, on the other hand, may enjoy fellowship and communion with God through the Holy Spirit, whence he shall draw the strength and understanding necessary for the new and holy life he is now to live. And since salvation is purely a gift from God, those who receive it must do so in accordance with the conditions he lays down. Nor may God grant forgiveness and a renewed heart to those who do not repent, without doing violence to his own dignity and to the foundations of moral government. To the individual who is content with guilt and uncleanness, divine pardon is undesirable and divine communion preposterous. If redemption is to result, in every case there must be a response to the outbeaming influences of divine grace expressed in terms of far-reaching changes in attitudes, desires, and will, wherein they are made compatible with the new experience of life the sinner is seeking. God will not act to pardon or to regenerate until that response is what it should be.

We will exploit no definition of repentance here. Definitions are relative things and are not always the best aids to comprehension. Not only so, but it is evident that only God is able to decide just what shall constitute repentance and works meet for repentance for each individual. True, we may search the Scriptures for general and particular instruction and for the illustrations given in the experiences of the saints; and this we must do. But we may likewise get a glimpse of the dynamics of repentance if we note the place it occupies in individual redemption.

Thus if we say that sin is a disease of the soul, repentance would cover the whole scheme of feeling and action between the recognition of the real nature of the disease and the confident acceptance of the one possible remedy. By this, it will be seen that repentance shades out of conviction on the one hand and into faith on the other. But the tremendous energies of the act of repentance are evident when we comprehend the array of emotions lying between the two extremes. What vehement desire for spiritual health must there be that enables the casting out of complacency, the overthrow of prejudice, the uprooting of fear, and the yielding of the will, that the disease and the remedy may come together!

If we say that sin spells slavery and death, what revulsion of feelings, and re-direction of aspirations and purposes are necessary before one who has been content in and even pleased with his thraldom can appreciate the meaning of life and liberty and assume the responsibility of freedom!

If we say that sin is rebellion against God, what vital changes must take place before the enemy rebel can banquet in the presence of his misused Lord! What must there be of vanquished pride, of sorrowful acknowledgment of wrongdoing, of self-surrender, and of renouncement of self-chosen ways, before the insurgent and his affronted Chieftain may commune in peace!

Let us imagine a man borne down by a consciousness of sin—sin that has seared and blighted his soul, sin that has blasted his peace and destroyed his hope, sin that has poisoned every relationship of life, sin that has wrung with grief the devoted heart of God himself. Then let us imagine the same man humbly, confidently, kneeling at the feet of Jesus, clutching the border of his garment while his quivering heart opens to receive the joy of pardon and the inrushing of divine life. What effectual change has come about in this man's attitudes, in his desires and in his direction of his will which brings him from habits and haunts of sin to a place at the mercy seat of God? Whatever the change is it is repentance, and whatever it may involve in any life constiutes repentance for that life.

Let us note briefly the major changes in this man's experience—namely, that of attitude, of desires, and of purposes.

First of all, his attitude toward God has changed. Surely this suppliant posture does not bespeak the same attitude toward God that was once so evident or so real in the days of sin and rebellion. Perhaps this new attitude may be traced to a new conception of God. We believe so. We know that wrong conceptions of God are nourshing to sin, just as sin breeds false conceptions of God. A tremendous deal depends upon one's notion of God. "I am, and there is none else," saith the Lord. "I am that I am," he says again. And, "Worship God," cries the angel. Whether God is thought of as a God of mercy and love or a God of implacable sternness, justice and wrath, may have much to do with one's attitude towards him. The nearer one comes to the conception of God as he is, the more accurately will one understand just what attitude to maintain toward him.

Growing out of this new and right conception of God and the new related attitude, is a changed estimate of self. "I have played the fool," one may well concede when he sees God "high and lifted up," and, like Isaiah, one may say, "Woe is me, for I am undone," or with Job, "but now mine eye seeth thee. Wherefore, I abhor myself—." Not much room remains for pride or confidence in self when one perceives what God means to one in terms of love, patient forbearance, and saving mercies.

When a man glimpses the majesty, the beauty, and the purity of God, he perceives the black loathsomeness of sin. Light estimates of sin always go hand in hand with cheap and ordinary notions of God. And when one's attitude towards God shifts from independence, rebelliousness, contempt, neglect, or what not, to one of deep appreciation and seeking after favor, naturally those contrary things tainted by sin become obnoxious and a source of deep regret. The deeper the new appreciation for God is, the more profound and sincere is the sorrow for sin that has grieved him and separated the sinner from him and his saving benefits. Who, with his eyes upon God exalted in all of his purity, power, and Father-love, can fail to loathe the spirit and act of sin that has made him an alien to all that God means?

We next observe the change of desires in the penitent man. Perhaps nothing is more indicative of one's real character than is one's desires. Nothing is more certain to result in action if opportunity is offered. If, then, one could begin a new life with God and still nurture within himself those fond desires of evil, we should not be surprised to see that "the last state of that man was worse than the first." But sin has been exposed. Its disguise has been torn away by the hand of God and its visage with the aspect of death and the pockmarks of shame stands out in bold relief. Who in his right mind can now desire it? But repentance goes deeper than merely losing one's taste for sin. Man is not negative but positive, and if he turns from evil aspirations he must substitute others for them; and there is but one other type of desires possible—those that reach out toward holiness and God.

There is evident, also, a radical change of purposes on the part of the repentant man. Purposes, which are the focal points of the human will, serve as an adequate index to the nature and strength of one's aspirations. And granting that there may be a change of attitudes and desires without a change of purposes, there could be no virtue therein so far as the requirements of personal salvation are concerned. There must be a proportionate change in the expressions of the will so that there will be a terrific downward thrust against sin resulting in its being forsaken, and an outward leap towards the clear, pure atmosphere of righteousness. God will test these new purposes and will honor none save the sincere and unbending. Purposes looking to righteous living but which are easily thrust aside, have no part in repentance and will not meet with favor at the hand of God.

We conceive these remarks to be entirely in keeping with the notion of repentance embodied in the expression, "the saving grace wrought in the soul by the Holy Spirit, from which arises a godly sorrow for sins and an earnest turning away therefrom towards righteousness." We conceive them to be in keeping with any other expression of effectual repentance from whatever source. We recognize that repentance is first of all "toward God," and that on this change towards God hangs every other change needful in preparation for the investment of eternal life and the privileges of sonship.

We consider the command to repent as a sight-draft against the treasury of divine grace, whence come all the impulses, strength and understanding necessary to obedience. It is the duty and privilege of man to present himself at the treasury before the time-limit of this draft expires. No man can save himself by any act however meritorious it may seem. But every man may act in a manner that God may save him. The reactions to God's grace and the response to the woolngs of God's Spirit are the vital points of issue in life. Here hangs balanced the arrow indicating destiny—it may point over the precipice into the nameless despair of fathomless darkness, or it may gently swing toward the marvelous inheritance of the sons of God in the glorious light of his presence. Man decides.

"Men should repent;" therefore, repent thou! Turn through the Holy Scriptures and seek God's revelation of himself—not as you wish him to be or as you think him to be, but as he is. See there, also, a transcript of yourself as you are in your innermost heart. Seek also the divinely wrought portrait of sin in all of its power and reality. Then let your response be as God directs you. You need make no mistake, and if you are deeply sincere you will make none. God leaves no earnest disciple groping by the roadside. Only remember that your repentance must be real, or God will not accept your sacrifice. When you kneel at his throne seeking saving faith, you must have left sin behind you, and the one consuming desire and purpose of your heart must be pardon and fellowship with the God of salvation.

Are you deeply conscious of your sins and weary of their domination? Are you sensible of the tremendous reality of God and do you recognize his just claims against you? Do you feel the grim horror of sins of which you have been guilty and the end to which they are hurrying you? Then yield to those impulses the Spirit of God plants within you. Yield to them when they come and as they come, and God will send them as they are needed. You will find yourself gently but surely led into the spirit and act of repentance, from which will spring, in answer to the whisperings of the Divine Spirit, that faith which makes the salvation of promise the salvation of fact. Only be certain that you are sincere and that you will not be denied. The end of obedience will amply reward you—God will speak, and in his voice will ring the music of full forgiveness, and from his great heart will flow into your soul the reality and the evidences of everlasting life.

OUR MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

There are about 159 missionaries in China representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, including wives of missionaries. About fifty of these are men. Of these missionaries, a few have been brought under suspicion of some form of doctrinal irregularity. This has been the outcome of much rumor industriously circulated, often based on unverified or misunderstood quotations, supposed or actual private conversations, and much industrious agitation. Along with all this, there have been real differences of view among missionaries, just as there are differences here at home. This no one has or can truthfully deny. Sometimes they use descriptive terms which may or may not be complimentary, according to the attitude of the one using them. But these names add nothing to the sum of human knowledge, and carry no magic that can render one immune from error, or be an infallible test of character or opinion. Whatever one is, believes, or thinks must be determined by some other than the catalogue method. We must judge people by what they are and not by what they are called.

I shall in this article attempt to describe the outcome of those cases that have come under my observation. In the nature of the case I shall deal with the men of the Department of General Work. Of these, I can recall five or six at whom rumor first or last has pointed her accusing finger. It is not strange that good people who love the Kingdom should be disturbed, even though only a few of these missionaries are mentioned in this connection.

One who was present at the meeting of the Board in 1912, when various accusations were elaborated at length, asked the privilege of speaking. He stated that although he and the brother who had just made the statements involving him had worked in the same field and lived for a time in the same city, this was the first time the brother had ever mentioned the matter in his presence or given him an opportunity to reply. He then denied ever having uttered or thought what had just been attributed to him on hearsay testimony. Later, the writer heard the same missionary, in conference with a score of his fellow-missionaries with a bishop present, make a statement concerning his faith. The conference lasted for hours, and yet so far as I heard no one took issue with him. Later still, he spoke before the entire body of his fellow-missionaries. I heard hearty endorsement and gratification, but no words of criticism. This same missionary has just been honored by the votes of the various denominations electing him for the third time to the presidency of the Christian Education Association of Eastern China.

One of our missionaries was disturbed because a well-known evangelist was quoted as having said the missionary had revealed his heresy to the evangelist during a visit he had made to China. The missionary wrote the evangelist, who promptly replied that he had not said any such thing, nor had he ever had any such conversation with the missionary. So much for a rumor that has gone where the denial may never reach.

One of our teachers in a union institution has been accused of unsound teaching by certain one not of our church. This was done during his absence from the field, while he was not there to answer for himself. Those making the complaints joined the authorities of the institution in making an investigation a short time ago. The result was an entire vindication of our missionary.

A missionary wrote a letter to me stating that he held liberal views and was out of harmony with several doctrines of the church. Naturally I wrote him at once and referred to that statement, raising the question as to the doctrines referred to. He replied promptly, that after thinking it over he had concluded the statement was hasty and ill-considered and wished to retract it. His communications indicate that his difficulty has arisen out of his inability to believe certain peculiar teachings of some of his brethren rather than the real doctrines of Methodism. His letters breathes a spirit of devotion, a devout faith and abounding joy in missionary service.

Another missionary denies in emphatic terms the correctness of views attributed to him based on a private conversation, and is not able on ordinary grounds to account for the distorted interpretation put upon his words. In cases of this kind one must choose between the two. I, for one, prefer to trust the word of our missionary.

One other missionary originally set down in the catalogue of heretics is not now on the field. In his case nothing was ever urged against his teaching, his character, or his devotion to the work. On the other hand, his manly, conscientious and candid attitude has been altogether admirable, and to this alone is due all we know of what was in his mind and heart.

This is written solely on my own responsibility and in the interest of truth and justice. I am not defending the Board of Missions. It needs no defense. Nevertheless, a final word may not be amiss to those who harbor a suspicion of dangerous carelessness or indifference on the part of the Board, if there be any such. Let any one take the trouble to read over the list of those composing the Board, and ask himself whether or not it is likely they would conspire or consent to defraud or betray the church. If the men and women in that group cannot be trusted, then the cynic and the pessimist are the prophets of our day, and the apostles of hope have lost their commission.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY.

By President Chas. C. Selecman.

Southern Methodist University calls upon her friends to rejoice with her in the consummation of the campaign for an additional million dollars in her Endowment Fund.

This campaign was begun in 1920 and was carried forward under the leadership of President Boaz, Vice President Whaling, and with the efficient co-operation of loyal and liberal ministers and laymen, among whom special mention should be made of Bishop John M. Moore, Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Judge Joseph E. Cockrell, Mr. R. H. Shuttles, and Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, D.D.

The contract with the General Education Board, New York, reads in part as follows: "For the purpose of adding one million dollars to the resources of Southern Methodist University, located at Dallas, in the State of Texas, and in consideration of the endeavor of the institution to secure subscriptions by others to the same fund, the General Education Board hereby agrees to pay, in the manner hereinafter described, to said Southern Methodist University, three hundred thirty-three thousand dollars for endowment of said institution, for its College of Applied Arts and Sciences:

"Provided, that the said Southern Methodist University shall secure on or before June 15, 1922, not less than one million dollars, including the contribution of the General Education Board, in legally valid subscriptions. One million dollars shall be invested and preserved inviolate for the permanent endowment of said Southern Methodist University, for its College of Applied Arts and Sciences; and

"Provided, that no legacies shall be counted toward the fulfillment of the above condition; and

"Provided, that the contribution of the General Education Board may be paid in the manner hereinafter described and only when the said Southern Methodist University has no outstanding debts."

The pledge was executed pursuant to a resolution adopted by the General Education Board on the 27th of May, 1920.

Prior to this agreement, on February 20, 1920, Secretary H. A. Boaz, of the Board of Church Extension, of the M. E. Church, South, had been induced to resign that high position and accept the presidency of Southern Methodist University with the distinct understanding that his rare ability for raising money would be heavily drawn upon in relieving our young University of a most distressing financial situation. With a very meagre endowment, a large and increasing floating indebtedness, and a student body out of all proportion to our equipment and resources, it was evident that if immediate steps were not taken to remedy our situation, disaster awaited us.

Many factors have contributed to the achievement which we to-day celebrate. It would require a long list of names to mention the most conspicuous servants of the cause, which I will not undertake to compile. The history of the movement is that the subscriptions were secured and collections begun upon the same.

Despite the period of deflation that followed, such progress was made that by January 1, 1924, we found ourselves within $358,000 of the goal, having raised $300,000 on endowment, and liquidated approximately a half million dollars of indebtedness.

Today, March 22, 1924, we are sending forward our balance sheet to the General Education Board, New York, showing that the entire $666,666.66 has been raised, and that all debts have been paid, and we expect in the course of mails to receive from the General Education Board their check for $333,333.33.

Including the Pires bequest and the Allen bequest that have come to us during recent months, with a joint value of about $425,000, and the Arnold gift, secured January, 1924, this will give Southern Methodist University a total productive endowment of $1,845,000.

In addition to this, we have an undivided half interest in 720 acres of land lying one mile beyond the city of Dallas and Highland Park. Our campus of 132 acres, with building and equipment, is conservatively valued at $3,000,000.

The University has no outstanding debts or accounts. Yesterday the Executive Committee adopted a resolution of economy, providing that the appropriation for any year should be limited to the income of the preceding year. If followed, this will prevent financial disaster or embarassment in the future.

Three large gifts have come to us since April 1, 1923, viz., $100,000 for the building of the School of Theology, by R. Harper and Annie Kirby, of Austin, Texas; $120,000 for the endowment of the Chair of Statesmanship in the School of Citizenship, by Mrs. Geo. F. Arnold, of Houston, Texas; $325,000 for the McFarlin Memorial Auditorium, by Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McFarlin, of San Antonio, Texas.

The final campaign in Dallas for $50,000 cash, new money, was one of the most satisfactory efforts of the kind with which the writer has any acquaintance. Led by a Committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Lynn P. Talley, of the Federal Reserve Bank, Gordon Perry, of the Investment Finance Corporation, and Everett Owen, of the Geo. W. Owen Lumber Company, ably assisted by the publicity of the newspapers, notably the News, Journal, Times-Herald, and Dispatch, the campaign awakened general interest and was a clean-cut success. The final check for $3439 came voluntarily from a person who had not been approached.

IN BEHALF OF THE "FORGOTTEN MEN."

By Mrs. A. F. Calloway.

While much is being said and written of our dear pioneer pastors, "the Forgotten Men," I, too, humbly beg the privilege of witnessing for them, and to pour out, if I may, a portion of my heart's love and appreciation at their blessed feet while a few of them linger where kind words and tender considerations take away the sting of adversity and sweeten their days.

I wonder what the condition of this world would be to-day, since men have developed so much of self-sufficiency, were it not for the influence of these anointed of God, written indelibly upon countless human hearts all through the centuries, teaching them that there is a living God to worship and to serve, and a heaven to gain?

If our Heavenly Father deemed this cause vital enough to send his only Son into the world to teach and preach, and to pour out his precious life-blood for, how glad and thankful you and I, who have obtained salvation, should be for the privilege to befriend, comfort, and remunerate in every possible way these chosen ones who, when Jesus called them to be "fishers and shepherds of men," and "Sowers of the Word," abandoned their nets, their threshing floors, and their sheepfolds, and became "obedient to the heavenly vision," going here and there, among friends and foes, breaking to all the "Bread of Life," smoothing dying pillows, comforting the sorrowing, burying the dead, and often suffering discomfort and manifold privations in order that Christ's kingdom might be built up!

Oh! the blessed, blessed influence of the pastor in the home!

My heart often longs for those dear days of the past, when Brother Jones or Brother Smith came and cheered the family circle with his charming spirit and perhaps a gentle pat upon the head of some little lad or lassie, looking into their trusting eyes and whispering, "God bless you!" And then that hallowed season when the old Book was brought out, read and tenderly explained; then upon humble knees a talk with the Father about the family, often calling each by name.

Ah! those sweet, blessed days. There is nothing comparable to them this side of heaven; and nothing in the mind or achievement of man can equal such benedictions and privileges, and to this state of grace all must come, both small and great, ere they become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. All honor and blessing upon those who have given their lives for this sublime purpose!

To me, there was nothing so beautiful in the character of King David as his generous and outstanding consideration of "God's anointed," and I fain would be like him in this respect. May his tribe increase.

I thank God for the just and timely move to render unto them their due, and for a princely spirit like Dr. Todd to general it. My devout hope is that it may be an overwhelming success, and that from henceforth the earthly pilgrimage of these worthy saints may glow with that light that illumines the pathway of the just, and shineth more and more unto the perfect day. "How beautiful the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth salvation, that sayeth unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!" Isaiah 52:7.

They are thine, O righteous Father,
Keep them near thy precious side;
Let them feel thine arms beneath them,
Grace and love and joy bequeath them,
From earth's chilling blasts, O shelter them,
Till they are called to "Come up higher."

When their sun at last is setting,
And thy call comes sweet and clear,
Blessed Master, when they hear it,
Grant not one of them may fear it,
But that each may gladly cheer it,
Answering sweetly, "Lord, I hear."

Then when in that heavenly kingdom,
With its mansions rich and fair,
May their cups of bliss run over,
As they meet and greet each other,
Paid for every blest endeavor
With the "well done" of their Lord.

CRITICS AND THEIR CRITICISMS.

By Arthur Madison Shaw.

Criticism, when it is honest and intelligent and wisely proportioned, is not only legitimate, but useful and in every way wholesome. Our critics are our best friends. When they are magnanimous, they inspire us and point the way to better accomplishments; when they are malignant, they help us to correct our faults, incite us to clearer thinking and more guarded expression, and they increase our influence by calling attention to our work. An exchange of fair and friendly criticisms is an interchange of points of view, and ought not only to clear up the issues involved but actually to bring men closer together.

Unfortunately, the criticisms of strongly prejudiced men can hardly be honest and intelligent; and they are usually greatly out of proportion to everything else that such men do. Such criticisms still have the merit of advertising whomever or whatever they assail; but they are quite as liable to popularize a bad cause as a good one. And beyond this they produce nothing but discord and confusion. However, confusion itself brings some comfort to the "rule-or-ruin" type of man, who leads the forlorn hope of a weak and unworthy cause. I wish to cite two or three criticisms, which are dishonest and silly, yet capable of awakening suspicion and creating confusion in some minds, as illustrations of the tactics of some men who are just now vocal with censure and blatant with calamity.

The first is from a well-known preacher who evidently wants to dangle an episcopal scalp at his belt. He "marks with his eyes for slaughter" one of the greatest bishops our church ever had, selects a few short sayings from his writings, and parallels them with saylngs from the writings of a great Unitarian preacher. Here is a specimen:

"1. Christ makes the law of the cross to be the inner principle of discipleship to him."

"2. Expect nothing from the cross unless a power come from it strengthening you to bear his cross."

Now can you tell which of these the bishop wrote, and which the Unitarian? Possibly you cannot; but what of it? There is nothing objectionable in either statement, and any intelligent Christian might conceivably have written either or both. But how horrible it is for a Methodist bishop to be caught in such company!

Let us see how much such criticism is worth. Here is a still closer parallel which I will offer.

1. "I had rather be a beggar and spend my last dollar like a king than to be a king and spend my money like a beggar."

2. "I had rather be a pauper and spend my last penny like a prince than to be a prince and spend my money like a pauper." Sam Jones said one of these, and Bob Ingersoll said the other! Can you tell which is Sam's and which is Bob's? How horrible! Yet, who ever accused Sam Jones of believing like the great agnostic? In 1912 I saw certain planks of the Progressive and Socialist platforms, wrenched from their connections and paralleled in the same way; but nobody is fool enough to believe that the Progressives under Roosevelt, and the Socialists under Debs were of the same political faith.

Another critic is excoriating the editor of a church publication for commending the "Shorter Bible." What merit this book possesses I do not know, for I have not seen it; but, thanks to this criticism, I shall have to buy it. The head and front of its offending, according to our critic is that it "was not simply a selection of Scriptures made and presented to the public as such, but that it purported to embody in it all of God's Word that was valuable, leaving out what was unimportant." And he quotes a bishop as saying of it: "Whole books of the Bible are dropped out: I and II Chronicles, two of the Minor Prophets, and four books of the New Testament. Eighty-two of the Psalms are excluded, and many of the sixty-eight which are left are mutilated beyond recognition." All of which appears very serious. But I dare affirm that there has long been need for something of the kind. The Psalter in the Methodist Hymnal and the Scripture Readings in the Ritual furnish some good examples of omissions and mutilations; and thereby the doctrinal emphasis and general teaching and devotional value of the readings have been considerably improved. Might not the entire Bible be profitably treated in the same way?

If some pope or council were attempting to prohibit the reading of the eliminated portions, determined opposition would be justified. But the "Shorter Bible"—judged by these criticisms—seems to be an attempt to put the essential teaching portions of the Bible into easily accessible form. Such an attempt is calculated to popularize the Scriptures with ordinary readers. Who uses the entire Bible, anyhow? Not a layman in ten thousand. Not one preacher in a thousand makes any actual use of more than a greater or less portion of the whole. Many a common reader has been utterly discouraged by trying to read and understand all of it; and then by trying to pick out parts that will really help him. Who has not seen a conscientious layman worrying over a passage that he could not understand, and that the pastor could not explain—and that would have done him absolutely no good if it had been made clear to him? Whoever can put the essential teaching elements of the Scriptures in form available for the general reader will render a service to the cause of religion. If the "Shorter Bible" does this, it is a step forward. The scholar and technical student still has the whole body of Scripture to work upon.

Another critic is dealing with Bosworth's "Thirty Studies About Jesus." This may be a very vicious book. I have not read it. I am merely writing a study in criticism: and if this book is vicious, the criticism does not show it, but simply seeks to discount it by an appeal to prejudice. The burden of his indictment of the book is as follows: "The writer begins with the second chapter of Luke, and thus evades the subject of the Virgin Birth. In all the 'Thirty Studies' there is not a syllable about miracles of Jesus. The whole stress is put on his parables and sayings. He glides smoothly over the resurrection." Study these four sentences in the light of the following four numbered replies: (1) The second chapter of Luke tells how Jesus was born of Mary, who was "betrothed" to Joseph. Her virginity is implied. Studies in the lives of men usually begin with their birth—not earlier. Mark begins far beyond the second chapter of Luke. Was he "evading?" (2) Bishop Haygood's "Man of Galilee," one of the greatest defenses of the Divinity of Jesus ever written, has not "one syllable about miracles of Jesus," I think. Is it therefore a "Unitarian book?" (3) In a brief compendium of "Studies About Jesus," for Christian students, not everything about him can be stressed. What, then, is most important to stress; the wonders he performed, which none can imitate, or his teachings, which all may understand and follow? (4) Can any one tell what the critic means when he says, "He glides smoothly over the resurrection?" Why put it just that way? Why not be a little definite? Does the author of the "Studies" deny the resurrection? Does he omit all reference to it? Certainly not; for then he could not be said to have "glided smoothly over" it. He evidently touched it. Why did not the critic tell us what he said about it? It evidently suited his purpose better simply to create a general impression of distrust about the book.

Such are the tactics of some of the men who are seeking to stamp the pope's brand of "Modernist" and the bigot's brand of "Rationalist" upon the devout scholars and thinkers who are freeing the modern democracy of Christian thought from the tyranny of dogma entailed from the Middle Ages! It is enough if they know that the man is not of their own faction. They delight to isolate some utterance of his from its connection, and, ignoring the body of a writing that may be excellent as a whole, condemn both man and writing by what they can make appear hideous in the passage which they have warped from its intent and meaning. I have deliberately chosen criticisms upon books which I have not read, and concerning which I have no bias, in order to show the utter worthlessness of such criticisms when they are analyzed. They are neither intelligent nor honest; and they ought to predispose the thoughtful reader in favor of the writings criticized.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

In a sense, the church is now living and thinking anew the life and thought of the third century. History is indeed repeating itself, and that very strenuously. Again the battle lines are drawn and the conflict rages about the person of our Blessed Christ. Arian and Athanasian are only the elder terms for Modernist and Fundamentalist. If the latter means "the faith once for all delivered to the saints," count me as one; if it means bold, crass literalism, a mere machine-kind of blind credulity without will and thought, count me out. Faith and not superstitious acquiesence to tradition is the crowning glory of Christianity. And it requires faith, born of God, sealed by the Holy Spirit, to receive and accept the supernatural things of our holy religion. Now faith is a big factor; it is no child's play to catch the vision of glory and peace involved therein. It is in this sense the gateway of life, where the Christ stands. Let us, then, go back of his advent, back of his virgin birth, and believe, yes believe, accept, confess, to a doubting world that the Eternal Son of God, in accord with the Father's will, chose his own way of coming into this world. The Christ of the ages preceded in personality the Child of the Virgin. They are one and the same—"Before Adam was I am." Eternal life is ever more greater than physical life. Biology is all right in its place, but its place is not in the Kingdom of God. Paul made a very convincing statement about spiritual things being spiritually discerned.

Again, John links the divine conception of Jesus with his Sonship and Deity—"The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." What means that clause, "the only begotten Son," used repeatedly by John and others, if it does not mean divine conception? Luke, I presume, knew more biology than any other of the evangelists, being a physician; yet he gives the fullest account of the miraculous conception and virgin birth of the Christ. We thank you, Dr. Luke, for that masterful poem, which enshrines the faith of the church in the immaculate, crystal Christ of the ages.

The old teacher or apostle who coined that triad of sin, "the world, the flesh, the devil," showed a deep knowledge of human nature, for he placed "the world" first in his category. I never cease to wonder at the folly of worldliness. How empty of the real values of life must be the soul that finds its joys at the card table, the dance, the play that appeals to the sensual, the race track, or any of those excitements that war against the nobler and spiritual qualities of our being! The fabled apples of Sodom, are but a feeble figure to show the emptiness of such misdirection of immortal energy. Beautiful without, ashes within, is the pitiful fruitage from such barren fields. The soul hunger is too vast and real to be fed with such mockery. Out of the depths of its need it cries for God, the living God, and like a mothered child, will have none other instead. But the tragedy of many lies in the fact that only through suffering and sorrow will the voice of the Helper be heard. Siren songs are more appealing than the call of the soul's need. The raging billows of worldliness overwhelm them, and they see not or heed not the rescuing bark on the wild tide. The sordid blindness of those given over to the spirit of this world is the heart-breaking, world-wide drama of this present age. It would require the genius of a Shakespeare to picture it, and the tears of a Jeremiah to mourn its folly. The church and world are too closely linked together for the good of either. There are too many like the acrobat in the circus riding two horses, standing with a foot on each. It may do for the show, but would be a poor method of travel. I am quite sure no progress could be made on this wise along the heavenly road. These only run around the ring. The world, my friend, and the things of this world are given of God, to be used and not abused. The glory of life lies in choosing wisely.

A REAL CHANCE FOR THE WHOLE CHURCH TO BE 100% PINK.

To date (March 15, 1924,) there have been received 5,668 Pink Leaf Reports. This is a most remarkable showing, as it means that this many charges have officially undertaken quotas for Superannuate Endowment. Not counting a number of charges that are supported exclusively by missionary money, there are probably about 900 more charges in the church that have not sent in the Pink Leaf Report. Included in this number are 225 charges of the Baltimore Conference, which Conference has not yet been held to launch the Special Effort. So it appears that we are faced with a glorious opportunity to make the entire church 100% in this important matter. Surely we will not let up in our persistent toil until this goal is reached. In order that my readers may see just where the missing Pink Leaf Reports are located, I will list the Episcopal Districts in order, showing how many of these reports the Annual Conferences in each Episcopal District have yet to send to the Board of Finance in order to be 100%:

Keep on Saying It With Pinks.

With the foregoing facts clearly before us the bishop, presiding elders, and pastors of every Episcopal District are challenged to reach the perfect mark. A great deal has been stated on this page concerning presiding elders who are 100% Pink, that is, elders whose Districts have sent in the Pink Leaf Report from every charge. Why not have all the bishops 100% Pink? Wouldn't it be lovely? I am sure our great leaders who are at the head of the Episcopal Districts will be just as eager in this matter of being perfect on the Pink as are the presiding elders and pastors.

Two or three of the bishops are very close to the mark even now, and just a little loving persuasion will cause those outstanding Pinks to find their way to St. Louis.

First Church charge, Orlando District, Florida Conference, adds $2,960 to the minimum, accepting a quota of $7,500.

From the Dallas District, North Texas Conference, comes a cheering wire stating that at the joint quarterly conference of all the charges in said district the presiding elder, Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker, presented the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment in a very froceful and convincing manner. As a result every charge in the district officially approved a quota and made plans for securing the subscriptions. Many of the charges added materially to the minimum amount expected from them, and some of the charges voluntarily agreed to pay 8% on the entire amount of their quotas until they are paid in cash. Other charges determined to raise their entire quotas in one or two years.

This is a very happy report coming from the great city of Dallas, and it serves to give us new courage and determination to go forward with the work in behalf of the "Forgotten Man." What Dallas can do any other enterprising city in the church can do if it makes an honest try. Also, any smaller city or town or countryside can do its part in this wonderful movement if the men on the ground will give it a virile and hopeful leadership.

Though Superannuated Yet Pink

About three years ago Bishop Mouzon needed a preacher to establish a new mission at East Newport, Ark. He could not find a man. Upon the suggestion of the presiding elder, the superannuated preacher, Rev. M. B. Umsted, was given the task without salary, parsonage, church building, or a single member of the church with which to make an effort.

In one year this "Forgotten Man" built and dedicated a commodious church building, organized a considerable class of members for the charge, organized all the usual societies, and reported everything in full at Conference.

And now, three years later, Brother Umsted, who is still the pastor, sends the Pink Leaf Report from what is now known as the "Umsted Memorial Charge." The Pink shows that they have accepted a quota of $700 for the Superannuate Endowment; that the Missionary Society has assumed one-fourth of the amount; the Epworth League one-fourth; the Sunday school one-fourth; and other members of the church one-fourth. This is the type of man for whom I am crying my heart out to the church in order to provide for him and his kind a comfortable support in the time of old age and physical disability. Something must be wrong with any member of Southern Methodism who will not heartily cooperate in such a movement.

The Home Circle

SNARLES AND TANGLES.

By Margaret C. Lysaght.

Comb and Brush and Ribbon Bow
Went out to take a walk;
Said Comb to Brush, "It seems to me
We ought to have a talk.

"You know my whole life I have given
To straightening others' tangles,
And yet I meet but snarls and scowls
And cause full many wrangles."

"But, brother," said the bristly Brush,
"You always show your teeth;
I show a back that's always smooth,
But bristle underneath.

"I work and work with steady stroke
To smooth all snarls away;
But you're inclined to pull right through—
A plan that doesn't pay."

"Why can't you two," said Ribbon Bow,
"Enjoy your lot in life?
Now, I'm so bright and cheery
I banish tears and strife."

GRANNY'S GIFT.

Aunt Nell looked up from her sewing to see what it was that made her two little nieces and her nephew so quiet.

They were standing in a row by the window watching the flurrying snowflakes as they came tumbling one after another down from the sky.

Then Aunt Nell got up and started to look around as if she were hunting for something.

"Have you lost something?" inquired Donald. "Tell us what it is, and we will help you hunt it."

"You may all help me," answered Aunt Nell. "I can't find your smiles. They seem to have been misplaced."

"Our smiles?" echoed Janet. "How could we have lost them?"

Then they began to laugh.

"Why, there they are. You have found them for me. Now let's see who can keep them the longest," said Aunt Nell.

"Well, it's pretty hard to smile to-day," replied Donald. "We wanted to go coasting this morning, and now we can't go."

"But just think how much better the coasting will be when it stops snowing. I don't think it will last much longer, so let's think of something nice to do indoors," comforted Aunt Nell. "Bring your chairs over here by me while I put on my thinking cap."

Pretty soon she exclaimed: "Oh, I know! We will give Granny Martin a birthday surprise. She told me last week that her birthday is to-day. She never receives any presents, although she climbs the hill to her mail-box every birthday."

"Oh, goody! goody!" cried the children, clapping their hands. "But what shall the presents be?" asked Edith.

"Oh, I'm sure we can find something," answered Aunt Nell. "Donald, you bring me those boxes out of the top of my trunk. Janet, get me a pair of scissors; and, Edith, bring that tissue paper and ribbon from my room, while I see what I can find."

In a few minutes they were all back again.

"Now," said Aunt Nell, as she started cutting some gay paper, "let me show you how to wrap these oranges to make them pretty. Donald, you pack these pieces of candy neatly in a box while Edith wraps these handkerchiefs in pretty red paper. I will put this shawl in a box, and then you may wrap it, too."

"There!" exclaimed Edith as they finished tying the ribbons, "aren't they lovely?"

"See! it has stopped snowing. Shall we take the packages out now and put them in Granny Martin's mail-box?" asked Donald. "We will let Janet sit on the sled and hold the packages, while Edith and I pull." And away they trudged through the snow.

"Here we are," said Donald. "I guess I shall have to stand on the sled, for the box is pretty high. You girls can hand me the packages."

"Be careful of that loaf cake," warned Edith.

"Now let's run home and watch from our window," said Janet.

They had no sooner reached home than they saw Granny start slowly up the hill. Her eyes grew wide with surprise when she saw something in the box."

"Look!" said Aunt Nell. "She has found something else in the mail-box."

"What is it?" asked Janet.

"She has found the smiles that you put in the box for her," answered Aunt Nell.

"Oh, I never thought of that!" exclaimed Edith. "I'm going to see if I can't find some smiles for every one I see all through this whole year."—Exchange.

MAKING JANE UNDERSTAND.

The moment Jane appeared in the doorway, says a writer in The Youth's Companion, Nora knew with a sinking heart that the thing she had been dreading for months had come. Jane's face was white.

"I've just heard why I lost the election," she said. "The girls think I'm not a good sport on the team. Nora, did you ever hear anything so unfair? There isn't a girl on the team who has made so many sacrifice plays as I have. And then to say I'm not a good sport!"

Nora could not bear to hurt Jane any more. "Why don't you ask the ones who said it?" she pleaded.

"Because I prefer to ask you. I can trust you. I am almost ready to believe that you are the only one I can trust." Jane's tone was bitter.

"O Jane, you splendid big Jane!" cried Nora. "Don't you see that that's exactly it—the way you feel about the girls? You do make sacrifice plays, but you are so quick to blame everybody for blunders. It makes lots of girls nervous with you; they fumble just because they are so desperately afraid of what you will say to them if they do! Don't you see, dear?"

"No," Jane said, turning away coldly, "I don't."

Half an hour later as Jane was turning into her own yard an excited small boy met her. "Janey, Janey, we're going to play the Giants! Come and root for us, won't you?"

Jane's face relaxed; she had a soft spot in her heart for this small brother. "All right, Phil, I'll be there," she promised.

"Hurrah!" Phil responded joyously. "We're goin' to run 'em off the face of the earth. Hi, Blister!" he shouted to another small boy who had just appeared, and the two tore off together.

And then after all they were beaten, seven to one. Jane, watching Phil fight, set her teeth over the blunders. As soon as the game was ended she went over to the losers. Phil was talking to his sorrowful team.

"Aw, what's one game! Never mind, Rod. You couldn't help it, muffing that fly. We'll beat 'em next time, you'll see!"

Jane saw the look of courage come back into Rod's dejected face—courage and loyalty and big resolve. Girls never looked at her as he was looking at her small brother. Was it possible that Phil understood life better than she?—Christian Advocate.

A LOOMING DANGER.

"The fool has said in his heart, There is no God." And some foolish people who are unable to understand all the suffering of this present time are inclined to neglect the things of the Spirit. Some in their greater prosperity, others in their increased troubles, neglect the church which stands to offer the only hope we have out of the chaos of the times. True it is that a double portion of the world's work has fallen to our lot. But we are falling into a bad habit if we allow all our strength to go into daily toil and leave no time to seek from the Christ that refreshing which he promised to all "who travail and are heavy laden."—Selected.

I will therefore that men pray everywhere. I Timothy 2:8.

Paul was an optimist because he was a man of prayer. He was in constant communication with the base of supplies. He believed in Christ who said: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." He leaned on him who said: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." With that kind of a bank account why should one ever be anxious?—James I. Vance.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The "Y" Hut at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., will be dedicated on Thursday, April 3.

"We have a great church here in Amory, and our pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, is doing a wonderful work," writes a correspondent from Amory, Miss.

Dr. Alfred F. Smith, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, recently assisted Dr. S. A. Steel in a series of services at Decatur, Ala.

"The Church Advocate" is the name of a monthly church bulletin being issued by Rev. Porter M. Caraway, pastor of the Methodist church at Ferriday, La.

The contract for the new church at Ferriday, La., has been let, and work has begun. The building will cost approximately $12,000. It will be thoroughly modern in every respect.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is now en route to England, where he will attend the Conference on Social Activities to be held in Birmingham, April 5-12.

The current issue of Success contains an article, "Famous Men I Have Met," by Dr. Walt Holcomb, one of our well-known general evangelists.

At the winter term convocation of Emory University, March 15, Rev. Julian S. Duncan, of the North Mississippi Conference, received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

Dr. P. A. Baker, for twenty years general superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League, died at his home in Westerville, Ohio, on March 30. He was 65 years of age.

We take the following from a recent number of the "Big Brother," of Greenville, Miss.: "Rev. R. O. Brown, of Ruleville, Miss., was a recent patient at the King's Daughters' Hospital, where he had his tonsils removed."

The fourth annual Louisiana State Conference for Social Betterment will meet in New Orleans, April 20-23. Among the speakers will be Rev. H. S. Johns, chaplain of the Louisiana State penitentiary.

Bishop W. F. McMurry will preach the commencement sermon for Southern Methodist University on Sunday, June 8, and Dr. A. Frank Smith, of Houston, Tex., will deliver the commencement address on Tuesday, June 10.

The money to pay off a $2000 church debt at Charleston, Miss., has practically been raised. The work of the church prospers, and this bids fair to be a fine year in all departments. Rev. T. M. Bradley is the efficient pastor.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, pastor of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., has recently been ill with an attack of influenza; we are glad to learn, however, that he is now able to be about his work.

The Fondren Lectures at Southern Methodist University are being delivered this week by Bishop Herbert Welch, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the general theme, "America's Obligation to the Orient." The lectures will be published shortly after they are delivered.

Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Tolle, recently of the Mississippi Conference, but now happily situated in Tampa, Flordia, are now living in the parsonage of First Church, 1007 Florida Avenue, Tampa. Great preparations are being made in Tampa for the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Dr. L. J. Miller will begin a revival meeting in the Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., on Easter Sunday. The $16,000 three-manual Pilcher pipe organ for Central is expected to be installed and ready for use by Aug. 1. This organ will be the largest instrument of its kind in the State.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist of March 6 carries a sermon by Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Jr., of Rockville, Md., on "Hearing the Voice and Speaking Forth the Word"—a study of the prophet Amos. Brother Harmon is a son of Rev. and Mrs. Nolan B. Harmon, of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. C. Norman Guice, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, now a general evangelist, is with Rev. W. H. Jordan in a very successful meeting at Winnfield, La. Brother Guice has an open date in May, which he would be glad to spend with any brother of the patronizing territory of the Advocate who may desire his services. His home address is Conway, Ark.

The all-day rally services being conducted throughout the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, are proving to be most profitable. The presiding elder, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, assisted by such men as Rev. Ben P. Jaco, Rev. W. M. Camphell, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Mr. J. H. McKinnon, and other preachers and laymen of the district, is leading in this work, which has already produced fine results.

The latest bulletin of Millsaps College is devoted largely to a pictorial presentation of the buildings and other campus scenes. The old student of the college will linger over many of these pictures and live again through the experiences of his student days. Commencement this year will be May 29-June 4, and the greatest gathering of alumni in the history of the college is being planned.

Rev. J. Henry Bowdon, a graduate of Centenary College, and now taking work leading to the B. D. degree in Southern Methodist University, asks us to say that he will be free after July 24 to do revival work until the opening of the fall term of the university on Sept. 15, and that he would be glad to assist any of the brethren in Louisiana who might desire his services. Brother Bowdon is a consecrated young man of ability, and the editor of the Advocate takes special pleasure in commending him to the brethren of the Louisiana Conference.

The revival meeting in progress at Epworth Methodist Church, this city, is creating a great deal of interest and attracting large congregations. Rev. Dan Kelly—the inimitable Dan—is doing the preaching, and Mr. C. L. Hundley, of Alahama, is leading the singing. The forces of the church are thoroughly organized for a great revival, and the pastor, Rev. J. B. Grambling, is efficiently leading his people in this great movement. The recently completed addition to the church has added largely to its seating capacity. Epworth is one of the most active churches in the city.

Aberdeen, Miss., proposes to pay in full her Centenary pledge soon. The figures given in a recent issue of the Advocate for Aberdeen in connection with other towns were somewhat in error. Aberdeen's quota was $11,500; her pledge was $11,587; and she has paid to date $10,175.50, one hundred dollars having been credited thereon since the previous announcement. This makes a total payment of 87 per cent, leaving only 13 per cent to be raised—and this will soon be forthcoming. Fine for Dr. H. G. Davis, the pastor, W. H. Carlisle, the Centenary treasurer, and the good people of Aberdeen!

In addition to those whose names have already been published, the following presiding elders of our patronizing Conferences are on the "Honor Roll" for having their districts "100 per cent Pink" in the Special Effort for the Superannuates, the figures showing the order in which they reached the goal: Rev. M. L. Burton, Jackson District, 46; Rev. Paul D. Hardin, Meridian District, 47; Rev. L. E. Alford, Newton District, 48; Rev. W. B. Jones, Vicksburg District, 49; Rev. L. L. Roberts, Seashore District, 60; Dr. R. H. Wynn, Shreveport District, 63.

The Woodville Republican has the following to say concerning the visit of Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, to Woodville on March 23: "Presiding Elder Jones, of this district, preached at the morning service on Sunday at the Methodist church here, and conducted the quarterly conference that afternoon. This was Rev. Mr. Jones' first service at the Woodville church since being assigned to this work, and it gives us pleasure to report that he made a most favorable impression here, both as a man and as a minister."

We take the following from the Durant (Miss.) News: "Dr. R. C. Elmore, chairman of the official board of the Methodist church, was honored on his birthday, Tuesday evening, March 18, by a gathering of officials and their wives in the church parlors at 7:45 o'clock. After a brief devotional service, conducted by the pastor, and a report of some special committees, the social committee took charge and entertained the group of thirty-one, concluding with seating the one in whose honor they had come before a table and placing before him a cake and lighted candles. Each one present made a wish and presented him with a present.'"

Dr. Charles W. Crisler, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., is assisting the pastor, Rev. F. B. Hill, in a meeting at McDonoghville, La., just across the river from New Orleans. The attendance has increased steadily from the beginning, and the services are proving a blessing to the community. On the Friday night preceding the meeting, a service for men was held at the church, at which about 100 men were in attendance. Music was furnished by the De Molay band and by the male quartet of the Algiers Methodist Church. Refreshments were served by the women of the local church. At the Sunday evening service, special music was furnished by some Newcomb College students.

From press dispatches we learn that Mrs. Matilda Holloman, widow of the late Dr. T. B. Holloman, of the Mississippi Conferenee, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Robertson, in Itta Bena, Miss., on March 24. Mrs. Holloman was widely known and greatly beloved throughout Mississippi, and the news of her death will be received with great sorrow. She is survived by six children: Mrs. M. E. Robertson, Itta Bena, Miss.; Mrs. F. H. Scott, Greenwood, Miss.; Dr. T. B. Holloman, Jr., and John Holloman, of Itta Bena; Dr. Frank Holloman, of Morgan City, and L. C. Holloman, of Memphis, Tenn. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends. We trust we shall have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. W. Tucker, Homer, La., 33; F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 3; Rev. E. C. AGAIN—OUR REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

To the Members and Preachers of the Mississippi Conference: At the annual meeting of the Conference Board of Church Extension, held in Gulfport, Rev. H. A. Gatlin was appointed to visit all the district conferenees and raise the balance due our Washington City church.

Rev. A. S. Oliver was appointed to raise the balance due on our church at Columbus.

The Conference has placed the responsibility of raising the money to liquidate our indebtedness to these two institutions upon the Board of Church Extension. As chairman of the Board, I call attention to these matters and bespeak for Brothers Gatlin and Oliver, not only a hearty welcome and respectful hearing, but an enthusiastic co-operation in collecting the cash to pay this debt of more than three thousand dollars which we have owed for several years. Bishop Candler writes that the creditors are pressing their claims against our Washington City church, and that this debt must be paid. I call upon you laymen whom God has blessed with sense enough to make money, to help your Conference and your church to pay this debt, and pay it now.

W. M. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

THE REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF FOR THE MONTHS OF FEBRUARY AND MARCH.

In February, 48 people joined the church; 27 of these were Syrians and 11 were Greeks; four women joined the Missionary Society; 250 rededicated themselves to the Lord. I held ten services.

In March, the first of the month was spent in Yazoo City, where I held two services and had 15 come to the altar and reconsecrate themselves to God.

I visited Greenwood, Miss., during the Gipsy Smith revival, and visited all the Syrian and Greek places of business and invited them to the meetings. Many of them came.

At Sunflower, Miss., I found a Syrian family, and the father, mother, and three children joined the church.

At Moorhead, Miss., I found two Mohammedan men and five Greeks. I talked to them. One of the Greeks joined the church and the rest promised to do better.

I visited Itta Bena, Miss., twice; 5 Americans and 8 Italians joined the church, and 135 people came forward to the altar and reconsecrated themselves to God.

At Pelahatchie, Miss., 20 people came forward and reconsecrated themselves to God at the altar.

At Jackson, Miss., in company with Dr. H. F. Brooks, we visited two families, and four united with the church.

I held 7 services this month; 23 joined the church; 170 came to the altar and rededicated themselves to the Lord.

I work with all kinds of people, with all races. Call on me. I will do my best for God and the church.

Pray for me and my work.

C. ASSAF, Missionary.

LAYMEN MEET AT VICKSBURG.

A meeting of the Methodist laymen was held at the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., March 28, 1924. The meeting was called to order by S. W. Sharbrough, District Lay Leader. The following were present: Dr. J. M. Sullivan, S. W. Sharbrough, Rev. W. B. Jones, A. R. Artz, Rev. Robert Selby, Rev. G. P. McKeown, and D. S. Hogg.

The service was opened by a song, "A Charge to Keep I Have." The opening prayer was offered by Rev. W. B. Jones, and others took part in the service as follows: Round table talks, address by Dr. Sullivan, who stressed these points: 1. We must have confidence in the work; 2. Hold conferences; 3. Use the men; 4. Stress stewardship and tithing; 5. Distribute the "Methodist Layman." Talk by S. W. Sharbrough on "Prayer is the Secret of Success." Rev. G. P. McKeown made some helpful suggestions.

An excellent luncheon was served at the church, which was presided over by Mrs. George C. Christy, Mrs. R. W. Boult, and Mrs. J. J. McCain.

THE BUREAU OF SPECIALS.

By C. R. Porter, Secretary.

What It Is.

The Bureau of Specials is that office in the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, authorized by the Executive Committee on April 22, 1917, and confirmed by the Board of Missions in annual session May 1-4, 1917, for the assignment and cultivation of Missionary Specials.

How it Operates.

The working staff of the Bureau of Specials, located at 627 Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., has grown from two to nine; from one room to four; from 925 separate Missionary Specials totaling $170,945 per year, to 10,386 Missionary Specials, aggregating two million dollars per year. The pronounced increase was accentuated by the Centenary, of course, but the permaneney of the majority will be seen as monthly reports appear. Every pledge is entered on a master card, for the convenience of Administrative Secretaries, and kept in a fireproof safe; three reference duplicates are made—one by Conferenees and Districts for the convenienee of pastors and other church leaders; another by charges for the convenience of the Secretary of the Bureau and the holders of Specials; and the third by fields and units of work for reporting. All correspondence is carefully filed in strong cabinets under a well-thought-out and satisfactorily tested system. Every news letter and report from the mission fields, home and foreign, is catalogued on cards, and cross indexed numerically, so that, at any time, any one may find without extensive research what the Board of Missions has on any subject entered to date. Thus a history of world missions is in the making for the church at large.

So important are the details of this office that each is given personal attention by splendidly trained assistants who have the true missionary spirit.

Its Purpose.

The purpose of the Bureau of Specials is to help in the making of a greater missionary church—greater in missionary intelligence, in giving, in earnest activity, and in bringing to pass a clearer and more helpful understanding between Americans and the people of other countries; and this is accomplished through a continuous increase in contacts—contacts through intercession, study, co-operation, friendliness. The Missionary Special is the medium for such contact, and has long since proved its adequacy for this distinctive service. "And what is a Missionary Special?" you ask. It is a unit of the annual appropriation of the Board of Missions definitely assumed for support by a church, Sunday school, class, department, Epworth League or individual as their own personal responsibility. Each unit is directly connected with a missionary or native associate, and the acceptanee of these units means the establishment of delightful, continuous and far-reaching service partnerships.

Its Future.

The future of the Bureau of Specials presents a superb challenge:

1. To provide annually three-fourths of the Board's budget for home and foreign work.

2. To help 18,000 churches and 15,000 Sunday schools, and an unlimited number of laymen, to choose the mission field and missionary task for which they will become responsible, in answer to the Great Commission.

3. To encourage and enlist every correspondent for a Missionary Special, and their constituencies in the fellowship of intercession—first, for the missionaries and their work in Southern Methodism's twelve mission fields, and, second, for the Christianization of the world.

Through these efforts, the Bureau of Specials represents and co-operates with both the home and foreign departments of the Board of Missions, General Work, with all of the missionaries in active service, and with Methodist men and women and children throughout our Southland.

Consecration is not something done once for all, but is a maintained habit of the soul. A conseerated day is a framework ready prepared, in which God alone has to act in us, and through us.—Adolphe Monod.

MRS. NANCY C. BUFKIN, daughter of S. C. and Mrs. Martha Heidelberg, was born about seven miles south of Paulding, in Jasper County, Miss., March 2, 1847, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry G. Turner, in Laurel, Miss., on Jan. 8, 1924. She was nearly 77 years of age at the time of her death. Mrs. Bufkin was one of fifteen whole and five half-brothers and sisters. She was married to John L. Bufkin, of Jasper County, Miss., at the home of her father, about two and one-half miles from Vossburg, in Clarke County, Miss., on Aug. 23, 1866. She was the mother of nine children, all of whom survive her except one, Fleta Bufkin, who died in infancy. Her surviving children are: Mrs. Harvey C. Carter, of Ellisville, Miss; Oliver N. Bufkin, of Selma, Ala.; Mrs. B. B. Davis, of Laurel, Miss.; John E. Bufkin, of Gulfport, Miss.; Esca O. Bufkin, of New York City; Mrs. Clara B. Mahoney, of Fayette, Ala.; Mrs. Henry G. Turner, of Laurel, Miss., and G. T. Bufkin, of Birmingham, Ala. Mr. John L. Bufkin, husband of Mrs. Nancy C. Bufkin, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. B. B. Davis, at Buckatunna, Miss., on March 27, 1909. Mr. and Mrs. Bufkin were members of the Methodist Church, and reared all of their children in that church. A Methodist preacher was always welcome to their home, where they were often invited. Never were children more devoted to a mother than were the children of Mrs. Bufkin. Never did a mother live more for and make greater sacrifices for her children and grandchildren than did she. Her children loved her with a tender affection and did all in their power to make her declining years comfortable and happy. If true Christianity consists in living for others, rather than for self, Mrs. Bufkin has a high place among the saints of Heaven. When the writer, her brother, was a boy without a mother or a home, she welcomed him to hers; and upon his return from school to spend his vacations he always found a hearty welcome in her home. A brother never had a more tender sister than did he, nor children a more self-sacrificing mother. She was interred in the Heidelberg cemetery, about two and one-half miles from Vossburg, where are interred her husband and only deceased child, and also her mother and father and most of her deceased brothers and sisters. May the winds sigh gently, and the birds sing sweetly and the flowers bloom brightly over the grave of our dear sister.

Shubuta, Miss.

In memory of MRS. A. C. COLLINS, who died at the family residence in Lecompte, La., March 4, 1924, at the age of 93 years: "Grandma Collins," as she was best known, lived a long and useful life and was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

When my parents moved to Lecompte, just the bayou was between our house and hers, and I suppose she was the first to call on my mother, and they were close friends as long as mother lived. I well remember how faithful she was during my mother's illness, coming in so often to see what she could do and how she and others helped in the sad going of her mother.

I remember her, too, as a Sunday school teacher; how we little fellows sat around her and listened to her tell about Jesus and his works. Those stories, her Christian character, and her never tiring efforts to do the Master's work, have been a benediction to my life. I went to see her just a short time before I left that part of the country; and what a great privilege it was to look into that sweet face and answer the questions she asked about myself and mine! When I went to leave she said, "Rupert, how are you living?" It was a great pleasure to me to tell her that I was trying to live right. I shall never forget that smile as she bade me goodby with the expression, "God bless you." How good I felt from having gone to see her! There is sadness and loneliness in the earthly home, but what a joy to know that she rests with Jesus and other saints who have gone on before! May God's richest blessings rest on the bereaved ones.

WILLIAM CICERO WAGGONER was born in Madison County, Miss., May 11, 1847, and died in Leake County, Miss., near Carthage, on Jan. 25, 1924. He moved many years ago from Madison County to Leake County, a few miles north of Carthage, where he reared a large family of eight boys and one girl. The beloved wife preceded him by several years to the better land, and only four of the boys and the girl are left to mourn his departure. He was a Confederate soldier, a law-abiding citizen and a high-toned gentleman. He joined the Baptist Church early in life, but in about the year 1900 he joined the Methodist Church, becoming one of the charter members of Bethel Methodist Church, of which he lived a faithful member until he was stricken and left an invalid for the last two years of his life; but he still held on to God with a faith that takes no denial. Brother Waggoner was truly an exemplary Christian character, and all who knew him join in saying, "A good man has gone from our midst." The children will remember his life, for he leaves with them a heritage that is far greater than gold. Truly in his passing there is no death, no tragedy, but a happy translation, a joyous entering into rest, an arrival, after a weary journey, home, where he is no stranger, for he intimately knew his Lord, and many loved ones and friends were awaiting him there. The writer counts it a great privilege to have been his pastor for four years, and recalls many a delightful visit where he enjoyed the rarest Christian fellowship, and felt always the stronger for the visit. Friendly hands laid him away after the funeral services conducted by the writer, in the Bethel cemetery. Let us all be faithful and join with him again where partings are no more.

His pastor,

T. B. WINSTEAD.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, in the all-wise Providence of God, our dear Sister, MRS. MATTIE HOELL, has passed from earthly labor to her eternal reward; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Woman's Bible Class of the Grand Cane Methodist Church has lost a most worthy, loyal and true member, whose faithfulness was an inspiration to the other members of the class.

2. That the Sunday school has lost a faithful and diligent attendant and worker; the church, a true and thoroughly consecrated member, and the community a loving and sympathetic friend, whose kindly ministrations will be sorely missed.

3. That while we sorrow because of her having left us, yet we bow in humble submission to the divine will of our Heavenly Father, who "doeth all things well," and with gratitude to him for her "upright walk and godly conversation" while among us.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday school, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and one to the sorrowing husband.

Signed: Mrs. H. P. Dowling, Mrs. I. T. Reames, Mrs. G. W. Dixon, committee on resolutions, Woman's Bible Class, Grand Cane Methodist Church.

On Sept. 11, 1830, there came into the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. M. Robinson a little girl, whom they named, MARTHA ELVIRA, who proved a blessing to them. She was an affectionate, obedient daughter. When she was three or four years old she was afflicted with white swelling, which caused her to be a cripple the remainder of her life. In early life she gave her heart to God, and united with the Methodist church at Lynwood, Kemper County, Miss., and remained a consecrated Christian until death. In 1871, the angel of death entered the home and claimed her mother, and the responsibilities of the home fell on her, she being the oldest of eleven children, which she bore cheerfully. No sacrifice was too great for her to make for father, brothers and sisters. She loved her church, and as long as she could see to read her Bible was her companion. She always stood for the right and condemned sin. Nothing gave her more pleasure than to entertain her pastor in her home. She died Aug. 31, 1923. She is gone, but her influence still lives. May we all meet her and other loved ones in Heaven.

Her sister,

IDA.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Letter Regarding Our "Special" In the Congo.

I have before me a letter from Rev. Ansil Lynn, at home on furlough from the Congo, in which he is giving the information regarding the Specials assigned to the Louisiana Conference Epworth League for this Conference year, beginning June 1, 1923. May I quote just exactly what he says:

"The Bible School Department is for the training of our native evangelists and teachers. (The evangelist is the teacher in the village he serves.) Usually there are fifty or sixty young men in training at Wembo Nyama at the Bible school or in the day school preparatory to the Bible school. These young men do work on the compound in the afternoons and are given a small wage with which to buy their food and clothes while in training. The larger part of the $1,000 asked for is for that purpose. The building for the Bible school is also repaired and furnished with this fund, as well as slates, tablets and other equipment.

"The $675 'itinerating expenses' is largely for the evangelistic missionaries who visit the out-village churches and untouched villages of the tribe. None of this is for the native helpers unless it is necessary to draw from it to supplement other phases of the work."

It gives me pleasure to enclose some recent articles and news letters from the Congo and our two new folders. If you can use more of the folders in your correspondence, and more of these stories from the Congo, I shall be glad to send you just as many as you need.

Cordially yours,
Signed: C. R. PORTER,
Executive Secretary.

Mansfield Assembly.

There are very few Leaguers who have not already given vacation time and where to spend it some thought. I would call your attention to a wonderful place to go—the Mansfield Assembly, Mansfield, La., which meets this year from June 10 to June 17.

To those Leaguers who have been to Mansfield, nothing need be said, because I don't think there is one who wouldn't gladly go again; but to those who have never attended a League Assembly—if you would mingle with Christian people, meet Leaguers from all over the State of Louisiana, become more efficient in League work, be able to discuss your local problems with instructors who can advise you, and also have ten days of real fun—Mansfield is the place to go to get it.

The roads are reported to be in much better shape than they were last year. Why not plan a motor trip, thus adding a little more enjoyment to your vacation?

Every League should send at least one delegate, and I'm sure others will plan to go.

Let's meet at Mansfield—June 10!

Why Are Drugs Standardized?

They are standardized in order to bring about uniform therapeutic efficiency to the patient whenever required. This efficiency is most needed in the sick room—not merely in the laboratory.

What is true of drugs must be true of foods. Purity and efficiency in the can is only part of the problem—purity and efficiency in the kitchen is the true test.

The law requires that baking power contain 12% leavening gas at the time of sale to the consumer. This measure insures uniform leavening efficiency and protects the health of the public.

In order to comply with this fixed standard for baking powder, manufacturers must produce and pack their product so as to avoid the deterioration which may result from absorption of atmospheric moisture.

Baking Powder manufacturers to avoid violation of the law, also spend thousands of dollars yearly in testing grocers' stocks and removing "spent" goods from his shelves; in spite of the fact that every possible precaution had previously been taken against deterioration.

With the exception of Texas, the pure food laws are not applied to baking powder mixed with flour at the mill and sold in bags as "Self Rising Flour." There is no penalty on the manufacturers if this fails to "self rise"—the consumer is the "goat"—he is the one that pays the penalty through indigestion and ill health that comes from eating bakings that are not properly raised. The standardization of baking powder is a protection to both the consumer and the manufacturer—who welcomes such laws and co-operates in every way possible. But!

Not so with the self rising flour manufacturer—he resents such laws and fights such legislation. Why? Because a standardization of self rising flour would require moisture-proof containers instead of cheap sacks—because low grade "clears" could no longer be sold as "fancy patent flour." It would also mean he must maintain expert chemical control such as is now maintained by baking powder manufacturers.

Calumet Baking Powder contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the U.S. Food Authorities.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

If you have not received your Sunday School Day programs, write Miss Virginia Thomas, Grenada, Miss. Much of our progress depends upon the way the day is observed. Stick to the program as nearly as possible.

What about your Centenary pledge? Why not take a new Special if your pledge has been paid? By all means give the missionary instruction.

You can very well measure the worth and the life of a church by the number and ability of its leaders. The Greenville District Standard Training School for leaders offers an opportunity to give training to such as would lead in building the kingdom of our Lord. Let every charge in the Greenville District have at least one representative at Clarksdale, April 7. Dr. Clovis G. Chappell is to give four great messages. Do not fail to hear him.

The Rallly Day services for circuits promoted by Rev. A. T. McIlwain are getting great results. Brother Biffle, pastor of the Chester circuit, with the help of Brothers Buck and Smith, two noble laymen, took Brothers McIlwain, Walter Campbell and myself to Chapel Hill, Salem, Nebo, Chester, and South Union in a two-horse wagon over roads well-nigh impassable. Walking was better than riding up some of the steep, red-clay hills. We sang, prayed, preached, shouted our way through to victory. The best of the people were with us and enjoyed the services. We distributed tracts, organized three Sunday schools, and encouraged the people in the work of the kingdom. We spent the day at each church. The people were greatly strengthened. The church buildings on this, the Chester circuit, are very much like the buildings on other circuits—two of them had no stoves, several window panes were missing, none of them had altars, the song books in most cases were of doubtful value as a means to grace. The circuit preacher has a hard road to travel. As soon as the young people are educated they leave for town, and the local church is forced to struggle along with raw material for leaders. The town churches must go out and lend a helping hand wherever it is possible. The all-day service with a team of workers is thoroughly worth while. The Lord gave victory at every place.

To Mr. B. G. Webb, superintendent of our Sunday school at Kosciusko, is due the credit of a most successful County Institute held at Kosciusko, the 25th. Four pastors, three superintendents, and twenty-five teachers were present. Every charge in Attala County was represented by one or more workers. The institute adopted the Program of Work as the goal for this year. The County Institute is one way to help town and country churches do better work. Is there another man who will do what Mr. Webb has done? The next institute will be held at Sallis, the latter part of May.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDA SYCHOOL ITEMS.

By C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

Many good echoes are reaching the Conference office from the recent Homer conference. The president of this conference, Mr. J. H. Carter, of New Orleans, writes: "We had a good conference, and I enjoyed it. District Night was a great success, showing much interest in conference and district organization. I think it will bear repeating at our next meeting." Mr. Carter will be remembered by the delegates of the conference by his able message at the opening session, and his administrative ability as presiding officer.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, of the Ruston District, which district featured Adult Work at the Homer conference, says: "My men were greatly encouraged by their visit to Homer. We had forty-six out last Sunday." The former Conference Superintendent, Rev. Alonzo Early, who has attended and taken part in at least six out of eight annual Sunday school conferences, says fine work was done in bringing to pass a most helpful Sunday school conference. Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior Work, and a member of the Conference Sunday School Board, writes: "Enjoyed Homer very much. I believe much good was done. It was very good to be there."

Our Conference-Wide Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. R. C. Culpepper, regrets so much that she was not able to be at the Homer Conference, due to sickness.

Rev. Porter Caraway, the popular young pastor of Ferriday, and one of the leading Sunday school workers in the Monroe District, was kept away from the Homer Conference on account of sickness. He writes: "It was a disappointment to me not to be able to get to Homer. It seemed that Providence decreed otherwise. I am sure you had a great conference. We are beginning the work on our church building this week. Will have a nice place to work in in a few months." Brother Caraway is to check up the Wisner Sunday school next Sunday.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Rochelle, a member of the Conference Board, a pastor who has given a great deal of study to the circuit Sunday school, writes: "I consider we had a great Federation, and I enjoyed it immensely." Brother Price sends us a program of his fifth Sunday Institute for his circuit, to be held at Olla. This program includes many interesting features.

The pastor at Colfax, Brother Thomason, will organize his circuit, and hold the Fifth Sunday Institute at Colfax this coming Sunday. Presiding Elder C. C. Wier has promised to be present and assist in the organization and promotion of the Circuit Sunday School organization. Without doubt, the Circuit Sunday School organization can be made one of the greatest factors in the promotion of Sunday school work in our Conference, if the pastors and leading workers would try out this organization.

At the last meeting of the Sunday School Board, Rev. J. L. Evans, of West Monroe, was elected a member of the Executive Committee. The other members are: Mr. W. S. Holmes, Rev. O. W. Bradley, Mr. A. M. Mayo, and Rev. Alonzo Early.

Sunday school session at each of the coming district conferences promises great co-operation and interest.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased God in his divine wisdom to call unto him REV. J. H. SMITH; and,

Whereas, we are sorely bereaved in the loss of our pastor and friend; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we have suffered a great loss and shock in the passing of this good man.

2. That we appreciate the well-rounded conception of Christian character as was exemplified in his personal life.

3. That the Methodist church of Tchula, of which he was pastor, will greatly miss his wise and consecrated leadership; and,

4. That we extend to the bereaved wife and son our deepest sympathy, and commend to them the Comforter who has never forsaken his children.

Resolved further, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Tchula quarterly conference, and that a copy be sent to both the local paper and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. Bessie F. Whitehead, Mrs. O. W. Nixon, Mrs. Wm. Henry.

I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches.—Rev. 22:16.

MISERY IN HEAD, COULDN'T REST

Ohio Lady Was Suffering From Womanly Weakness, But After Taking Cardui She Grew Strong and Well.

Chillicothe, Ohio.—"Cardui is my standby as a tonic," says Mrs. Mary Smith, of 677 Orange St., this city, after relating her experiences in the use of that well-known medicine for women.

Some years ago, Mrs. Smith says, she found herself in such a serious condition from some womanly weakness that she could do no work and scarcely could get up or down.

"I had misery in my head," she says, "and just ached at times till I couldn't rest. I would have dizzy, fainting spells and just stagger. I didn't have an appetite.

"Some one told me I needed a good woman's tonic. I asked and was told Cardui might help me. I began to use it and, after a short time, I could see I was being gradually made stronger.

"I quit having the weak spells. I ate and seemed to relish what I ate. I could sleep without waking up at night. I grew strong and well, and I had very little trouble."

FROM SENATOBIA, MISS.

My Dear Dr. Carley: I just want to say that most things are going well at Senatobia. We had almost a full house at prayer meeting last Wednesday night. We have received six on profession of faith since Conferenee, and we have had no protracted meeting this year—three eame in from the Sunday school. Efficient and godly teachers look well after gathering in the lambs.

Our Woman's Missionary Society continues to function in a most satisfactory way. They are the most resourceful bunch of women it has ever been my lot to work with. Sinee Conference they have paid $325 on church furnace, which was their last payment; have had the church beautifully painted, which of course included the recently built Sunday school annex; have ordered art glass windows for the chureh, and have done and are doing substantial improvements on the parsonage. They will soon have spent something like twelve hundred and fifty dollars since Conference.

Our Leagues are doing exeeedingly well, under the efficient leadership of Brother Pate, Mrs. McCreary, Mrs. East, and Mrs. John Thomas. Intermediates and Juniors furnish the music for the Sunday evening service. I tell you, Doctor, it puts much pep into Mister Shipman when he comes in and sees about fifty of those fine youngsters in the choir loft. He also feels that the devil is going to have a hard fight to take the ehureh and get away with it as long as sueh have the interest that this young company manifest. Miss Lucille Martin, daughter of our Brother A. A. Martin, is very efficient with her violin with the evening choir. Miss Martin is teaching in the high school here, and has proved to Prof. Brinson to be one of his most valuable teachers. Brother M. W. Gabbert's little boys are very efficient with their horns with the League choir. I tell you, Doctor, they raise the rafters.

Dr. Estes, of Memphis, is to hold our meeting for us in June, and of course we are expecting a good meeting, and hope to have a large ingathering. This is my third year, and the longer I stay, the better the water tastes.

Our board of stewards have a unique method of looking after their work—they meet once a month at some home, and the lady of the home sets up the eats, which is no small incentive to the gathering of the clan.

Very cordially,

"MISTER" SHIPMAN.

FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, is doing a fine work. He takes great interest in helping the pastors plan for their revivals. He is an able preacher on the gospel of tithing, and does faithful and effective work on all the important ealls made on the church. He and his faithful class of pastors will do a great work this year.

With the permission of the Ki Editor, I desire to make an announcment in regard to one part of f future revival work. First and la in many places wher I have helpe in meetings, a good deal of money ha been raised for worthy church ente prises, from $500 to $5,000. Owing the present prevailing condition things, the great need of the peo spiritually, and other reasons, I sh give my whole attention to the co version of men, women and childre and their addition to the chur Then I will be in line with oth evangelists. Special efforts to help a vance finances, pay off debts, etc., are cut out of my revival work.

I am making some nice engagements to hold meetings. I shall preaeh the Holy Ghost religion, in the apostolic, or good, old-fashioned way, and save the people. God is my witness that through Christ I have never had a failure in a revival meeting where we had half of a showing. But there is one important duty in every preacher's work I shall never fail to aid by word and deed as opportunities are given, and that is the circulation of church papers and other religious literature. In a career of many years I do not remember one single instanee of a pastor's having trouble, or having to combat disloyalty in any home that took Christian Advocate papers and attended Sunday school. "O Lord, revive thy work."

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Thirteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference, convened in the splendid Court Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Feb. 26-29, the initial service being a Workers' Conference at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon.

The first evening service was held at 7:30 o'clock. The worship was conducted by Rev. J. T. Leggett. The speaker of the evening, Mrs. R. W. McDonell, of Washington, D. C., our Council visitor, brought the Conference a most inspiring message, "Polished Shafts." Some of the "Polished Shafts" of missionary efforts are: Belle H. Bennett, our great leader; Laura Haygood, in China; Nannie Gaines, in Japan; Kate Cooper, in Korea; and down in the end of the earth, Kathrine Wilson, in Africa. Some of our Home Workers: Dorothy Krim, Mattie Wright, and others.

Too much cannot he said ahout the music rendered hy the musicians of Hattieshurg during each session of the Conference. Much credit is due to the untiring efforts of the efficient organist, Mrs. J. C. Tompkins.

The second evening, service was in charge of the Juniors and Young People. A beautiful pageant, "The Call of the New Year," was presented. Each and every one carried out his or her part in a splendid manner.

Each day Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, noted Bible lecturer and writer, conducted the Quiet Hour. These services were the most inspiring of all. Dr. Pell says he is a man of many messages, but only one suhject, "Love of Christ."

Dr. Pell delivered the address of the last evening service, his message being on "This Life of Ours"—the only problem in the world that really gives us trouble. We never understand life until we sit at the feet of Jesus.

At this Conference it was shown that we have advanced in every department of the work, having a good net gain in auxiliaries, also in finances. More auxiliaries are on the Honor Roll than ever before. The Conference Pledge was increased fifteen per cent, also the Council Pledge.

Among the visitors attending Conference were: Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. R. W. McDonell, Washington, D. C.; Deaconess Addie Greeley, of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.; Deaconess Maud Fail; and Miss Alexander of Biloxi Wesley House.

The only new officers elected were: Mrs. L. W. Alford, McComh, Vice President; Mrs. C. L. Lampton, Magnolia, Superintendent Social Service; and Miss Lily Hartwell, Port Glhson, Superintendent of Young People's Work. Mrs. O. C. Hunt, of Laurel, was elected District Secretary of Newton District.

The next Annual Meeting will be held in Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss.

Mrs. R. W. McDonell offered the closing prayer of the Thirteenth Annual Conference, and we adjourned.

Recording Secretary.

THE TRAFFIC IN OPIUM AND ITS DERIVATIVES.

Resolutions adopted by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America at its recent session at Atlantic City, January 9, 1924.

I. The Foreign Missions Conference of North America herehy expresses its appreciation of the advance that has heen made in recent years in the enactment of legislation by the Government of the United States for the more effective control of the trade. More particularly, it rejoices in the results already achieved through the active participation of the representatives of the Government in conferences with the Advisory Commission on the Opium Trade appointed hy the League of Nations. These results are recorded in the resolutions adopted hy the Assembly and Council of the League embodying the following principles proposed by the American delegation, namely:

"1. If the purpose of the Hague Opium Convention is to be achieved according to its spirit and true intent, it must be recognized that the use of opium products for other than medical and scientific purposes is an abuse and not legitimate."

"2. In order to prevent the ahuse of the products it is necessary to exercise the control of the production of raw opium in such a manner that there will he no surplus availahle for non-medicinal and non-scientific purposes."

The Conference recognizes the necessity for some organization or agency which will continuously and without intermission strive to realize the purpose and intentions enacted in the Hague Convention regarding opium, and it therefore heartily approves of the action of the President and Secretary of State in appointing delegates to co-operate with the Advisory Commission on Opium of the League of Nations.

II. The Conference rejoices that the time has come when the governments of the world, with the information now at their disposal, may not only accept the principles stated ahove, hut may consider how hest to make these principles effective in controlling the trade in opium and its derivatives. The Conference welcomes the proposal to hold two international conferences at Geneva in 1924, for this purpose, and respectfully recommends that the Government of the United States appoint suitable delegates with plenipotentiary powers to represent it at these conferences, and petitions Congress to make the necessary appropriations for their expenses.

III. In view of the existing medical evidence tending to show the possibility of completely doing away with the use of heroin in medical and surgical practice, the Conference heartily supports the recommendation that the Government of the United States appoint a committee of enquiry to ascertain the possibility of completely abolishing the manufacture of heroin and its use in the United States.

IV. The Conference recognizes the essential value of an awakened public conscience and of an expression of puhlic opinion for the effective enforcement of legislation concerning great moral evils. It remembers with satisfaction, for example, the part taken by the people of China in the practical suppression of poppy cultivation a few years ago. It therefore appeals to the Christian forces in China to do everything in their power to reawaken public opinion in that country with reference to this matter, so as to make effective the laws that still continue in force and to put an end to the regrettable recrudescence of extensive poppy cultivation. In making this appeal the Conference recognizes the embarrassing difficulties with which both the Chinese Christians and the foreign missionaries must contend, and it pledges to them its sympathetic support. It is suggested that all Boards represented in this Conference working in China request their missionaries to aid in all legitimate and wise anti-opium efforts, and to support the National Christian Council of China in the work that it has undertaken

Reader Takes Newer Form of Iron—Feels Years Younger

"Six weeks ago I saw a special offer in the paper telling how thousands of people grow old in looks and energy long before they are really old in years, because, as examinations by physicians have shown, an enormous number of people do not have enough iron in their blood. I have been taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks: the results are simply astounding. The roses have come back in my lips and cheeks, and I can conscientiously say that I feel ten years younger."

The above is a typical hypothetical case showing the results that have been achieved by a great many people since we started this "satisfaction or money back" offer on Nuxated Iron. We will make you the same guarantee. If, after taking the two week's treatment of Nuxated Iron, you do not feel and look years younger, we will promptly refund your money.

MRS. BUSH TELLS OTHER WOMEN

How Pains in Side and Dragging Down Feelings Were Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Massena, N.Y.—"I had terrible pains in both my sides and a dragging-down feeling that affected me so that I could hardly walk, and I got run-down. A friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it and I have taken it with the best results. I do my housework and also some outdoor work on the farm. The Vegetable Compound has given me back my health and I can not praise it enough. I am perfectly willing that you should use these facts if my letter will help other women who still suffer."—Mrs. DELBERT BUSH, R. F. D. 1, Massena, N.Y.

The spirit of helpfulness shown in the letters we are constantly publishing is worthy of notice.

These women know by experience what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do. Your troubles are the same as theirs. Isn't it reasonable to expect the same results?

If you have pains and a dragging-down feeling and are nervous and irritable, profit by Mrs. Bush's experience and give the Compound a trial.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT HAWKINS MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very successful revival in our church. Rev. J. V. Bennett, our Conference evangelist, came to us three weeks ago, and began his work among us. We held a week's meeting at Thirty-fourth Avenue Church, a small church I have in connection with my work here at Hawkins Memorial. We had a good meeting there.

Two weeks ago last Sunday, we began here in this church, and while the weather and several other things got in our way, yet we never missed holding a single service, and the Lord was felt in power at each one. Brother Bennett preached straight from the shoulder. He preaches the pure, unadulterated Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ without any compromise with the world whatever, and the people crowded the church to hear him. He is indeed a great preacher; our church is fortunate to have such a soul-stirring evangelist in the field.

The church was greatly revived. A very large per cent of the people pledged their support to the church in faithful attendance, by tithing their income, Bible study, and prayer Eighteen united with the church, and many more are to follow. We have some of the best people in the world here in this church—faithful, loyal, and deeply spiritual.

Brother Bennett left here Monday for Baker, La., where he is now engaged in a revival meeting with Brother J. T. McVey.

Yours in His Name,

JAMES M. LEWIS.

Meridian, Miss.

REVIVAL AT AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed on last Sunday night a great revival in our church here at Amory. Rev. Frank M. Neal, general evangelist, Amarilla, Tex., assisted by Fred H. Poulter, conducted the meeting. Although there were great handicaps in the very cold weather rain and snow, it did not materially hurt the revival. From the beginning Brother Neal held his audience, and there was an increase every day and night. Brother Poulter is the best in his work that I have ever seen. He is not only a splendid choir director, but as a leader of men's prayer groups and young people's work he is hard to excel. As a result of the meeting, three young men volunteered for the ministry and two young ladies for special work, together with a large group of younger people who professed to be called of God. Eighty-seven gave their names for membership in the Methodist church, and twenty-five in the other churches of the town. Hundreds pledged to become tithers; many family altars have been erected; there is a new spiritual fire in this town. The men of the town are meeting every Wednesday in the City Hall for prayer meeting. Men who have been in the hard roads of life are working in these prayer meetings. Brother Neal was with us last year at Holly Springs, when we had a great revival, but this revival rose to keener interest and resulted in more conversions than last year. The church should be proud of such men as Brothers Neal and Poulter.

"PEARL RIVER AVENUE PARSONAGE CLUB."

Recently at Pearl River Avenue, McComb, there came into existence an organization known as "Pearl River Avenue Parsonage Club." The object of this "Club" can easily be guessed, and thus far it has worked admirably. To be a member of this Club, each man is to pay $1 monthly, each woman pay 50 cents monthly, and each child pay 25 cents each month. A large majority of the membership are members, and it will just be a question of a little while until the whole membership will be lined, for it has struck a cordial chord in each member thus far. Just as soon as each member is lined up, the debt of the parsonage will become smaller much more rapidly. In spite of the large "lay-off" at the shops here—the largest lay-off in years—our church is ahead financially of what it was this time last year, but we are stressing the payment of the parsonage debt now. With the exception of about $250 that Centenary (McComb) members gave us, the little church has paid all that has been paid, in addition to other added finances, since it became a station. Receiving no help from outside sources, I saw that something definite must be done, or we would have a debt getting old, and it would become a "sore" in the church; therefore, to save ourselves and the cause, we are putting the parsonage first. I have never seen a pluckier crowd than the membership of this church is, but they are overloaded. If any preacher, or any one else, wants to join this Club, we will appreciate it. Can't all the preachers in Brookhaven District especially become members? And fifty or one hundred men and women in the district do likewise? How about it, reader? Can't you send your name to Mrs. H. A. Hayman, 304 North Magnolia, McComb, Miss., and become a member for this year? She is our efficient secretary-treasurer. Or, if you don't want to join the Club, how about helping a crowd that deserves it as much as any crowd you ever saw? I am not begging—no, sir! We don't do that. Most of us are tithers. The whole tithe of this church would not pay our present obligations! God is with us. Souls are being blessed at our regular services, and not a member has an "inkling" of what I am doing now. I am just seeking to get a load lightened by some who read these lines who can lighten it. There are plenty of churches on "easy street" financially in our Conference that could make a nice donation to these tithers over here at Pearl River Avenue, which would certainly be laying up treasures in Heaven. There are men and women scattered over the territory of the Advocate that could be such a blessing to these tithers also.

I didn't start out to write all I have written, but I seem to be unable to stop. You say, "you had just as well stop, there are too many calls like this." Knowing the situation as I do, and knowing how liberal this church is, as a whole, and knowing what a large per cent of them are conscientious tithers, and what sacrifices they are making, I am writing this in the spirit of the old Methodist preacher who didn't know just exactly when to say "Amen," but finally, being unable to hold in any longer, he exclaimed, "Amen, hit or miss!" as a brother preacher was "coming down the line" with an old-fashioned sermon. So, in Jesus' name, for the sake of this heavy-loaded, forward-looking church, I am writing in a vein I never wrote before and am leaving it to Him and you, reader, as to whether I "hit or miss" the mark. I honestly believe it's going to strike the heart of many, and I feel sure our secretary-treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Hayman, 304 North Magnolia, McComb, Miss., is going to be gladly surprised right away.

to that end. Similarly, it would appeal to the Christian forces in India to undertake such work as may be necessary to inform the people regarding the evils of the use of opium and its derivatives except for medicinal and scientific purposes, and to secure their support to all proposals to limit the commercial cultivation of the poppy and the trade in opium products in accordance with the principles quoted above in Resolution I. The Conference would request the National Christian Council of India to co-operate in all such work. In Turkey, which has now ratified the Opium Conference, and in Persia, which has not yet done so, the Conference hopes that the Christian forces may also use every legitimate means to secure effective legislation in accordance with the principles stated above and now generally accepted.

V. The Conference requests the International Missionary Council to continue to give adequate attention to these questions and to keep the Conference informed especially regarding the co-operation which it may give to the missionary forces in other countries in seeking to accomplish the abolition of the use of opium and its derivatives for non-medicinal and non-scientific purposes.

VI. The Conference commends to the sympathetic and prayerful attention of the Christian people in North America the task of controlling the traffic in opium and its derivatives so that its abuses may be prevented. The consumption of these drugs has increased year by year since the drawing up of the International Opium Convention at the Hague in 1912, and in spite of that legislation. The menace of this evil to the physical, moral and spiritual life of the world is truly great. The time has come to summon the whole Christian Church to withstand it in the name and power of God.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A CONVICTION.

We know that Lloyd George, former premier of Great Britain, has said that a "new mind" must be developed among men if the world is to escape a cataclysm worse than that through which it has recently passed; we know that Ramsay MacDonald, the present premier of Great Britain, has said that there is an "ominous, writing on the wall" that foretells another world war unless there is a regeneration of the human heart; we know that Premier Kiyoura, of Japan, has called a series of conferences, including representatives of the Christian faith, to consider methods of changing the "national thinking" with reference to bettering moral conditions; we can see with our own eyes many of the evils that are threatening our civilization to-day. We know that the world is bad enough.

But it is our profound conviction that the world is getting better. The very fact that so many evils are seen and recognized as such and that the leaders of world thought are issuing warnings against them and taking steps to combat them, is proof that all is not lost, and a promise that evil will not triumph. In the face of great evils, there is a developing conscience that feels these evils and that demands their eradication. This has not always been so. The world is getting better.

There is a surer ground, however, than the awakened conscience of mankind for our conviction that the world is getting better; it is the nature of God Himself and the all-prevailing power of Jesus Christ. If the world is getting worse and its moral doom rapidly approaching, it can mean only that evil is mightier than righteousness, that God has been vanquished and driven from the field in his conflict with Satan, and that Christ lived, loved, suffered and died in vain; it means that the prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come," can never he answered, and that the hopes of the good through all the ages are finally to be blasted; it means that the best the individual can do is to look for his own safety and let the devil have the world. We believe nothing of the kind. The Supreme Ruler of the universe has not been dethroned; evil has not triumphed over righteousness, and it will not do so; Jesus Christ has not died in vain. It will yet come to pass that the heathen shall be given to the Lord for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession.

VERY CONSIDERATE.

We learn from a news item in one of the secular papers that the entire membership of the Greek letter fraternities of one of our well-known State universities have made a pledge on their "word of honor as fraternity men and gentlemen" that they will not appear at any fraternity dance in an intoxicated condition, and that they will not drink any intoxicating liquor while at a dance or for one hour before going to a dance. The penalty for the violation of the pledge is the publishing of the offender's name in the several fraternity houses and the barring of the offender from fraternity dances during that term and the following term.

We are very forcibly struck by the consideration these students have shown for the rules and regulations of the institution which they are attending. Just think what a sacrifice they have made by determining that they will not appear at a dance drunk, and that they will not drink intoxicating liquor while at a dance or for one hour preceding a dance! It is simply wonderful! And they make this pledge on their "word of honor as gentlemen!" Bravo, young gentlemen, bravo! Now let the university authorities meet the students half-way and make a pledge on their honor as gentlemen that they will summarily dismiss any student from the institution who is found in an intoxicated condition at any other time or place than a fraternity dance, or who drinks intoxicating liquor at any time other than one hour before a fraternity dance, and the problem of drinking at the institution will be in a fair way toward solution.

We are of the opinion that the great majority of fathers and mothers of this country are on the verge of utter disgust with an educational policy that permits, under any circumstances, students to engage in practices that not only are a plain violation of the law, but that also destroy character. Parents would like to find a school where they can send their sons and daughters with some assurance that they would he made to do a reasonable amount of studying, that they would be made to go to bed at a reasonable hour of the night and made to get up at a reasonable hour in the morning, and that they would be protected from vices that damn body, mind, and soul. In our humble opinion, the weakest point in our present-day educational system is in the administration of discipline. Whatever else it may be, a college is not the place for dancing, gambling, drinking, and midnight carousing. If a student body proves itself to he incapable of self-government, authority should he exercised by the president and faculty of the institution, to whom it properly belongs.
